It was definitely decided by officers of the bureau to enter two male contestants in Class A. Whether State will have any female representatives will depend on the response of the fair sex in the local tryouts.

Mr. Frederic Hile, faculty advisor of the speech bureau, will conduct the tryouts Friday afternoon, January 21, at 4 p.m. in the auditorium. All undergraduate students are eligible to compete in the Pasadena tournament, according to Mr. Hile, who will accompany the contestants south.

Male participants in the extemporaneous division must talk on the topic, "Democracy or What?" while in the female division the topic will be "Careers for 20th Century Women." It will be necessary to speak five minutes to qualify and speaker must stop at seven minutes. A timekeeper will give warnings.

Pan-American Six Hours Overdue

Pan American Airways officials announced tonight that their 18-ton Samoan Clipper was six hours overdue in New Zealand on the second of its trail-blazing flights over Honolulu. Edwin C. Musick, veteran flyer of the company with five crew members are aboard the huge flying boat. In the last radio report received from Captain Musick, he reported an oil leak in one of the motors, saying that he was returning to Samoa. The Pan American plane is the first to encounter such difficulty on Pacific flights. Officials of the company pointed out that the cessation of radio messages did not necessarily mean that the ship was down.

Society Editor Runs Amuck

Ventura Prof Confiscates
Pirate Press Edition
Fires Newshawks

• According to a news article carried in the Los Angeles Times on Sunday, January 9, the Pirate Press, official student publication of Ventura Junior college, was printed twice in one day. The account of the unusual procedure indicated that Don C. Mayes, instructor in journalism, confiscated the first issue upon finding his name listed as society editor on the social page.

The Times report of the incident went as follows, in part, "Back of it was the fact that Mayes, the night before, disagreed with the student version of a society page and put it together according to his own liking. Somebody, and no one was admitting he did it, slipped Mayes' name on the society page in place of the line which usually says, 'Gerry Barry, society editor.'"

"Jack Gray, student commissioner of publications and Miss Barry, society editor, were dismissed from the staff."

The second issue was distributed minus the offending name. The cost of $5.

Art Students Hear Father Strack

• Father Strack of Our Lady of Sorrows spoke to members of the art department at a dinner last night at El Cortijo with the subject, "Sacred and Religious Art."

Father Strack has traveled and studied art of this type for several years. During a trip to the Orient last year he was able to see much of the work being done by Chinese students in Shanghai schools where they devote their lives to such work.

Father Strack has found considerable likeness in the local students' work to the Oriental pictures. These likenesses formed a part of his talk.

Jean Anglemeyer was in charge of the program and Dorothy Crookham, president, was in charge of arrangements.

Follett Tells of Football Profit

Grid Sport Shows First
Major Success at
Box Office

• Don Follett, graduate manager, yesterday released figures for the past football season, indicating the first major financial success on the gridiron. According to the report, the associated students were victorious at the box office to the amount of $4041.73, or nearly as much as the entire student appropriation for all sports five years ago. Expenditures for football totaled $12,399.55, while gross income was $16,441.28.

Follett's statement in making the release was as follows, "This report is of singular importance due to the fact that we have been able to bring teams of highest calibre and still come out ahead on the profit side of the ledger." The graduate manager pointed out that there are still a few small bills outstanding, but that they are not expected to affect the profit balance materially.

Shows Gain

Last year's total income from football was only $10,547.06 with expenses totalling $10,514.63, which gives further evidence of the rapidity with which football has been building a following among the cash customers.

In commenting upon the report, Danny D'Alfonso, student body president said, "This is the first time in many years that the student body will be able to show an operating profit. It is necessary from a business standpoint, that these profits be used to retire our accumulating indebtedness, which stood at an all-time high of $10,500 at the outset of this year. We fully expect to pay off the major part of this indebtedness by the end of the school year, thus preventing student finances from being robbed by interest costs."

Loyola Wins in Wild Hoop Games Here

Gauchos, Lions Total 77 Fouls in Two Encounters on Armory Court; State Loses Two Games, 36-22, 45-34

• They didn't wear shoulder pads and their shoes didn't have cleats. But they must have been playing football anyway.

Rougher than Texas Mines football team the Loyola Lions proved in beating Los Gauchos 36-22 Friday and 45-34 Saturday. The breaks were against the home town boys twice when they failed to realize what type of ball Loyola played in the first half of the first game, and in the last of the second game when the star forward Palmer was tossed out on fouls.

Fouls High

• The total of fouls for the two games reached 77 with 30 at the first time and 47 in the second. In addition to Palmer, Young, Busby and Hallen were ordered from the court in the second game. Officials for the first game were Ab Young and Charles Christiansen while Skip Winans took Christiansen's place on the second night.

The Loyolans were a large crew with tremendous drive on the follow up shots. The Gauchos, smaller in size, were held away from the basket much of the time and long shots failed to sink every time.

Definite injury in the Friday game was the loss of Tooley Palmer who was in Fillmore with his mother who was seriously ill. However while Palmer was off the floor, Howsman was going to town. In this game Loyola surprised the Gauchos with the rough tactics and grabbed a thirteen point lead in the first half. The second half saw a better prepared State squad as Wilton evidently caught on to the game that Jimmy Needles was using.

Second Game Fast

The second game was one of the best of the season as the Loyolans led by Kriste got away to a six point lead which they found cut to a three point lead by the half and then to a one point lead from where it went to eight points and then to a point lead as Ulrich and Merlo turned on the heat.

Freshmen Plan for Tough Season

• Coach Jimmy Van Meter of the freshman baseball team already is laying plans for the most extensive schedule a State college first year squad has ever attempted. While the opening of the baseball season is still some weeks off Van Meter intends to begin practice as soon as next semester starts. A strong Gauchito team is in store for State rosters, with many fine players now in school and a new flock of material entering from Lompoc later this month. Van Meter, last year's all-conference shortstop on the Gauchito varsity, has handled a team of players who will make up the varsity this year during the winter months and turned in a very fine record.

A schedule of approximately twenty games will be played, all on a home and home basis, with the highlight of the season expected to be the three-game series with the San Diego State college freshmen. Games with Ventura J.C., Compton J.C., Pasadena J.C., Taft J.C., Santa Maria J.C., Bakersfield J.C., Fresno State college freshmen, and Delano High school will give the players plenty of competition and a fine group of trips during next semester.

SPORT SHORTS

By WALDO PHELPS

• People are often heard to ask the question, "Why aren't there more inter-sectional basketball games?" It does sound like a logical question at first glance. Inter-sectional football presents fans annually with some of the most exciting and hard fought games of the year. Star athletes in the field of track, baseball, swimming, boxing, tennis and golf gather from far and near for the tournaments of one kind or another.

Basketball presents a problem which is different from most others in the sporting world—the fact that there are no standard set of rules for the entire country. Some sections and conferences play a very close whistle, and others allow for much bodily contact which would constitute fouling in the other league.

It is not in these inter-sectional games, however, that basketball method of playing differs show up. Those of us that saw the Loyola-Gauchito series this past week-end were given a first hand example. Loyola started a five man team of players who were well over six feet and who were rough and tumble performers in both games. Coach Willie Wilton's Gauchos, playing a team supposedly far superior to themselves, were swept off their feet in the first half of Friday night's contest when the

Van Meter Team Loses to Tracy's All-Stars in Sunday Battle

• Jimmy Van Meter's Gauchito All-Stars dropped their grudge battle with George Tracy's All-Stars Sunday afternoon in Pershing park when the Tracy squad smashed through a seventh inning drive of five runs. This was the first meeting of the college men with the outstanding semi-pro team.

The Gauchos were constantly bothering the Tracy squad and were leading all the way and finally dropped the game by the one run margin in the ninth, Tracy, using three pitchers, was nearly beaten when Suytar went to pieces after the starter Wilkins tired.

Leading in the batting for the day was Blankenship of Tracy's who hit three for four. Bill Lillard and Ben Wallack both scored triples. Hallen, Wallack and Busby each scored two for three.

Vultures Versus the Future

● The issuance of the financial statement on football income and expenditures for the current year, showing a handsome profit, will undoubtedly see results in future council meetings, and more especially in the request for funds for next year's budget. The usual vulture-type of grabbing while grabbing is good has too long characterized the expenditure of student body funds. The statement of Danny D'Alfonso, associated student body president, that these funds should be used to retire the present indebtedness, is worthy of comment.

The keynote of that statement should act as the guide to all students who are connected with student financial affairs. The policy of putting us on a paying basis, and then of using surpluses to prevent us from being robbed by interest costs, is "horsesense" in the business field. If student government, which is justified in that it teaches principles of self-government, of actual leadership, and of running a sound business, is to succeed, surely there can be no other policy than that outlined by President D'Alfonso.

It is easily computed that loans amounting to over ten thousand dollars which draw six percent interest yearly, take from our student income, an amount large enough to support many worthwhile projects. According to estimates made by Don Follett, graduate manager, the bigger part of this deficit can be paid off by the end of the school year, providing that student body budgets are not overdrawn. Any Stater handling student funds, or any organization or group which expends such monies, should make it the first duty, to keep within their budgets, and to refrain from demanding more funds this year.

There is also less need for addition to or overdrawing of any budgets appropriated for this year, than ever before, in that for the first time in the history of student finance, budgetary demands presented to the council last year were filled with only minor slicing, if any at all.

It might be easier to see that for each student the retirement of these loans is good business if he realizes that from a legal standpoint he is a member of an incorporated group of one thousand, which owes ten thousand dollars. Simple division of the debt puts each of us ten dollars "in the hole." If the present student body administration accomplishes nothing more than balancing the books, it will have made the greatest contribution in its power.

In Defense of the Teachers

LETTER TO EDITOR
Dear Editor,

In a recent letter to the editor a student grieved over the fact that a large percentage of the students were unable to write term papers with proper organization of the subject matter. Further, this complaint charged the teachers with the offense of shirking their duty toward the students by not teaching the methods of research and systematic study.

I believe that this is a plain confession of wilful neglect on the part of the students. Even in grammar school a pupil is thrown somewhat upon his own initiative and can and does considerable research without the aid of the teacher. All the facilities for research are available for the students; the library is kept open nights for their particular benefit; the catalogues are in plain sight; the librarian helps whenever asked; and there is no teacher who would refuse to discuss and help privately to guide a student in his research for his term paper if the student would take the trouble and effort of consulting him in private.

Furthermore, it is really not expecting too much for even college students to be able to do some original research work on a given subject with sufficient resource to solve the problems that arise in connection with it. After all, the purpose of the paper is not to inform the teacher on the subject of the paper, for he has very likely read amply in its field, but the good comes to the student and for the student by the actual doing of the paper. Term papers are competent tests of students' abilities and for the teacher to do the paper for the students would defeat their purpose. By the time a student reaches college he should know some things and how to write a term paper and study are two of them.
