College Students Plan Strategies for Funding

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Effects of the re-election of President Reagan on funding for higher education are still unknown, but student lobbyists from nearly 40 states, sponsoring the student leadership training conference. The association hopes to “assess how our student electoral actions went this fall, figure out where we are at, and where the student movement should go from here,” Bob Bingaman, national field organizer for the USSA said.

The conference, which begins tonight, will focus on teaching student lobbyists organizing skills to increase their political effectiveness. "We pushed the philosophy that issues known on the campus level, on the state level and on the national level that affect students. Students need to be involved in all three of the levels," Bingaman said.

"USC programs and its students are greatly impacted by many of the votes which take place in our Senate and House members in Washington," A.S. External Vice President Jim Hickman said. Hickman sits on the USSA Board of Directors. "Whether it is the funding of academic research programs or financial aid programs, USC students stand to gain or lose on the national level. With student representation in Washington D.C. for USC, membership in the association guarantees a visibility and presence which reflects a growing national standing as a national research institution.

The primary focus of USSA is securing funds for state financial aid programs and full enforcement of civil rights laws on campuses, USSA Legislative Director Kathy Ozer said. The board of directors met Thursday to determine priorities on the issues which will be the focus this year's lobbying efforts. Although the association usually focuses on financial aid and access to higher education, they also work on issues which have less of a direct impact on students.

The United States budget will be released by the end of January or the beginning of February, Ozer said. The USSA will track the budget through each committee on every student issue. "We need to present a response to the budget, and there needs to be a strong response from campuses," she said.

This year, "in California, the U.C. Student Lobby will have to determine how students actually voted on the U.C. campuses and whether they voted on the issues or voted for an issue," Ozer said. "We need to look at the election and understand whether 18 to 24 year olds actually do support student aid or civil rights. In the next few months, we must show that students do care." secure the safety of its northern border if the troops are pulled back. Almost every point the Lebanese raised on the future of southern Lebanon conflicted with Israel's previously established positions.

The Lebanese declaration and asked instead for a detailed Lebanese plan on security arrangements following an Israeli withdrawal from the country it had invaded 2 1/2 years ago. The Lebanese agreed to continue with the discussions for the withdrawal of Israeli forces from South Lebanon and payment of $1 billion in compensation that was to be paid in war reparations.

In the statement read by Hajj, Lebanese demanded Israeli enact a "complete and quick withdrawal from all Lebanese territory, unconditionally." It spoke of "the threat to the existence of the Lebanese people to be freed from the big prison in which the Israeli occupation has been strangling them for many years."

A six-page copy of Hajj's statement was given to reporters by a Lebanese delegate. The Lebanese demanded that all security measures in the area evacuated by Israel are given to the "legal Lebanese authorities - the army, the police and the general security forces." They rejected the continued existence in Lebanese lands of "illegal armed Lebanese organization," such as the Israeli-backed militia known as the South Lebanon Army.

A proposal that would require the UCSB Student Health Center to stockpile suicide pills for students in the event of a nuclear war has been brought by the Associated Students Legislative Council Wednesday night.

The proposal passed 18-12 and will now vote on whether they want the suicide pill option, similar to one Brown University students voted in last fall. The proposal requires Leg Council to request that the university provide transportation to potential ground zero sites (site where a nuclear weapon would hit), establish radiation monitoring stations on campus, and provide an information packet containing detailed information about the nuclear crisis, U.C.'s involvement in nuclear proliferation, and services available to registered U.C. students in the event of a nuclear war, to students entering the university.

"This is a political action to provoke the student's community, and administration to confront the reality of a possible nuclear war," A.S. Off-Campus Representative and author of the proposal Michael Smith said. "While the government and the University of California continue to support and build weapons of mass destruction, no provision has been designed towards alleviating the suffering of radiation victims, as Smith said.

"People now have to believe in, and spend time thinking about, the ways we can control the destiny of civilization," Smith said.

While some council members expressed concern over informing students on the possible effects of a nuclear war, they were critical of the suicide pill measure.

"We need to have a better way to educate students against nuclear war than a bill outlining suicide pills. It's immoral to commit suicide according to the Catholic religion," A.S. Rep-at-Large Mari Luna said.

Editor, Daily Nexus:
The problem of sexism can be very detrimental to society. Why? Well, I think it's because sexism is experienced by everyone, regardless of gender. It affects people of all ages and backgrounds, but it's especially harmful to those who are most vulnerable, such as women and minorities. The effects of sexism can be seen in the workplace, where women are often paid less than men for doing the same work. It can be seen in education, where girls are often discouraged from pursuing STEM fields. It can even be seen in the criminal justice system, where women are more likely to be arrested and receive longer sentences for the same crimes as men. So, I think it's important that we continue to work towards eliminating sexism and creating a more equitable society for all. — Anonymous

Dear Mr. Daniel McCulloch
Editor, Daily Nexus:
I was appalled to find out that the U.S. government is not doing enough to help the Ethiopian famine victims. I read in the newspaper that the U.S. has only sent $20 million in aid to Ethiopia, while other countries have given much more. I think it's unacceptable that the U.S. is not doing more to help those in need. The Ethiopian famine is a humanitarian crisis, and it's our responsibility as a global community to do everything we can to help. I urge the U.S. government to increase their aid to Ethiopia and to work with other countries to find a solution to this crisis. — John Smith

RESPECT

Editor, Daily Nexus:
Respect is an important value that we should all strive to uphold. It involves treating others with dignity and kindness, and not making assumptions based on their gender, race, or other characteristics. I believe that everyone deserves to be respected, regardless of who they are or what they believe in. I hope that we can all work together to create a more respectful and inclusive society for all. — Caroline Forbes

DANGEROUS

Editor, Daily Nexus:
I was surprised to see that the use of sexual coercion is still prevalent in society. It's unacceptable that anyone should feel pressured into doing something sexual they are not comfortable with. I think it's important that we educate ourselves and others about the harm that coercion can cause, and to create a culture where everyone feels safe and respected. — Emily Davis

Affection

Let's talk about the importance of human connection. It's been said that we are social beings, and that we need to form connections with others in order to feel fulfilled. I think it's important that we reach out to others, to build relationships, and to form communities. I believe that the Nexus can play a role in fostering these connections, by providing a platform for people to express their thoughts and ideas. — Jane Smith

More Columns About Buildings And Food

You have to take the good with the bad. That’s what my dad used to say to me. He didn’t make the expression up I don’t think, but he did say it. Time never stops. Even now that I think about it, he always said it right after one of the buildings happened.

I thought of that the other day here at school. There’s a lot of good things about USC but there’s also some bad things you have to endure. I really like it in general though. The buildings are unique, and the campus is pretty nice. The only thing I can’t figure out is why they decided to paint it Public School Pink.

The inside of the building is nice and roomy though. I think the Counseling and Career Services building is great. I call it the SAM building. It’s a cool name. I think the elective classes are good and there are a lot of interesting people there. The only thing I can’t figure out is why they have to make the floor so low. When I went through that a million people you know will be in there, walking around. It’s not a great setup for it. For a single man, that was a comfortable niche to me. But now I can’t play basketball on the court because I’m too short.

Maybe they wanted to make a building that resembled southwestern, desert-style architecture. If that’s what they’re going for, it’s probably better to just paint it a neutral color. Heck, there’s a whole bunch of earth tones they could have picked. Don’t get me wrong. All in all, I think the building is great. Functional on the inside, and even with that goofy color it’s a lot more appealing than most other buildings on campus. Come to think of it, it’s amazing how architecturally intestizent the structures at this university are. The only buildings beside the PinkCen that deserve any recognition are the Tower and Campbell Hall because of their shape. Kerr Hall because of its weird lines, and the ECen because it looks like a big shipping carton that ought to have an oversized packing slip taped to the side of it.

Speaking of Cen’s on campus, there’s the big one, the U.Cen. What a great place. All kinds of good things are in- side it like the Pub, Nicoletti’s, the flower cart, and the bookstore. It has a lot going for it. It even has a front door. Front doors are great. But I don’t understand the front door they have there. It’s only about 45 inches wide, barely wide enough to fit one normal person through, let alone the big, backpack carrying variety. And it’s probably one of the busiest doorways on campus to boot. I’m sure I’ve seen moments when there were about 50 people within ten yards of the entrance, all trying to get through that 45-inch crack in the glass, some going in and some going out.

The Arbor is another place we’re lucky to have, but sometimes it gets crowded. Once you get into that line it’s pretty hard to get out. If you were to come at the end of the UV-6 you’d have to start at the beginning. The mark shop at Buchanan used to be the same way but last year they remodeled it and changed the service. So now maybe I’ll like it a little more. But the thing that really doesn’t make any sense about the Arbor is, if you’re just in line to get a cold drink, you want, you pass up the ice cream, the gift shop, you waste an opportunity of grabbing a gift and fighting your way upstream against a hungry flow of fellow students navigating the Arbor river. It doesn’t make sense.

Travis Ashby is tired today.

Exploratory Oil Well Drilling

By SHEILA GORMICAN
Staff Writer

Drilling is up to 19 new wells to explore for oil and gas in the city of Santa Barbara, Blanchard said. Drilling will begin by December 1, 1984, and take 150-160 days to complete. "These are only temporary drilling rigs for exploration and not actual production platforms, but we are always conscious of the possible implications that drilling for oil can lead to," Blanchard said, adding that Shell's lease is adjacent to the buffer of the Federal Ecological Preserve, which was established after the 1969 Santa Barbara oil spill to protect that portion of the coast for future generations.

Hearings like the one held Tuesday are held by the Coastal Commission and open to the public. DiRocco explained. "Just before the Sun representative spoke, the commission showed slides of a San Francisco oil spill," but the proposal still passed with little public testimony.

"The public doesn't seem to object to companies drilling exploratory wells for oil with a temporary vessel. It is the platforms and pipelines that get people riled up," Blanchard said. The Santa Barbara City Council hasn't taken a position on the approval of the 19 new wells, but "we would like to see oil development stretched out over a longer period of time, making the impact less and giving the community more time to adjust," Mayor Sheila Lodge said. "We (the city council) have opposed projects down the line, but without much success."

The Department of the Interior seems insensitive to the concerns of Santa Barbara," she said. The department wants to make the country independent of foreign energy sources, she explained. "All of the oil development in the channel is possibly destroying other resources, the beauty of the area and the air quality, when we as a country will never really be energy independent, and the oil isn't going to be overly-great."

Overseas Study Provides Varied Perspectives

Placed in an entirely new environment, a student in the University of California Education Abroad Program finds that he or she has the chance to gain in dependence and accept new challenges.

Although academic work is the primary focus of the Education Abroad Program, the total experience goes well beyond this.

Suzie Dickman, a student at the University in Jerusalem, Israel, "It was the most incredible year of my life. It gave me a chance to see and experience things I had never thought to do before."

In addition, Dickman gained a different perspective on the Middle East conflict. "Giving back the West Bank would mean no conflict. "Giving back the* perspective on the Middle East gained a different perspective, Dickman said.

Another UCSB student, Mary Kate Morris, lived in Bordeaux, France for one year. Explaining her experiences, she said one gains a whole different world perspective. "You see things differently," Morris said. "Americans, because they are not surrounded by so many other cultures, tend to be more closed in. In Europe I became more politically aware. It (politics) affected my life more directly."

Paul Silberstein studied at the American University in Cairo, Egypt last year. "It is much more to experience than American ways and traditions, many people don't see this," she said. "Not everybody lives the way that we do in America, Dickman said. "We learn to adapt, change and accept change. Once you get a feel of what is out there, it is difficult to come back."

The program offers insight into and appreciation for the cultures and institutions of other peoples, Dickman said. "The program offers an academic richness beyond that available at the eight U.C. campuses. The range of studies available is phenomenal, " EAP Academic Advisor Brian Selander said.

Also studying at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Wendy Dellow said her year was the greatest experience she's ever had. "I gained a lot of confidence and learned to do things I never imagined I would do. It takes a little initiative, but is definitely worth it."

The experience gained through a year abroad is like no education any school could ever offer, Selander said. "The university can provide a general opportunity, but it cannot provide the experience. This is something the student must achieve on his own," he observed.

The faculty members, like the students, come from various leading U.S. universities. "The teachers were harder than I thought they would be, but it all balanced out in the end," student participant Sarah Cells said.

Over 60 courses are offered each semester, from anthropology, business and communications to fine arts, philosophy, science and religious studies. The ship is a complete campus in itself. It is stocked with all the necessary school facilities, as well as those...

Foreign Experiences Can Be Found Through A University Program

By MARC APPELL

Have you ever been sitting in a Paris café and felt the desire to see Paris in another season besides Christmas in London... but not the desire to see Paris in another season besides Christmas in London... but instead, that college and travel just don't mix? Well, the opportunity to study and see the world at the same time is available to University of California students through the Education Abroad Program.

The University of California Education Abroad Program gives students the chance to study at one of over 50 universities in 24 different countries.

American students get to participate in a program that is "a sense of independence, which is almost demanded of you as you mature more rapidly," U.C. Systemwide Director William Allaway said.

In addition, a year of studying abroad allows students to realize their vocational goals and develop a new affinity for their own country, Allaway said. "They get a new perspective on your dorm room and your place in the world."

The desire to experience a new language and to study in an area of the world that is just a few countries away from students go abroad, Allaway said. Yet, many EAP students simply wish to return to the country of their own ethnic origin, and get a better sense of their ancestry, he said.

The different levels of difficulty at these foreign campuses varies from campus to campus, as compared to the relative uniformity of coursework at U.C. schools, EAP Academic Advisor Brian Selander said. "It varies on the classes; there are different classes for different systems."

The concept for the U.C. EAP program originated at UCSB over 25 years ago when UCSB Chancellor Sam Molot said he had seen the success of the program at other colleges, Allaway said.

The U.C. Regents approved the program in 1976 and Allaway was appointed systemwide director. The main offices were set up on the UCSB campus.

Although approximately 1,180 applications to study abroad are received each year from the eight U.C. campuses, most of these applications are sent to UCSB for processing. Allaway said because the EAP program began at UCSB and the systemwide office is located on campus, "it is logically appropriate to manage, the most qualified to handle the program," she said.

If you are interested in applying, the student must attend a series of interviews with faculty coordinators and committees, in which the student's application is received, the student must be a major or minor in the foreign department, and have the equivalent of one year of college German, or its equivalent. A 3.0 overall grade point average is also required. If you are accepted, you will get a taste of it," Collins said.

But is all not academically for Students in the Education Abroad Program have an opportunity to travel to many exotic lands.

The temple above located at Luxor, Egypt, is one of those.

Students who go abroad through UC Cooperative Education Program know that the program does not mean financial independence. Konrad explained. "It's best if the students have had at least one year of college German, or its equivalent," Konrad said. "A student pays no taxes on his wages, and his room and board expenses are kept to a minimum," she said.

Students who go abroad through the UCSB International Cooperative Education Program know that the demanding, arduous work in an unfamiliar country is often overwhelming, but the challenge is worth it. The program sends American students to German-speaking countries to work, Rosalinde Konrad, UCSB cooperative education coordinator and senior buccer in the German department, said.

The program also brings foreign students to the United States for ten weeks of employment in the summer, Konrad explained. "We in the German Department consider the ICEP an ideal experience for students who intend to spend a year abroad (EAP) later," she said.

Before departing on the ten week program, instructional meetings are held to inform students about what to expect in a foreign country, Konrad said. The next orientation meeting will be held Jan. 17.

The students involved research the different countries before choosing where they will work. "Things weren't always nice and comfortable," Lisa Thompson, a UCSB student who went to Germany, said.

Thompson had never had the opportunity to apply to a language program in a German language before going to work on a farm in northern central Germany. "I had to face a lot of challenges," she said. Raising cattle, cooking and taking care of children, all while trying to communicate in a foreign language was difficult, she said.

However, most of the jobs are in resort industries, supermarkets are big, and some technical jobs are also available for those qualified, Konrad said. "A student pays no taxes on his wages, and his room and board expenses are kept to a minimum," she said.

The foundation program offers training in Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Norway and Sweden in eight to twelve week sessions. Students are paid daily living expenses while they receive training in different fields of study, she said.

Although most education abroad programs are geared toward students in humanities fields, the foundation program is special because it is one of... (Please turn to pg.10, col.3)

Although Britain receives the most applications, the majority of students are sent to France, because of the high amount of available facilities and number of EAP students who speak French, Selander said.

After the administrative detail and mandatory training are completed, students then must obtain visas and undergo medical examinations for their travels, Allaway said.

UCSB Club Looks At India's New Leader

By LISA MASCARO

It has been said that Indira Gandhi was a politician who could fight tough when threatened; the question of how well her son and successor Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi will control his country was discussed by UCSB students and faculty at a forum Wednesday.

Set up by the UCSB International Students Club, the forum focused on the impact Gandhi's policies will have on India's economic status and foreign relations, as well as on his popularity and opposition among the Indian people.

The son of late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who was assassinated Nov. 7, can project himself as a national leader. He's much younger than any of his opposition, an Indian man in the audience said.

Gandhi is following policies established by his mother, Ramamurthi said, and India will continue to be a symbol of solidarity and stability.

However, Ramamurthi expressed regret that India's current economic problems will not change.

The Indian government's current "policies don't address themselves directly to the problems the country is plagued with," he said. "Rajiv will blunder along economically more or less the same way," Ramamurthi said.

In addition, if Gandhi continues to promote these policies, there is a possibility of civil unrest and there probably will be an assassination, Ramamurthi added. "Maybe we can affect things," she added.

"We want students to be critical of what they hear," Frank Holssmuler, an organizer of the forum said.

The son of late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who was assassinated Nov. 7, can project himself as a national leader. He's much younger than any of his opposition, an Indian man in the audience said. "Young blood" politicians will suddenly be there in India after Gandhi's power, he added.

The International Political Forum is a weekly event sponsored by the International Students Club. The forums focus on a different issue of foreign or domestic interest each week. The purpose of the forums is "to make people aware of different problems," Magda Noffal, a member of the forum's organizational committee, said.

The forum is a good device because "we can choose and change the topics to fit the news at that moment," Frank Holssmuler, president of the International Students Club, said.

"I think there really is a need for this smaller kind of discussion. This is something for all students; members come because they want to, not because they belong to the club," Holssmuler said.

"We want students to be critical of what our or any government is doing," Nancy Adamson, forum organization committee member, said. Hopefully, through the forums, students will get to know a little bit of the world, foreign students are definitely aware of political and follow it even more closely than American students, Noffal said. Since the United States is considered a "superpower," American "must be aware of what's happening."

students don't really care about foreign issues; they are more concerned with specific local political issues, Noffal explained.

It is quite obvious that U.S. students really don't know what is happening in other cultures, Holssmuler said. "This is a result of bad foreign coverage in U.S. media," Holssmuler said.

American tend to be interested only in countries which affect them, he said. However, this is changing, Noffal said. "It used to be a lot worse, but it's getting better.

Diablo Canyon Litigation...

Mooneyery, said. Mothers For Peace has been pressuring Panetta to obtain the release of the transcripts.

The NRC released the transcripts to Congressman Richard Ottinger (D-N.J.), chairman of the committee which oversees the licensing of nuclear power plants, and to Congressman Ed Marke (D-Mass.). They received the report under a "promise of confidentiality," Toiv said. "Leon (Panetta) has urged both of them to do whatever they can to release those transcripts."

"They (Ottinger and Marke) are withholding something that literally has a life and death significance," Silver said. "Releasing the transcripts will benefit the public by exposing the danger of operating Diablo Canyon, and this should override the promise made to the NRC, she said. "The public interest is more important than that promise."

"Because we agreed to hold them (the transcripts), we are not going to break that trust," Mike McCabe, staff director of the Subcommittee for Energy and Power Conservation, said. Ottinger obtained the transcripts to determine if they supported the allegations made by Diablo Canyon's opponents.

The transcripts reveal that the NRC has not come forward with all of the information relevant to the licensing of Diablo Canyon, McCabe said. "The briefs filed by NRC attorneys did not adequately reflect what the commission's deliberations were on the issues."

Ottinger has written a letter to the court stating that the transcripts are relevant to the case. McCabe said.

The hearings covered by the transcripts concerned earthquake safety and emergency procedures, Silver said. Mothers for Peace feels those are among many problems not adequately addressed by PG&E or the NRC. The NRC in Washington has been insensitive to the concerns of local residents over the safety of Diablo Canyon, she said.

PG&E, however, maintains Diablo Canyon is safe. "The plant is safe and ready to operate," Weinberg said. "No scientific body has said the plant is unsafe."

But the current litigation is not concerned with the safety of Diablo Canyon. Mothers for Peace believes the plant is unsafe, the only way for them to content the license is to show that the NRC used improper procedures to grant it, Silver said. "We can only discuss the procedures," she said. But she stressed that the problems with safety are tied to the procedures used to grant the license since the hearings were held improperly and concerned emergency safety procedures.

Currently, Diablo Canyon is undergoing testing, which will gradually reach full power over a period of 79 to 100 days, Weinberg said. It produced electricity for the first time last Sunday when operators turned on the plant to 15 percent of its capacity. Then it was shut down so that construction features could be checked for safety, she said. "This is a period when we're shaking down the system."

Gndders Are Enthused About Test Squad. With no division title, Division III teams and a football team has battled relative prosperity coming into the season — not an amazing season, according to Pimm, but certainly a sign of production of exciting games and accomplishments (three wins, two losses, an 12-year absence.

Gridders Are Enthused About Their Final Test

UCSB Football

The Gauchos are going to suffer from their second two months of practicing and competing for each other, members of the UCSB men's basketball team is hankering for an opportunity to compete against a real opposition.

They'll get their chance Saturday night in the Events Center when they face the University of Toronto Varsity Blues.

Tisdale put it differently. "We'll be playing the same opponent that you have to deal with," he said. "We're gonna go after 'em?" Moropoulous said one of the reasons UCSB has been reluctant to play semi-pro teams is that these teams, in the past, have recruited individuals not on the official roster just to play in one game. Presumably, the Americans landed a 230-pound fullback, who once tried out for a USFL team, to try out for the Gauchos.

Moropoulous admitted that he knows relatively little about the Bengals, except that "we are always going to have some real good individual talent."

Nevertheless, Moropoulous said the team "is really quite enthused" about the game. Tisdale put it differently. "We're not going to lay down for anybody," he said. "We're going to go after 'em."

Women's Volleyball

Upset Over Tigers Would Please Seniors

By JOHN CUMBELICH

Sports Writer

As the 19-15 women's volleyball team heads into its final homestand of the season, with matches against the number-one ranked University of the Pacific Tigers and the University of San Diego Toreros, happy endings of two kinds come to mind.

An upset of the Pacific Tigers, who boast a 14-game winning streak, "can be done" UCSB Head Coach Kathy Gregory said, ensuring not just happiness but wonders for the Gauchos' confidence, ranking, and seed in the NCAA's.

Pondering tonight's match, the tenth-year coach seemed understandably stumped on how to approach her top-ranked opponent. "Their strength is that they have no weaknesses," she said. "The challenge for us is to play to the best of our abilities."

An All-American setter, whom the Gauchos didn't see in their last meeting with the Tigers at UOP, will be lining up against the blue and gold tonight. What's more, the Tigers are starting four seniors and have an in- credible foundation of experience and talent.

Having established that Pacific merits its lofty seed in the NCAA's, what's more, the Gauchos are starting four seniors and have an in- credible foundation of experience and talent. Having established that Pacific merits its lofty seed in the NCAA's, the Gauchos plan to compensate! Star- tier Gina DeQuattro over Freshman Ann Wyatt in Gregory's coaching move designed to put the ex-} perience the Gauchos need in fighting UOP on the floor. "A great offensive night" will be a prerequisite for victory, according to the coach, the likes of which the Gauchos saw last in up- setting Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. What is crucial is that the Gauchos get an even balance in their con- tributions, as the Tigers' balance of talent is a great asset which the Gauchos will have to match.

After reviewing the statistics that the Gauchos' two departing seniors have compiled over their tenure's at UCSB, the Gauchos look like they will have some reliable experience of their own to call on tonight and tomorrow. In three seasons DeQuattro has collected 79 kills, 160 career solo blocks (record), 86 solo blocks thus far this season (record) and a .386 career hitting percentage. Adams has been a Gauchos for two seasons, though hampered much of this year with a knee injury. Her career statistics for one-and-one- half seasons are: 306 career kills, .231 hitting percentage, 44 aces and 77 blocks.

Our wishes to the team and to DeQuattro and Adams in their future endeavors are the same; BEST OF LUCK!

The U.C. Student Lobby has been one of the most effective in the country, Bingaman said. "The best organized and the most effective student lobby is the Student Association of State Universities in New York," he said. "I would have to say that the U.C. Student Lobby is in the same line. Students in California need to know that they have one of the best student lobbies in the country, and they need to support it." Once funding is obtained for a USWA West Coast regional office, the U.C. Student Lobby will act as host in Sacramento. "We need that office," Bingaman said. "To be a national organization we cannot be East Coast based."

Over 425 campuses are USWA members, which is over four times the number of members in 1981. The increase, Bingaman said, is partly because "students at all levels are getting much more sophisticated on political participation and beginning to feel more comfortable participating in politics from campuses."

A decrease in educational funding and tax enforcement of civil rights laws since Reagan's first election have also caused students to become more concerned with their political impact, he explained. Because the USWA is more visible and larger than it has ever been and because "at least one out of 10 students knows another student who could not come back to school because of finances," students have to pay more attention to the decisions made at all levels of government, he said.

The enforcement of civil rights laws affect the access women and minorities have to a college education, Bingaman said, because "inherent in the structure (of universities) are some obstacles for them to coming to school."

Hickman and A.S. Off-Campus Representative Peter Reistrum will meet with several members of Congress today to discuss the plight of Central American refugees in the United States and upcoming legislation which will affect sanctions. Reistrum and Hickman are hoping to help set up a sanctuary in Isla Vista.

Regents...

do need strengthening. "This can be done through a greater evaluation of affirmative action programs."

In addition, the regents voted unanimously to uphold the present special action policy for admission of students to the university.

Four percent of the special action program will be drawn from underrepresented minorities or students whose families have a low income or a poor educational background. Two percent of the students in special action will come from other areas.

The primary emphasis of the university's student affirmative action program is to work with schools to increase the number of students who meet the requirements for regular admission and to encourage regularly admisible students to enroll.

In addition, special action allows consideration for those individuals who have not had the full benefits of sound academic preparation at the secondary level but have the potential to succeed in a university setting.

Dr. Suzanne Navarro, a research analyst from the Mexican-American Legal Defense Educational Foundation, is concerned with the funding for student action services. "If the university is serious, they must provide additional sources. " Although Chicano, Indian and black enrollment has increased, it has been at a slower rate than whites and Asians. "There are many things that we can do," Navarro explained. "We can make an effort to contact these students on an individual basis and prepare financial aid packages early."

Changes in university enrollment requirements also cause concern for minority students. Navarro said. However, "continued effort on the part of the university will yield continued gains."
