Woody's Barbecue Can't Be Beat

By Thor Garcia

Suddenly I'm in this high chair. Actually, it was a wooden booth. So I'm in this wooden booth and I've got food all over my face, food all over my lips and chin and cheeks and there's some on my nose and I'm smiling and there are no napkins and my hands are all gooey from this food. My stomach is splitting but I keep eating and I see no reason to stop and my face is still impacted with food.

This food is as thick as my head but as fun and wonderfully fulfilling as my mind. It's barbecue stuff, tangy and spicy and fabulously good for the tastebuds. Talk about buffalo wings. There's lots of it. Lots of meaty ribs, duck and chicken and chili things and maybe some fish, plus a salad and bread, pickles and an orange slice and another bowl of chili and a whole mess of fries doused in barbecue sauce. Yeah, I'm at Woody's and I'm eating chunky chili and chicken and woofing at my companion. OK, so I'm woofing. So what?

You'd woof too if you went to Woody's.

Woody's means two things: bucks (few) and buckets (many, of all persuasions). This ruff'n' rowdy wrangleresque place puts all kinds of stuff in buckets. You got your buckets of beer, for starters. You got your take-home bucket of Aunt Henrietta's barbecue sauce. Well, not everything is exactly in a bucket. What I mean to say is there's loads of material to work with. I mean, there's lots of food in your servings. Plus it doesn't cost that much.

What you get is barbecue. Most places you go, barbecue means A-1 steak sauce or some Chris n' Pitts stuff slathered miserly on a half-cooked roasted beef flank. Spite ye, imitation barbecue vendors! Woody be laughin'!

If that goofy westerner with the racoon tail for a mustache — you know, the chap in all of Woody's ads — ever got punched in the nose, you know he'd be bleeding barbecue sauce. I mean, Woody's just oozes sauce. No, it breathes sauce. It rains blizzards of sauce. It gushes gullies of gloriously gooey sauce. It hurls sauce-pans overflowing with sauce. I mean, it seduces saucily. OK, so there's just a lot of good barbecue sauce.

On my last visit I took particular notice of Woody's efforts to meet the needs of its sauce-soaked patrons. Amid the pleasing eclectic westernness of the decor there sits a bathtub. It's a big, old-fashioned bathtub. It's got faucets and whatnot and it's positioned between the bar section, the drink refilling station and the johns. To the stuffed and sauce beset, it calls your name. Me, it was shouting my name.

Not this night, unfortunately. On this night Woody's was conserving. Yep, water. No free water games tonight, no despairing as the last gobbin' of sauce washed into the void. Hey, Woody's has got a conscience. Woody's also has begun to feature live bluegrass on Wednesday nights. So whatcha waitin' for?! Get down to Woody's and make a mess of your face!

Woody's is located at 5112 Hollister Ave. in Goleta and 229 W. Montecito in Montecito. Open Monday through Saturday 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., Sunday 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Phone 967-3775 or 963-9326.

A Mexican Treat: Cafe Vallarta

By Charles Gomer Scott

To most Californians Mexican food means tacos, burritos and enchiladas, usually served from a local fast food joint or perhaps an "authentic" tacqueria. Sadly they are missing out on what is perhaps one of the more eclectic mixes of styles, classical Mexican cuisine.

Santa Barbara's Cafe Vallarta appears to be just one of the area's many intimate restaurants from its frontage along Haley Street. Once inside, the decor takes one back to Mexico: whitewashed walls and arched ceilings are flanked by bright blue trim and beams, while the decorations vary from brightly-painted wooden fish carvings to the more esoteric woven baskets and rugs.

Cafe Vallarta does not just seem like Mexico from the atmosphere however — the food is more than authentic. Restauranteur Justo Garcia and associate Liliana Parra describe their food as a blend of early Mexican food and cooking styles with the influences of Spanish and French styles brought on by Mexico's colonial past.

Justo, a native of Monterey, Mexico, has been providing his clientele gourmet Mexican specialties for over a year and a half now and in that short time has done quite a bit to shake up the local culinary establishment. Just last July his Caldo de Mariscos, a hearty seafood stew with shrimp, fish, octopus, mussels and vegetables took 1st Place at the Santa Barbara Bouillabaisse Festival, no small feat as the competition included chefs from 20 area restaurants, with such notables as the Four Seasons Biltmore and the Palace Cafe entered.

Caldo de Mariscos is but one of the splendid items on the extensive menu every day, however, which I found out the other day when a friend and I went there to see what all the fuss was about.

After gorging on fresh tortilla chips and a great green salsa, we started with appetizers from the tapas bar, choosing the Camarones al Mojo de Ajo, shrimp sauteed with garlic and lime. Many people actually make a meal out of tapas alone, choosing several selections from the 23 appetizers offered, and eating it with rice and beans. Although we were tempted by the calamari fajitas, the skewered chicken, the mussels in wine, herbs and chile, and so many others, we opted for entrees.

I had one of the specials of the day, Camarones a la Crema, shrimp in a cream and chipotle sauce made with red chiles, and it was superb. It was complemented by a house salad (with a unique olive oil and lime dressing), rice, vegetables and tortillas, all of which left me more than satiated.

My friend opted for Pescado Yucateco, a grilled fish fillet seasoned with achiote and lime, served with Cafe Vallarta's own Vallarta sauce — a spicy, green chile mixture which simply defies description — rice, black beans and tortillas.

The menu has something for everyone, from typical Mexican favorites such as chile verde or chile relleno to the more exotic Cochinita Pibil, a Mayan pork feast slowly cooked in banana peels. There are numerous beef and chicken dishes, and vegetarian ones as well, all of which is cooked without lard or additives.

So if you crave South of the border gourmet food but want something a little different than the average Mexican meal, Cafe Vallarta is a must.

Cafe Vallarta is located at 626 Haley Street, Santa Barbara. They are open daily, except Mondays, from 5:30 to 9:30 pm. Phone: 564-8494.)

LOCAL COLOR!

Carnaval

634 State Street

It's time again for the band Social Distortion to strut their stuff in Santa Barbara. The location will be Carnaval and the date is the day of love — Valentine's Day. Any fan of rock music cannot miss this show simply because of Mike Ness' stage ability. They're back from their six year slump as of a year and a half ago and since then they have been going strong. This band is a sure thing no matter where they play.
