Steak a la Hawaii

By Johann Sandoval

My good friend Ching Ming and I have been looking to hook up at a nice, intimate setting to have a good, long talk about things. We have been trying to do this for weeks, but something always seemed to get in the way. But I called her and I said, "Listen, let's go out to Chuck's tonight. Chuck's of Hawaii."

She said, "OK, let's do it. But not tonight, I have plans. Let's go tomorrow." So we went.

Chuck's of Hawaii is a steak house, and they mean it. The restaurant is known for the finest grill in the area, and they convinced me after Ching Ming and I dined there.

The interior of Chuck's is just what Ching Ming and I were looking for. It is dark and intimate, with shaded candles on every table and the likes of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, Steely Dan, and the Grateful Dead on the stereo in the background. Perfect for hushed conversations about ... whatever.

Chuck's has a full, discreet bar and I ordered a bloody Mary as soon as we sat down in the dining room. Sometimes I do that just to entertain myself.

Ching Ming and I were deeply involved in conversation so we didn't get much chance to peruse the menu when our waitress, Madeline, came by to get our order. She gave us more time.

They have a brief and purposeful menu painted on the side of a Lancer's wine bottle with various steak, chicken, lobster and fish dishes that tempt the palate.

I eventually decided on the sirloin steak and teriyaki rice dish while Ching Ming had the vegetable skewer dinner, also with the rice. The dinners came with a trip to Chuck's great salad and bread bar, which we utilized to its maximum. The salad bar is situated right in front of the grill so you can see your food cooking while you get your salad.

My steak, which I ordered medium well, was absolutely fantastic. It was both succulent and tasty. They even had my choice of steak sauces. I chose good ol' A.1.

Ching Ming's veggie kabobs were grilled to perfection. They were two generous skewers of red and green peppers, mushrooms, tomatoes, onions, etc., and Madeline was kind enough to take away the skewers and leave the veggies free for Ching Ming to get at them.

They don't mess around when it comes to the Hawaiian part of the Chuck's of Hawaii name. The theme was so well executed at the restaurant in the staff's clothing and the general atmosphere that Ching Ming told me she wanted to go to Hawaii after being to Chuck's, because of the great food they must have there. But I told her that was just a rationalization for wanting to go to Hawaii in the first place and that she was better off here in beautiful Santa Barbara at Chuck's.

Chuck's of Hawaii is located at 3888 State Street in Santa Barbara. Open 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. daily, Friday and Saturday until 11:30 p.m. Phone 687-4417.

Food fit for the Great One...

Buster's Classic Burger Grill/Pool Hall/Sports Bar

By Dino Wayne Thorne

Hockey playoff games are like a great big burger — enticing, exciting and immensely satisfying.

So, it was only natural that Paulo and I — in anticipation of game seven of the Kings' series against Toronto — headed down to the only place for the Great American Hamburger: Buster's.

Buster's has that possessive s after its name, which means somewhere there is person named Buster with a restaurant lease in one hand and a big smile lighting up his face. Buster has reason to be proud; the restaurant is the classic burger grill/pool hall/sports bar.

And it's great for hockey.

Paulo and I got to our table just as the first period was underway. Our pockets were bulging with cash, since we expected a good hockey meal to cost as much as a good hockey game. Eyeing the Buster's menu, we were delighted to see that no hamburger, sandwich or entree cost over five dollars. Sure, we were a little sheepish for bringing all that money, but more dollars meant more dinner. Volume, volume, volume.

Paulo decided that the Double Buster Burger with cheese sounded like it might make for some good eating, and I could only nod in agreement. I selected the Fried Chicken Dinner, since it came with mashed potatoes, and I wanted a side dish that resembled snow to honor Canada's national pastime.

Wayne Gretzky put the Kings up 1-0 just as our food was ready, and I realized why everyone in the restaurant was suddenly yelling "The Great One!" The burger was enormous! Paulo's eyes widened, even bigger than the time when TV Guide reported that "Baywatch" was going to do an episode in Hawaii.

My fried chicken was no slouch either. The mashed potatoes looked like snow, but tasted like heaven. Perfectly textured, the potatoes had a slight butter taste that made everyone in the place cheer. The Kings had also just gone ahead, 2-0, but Paulo and I were sure they were applauding the potatoes.

While hockey games feature non-stop action, hockey intermissions can lead to non-stop boredom. In the 20 minutes between periods one and two, Paulo and I walked around Buster's to see if the place could be classified as the perfect hamburger grill/pool hall/sports bar.

We first noticed the large bar, which was not difficult since it was situated directly beneath the television. Buster's has a wide assortment of beers and other alcohol, but we did not partake because we figured that if Gretzky could go the evening without booze, so could we.

In the back room (or front room, depending upon which door you enter) are a couple of pool tables and a number of video games. We still had plenty of money, so we spent the rest of the intermission trying to kick some Street Fighter butt.

When the Maple Leafs came

out of the intermission with two quick goals, Paulo and I decided to drown our sorrow in some corn dogs. Every Buster's sandwich, burger and hot dog comes with french fries, so by this time we had accumulated quite a fry collection. Good snack food for the second intermission, we thought.

I also asked for another soda, but the cashier told me that my cup guaranteed me free refills. This news was met with more applause from the restaurant crowd, who apparently cared more about my drink order than the Kings' quick tie-breaking goal.

The Kings, Paulo and I were sitting pretty in the third period with a 3-2 lead, but Toronto tied the score again. Anticipating another overtime game, we put in an order for some more food, this time testing the sandwich choices. I chose the roast beef, in honor of Toronto's hefty coach, Pat Burns. Paulo selected the grilled chicken, in honor of Toronto's cowardly center, Doug Gilmour.

With four minutes left in regulation and our orders just about ready, the Kings scored again. The crowd erupted, and I was happy to see them finally cheering the game. Paulo and I politely asked the cashier to make those orders to go, since the Kings were going to the Stanley Cup Finals and we were going home.

Buster's is located at 6396 Hollister Ave. in Goleta. Restaurant open from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday; Pub open until 11 p.m. Phone 968-2565.

LOCAL COLOR Anaconda

All right I.V., wash those flannels and get 'em ready to fly..., FIREHOSE will be playing the Anaconda this Saturday night (June 5). Supposedly from Ohio, these guys are the remnants of the early 80s punk band, the Minutemen. Playing everything from rock to blues to jazz & more, these guys rock out, and you won't want to miss it. Opening up the show will be Blackbird and Citizen Down for your entertainment. Check it out!
