Officers Find 10 Kilos of Coke in Speedy Minivan

Officers Estimate Street Value of Cocaine at One Million Dollars

Over a million dollars of cocaine was discovered during a routine traffic responded to the presence stop last weekend.

10:13 a.m. on Friday, April 27, Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Deputy Brad McVay stopped a silver 2000 Dodge Grand Caravan for speeding northbound on Highway 101 at Dos Pueblos Canyon Road.

McVays's canine partner, Ursus, immediately of a controlled substance in the vehicle. McVay approximately conducted a search of the vehicle and discovered 10 kilos of cocaine in the inside backing of the Caravan's rear seat, in addition to a sizable amount of cash, which has not yet been tabulated, according to the police department.

The two suspects in the car, 35-year-old Juan Beltran from Kings County and Meza Andres Sanchez, who refused to give his age and residence, were arrested and transported to the Santa Barbara County Jail.

Newton and Galileo considered themselves philosophers, not scientists. They considered their groundbreaking work just one part of a larger philosophy, a view UCSB history Professor Emeritus Jeffrey Russell said modern scientists do not share.

Russell was the latest speaker in "Science, Religion and the Human Experience," a lecture series endowed by Templeton Foundation. His lecture Friday afternoon, "Constructing Cosmos: Science, Religion, History and Reality," focused on the ways people have constructed their reality throughout history.

Russell said in modern times, society lacks a coherent mental construction of the universe, which he called "M-cosmos." Russell, who is a history of religion and Western thought author, said this coherent view is vital to people's mental and spiritual health.

"I see [M-cosmos] deeply wounded," Russell said, "not only split between science and religion, but torn between a thousand different concerns. We need healing. ... M-cosmos is made out of mental constructs which are hard to put together — in the past century, so much so, that it has been virtually torn apart. It is M-cosmos that I mourn for."

In his 90-minute talk, Russell gave a brief history of M-cosmos in Western society and attempted to dispel common misconceptions about historical concepts. For instance, Russell said Newton and Galileo were not scientists, but natural philosophers. The term "scientist" was not in use until 1834, and the concept of science as a profession came even

"What if someone in the year 2501 were to classify you in some term that you have never heard of?" Russell said. Scientists such as Newton and Galileo considered their studies of physical reality only one aspect of a larger coherent philosophy, Russell said.

Reducing the human experience to scientific processes such as physical or chemical reactions without considering other factors is a form of reductionism, which can be dangerous, Russell said. "It is not OK to assume that all truth can be reduced to physical regularities."

The idea of reductionism is self-defeating, Russell said. "If no idea is better than any other idea because they all [are the result of] neural interaction, then the idea of reductionism itself is no better than that of crystal gazing."

While pure reductionism can be harmful, "religious exclusivism" is also

Cancer Prevention Fair Focuses on Education

BY ELIZABETH LOVERO Reporter

An event aimed at battling the nation's No.-2 killer attracted hundreds this weekend to downtown Santa Barbara.

Approximately 200 Santa Barbara residents attended the third annual Cancer Prevention Fair at Santa Barbara Cottage Hospital on Saturday. The fair offered low-cost screenings for skin, prostate and breast cancer in addition to extensive information on minimizing cancer risks.

Santa Barbara Cottage Hospital Public Affairs Coordinator Williamson said the purpose of the event was prevention.

"Three years ago we decided we wanted to expand our prevention program, because education is the key," she said. "If we find most cancers early they are curable."

Joleen Law, RD health educator from the Cancer Center of Santa Barbara, said, "Thirty-five percent of all cancer deaths can be prevented simply by eating right. ... But look - not smoking and [healthy] diet cuts cancer by 60 to 70 percent."

Law said these statistics illustrate the importance of prevention events.

"This fair is just one more voice, one more voice to people who don't have good insurance," she said. "They come to these fairs and get things accomplished — things they wouldn't have done otherwise."

Roberta S. Nielsen, a cytotechnologist Santa Barbara Pathology Laboratory, said due to advances in treatment, many types of cancer are now curable, and the fair offered a positive outlet for this new information.

VIEQUES, Puerto Rico (AP) — Federal authorities arrested eight anti-U.S. Navy protesters and sprayed another group with tear gas on Vieques Island Sunday, hours before the military was to resume bombing exercises that had been paused for a religious occasion.

The exercises are to resume Monday morning and are expected to last several more days, Navy Lt. Jeff Gordon said. The Navy avoided exercises Sunday as the largely Catholic U.S. territory observed the ceremony putting Carlos Manuel Rodriguez on the path to Authorities arrested eight people Sunday who allegedly cut through some fencing around the Navy land to enter the bombing range, Gordon said.

In another area near the Navy's Camp Garcia facility, Navy personnel and U.S. marshals sprayed tear gas at dozens of protesters who allegedly cut through fencing and threw rocks at military and federal guards, Gordon said. The crowd dispersed and there were no arrests in that incident, Gordon said.

So far, 136 protesters have been arrested since Thursday night for entering the range in hopes of thwarting the exercises, which began Friday.

Gearing up for the resumption of exercises in Vieques, activists claimed that about 40 protesters were on the Navy bombing range Sunday.

The Navy has used its Vieques range for six decades and says it is vital for national defense. It denies anti-Navy activists' claims that the exercises cause health problems.

WASHINGTON (AP) - China will allow U.S. personnel to inspect an American spy plane that made an emergency landing on Hainan Island on April 1, officials in both nations said Sunday. An American inspection team in Okinawa, Japan, awaited clearance to travel to China, hoping to depart as early as Monday.

The development raised U.S. hopes that the disabled aircraft will soon return home, and it seemed to signal an easing of U.S.-China tensions.

"I see it as an encouraging sign that they're willing to proceed," Vice President Dick Cheney said. The plane cannot be flown now and may have to be taken out on a barge, Cheney said.

At the same time, Cheney and top Bush administration officials reinforced President George W. Bush's tough stand that a military response from the United States remains an option if China attacks Taiwan.

It has been nearly a month since a U.S. Navy EP-3E surveillance plane with a crew of 24 collided with a Chinese fighter jet sent to intercept it over the South China Sea, outside China's 12-mile territorial sea and

The plane made an emergency landing at a military airfield on Hainan island, and the crew was detained for 11 days. They were released after Bush said he was "very sorry" for the loss of the Chinese pilot and for the U.S. plane's unauthorized entry into Chinese airspace to make an emergency landing.

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Police fired rubber bullets near a university campus to break up a crowd of 1,000 people who burned couches, tore down street signs and pelted officers with rocks, bricks and bottles.

There were no arrests after the four-hour riot that started late Saturday near the University of North Colorado and continued for four hours.

Two police officers were slightly injured, including one who was hit on the head with a 40-ounce beer bottle, as officers in riot gear marched down the street and fired tear gas, police Sgt. John Gates said. He said no one else was injured.

"It's really the first weekend in many months that it's been suitable to involve themselves in outside parties," Gates said. "Nice weather and the school year coming to the end. We don't know of any real reason why this happened."

Gates had initially denied television reports that police fired rubber bullets at rioters, but later said officers needed them to control the crowd.

Police sent to investigate a report of a loud party were met by a crowd of about 500 people, Gates said. Other people from nearby parties joined the crowd and revelers set about 10 fires in a six-block area.

I spent the last few days with the extended Weatherfamily.

As you might have imagined, Weatherfamily gatherings are a little "different." Over the course of five days, I ...

1) Sat next to a fat man on the plane who reeked of Polish sausage and became violent over the armrest (distant Weather-relative).

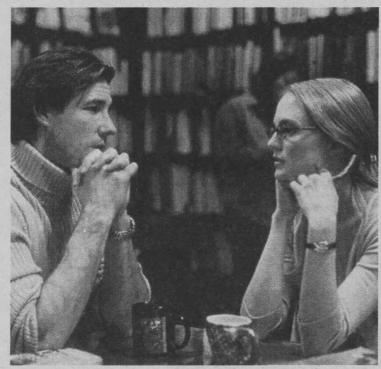

2) Drunkenly told the Weatherbrother's girlfriend that she looked like his last girlfriend.

3) Drunkenly performed in a strip show with the Weatherbrother for 75 people (including the 85year-old Weathergrandmother and a priest).

4) Drunkenly decorated a Weather-in-law's car with Saran Wrap, toilet paper, shaving cream and a canned ham (they were on sale).

Monday's forecast: A drunken haze lifts around noon, followed by cloudy memories and scattered regrets.

Is there a one truth that all of us honest people are heading for? I don't know. I used to think so, and it may well be true. But I wonder — what if the center is not a point at all?

dangerous, Russell said, pointing to the destructive power of religious warfare committed in the name of God. Russell believes science and religion today do not need to be mutually exclusive in any of their claims. He stressed the importance of constructing a coherent worldview, saying the alternatives to M-cosmos are nihilism and chaos.

Geography Professor Helen Couclelis said Russell's lecture showed that philosophy, as an attempt to link science and religion, often fails to produce a final answer because it is after "a perpetually moving target."

Chicano studies Professor Maria Herrera-Sobek described Russell's lecture as "brilliant," but identified herself as agnostic and said constructing ethics and order is not entirely dependent on the acceptance of a deity or of scientific principles.

"Will the search for the ultimate principle draw all modes of thought together?" Russell said. "Is there a one truth that all of us honest people are heading for? I don't know. I used to think so, and it may well be true. But I wonder — what if the center is not a point at all? What if the richness of the cosmos is inexhaustible? What if that truth that we seek turns out to be multiple truths? Being fully alive entails being fully honest with ourselves. When we achieve that honesty and that openness of the heart and mind, a new M-cosmos will form itself."

The lecture series was dedicated to the memory of Dr. Ninian Smart, former chair of the Religious Studies Dept.

Opinion

Feminists Against Abortion?

Pro-Life, Pro-Choice Groups Must Realize Common Goal

STEVEN RUSZCZYCKY

Here's a new one for your list of oxymorons: Pro-life feminist. The terms may seem mutually exclusive; however, Serrin Foster, president of Feminists for Life of America, tried with limited success to show that such a thing exists by invoking the names of past feminists and championing the pro-life movement.

Tuesday, April 24, Foster spoke in Corwin Pavilion about her organization and her cause as a feminist who supports outlawing abortion. She cited a philosophy that dates back to some of the earliest feminists of our nation. Foster's explanation was that feminism means to respect all forms of life on all levels and aims to end injustice through nonviolent means. Her beef with abortion is that it's murder— a form of discrimination against the unborn.

Perhaps the most significant point that Foster made is that what drives most college-aged women — a group that Foster focused on almost exclusively — to have abortions is pressure placed upon them by outside groups. These women are given the belief that having a child will ruin their life; often this belief comes from family and friends. Other pressures cited were boyfriends who battered their girlfriends into getting abortions, or men who refused to pay for child support but would be willing to fund the operation.

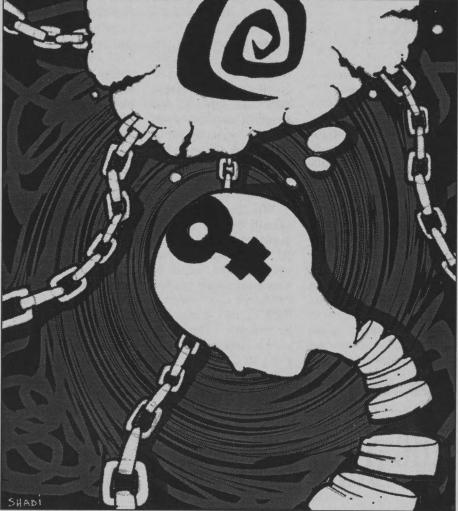

These are some nasty images. Foster said the only way to alleviate these pressures is to outlaw abortion and show women that pregnancy is a viable option. She endorses adoption and starting programs on college campuses that would provide services and support for women who choose to keep their baby. It's a good plan; it makes sense and should be implemented. In fact, such services already exist at UCSB and more information about them can be found at the Women's Center.

Foster, however, spent the better part of two hours on this one topic and failed to address important preventative issues — like sexual education and contraception — that would have a dramatic impact on reducing abortion. This is a fatal flaw in her ideology. To champion one program while ignoring other issues that could have a dramatic impact on the abortion situation is shortsighted. Her position on these issues only came to light during the question-and-answer session, during which time Foster only succeeded in providing roundabout responses and displaying a notably shaky stance.

More problems began to surface during the question-and-answer session, punching more holes in Foster's ideology. One audience member asked how Foster was able to call herself a feminist while denying women the freedom to choose an abortion. Foster dismissed the dissonance, resorting to her basic definition of feminism and providing lots of spin. After another question concerning the beginning of life, it became clear she was basing all of her arguments on the belief that life starts at conception while providing little support for her ideas other than personal anecdotes

None of this is dismissing Foster — to do so would be stupid; she has a lot of good ideas and definitely has a lot to contribute to the problem of abortion. Her call for both the pro-life and pro-choice sides to work together in reducing and hopefully ending the need for abortions is a wise one. Most people forget that both sides have a common goal. However, Foster seemed more intent on outlawing abortions than disposing of the need for them. Perhaps it is possible for a woman to be both feminist and pro-life, but anyone who chooses to take on the label needs to at least recognize that there are many productive ways to eliminate abortion besides just making it illegal.

If America is to become a just nation, we have to learn responsibility by working out issues like these; it can't be given to us through restrictive legislation. The true sign of a responsible society is one where the people have the right to make complex moral decisions on their own, not one where even their freedom to do so is denied.

The Reader's Voice

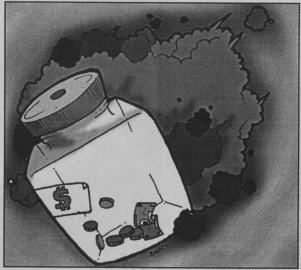

THE RICH CAN AFFORD TO BEAR THE BRUNT OF TAXES

Editor, Daily Nexus:

In an April 26 letter to the editor (The Reader's Voice, "Students Should Back Bush's Tax Cuts for Rich"), Justin M. Ruhge put forward the following point of view: It is unfair to disproportionately tax the rich in favor of the poor. I'd like to present a different point of view: You're being a baby. Let's compare some lifestyles, shall we?

Take a family whose yearly income (before taxes) is $250,000. That's not a huge amount — each spouse could be making $125,000. They have 2.3 children, a $750,000 home, three fine automobiles, and one dog — Rex. If the evil, lying and dishonest Democrats were to impose a 25 percent tax on this family, their net income would be $187,500. That's a pretty considerable drop, but what would be the effect? Little Emily has to settle for a used Lexus? No yacht this year? They'll have to save up one year longer to get that summer home? Let's flip and look at the tail end of this coin.

Take a family whose yearly income is $15,000. Naaah! No family's income is that low! How about a family in which both spouses work at a PictSweet mushroom plant? Two point three children living with another 4.3-person family in a two-person apartment, a set of monthly bus passes, and ... oops! Couldn't afford Rex. Let's be "fair" and impose the same 25 percent tax on them. Their income goes down to $11,250. That's less than $1,000 per month. Specifically, it's $218 per person.

Could you live on that? Do you think that's what people working 50- or 60-hour weeks should make? After each member of that family pays their share of the rent and utilities, do you honestly think any one of them can afford any kind of health insurance? How often do you think they can even afford to go to Payless to buy that fly pair of Eastside or Easy Spirit shoes they've been wanting? How about some Nikes? The bottom line is that more people than one might like to imagine are living a rock-bottom life as it is.

Why should others have to pay for them? The people who really pay the taxes shouldn't get the shaft for it! Right? Wrong my friend. Proportionately, the poor are paying their fair share of taxes. As you go down this country's economic ladder, the proportion of taxable purchases people make gets higher and higher. In English, the less cash you have each month, the more of it you have to spend to make ends meet, and every time you go up to the register Uncle Sam gets to pick your pocket. And it doesn't feel pretty. People on the higher end of the scale, however, can afford to hide some of their cash in untaxable little corners of the stock market and watch it grow.

So, as Mr. Ruhge wrote, a lot of us Gauchos may very well be classified as rich some day. But when that day comes, if I consider those Republican tax cuts a blessing, I hope I die from eating bad mushrooms, because I don't think I'd be worthy of breathing the same air as any of the hard-working poor. Think about this the next time you see someone collecting cans off the streets of Isla Vista on a Saturday morning.

if this isn't happening in your life, maybe it's time you spoke up.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct 22) - Today is a 7 - Your friends might encourage you to break your piggy bank to buy toys. That's a dumb idea. Your real friends don't like you for your money or your toys. If you're going to buy anything, get a cast-iron piggy

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) - Today is a 5 - It's exam time - maybe first thing this morning. You had better already know the material. The prize makes the effort worthwhile. If you are prepared, you could win the gold.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - Today is a 7 - You should rinally be feeling better. You might even want to try something new, like signing up for a class. How are your language skills? Polish up your Polish, and you might qualify for the job of your dreams. Expand your power.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - Today is a 7 - You might have to get what you want but that's OK. You're to scrimp and save to get what you want, but that's OK. You're great when it comes to delayed gratification. You never give up, and that's one of the secrets of your success. Pick a goal that turns you on.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) - Today is a 5 - Don't rush into anything. Ask questions, and explain things from your point of view. The others are looking at the situation quite differently. Not wrongly, necessarily, but differently. They could be uninformed.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) - Today is a 7 - You're motivated and determined. Nobody said it was going to be easy. The more ō you learn, the more you'll realize is out there, so keep studying. A transformation is occurring, and you're right in the middle of it.
