$25,000 ASKED FOR RELIEF WORK IN THIS DISTRICT

WELFARE FUNDS FOR THIS DISTRICT INCREASED ONE-THIRD BY PROPOSED BUDGET SUBMITTED TO SUPERVISORS

Unemployment Budget For This District Calls For $25,300; Dinsmore Named To Fill Place Left By Mrs. Cate On Welfare Board

ALLOWANCES for welfare work provided in the 1933-34 budget submitted Monday by Chairman Preisker of the board of supervisors, call for an increase for this district of nearly 33 percent over last year's figures.

The budget would allow $15,000 for the coming year, whereas for the fiscal year just ended the appropriation was $10,595. The total budget for the county's five districts, is approximately $2000 below the amount spent last year, but differs radically in the allocation of funds to the various districts.

The principal change consisted of a ten percent reduction in the Santa Barbara district's share, and increases in the funds apportioned to the other four districts.

The new budget also provided for the support of the detention home by the city of Santa Barbara, estimated cost of which will run around $40,000.

Accompanying the welfare budget Preisker submitted an unemployment budget for the coming year calling for an increase of $25,384, or a sum of $260,384 for the five districts. Of this amount $25,300 is indicated for this district.

Commenting on the proposed budget, Supervisor Tom Dinsmore of this district said yesterday: "It simply gives this district its just share of the funds. Santa Barbara has been getting off with less than its proportionate share of the tax burden, and the new budget would even up that discrepancy. Figures show that for the past year such expenses as the county hospital have been all out of proportion. Most of the patients in that institution come from Santa Barbara, some months as high as 90 percent, while the city pays only three-eighths of the cost of its upkeep."

Upon the motion of Supervisor Ronald Adam, Lompoc, Dinsmore was temporarily appointed successor to Katherine Cate as a member of the welfare board. Mrs. Cate's resignation, along with those of the entire welfare board, was accepted at Monday's meeting, and the following appointed to complete the new board: C. L. Preisker, chairman, Tom Dinsmore, Albert Eaves, and John Stewart. The appointment completed the shifting of all welfare and unemployment relief directly to the supervisors of each district.

The new set-up will not be in full swing in this district until the first of August, Dinsmore stated yesterday, after which time all food supplies for this district will be purchased from local merchants.

"Prices on food-stuffs have been submitted by Carpinteria merchants, pending the new system's installation," he added, "and they are very reasonable. I am satisfied that the new set-up will prove highly efficient and satisfactory to the district."

FATHER OF MERTON LEWIS PASSES ON IN EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR

Death Comes to Aged Man In Arcadia Sanitarium

George Edson Lewis, formerly of Carpinteria, passed away Monday at a sanitarium in Arcadia, at the age of 86.

Born in Roxbury, Mass., 1846, he married Cora Mabel Armstrong, who died in 1927 at the age of 77.

The elderly couple had made their home with their son, Merton F. Lewis, on Foothill road, since 1921. Deceased is survived by a son M. (Continued on Page Three)

Italian Air Ace Thrills Town By Flying Like This

And Gives State Street The Latin Jitters

AT 3:30 Saturday afternoon an oddly decorated plane swooned beneath the low hanging fog that shrouded the Carpinteria airport, circled the field once and landed as the roar of its 400 h. p. motor answered the cheers of more than a thousand throats.

The plane taxied to a stop, and from the cockpit alighted Lieut. Tito Falconi, Italian ace, a dapper little man who waved to the crowd and proceeded to climb out of his voluminous flying togs, disclosing a nativity uniform beneath.

The reception committee, comprised of over 1000 people, many of them the aviator's countrymen, showered him with flowers, which he received with a flashing smile and numerous bows.

Upon unloading his baggage, the Italian ace took off with a roar, and proceeded to give the spectators a thrilling demonstration of aerial acrobatics, which included outside loops, barrel rolls, upward tail-spins, and upside down flying, at which he holds the record with an hour and a half (Continued on Page Four)

K. OF P. MONTHLY CONVENTION HERE DRAWS SIXTY-FIVE

29th District Meeting Attracts Knights From 5 Chapters

Members of the Carpinteria Lodge, Knights of Pythias, were hosts to their brothers of District 29 last night at the order's monthly convention. The 29th district is comprised of Santa Barbara, Ventura, Santa Paula, Moorpark, Oxnard, and Carpinteria.

More than 65 members were present at the dinner, which was held in the Masonic hall, and was served by Huber's cafe.

Features of the entertainment program arranged for the evening included a vocal solo by Thelma Bauhaus, old time music by Mr. and Mrs. George Westfall, and community singing led by Mrs. F. J. Bauhaus. Major McGregor of Santa Barbara was the speaker of the evening.

Ye Kronikal Almanack

WHO but a public malefactor of Artist Coles' ilk would depict Postmaster Jim Lewis, than whom there is no kindlier soul anywhere, leering the wicked leer shown here-with?

As a matter of fact, he has this department badly puzzled. How can we write about the Jim Lewis we know, the valley's premier cyclist, he of the quiet manner and friendly smile—how can we write like that with Coles' perpetration staring us in the face? People who didn't know the subject would look at the portrait after reading about the original and say "It can't be that man. No one who so resembles Jimmy Cagney, bad man of the films, could be like this article says he is!"

On the other hand, if we try to analyze (c'mon up sometime and we'll give you an analysis) the features of this face, not only will

Big Barbecue Marks Annual Carpinteria Lions Visit To Ojai

Local Den To Be Hosts Here Next Month

TWENTY-EIGHT Carpinteria Lions and Lionesses participated in the annual trek made Wednesday to Ojai by the local den as its part of the yearly visitation program between the Carpinteria and Ojai clubs.

The affair was attended by over two hundred, including, besides the two dens, Lions from Santa Barbara, Santa Paula, Oxnard and Ventura.

High lights of the evening included swimming, a barbecue, a talk by Lief Erickson, Santa Barbara Lion, on "Lionism's Part in Helping to Restore Prosperity," brief talks by the presidents of the dens present, and Hill-billy music rendered by the Ojai Mountaineers.

The Ojai club will return the visit the third week in August, it was decided Wednesday, at which time they will be tendered a barbecue and dance at Cerca Del Mar.

"We'll have to really 'put it on' to equal the time the Ojai club gave us," said President Chuck Verner of the local den yesterday. "This annual exchange of visits engenders a (Continued on Page Four)

DOMINGUEZ CHILI LABORATORY SCENE OF CONFLAGRATION

Quick Work Saves Building As Hot Grease Starts Fire

Damage estimated at approximately $100 was caused by a fire in the kitchen of M. R. Dominguez early Monday afternoon. The blaze, caused by ignited grease in a large kettle was discovered and extinguished by Paul Dominguez before the local fire apparatus arrived on the scene.

The kitchen, which is housed in a small building at the rear of the Dominguez property, contains considerable electric cooking and washing equipment, which was not badly damaged by the fire. Some furniture was burned, the walls badly blackened and a hole burned in the roof.

If the fire had burned for a few minutes longer before being discovered the building and furnishings would have undoubtedly gone up in smoke.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith and family are expected home today or tomorrow from Chicago, where they have been attending the World's Fair.

people who know Mr. Lewis say, "That's not the Jim Lewis we know!" but that same Mr. Lewis will have grounds for a libel suit!

The only way we can do it out is that the local dispenser of c.o.d. packages is a prospective client for the psycho-analyst. Maybe licking so many stamps has built up with in his good soul a suppressed desire to step outside of his post-office window and take a crack at those of us who don't thoroughly moisten our postage. Maybe at the time his likeness was snapped he was conducting a private rehearsal of things to say to those ob-servant souls who persisted in telling him that the post office clock had stopped, until in a fit of desperation he climbed up on a chair and started the darned thing. At any rate its going now, and he looks a little more contented.

LEMON PRICES DROP AS SOUTHERN DISTRICTS PICK BIG BUMPER CROP; VALLEY GROWERS NOT WORRIED

Eastern Weather Big Factor In Price Of Citrus Next Month; Local Ranchers Doubt Beer Will Effect Country's Lemon Markets

WITH the southern portion of the citrus belt picking the biggest bumper crop in its history, and cool weather prevailing in the far eastern states, local lemon prices sagged this week to an average of $4.50 per box, and will probably remain below average for the balance of the summer unless a prolonged heat wave strikes the east coast, citrus experts here said yesterday. "Riverside, Redlands, and all the southern citrus districts are sending large shipments east and their pickings are still running far above normal," said Percy Houts, Jr., manager of the Carpinteria Mutual Citrus Association. "The local crop is lighter than usual, and while the price compares favorably with last year at this time, 1932 was a late year for lemons here. A long hot spell in the east would send prices up and probably start things moving rapidly."

For the first time in years, this week passed without a single shipment of lemons leaving the local packing houses, and indications point to light shipments next week.

Local citrus growers are not inclined to worry over the situation. As one rancher expressed it: "One light year in seven isn't anything to grumble about."

Lemon growers are loathe to make predictions about future pickings, pointing out that too many conditions enter into the matter to render forecasting a safe pastime. It was pointed out that while according to Spring indications pickings in the southern belt would be very light this summer, they have broken all previous records with the heaviest crop in the history of that district.

Carpinteria growers are inclined to discount the theory that beer sales are a contributing factor in the price decline, stating that the causes are obvious, with a flooded market and eastern weather not conducive to large consumption.

"On a hot day your easterner either wants a drink involving lemons or he doesn't want it," one rancher remarked. "It isn't a question with him of deciding between beer and a lemon drink. The only similarity in the two products is the fact that lemonade and beer are both wet."

The opinion was ventured in several places that the repeal of the 18th amendment indicated by recent returns, presages an increased demand for lemons and a much stronger market, it being pointed out that lemons constitute an important item in most of the so-called "hard drinks."

Mrs. Hugh Thurmond entertained the following members of her evening bridge club Tuesday evening: Mr. and Mrs. Percy Houts, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Dave Safwenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kistler, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cadwell, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sturmer.

Carpinteria Nine Wallops Cubs 12-5 In Big Come-Back

Big Field Day Held At The Expense Of 3 Hurlers

CARPINTERIA'S Cantaloupe clouters served notice Sunday to the other members of the newly formed seven-club baseball league that they are a nine to be reckoned with, that they were just foolin' the previous Sunday when the Y. M. Is took 'em into camp, and that if there's anything they like after a hearty Sunday meal it's a chaser of young bear meat.

Ask Vic Aldrich, "iron man of the mound," ask Senft, pill tosser de luxe, ask Cordero, erstwhile paramount pitcher, ask any of the 300 rural rooters who saw Mister V. Alonzo lead the locals hitting spree with a single, a double, a triple and a homer in five trips to the plate.

Considered one of the most dangerous teams in the circuit, the Cubs crumbled beneath a batting barrage that drove three pitchers to cover and netted Stemp's charges 12 runs to 5 tallies for the visitors.

And while we think of it, the new battery, Sanchez and Granada, performed smoothly and efficiently. Sanchez allowed 10 hits, but kept them scattered and was never in danger. He was ably supported by a team that made three errors, none of which were costly, and all of which were more than atoned for by the afore-mentioned hitting spree.

Mills, Moreno and Alonzo each culled homers, the latter poling his with the bases crowded. And if you think the fans didn't like it you're silly!

All in all, the Cubs needn't be ashamed of the defeat. They went down before a heads-up brand of baseball played by a nine that knew what it wanted and went out and got it.

PERFORMING A NEEDED SERVICE

NEARLY 200 young Carpinterians between the age of 12 and 20 enjoyed an evening of dancing in a nice environment of beautiful surroundings, and general sociability and to good music—at a cost of ten cents each—this week.

Following the dance Manager Bassett stated that he had never seen a friendlier, more well-behaved group and that such young people are a credit to the community.

May we herewith whole-heartedly agree, and add as our opinion that in giving these young peoples' parties, Mr. Bassett is performing a service to the community that should be particularly appreciated by the parents of Carpinteria.

There are only too few places where young people can enjoy themselves in healthy sociability at a reasonable price. In affording young Carpinteria such an opportunity the management of Cerca del Mar is helping to answer the perpetual request of restless Youth—"give us something to do to amuse ourselves."

Carpinteria is justly proud of its young people, and should be grateful to anyone performing such a service as Manager Bassett is doing.

"WE COVER THE WATERFRONT"

"ARRIVALS and Departures:—"S. S. Tatsuto Maru, N.Y. K. Lines, from berth 230-A, sailing at 4:00 p. m. for China, via S. F."

It looks drab and business-like enough on the "Shipping News" page of your daily paper, but for a brand new set of mingled emotions, go down to Teminal Island and watch an ocean liner depart. If you've never had the experience, there's a treat in store for you, and if you've done it before, you'll not need telling that repetition doesn't take the edge off the thrill of seeing a huge ship pull away from the dock and put out to open sea.

A clashing gong in the hands of a room boy warns all visitors to get ashore. The winches are quiet now, the derricks motionless, their work completed and everything stowed safely below.

Above on the promenade deck all is confusion. Last minute good-byes are said, parting admonitions and good wishes given, all the nervous tension, tears and hysterical laughter that characterize such farewells.

Hurried snap-shots are taken of those who are going away. Those who are staying home try to have their pictures taken beside a life preserver or something suggesting the nautical. The gang-plank is crowded as the big ship dis-gorges her visitors.

Brightly colored serpentines stream to the dock, where the crowd jumps and pushes in a good natured attempt to catch the strips as they are thrown.

"G'bye, Joe ol' boy!" shouts a red-faced individual tuned up for the occasion. Joe waves good-bye and throws serpentine in his friend's general direction. The stay-at-home jumps a trifle unsteadily and bumps a neighbor's hat down over his eyes, but he misses the paper.

"Throw another'n," he calls, then spies a buxom lady at the rail next to Joe.

"Oh, boy—hey, Joe! How about the blond, Joe? Lookit th' blond next to you!"

Joe looks and with self-conscious bravado obligingly puts his arm around "the blond," whereupon his friend howls with glee.

"Attaboy, Joe—you'll get along O. K.!"

Little tugs, like pugnacious Boston bulls, are pushing and puffing. On the bridge the captain and harbor pilot watch the hubbub below with the detachment born of countless such scenes.

A deep-throated blast from the whistle on the ship's second stack. Something about a liner's whistle that gets you in the pit of the stomach.

Something of the ancient Lorelie's song calling men to sea has been caught and imprisoned in that shiny brass tube.

The gang plank goes aboard with a rumble and a clatter. The serpentines are coming faster now.

"She's moving," a voice cries, and the "good-byes" come faster and with renewed vigor, as the liner slowly, ever so slowly draws away from the dock. The tiny tugboats puff excitedly. The crowd moves in a confused body to the end of the dock. The gap widens between the ship's bulkheads and the piling, the serpentine strain, breaking one by one as the distance grows.

Handkerchiefs flutter from the ship. The tugs are squaring her into the roadstead now.

"Joe's still huggin' that blond and cuttin' up!" chuckles the red-faced gentleman.

The handkerchiefs on the dock are busy drying moist eyes and subduing sniffles.

"Banzai!" calls a group of twelve little Japanese girls, almost in chorus. The smaller ones sob openly, the others dab their almond eyes.

The ship is squared away and with another blast of her whistle tells the little tugs that she doesn't need them any more. They answer importantly with shrill toots, wishing their big sister bon voyage.

The waters at the stern are churned into a foam as the blades of the liner begin to bite, and slowly, majestically, she moves on her own power.

The last waiving arm drops, the last white handkerchief disappears.

With a final full-throated whistle the ocean greyhound lays back her ears and heads for the open sea, grandly ignoring the smaller craft that rock giddily in her wake.

The crowd on the dock breaks up, save for the group of Japanese girls, who still strain their eyes sea-ward.

One of them, a twelve-year-old, evidently feels that the demonstration calls for an explanation.

"It's a school chum," she explains, daubing her eyes demurely. "She's returning to Japan to study for two years." Her English is faultless, in marked contrast to the florid-faced gentleman who is making his way to his car as he chuckles to his companion: "Didja get Joe puttin' his arm around th' blond? Some boy, that Joe!"

Serpentine floating about the piling, the docks emptied of everything but the bright strips of paper, and out there a graceful thoroughbred points her nose into the wind as she carries another cargo of humanity to a new continent. Go down and watch it sometime.

Santa Barbara Mayor Proclaims Artists' Wk.

As a tribute to the large art colony living in Santa Barbara, Mayor H. T. Nielson of that city, has proclaimed the week commencing July 16 as Artists' Week. As a preliminary to the second annual Artists' Fair on Saturday, July 22, to be held in the sunken gardens of the magnificent Court House, State Street, the community's principal thoroughfare will be transformed into the longest art gallery in the country.

A few of the nationally known painters whose work will be exhibited are: DeWitt Parshall, N. A.; Douglas Parshall, A. N. A.; Colin Campbell Cooper, A. Bagdatapoulos; Eunice MacLennan; Lila Tuckerman; Belmont Brown, N. A.; and Ella Snowden Vail.

At the Fair on July 22, the artists in smocks and berets will be painting under the shade of great colorful sun umbrellas as they chat with friends and visitors. This informal outdoor exhibition affords the townspeople an opportunity to become better acquainted with members of the local art colony.

Pine Haven Joins United Motor Courts

Pine Haven Auto Court has just erected a sign conveying the information that it is now a member of United Motor Courts, a state-wide association of fifty cottage establishments, formed for the purpose of standardizing service to guests and for cooperative advertising.

Members of the association, said Ray Doell, "are carefully selected so as to maintain a high standard throughout, giving motorists confidence that they can stop at any member court and receive the best in comfort and convenience at a moderate price."

along with three other clubs, within walloping distance of the league's summit, and if they maintain the pace set against the Cubs the valley will see its second baseball trophy in two years.

Having drawn a bye in the league for Sunday, Stemp's charges will keep in form by taking on the Oxnard Stars on the home grounds Sunday afternoon at the usual hour.

Mussolini's Airman Exhibits Airmanship

of continuous inverted flying. His stunts were cut short by the fog bank which obscured the plane at an altitude of about 200 feet, but in that limited space he put his high powered Caproni biplane through its paces with a snap and flair that drew chorused "Oh's" and "Ah's" from the audience.

The famous birdman was officially welcomed by Mayor Nielson of Santa Barbara, and by officers of several Italian societies of that city, following which he was escorted to Santa Barbara to be feted and honored by his enthusiastic countrymen.

The following day Falconi sent his plane roaring the length of State street upside down and so low that many feared he would fall to clear the tops of the taller buildings after which he swooped along the beach and gave the bathers a thrill.

His Sunday aeronautics included some hair-raising stunts over Carpinteria before he left his plane at the local airport and motored to Santa Barbara to attend a luncheon in his honor at the Roma cafe.

Falconi is a slight, black-haired, good-looking youth whose white teeth flash below his dark mustache. At the age of 24 he is conceded to be one Mussolini's crack birdmen. His 400 h. p. Caproni plane was shipped to this country, through the canal and to San Pedro boxed in an immense crate.

He speaks English slowly, carefully, and has trouble in understanding Americans who, he complains with a smiling shrug "speak so quickly."

He returned to Los Angeles Wednesday afternoon, flying in company with Paul Lucas, cinema star, who piloted his own plane southward after a few days spent in Santa Barbara.

Falconi will await orders from his government, which he expects fine feeling of fellowship between the two communities," he continued, "and has been a big factor in the friendliness and neighborliness that was so evident Wednesday evening."

The barbecue was managed by Bill Baker of Ojai, and none other than Fred Houk, former Carpinterian, acted as head waiter.

Because of the previous evening's meeting, the regular Thursday night will take him to Chicago to join the Italian air armada there commanded by General Italo Balbo.

Montecito Cricket Club Defeats Hollywood Set

Vic Stubbs was a factor in the Montecito Cricket Club's defeat of the Hollywood club Sunday at Cox polo field, by a score of 154 to 84. Among the visiting cricketers were such film luminaries as Boris Karloff, H. B. Warner and C. Aubrey Smith.

Vic reports that Karloff made a tough opponent, the other two were not so proficient, and that all three were good sports and ardent followers of the game. Karloff has just returned from a month's visit to his home in England.

Vic will be doing his stuff Sunday at the same place when his club meets the Los Angeles aggregation.
