Festivities Remember I.V. History of Protest

By DAVID DOWNS
Staff Writer

Capitalizing on this week's 30th anniversary of the Isla Vista bank burning, A.S. student lobby has planned a week of community events to commemorate student activism, past and present.

Dubbed "Making Waves in I.V.," the weeklong series of panels, documentaries and workshops will focus on I.V. issues ranging from housing, rape and sexual assault, to motives behind the burning of the Bank of America on Feb. 25, 1970. According to event organizer and Co-Chair of the Isla Vista Tenants Union Harley Augustino, the idea of an entire week of activities came together recently.

"There was a lot of events going on this week with the anniversary of the bank burning that were easy to connect to one another. We're just taking it as an opportunity to highlight more than just the bank burning," he said. "We want to really get underneath the symbolic meaning of the bank burning and what was going on at the time, but really all the community-building that followed."

Augustino said lack of student awareness, as opposed to apathy, is the main culprit in low participation in community events.

"We want to give an alternative perspective to Isla Vista other than what you see on IVTV. Highlight the fact that there is a lot going on in I.V. you're not hearing about, and if you heard about it you'd be interested. More importantly, to try to inspire UCSB with the possibility of learning how to live in a community and what that means and what responsibilities come with that."

Today's event will be a showing of "Don't Bank on Amerika" in Corwin Pavilion at 5 p.m. The documentary, shown yearly on the anniversary of the bank burning, serves as a historical document of the early months of 1970.

Surf's Up

Larger-than-average waves were enough to entice surfers into the water despite increased bacteria counts due to massive runoff at most local beaches.

Fear of Tampering Prompts Cancellation of E-Ballot

By GABRIELA REARDON

The campus elections committee recently pulled the plug on Spring Elections online voting due to computer security concerns.

Associated Students Elections Committee Chair Jennifer Beyer said she cancelled the trial run for online voting last Thursday to avoid the possibility of hackers breaking into the UCSB database and tampering with the university's computer system. According to Beyer, the committee feared a hacker could access student perm numbers and PINs, or cast multiple votes in the election.

"Because it's a security issue, we could not in good consciousness allow something that could possibly be a security problem," she said. "The possibility that multiple votes could be cast by a single person if someone were to hack their way into the system is not a chance that A.S. is willing to take."

Although security was always a concern, the recent assault on the UCSB server that shut down the CNN website pushed the committee to action, A.S. Advisor James To said.

"[The highest concern is] the ability to protect information and the integrity of the voting process," To said. "The A.S. Elections Committee couldn't take the risk of perm numbers and PINs being accessed."

The alternative to using the UCSB server for the elections is to use an external server to collect

Wet Weather Plays Role in Car Crashes

By SHAUN P. McGRADY

Heavy rains and poor road conditions plagued Southern California drivers over the weekend, resulting in almost two dozen wrecks and one fatality.

According to the Ventura dispatch office of the California Highway Patrol, recent rains have kept CHP officers busy cleaning up wrecks in the Santa Barbara area of Highway 101.

"So far we have 22 accidents reported and one fatality this morning [Monday] at 1:30 a.m., around Turnpike road."

Circumstances of the accident are not known, but rain was definitely a factor, according to the Ventura CHP office.

"It was a taxi versus a pedestrian. Apparently a big-rig swerved to avoid the pedestrian and a taxi hit her. The female is approximately 35 years of age. We called in extra units to assist with the problems caused by the rain."

Rain-related confusion is partially responsible for an accident on Embarcadero del Norte in the early hours of Friday, according to junior psychology major Darren Iba.

"My friend was walking home in the rain down Embarcadero del Norte a little after midnight Friday morning when she was hit by a car. The car hit her and rolled over her with both tires, breaking her hip bone and femur."

Junior law and society major Roopa Dandamudi experienced the effect slippery, rain-covered highways can have on a weekend commute home.

"I was driving south on the 101 about an hour and a half south of Santa Cruz when my car began to hydroplane. My car began to swerve before it spun around and eventually flipped a couple of times. I must have been knocked out because the next thing I remembered was people outside my car," she said. "I guess I was lucky that another car didn't hit me, because at one point I was facing the wrong direction."

Researchers Develop New Fuel Possibility

WASHINGTON (AP)

— Hydrogen may be an ideal fuel when the supply of oil and natural gas runs out, but the problem has been finding a way to produce it cheaply. Scientists now say the answer may be an ordinary pond scum.

Green algae, a simple plant that grows all over the world, has the unique ability to convert water and sunlight into hydrogen gas, researchers said Monday at the national meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Scientists have found a new way to force the algae to make hydrogen gas on demand — a process that could lead to an almost limitless supply of clean-burning fuel that produces only water as waste.

Tasios Melis of the University of California, Berkeley, said the algae, one of the most ancient plants known, evolved the ability to live in two radically different environments.

When living in ordinary air and sunlight, it uses photosynthesis like other plants. This process converts sunlight, water and carbon dioxide into oxygen waste and the life-sustaining chemicals the plant needs.

But when the algae is deprived of a key nutrient, sulfur, and forced to live in no oxygen or sulfur. Those same conditions would kill other plants.

In experiments, Melis said his laboratory first grows algae cells in the ordinary way, giving the plant sunlight, nutrients and water. The plant happily reproduces, growing an anaerobic, or oxygen-free, environment, the plant reverts to an alternate lifestyle in order to survive. Under these conditions, the algae makes hydrogen, said Melis.

"It is sort of a metabolic switch," said Melis, adding that it is an alternative way of breathing that the plant developed over millions of years in order to survive where there is millions upon millions of new cells.

Then, the researchers cut off the supply of sulfur and oxygen to the algae, forcing it to click the metabolic switch to its hydrogen-producing lifestyle.

"Within 20 hours, the algae turns on its switch, converting from oxygen production to hydrogen production," said Melis.

"We have to seal the culture to prevent exposure to oxygen. Then we collect the hydrogen as it bubbles out of the culture."

The gas comes out as pure, pollution-free hydrogen, he said.

Melis said the hydrogen-making process has operated experimentally for up to four days — the time it takes for the algae to exhaust its internal resources.

The researchers then converted back to normal photosynthesis and the plant revives itself, ready to start another cycle.

"This has the promise of generating fuel from some of nature's most plentiful resources — sunlight and water," said Melis.

One liter of algae culture, a little over a quarter of a gallon, produces three milliliters of hydrogen, about a tenth of a fluid ounce, per hour, said Melis. Researchers believe this efficiency can be increased at least 100-fold, but that has yet to be demonstrated.

German Company Buys Rights to American Icons

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy are becoming the latest American icons to go German, following in the footsteps of Chrysler Corp. and Random House.

Munich-based media company EM.TV & Merchandising AG is buying the Jim Henson Company for $680 million in cash and stock, giving it exclusive rights to such fuzzy critters as Kermit the Frog, Miss Piggy, Bert and Ernie and the scraggly green furball, Oscar the Grouch.

"We are a strong believer in brands," deputy chair of EM.TV Florian Haffa said Monday. "With the Jim Henson Company, you don't get bigger internationally recognized brands than Kermit the Frog and Miss Piggy."

The deal, in the works for several months, also seals ownership of some of the world's best loved children's shows including "Sesame Street," "The Muppet Show," "Jim Henson's Muppet Babies" and "Fraggle Rock," not to mention a string of Muppet films.

"Sesame Street," first broadcast in 1969, is seen in 140 countries alone.

The last 10 years. That includes the talking-and-laughing Tickle Me Elmo doll — which triggered buying frenzies at toy stores across the United States — and more than 30 million Muppet books sold in 45 countries.

EM.TV also gets access to the Los Angeles-based company's science-fiction shows, which include "Farscape," a top-rated show on Britain's BBC and the Sci Fi Channel in the United States.

EM.TV is well-established in Europe, with television and marketing rights in Germany to the popular Japanese animation "Pokémon" as well as Bugs Bunny. It said the deal would help it penetrate the American and Asian markets where Jim Henson's Muppets already have deep roots.

EM.TV hasn't been the only German company to expand its market share overseas. Besides Daimler-Benz AG, which acquired Chrysler Corp. in 1998 to help penetrate the American market, German media giant Bertelsmann AG bought the number-one U.S. publisher Random House that same year.

The buyout gives EM.TV rights to more than 5,000 licensed Muppet products that have hit toy stores over

Web Designers Accuse Russian Government of Reviving KGB

MOSCOW (AP) — The successor to the KGB, the U.S.S.R.'s former secret service, is now also spying on the Internet, raising fears that the information it collects could be used for blackmail and business espionage.

"The whole Federal Security Service will be crying tomorrow over your love letters," warns one of the banners angry Russian Web designers have posted on the Internet.

Russian human-rights and free-speech advocates say the security service has already forced many of the country's 350 Internet service providers to install surveillance equipment.

"Most Internet providers in Moscow, including all the large providers and many in the provinces, have opened a hole [for security agents to peep at traffic]," said Anatoly Levenchuk, a Russian Internet expert.

Like its counterparts in other countries, the Federal Security Service may argue it needs the monitoring system to catch spies, terrorists and bandits, and to combat black-market businesses and capital flight.

The system has raised particular alarm in Russia, where memories of KGB surveillance and repression remain fresh. And the abundance of secretly filmed, juicy videotapes and transcripts of telephone conversations in Russia seems to justify the fear of blackmail by renegade security agents or others who get hold of the information.

Free-speech activists fear that the Internet surveillance is evidence of the security services' resurgence under acting President Vladimir Putin, a 15-year KGB veteran.

Alexei Rokotyan, the Communications Ministry's electronic communications department chief, denied that the project was aimed at "total control of the information that is transmitted via the global network."

"Security organs and special forces have the right — and now the capability — to monitor private correspondence and telephone conversations of individual citizens according to the law," The Moscow Times Daily quoted him as saying.

Doesn't Associated Students retain legal counsel for all students? Wouldn't it be sweet if that lawyer actually did something lawyerly for its (and they are "its") money? I realize there are legal ramifications that filing a lawsuit on behalf of the student body could open, however, maybe that means we should hire a better lawyer. I just think it's odd that the students at UCSB have legal representation and nobody has thought to file a class-action lawsuit against the landlords and property managers of Isla Vista for the economic raping of residents. Rents have risen up to 25 percent in the past two years in some places. Supply and demand my ass ... that's price gouging and most likely collusion.

WEEK

Wednesday's scheduled workshops focus on issues of rape, housing in Isla Vista and how many local issues tie into larger movements like the WTO protest.

A.S. External Vice President Rebecca Prather said Wednesday's workshop titled "Rage and Resistance: Transforming a Rape Culture in Isla Vista and Beyond" will focus on the women's movement on an institutional and grass-roots level.

"The workshop is about strategizing on the best tools through which to transform a rape culture. Whether it be through institutional channels, like rape crisis centers, or on grass-roots levels, with things like Take Back The Night. I'm hoping a lot of different and newer people come who can add a new perspective on where they see the problem is," she said.

Co-Chair of the I.V. Tenants Union Alejandro Juarez said his workshop would shed light on the long and tumultuous history of a tenants union for I.V. residents.

"They're going to get to know a lot more about I.V., housing issues. They'll walk out with a lot more knowledge on how to get involved."

"Making Waves in I.V." will also include slide shows on the eve of the bank-burning anniversary and will culminate in Saturday's workshop, "Building Bridges in Isla Vista." Prather said the history of student activism will hopefully encourage more involvement in today's student body.

"What the bank burning really symbolizes is students taking action on a massive level for social change. We need to recognize that UCSB students have a long history of people really taking action," she said. "We are hoping this week really galvanizes people in hopes that they will take an active part in the community-building process. We want each individual to come through this and realize they can have a real impact."

Support Native American Self-Reliance With Indian Gaming Proposition

Once again, California voters are faced with the issue of Indian gaming regulation. Prop 1A is virtually identical to 1998's Prop 5, except that it proposes to change the state Constitution, and is therefore immune to court challenges. Voters overwhelmingly passed Prop 5, a measure that attempted to legalize and regulate gambling on all Indian reservations whose tribes wished to set up casinos, as well as establish a revenue-sharing system so that non-gaming tribes could receive some of gambling's enormous financial benefits. Prop 5 was then overturned by the state Supreme Court, so we urge voters to vote "yes" on Prop 1A to protect Indian gaming in California once and for all.

Indian tribes are independent nations, and their reservations are sovereign land, so the state of California has no right to prohibit gambling on reservations. In the past, the state has attempted to dictate gaming policy to Indian tribes, instead of negotiating with them as equals. Prop 1A will firmly establish every tribe's right to operate up to two casinos featuring most types of gambling, including slot machines and "banked" card games such as blackjack, which are currently allowed only under a special contract from the state.

These casinos will be hugely profitable and beneficial to tribal economies. Until Indian gaming became popular in the 1980s, reservations were plagued with with casinos, unemployment has dropped nearly 50 percent, and tribal governments have used gambling revenue to pay for education, housing and health care. Prop 1A would also be a boon to state and local governments, who would receive a share of casino profits.

By placing strict limits on Indian gaming, the state of California is guilty of the worst kind of hypocrisy. The state allows gambling on horse racing, bingo and certain types of card games, and even sponsors a huge gambling operation — the state lottery. Prop 1A's opponents cannot expect voters to believe that these kinds of gambling are harmless, while blackjack and slot machines will automatically bring about the decline of Western civilization.

Prop 1A would help all Indian tribes reclaim some of the dignity that our state and federal governments have robbed them of over hundreds of years, while stimulating economic activity all over the state.

The Daily Nexus strongly endorses Prop 1A.

Protect Nature, Recreation

Prop 12 is a bond measure that seeks to raise $2.1 billion to protect coasts, forests and other natural and recreational areas, as well as repair and improve state and neighborhood parks. Prop 12 is asking for a lot of money — around $144 million per year for 25 years to pay off the bond — but the potential benefits to our environment and communities make it worth it.

The best things about Prop 12 are its guarantees of local control and its provisions to fund recreation in urban areas. Prop 12 sets aside $940 million in grants to local governments and nonprofit groups, including $271 million for recreation areas in primarily urban areas and an additional $100 million for recreation areas, youth centers and environmental improvements in the state's poorest communities. Quality parks and the ability to enjoy California's beautiful environment should not be luxuries of affluent communities, and Prop 12 would help spread these resources to urban and poor areas.

Unfortunately, Prop 12 includes a few pork-barrel grants for local projects and over $1 billion for state projects. Ideally, a greater portion of the money would be earmarked for local control. Nevertheless, development threatens a great deal of our open space, and Prop 12 is an important step in preserving California's natural beauty for all citizens.

The Daily Nexus endorses Prop 12.

Safe Drinking Water, Flood Protection Worth Costs

Today's college students have vivid childhood memories of water conservation as a result of the state's prolonged drought in the late 1980s and early '90s — dying lawns, four-minute showers, sporadic flushing. To prevent situations like this in the future, state voters should approve Prop 13, a $1.97 billion bond measure for safe drinking water, water quality, flood protection and water reliability.

Safe drinking water is of paramount importance to all Californians. Since 1976, the state has passed $425 million in bonds to pay for specific drinking water programs, but only $11 million remains. Prop 13 would remedy this problem by setting aside $70 million for capital improvements in safe drinking water facilities.

Prop 13 would also raise money for flood protection, water conservation, pollution control and water recycling, and help fund the CALFED project to improve water from the San Francisco Bay-Delta. While the bond is expensive, it may save money in the long run, by making the state better equipped to deal with droughts or floods in the future and by instituting public audits for bond-funded projects.

Opponents of Prop 13 argue that it is unnecessary because California's drinking water has not been shown to be unsafe. However, this is one instance where the state cannot afford to wait for a disaster in order to act. Prop 13 will help preserve our safe drinking water while securing our water supply in case of future droughts.

The Daily Nexus endorses Prop 13.

Money for Public Libraries Will Encourage Literacy

Perhaps no resource is as vital or under-funded as our state's public libraries. Libraries are an essential literacy and educational tool, and the Internet access they provide makes them just as important for the future as for the present. Nevertheless, library access is limited or nonexistent in many communities, which is why the state needs Prop 14 — a $350 million bond measure to build new libraries, renovate existing ones and buy furnishings and other equipment.

Schools are the most important patrons of local libraries, especially when school libraries are inadequate. To ensure that children receive their share of Prop 14's benefits, the proposition would give funding priority to "joint use" libraries that serve both a community and a school district, and also to libraries in areas where public schools have insufficient facilities or technology.

Prop 14 also makes good financial sense. The bond measure would fund only 65 percent of any project, while local governments would have to provide the remaining 35 percent. This allows local governments to set their own priorities, while the state's money can be stretched as far as possible. On the other hand, it also reveals a potential weakness of Prop 14: Poor communities might be denied funds because they cannot raise their 35 percent of the project's cost. Still, Prop 14 would be an improvement over the current situation for communities, as local governments currently pay around 90 percent of library costs.

If California is to remain competitive in the 21st century's information economy, it must place a higher priority on literacy and education, and Prop 14 is a big step in that direction.

The Daily Nexus strongly endorses Prop 14.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 7 — You may have to work a compromise. Don't worry; you can still be the leader. It's nice to be the kind of leader people follow because they want to, not because they have to. And, your willingness to compromise now will help you maintain that position.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 7 — You should do pretty well now. Mercury is going retrograde, however. As you may know, that could mean confusion. And, for you, it's going to happen within groups and organizations. So, if you are a member of a group, be extra sure you understand what's going on.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 7 — A lot of interesting changes are taking place. There's also more than the normal amount of confusion. A person who's issuing orders could be way off base. You should pay close attention to what's going on around you. Your advice could be pivotal.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is an 8 — You may have a treasure in your own backyard. Dig through your files, and you may find the perfect thing. It's just what you've been looking for, and it was right there the whole time. You might find a fabulous old recipe in your collection, too.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is a 5 — You and a partner could make your dreams come true. It's not going to be easy, but it does look possible. Your best bet is with an old dream, not a new one. Try again with something you've almost given up on. Recent changes could give it new life.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Today is a 7 — You are looking good and drawing a lot of attention. You and your mate or partner need to discuss a financial decision. You and the person you're most likely to be in love with should work on a project together, too. It's bonding.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Today is a 7 — The moon will come into your sign soon. You'll get stronger and more confident as that happens. In the meantime, you may feel a tad stressed. If that happens, go back to the old familiar way of doing things. You'll be more efficient, faster and happier.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — Today is an 8 — You'll be most successful in romance if you're waxing nostalgic with somebody you've known for a long time. Don't spend all day playing, though. Something important must get done before tomorrow.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is a 6 — A lot of changes are going on, and some of them are pretty impressive. Somebody at home could be pestering you, too. If you don't have anybody at home, it's your own inner child who wants your attention. Spend tonight at home, playing with your toys.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is an 8 — If there's anything you need to know, ask questions early in the day. Later, there'll be a quiz. If you already have the information by then, you'll pass with flying colors. Part of the quiz, of course, is knowing which answers to have ready.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is a 6 — The money's not showing up as quickly as you'd like. You can find out where it is, but a few phone calls may be necessary. You might have to jump through a few hoops, too. If you're patient and persistent, you will succeed — eventually.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is a 7 — How much do you need to get something you want? Instead of writing the check yourself, suggest that a partner pitch in. Watch out for misunderstandings, too. They'll be more common in the next few weeks, starting now.

Today's Birthday (Feb. 21). Go over what you've got this year and put in the corrections. Tidy up loose ends in March. Just ask for the money in April. You'll learn quickly in May, so take the toughest classes then. The path to your dreams should be obvious in August, but continue to prepare. Convince a skeptic in September, and by December, you could achieve great things. Don't squander your money, and security's yours by next February.

You work hard to succeed, and even harder to prepare for your future. Robinsons-May offers a wide array of career choices in the areas of Merchandising, Finance and MIS. We are a member of the May Department Stores Company, one of the most successful retail operations in the country, with total sales reaching $13 billion in 1998. In fact, for the last 24 consecutive years we have posted record sales and earnings per share.

It is important to us that you get a solid feel for the company before you make your career choice. We also believe in giving you a second chance to make a good first impression. Therefore, we guarantee two interviews with members of our senior management team. The more we talk, the better we get to know each other. We look forward to meeting with you.
