SUMMER SESSION

June 23, 1960

GOLETA, CALIFORNIA

WE'RE GROWING!

By the year 2,000 A.D. the University of California may have 214,000 students. Santa Barbara will probably have 15,000.

These were some of the startling figures announced recently in the new "Recommended Plan for Growth of the University of California" adopted by the Regents.

Enrollment limitations on the other existing campuses will be Berkeley 27,500; Los Angeles 27,500; Davis 15,000; Riverside 10,000. The three authorized but not-yet-built campuses in San Diego, Orange County and the South Central Coast area would be developed as large general campuses with a student limitation of 27,500.

According to estimates, Berkeley and Los Angeles will reach their maximum by 1965 or 1966. From 1965 to 1970 the main burden of increase will be at Santa Barbara, Davis and La Jolla; from 1970 to 1990 it will fall on the three future new campuses, and after 1990 by new campuses not yet planned.

The total student body will have 58,500 in lower division, 84,200 in upper division, and 71,300 graduate students.

The plan is a first and basic step toward developing an academic blueprint for the future.

"The question has been raised: Can the state afford such an expansion program for the University of California?" President Kerr stated. "My answer is that we must find the ways and means. Our trained young people are the state's greatest resource and one without which it cannot flourish.

LECTURE HALL PLANS APPROVED

A dramatic new concept of architectural design was approved by the Regents of the University for the new 900-seat lecture hall on the UCSB campus.

The new building, located to the north of the library, will be round in its exterior shape with a folded-plane, thin-shell concrete roof. It will contain the auditorium, lobby, seminar room and preparation rooms. Construction will begin early in 1961.

ONG TO LEAD-OFF ULS

Fr. Walter J. Ong, Visiting Professor of English from St. Louis University and noted Renaissance scholar will give the first talk in the University Lecture Series on Tuesday afternoon at 3 p.m. in the Classroom Building Lecture Hall. Fr. Ong will talk on the subject, "Renaissance Views of Communication: Foretaste of Enlightenment." Admission is free.

NSF SERIES STARTS WEDNESDAY NIGHT
