Candidates For Goleta Valley Water District Discuss Issues

By YVONNE PETERSEN
Nexus Reporter

New water sources, the present water moratorium, Cachuma Lake dam expansion, and importation of state water were the issues discussed by candidates for the Goleta Valley Water District at a forum on Tuesday.

All candidates were present: Donna Hone, David Lewis, Henry Schulte, Carrie Topliffe, Gary McFarland, David Peri, Donald Weaver and Dave Prowell.

All candidates agreed that injection wells were one possible future source of water. Most of them also suggested bedrock wells, and a few suggested diversion of streams.

Weaver pointed out that about $1 million has been used to do research in finding sources.

"A source must be cheap, environmentally sound and acceptable to the voters before I will vote for it," Hone said. "Voters have voted down many proposed sources," Peri added.

In addition, candidates mentioned reclamation, dams in several places, reservoirs in canyons and the raising of Cachuma dam as sources of water. Topliffe, Weaver and Lewis feel when it only costs me $3.46 last year?" a participant in the audience asked.

McFarland explained that the fee was for reservation of state water rights, not a fee for actual

'If state water is brought in, our water costs would be 14 times the cost they are now.'

water received. He feels the fee is positive, because it gives the choice of importing water or for use of these fees at low interest rates for funds for local projects.

"The cost is about the price of a six-pack per year which is a low cost for funds for local projects," Schulte said.

Santa Barbara and Goleta pay for 50 percent of this reservation for the entire county, which is "paying for something never to be used," Hone said.

"If state water is brought in, our water costs would be 14 times the cost they are now," Peri said.

Lewis pointed out that the voters have rejected use of state water.

Lewis and Prowell feel that everyone is hurt by the moratorium and the lack of water. This moratorium denies water to prime agricultural land by an ordinance passed later, which changed the land into residential areas, thus all people's needs are not met, Lewis said.

Housing prices and rents have increased because of the moratorium, and the situation has not improved because "Lake Cachuma water continues to spill," Prowell said.

"I favor the end of the moratorium because I favor the end of the water shortage," McFarland said. "A 10 year emergency is too long," Schulte said.

Hone said this was not an emergency initiative but rather an initiative telling the "Water Board that it may not overdraft the supply," and can only allow building where meters exist.

McFarland, Weaver, Lewis and Schulte feel that the Water Board should be for one purpose which is to maintain the public utility, water and not to be involved in politics.

Weaver described the present board as "the seat of power in the area that plans for the community," Lewis feels one way "the board misuses its powers is by not just taking care of the water, but acting as a growth inhibitor as well." Peri said, "Water control is part of government and thus political."

The forum was sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Santa Barbara, the Goleta Valley and Santa Barbara branches of the American Association of University Women, the Junior League of Santa Barbara, and the Goleta Valley and Santa Barbara Councils of PTAs.

GSA Resolution

Graduate Student Association Opposes New Advisory Group

By DEBBIE MARGOLIAS
Nexus Reporter

At its Nov. 1 meeting, the Graduate Students Association passed a resolution which states, "GSA categorically opposes the formation, utilization and existence of the Chancellor's Student Advisory Committee."

"The problem that some of us have with CSAC is that although it might sound very nice that he (the chancellor) wants to get other views, I think that for everybody who has some notion of democracy CSAC sounds not as easy-going as it originally seemed," GSA External President Ralf Saalbach said.

Fear that Associated Students and GSA members would not be permitted to have any input on the committee was also expressed. "The word was that A.S. or GSA members would be ignored," Saalbach said. "He (the chancellor) has, however, agreed to meet with both A.S. and GSA executive leaders on a monthly basis."

GSA wrote to the chancellor after the formation of CSAC asking to be allowed to have some input, but the chancellor refused, according to Saalbach.

GSA decided to find out who is sitting on CSAC and to see how and in what direction the committee is working before making any definite plans of action.

Another issue discussed at the meeting was why the salaries of some teaching assistants are tax-exempt while other T.A.s pay taxes on these earnings.

"Graduate students who are required by their department to serve as teaching assistants are exempt from paying taxes on those earnings," GSA Academic Vice President Robert LaDrech said in his report on this issue. Tax-exempt status for T.A.s will be further discussed at the next Graduate Council meeting, he added.

Housing prices and rents have increased because of the moratorium, and the situation has not improved because 'Lake Cachuma water continues to spill.'

that raising the Cachuma dam would be beneficial, but other water resources would also be necessary to solve our water shortage problem.

Prowell feels "this would be a step in the right direction," but Hone believes we will all know more when the project study is completed and said "it is pure speculation at this point."

Complaints Lodged Against Foot Patrol

By GREGORY McMORROW
Nexus Staff Writer

Formal complaints have been filed with the university and the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Office against members of the Isla Vista Foot Patrol who allegedly fired "bottle rocket" and "M-80" fireworks at the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity house from in front of the Foot Patrol office early Tuesday morning.

The complaints, announced by Associated Students Internal Vice President and Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity member Brian Brandt, A.S. President Mark Schwartz and A.S. Representative Tom Thurlow at a Wednesday morning press conference, allege that "approximately 10 non-uniformed, off-duty" officers fired "bottle rockets and M-80s" toward the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity house at approximately 4 a.m. Tuesday. The complaint also states that the off-duty officers were drinking beer and continued to shoot off the fireworks despite receiving complaints from members of the fraternity.

Brandt said several of the rockets struck the side of the building and one was shot through fraternity member Mike Laver's window.

"There were some explosions outside the frat house and we met members of the I.V. Foot Patrol firing these bottle rockets. When we looked inside, we saw that they were drinking beer inside the office," Brandt said.

The officers told Brandt that the fraternity had "shot them (rockets) at us in the past and we're shooting them back," Brandt said. Brandt did not know if any other fraternity members had shot off bottle rockets in the past from the fraternity house but said he had "never shot any off."

The officers promised to stop but began again after about 10 minutes, Brandt added.

Associate Vice Chancellor for Administrative Services Robert Kroes said an investigation began "within a half hour of (Brandt's) complaint."

"We were aware of it (complaint) the next day. We are very interested and we've been in communication with the community, interviewing people from the fraternity," Santa Barbara County UnderSheriff Jim Vizzolini said.

Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity President Ken Bassman was critical of Brandt's account of the incident saying "he is not speaking for Phi Sigma Kappa."

"He (Brandt) sees this incident as a way to further his political motivations. There are 43 people living in the house and very few people were woken up and those that were did not really care. Mike Laver said that nothing went through his window," Bassman said.

Bassman said that while he did not condone the actions of the Foot Patrol officers, he felt Brandt was making too much of the incident. "He (Brandt) has shot off bottle rockets in the past — even inside the house. I have seen him and so have others."

Both Kroes and Vizzolini declined to comment upon what action may be taken to discipline any officers found to be culpable for any of the charges.

"It would be very hard to foresee that kind of action. Right now we don't have any reason to believe that there were any serious crimes committed, there might be some Santa Barbara County ordinances which were violated and we will treat them as we would treat any violations," Vizzolini said.

Kroes echoed Vizzolini saying, "Until I have all the facts it would be

General Assembly Calls for U.S. Withdrawal

The General Assembly of the United Nations adopted a resolution Wednesday calling for withdrawal of foreign troops from Grenada. The vote was 108-9 with 27 abstentions.

Those opposed included the United States and some of the other Caribbean countries joining it in the Oct. 25 invasion of Grenada that ousted a Marxist military junta that took over after the assassination of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told President Reagan on Wednesday that "all hostilities have ceased" in Grenada and ordered a reduction in U.S. ground forces on the island.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon sent some of the Navy and Marine forces that had participated in the Grenada invasion to duty in and near Lebanon.

"The secretary of defense, Caspar Weinberger, has informed the president that the military commanders in Grenada have informed him that in their determination, all hostilities have ceased there. The secretary has directed that U.S. forces begin a pull-out within a few days," according to a statement issued by Pentagon spokesman Cmdr. Fred Leeder.

Army teams using cranes and bulldozers pulled 93 more bodies from the rubble of their homes Wednesday, raising the earthquake death toll in eastern Turkey to 1,332, the military government said.

It did not specify where the bodies were found, but rescue workers had expressed fears the toll would jump when search crews with heavy equipment reached stricken mountain villages.

A U.S. military cargo plane flew 57 wounded Cuban prisoners and 10 Cuban medics from Grenada to Barbados Wednesday. They transferred to a Red Cross jet and immediately left for Havana.

In the Cuban capital, the government claimed the U.S. invaders on Grenada had arrested two Cuban diplomats and were holding the Cuban diplomatic corps inside the embassy in St. George's.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters in Washington that U.S. forces surrounded the Cuban Embassy in Grenada in cooperation with Governor General Paul Scoon's orders.

Scoon, the British-appointed governor general who is attempting to establish a temporary government in Grenada, on Tuesday gave the Cuban diplomatic corps in Grenada 24 hours to get out.

Speakes refused to say whether U.S. forces might be used to enforce Scoon's eviction order.

The Cuban government has said it would not withdraw its mission in St. George's until all Cuban prisoners were evacuated. An estimated 600 prisoners remained on the island by Wednesday afternoon.

The agony ... and the ecstasy.

Measure Fails

The House rejected, 274-153, an attempt Wednesday to cut off money for American peacekeeping troops in Lebanon, a move that would have ordered the battered Marine force home in four months and defied President Reagan's Middle East policy.

After an emotional, 90-minute debate, members sided with a call by Democratic Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., to support the Republican administration and defeat the measure, a proposed amendment to a $247.3 billion defense spending bill.

But some of the Speaker's Democratic colleagues scoffed at the appeal for bipartisanship.

A bipartisan policy, if it is wrong, should be rejected, it should not be acquiesced in," said Rep. William Ratcliff, D-Conn.

Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., one of the House's most fervent hawks, added his voice to those calling for a pullout, saying: "The American people want the Marines out of that Lebanese trap."

Voting against the amendment were 126 Democrats and 148 Republicans. Voting for it were 136 Democrats and only 17 Republicans.

Greyhound Lines Inc., expects to be struck nationwide at 2 a.m. EDT, and the bus line will shut down its operations at that time, a company official said Wednesday.

John W. Teets, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the parent Greyhound Corp., had no estimate on how long the shutdown might last.

A Supreme Court decision last May upholding the government's power to deny tax breaks to racially discriminatory schools, a political bombshell at the time, has had little impact so far.

But the stage is set for a more far-reaching decision in a case that has generated little notoriety.

In it, the high court will decide sometime in 1984 whether private citizens can prod the government to use its power, and prod it to move more forcefully against private schools that may discriminate.

In May, the justices repudiated the Reagan administration by ruling, 8-1, that the Internal Revenue Service may revoke or withhold tax exemptions from schools with racially discriminatory policies.

On the eve of Jesse Jackson's presidential declaration, analysts predict a 2 million increase in national black registration in 1984.

Computer Tampering

A 19-year-old UCLA student was arrested Wednesday on charges he used a home computer to break into a U.S. Department of Defense communications system linking government, industry, and academic computers throughout the United States and Europe, authorities said.

Ronald Mark Austin was arrested at his Santa Monica home by district attorney investigators and booked into the Los Angeles County jail on a district attorney's complaint accusing him of 14 felony counts of maliciously gaining access to a computer system.

Bail was set at $10,000, and a Municipal Court arraignment is expected Thursday.

A campaign to fight against drunken driving with stiffer jail terms and billboard messages was approved by Merced County supervisors.

The board Tuesday also asked the county counsel to determine if judges can require those convicted of a second offense to attend and pay for a $7,000 four-week alcohol abuse program.

Judges in Merced County sentence most second offenders who enroll in the program to 10 days in jail, eight days longer than the average in other counties, said Troy Dean Fox of the county drug abuse center.

Arrests per capita were slightly higher than most other counties, but Fox attributed the level to arrests on Interstate 5.

The San Diego City Council voted 6-1 Tuesday night to oppose the proposed high-speed bullet train between Los Angeles and San Diego.

Councilman Mike Gotch, who introduced the resolution against the $3.1 billion proposal by American High Speed Rail Corp., detailed the number of environmental and economic questions that haven't been answered yet.

Health Center Lecture Focuses On Aspects of Relationships

By KIMBERLY ABRAHAM
Nexus Reporter

Relationships and the balance between autonomy and intimacy were the focus of a lecture given by Marriage, Family and Child Counselors Larry Barnum and Jane Scheff at the Student Health Center Tuesday.

"Talking about relationships takes a lot of nerve," Scheff said, "I've worked with people too long and thought about the issue too much to believe that it's simple."

"We don't believe in the ideas popular in the 60s that relationships are like pearls, and if by chance one should form ... we really believe that relationships take commitment and discipline. It's a lot of work, but relationships are worth the effort and discipline because they are one of the best ways to find out about yourself and who you are," Scheff said.

"It takes two to know one. Other people can act like mirrors, and you can see yourself in the mirror of the other person," she said. "You have to be careful with who you ask to hold your mirror though. Negative patterns are possible. A relationship should be based on strengths and getting to know one another. Instead of holding the other person's hand and saying 'woe is me' to all of the problems in your lives, you should be a friend to the other person's excitement."

Barnum said, "There are a lot of advantages to doing things alone ... and yet it's lonely," agreeing with Scheff that people need to be friends to their partner's excitement.

"One of the things we want to look at is our past experiences ... as building blocks rather than stumbling blocks," Barnum said.

Scheff defined, with audience participation, the ideas of a autonomy and intimacy. "I would have saved myself a lot of trouble if I'd known how to get the right balance between autonomy and intimacy," she said.

Autonomy was defined as a sense of freedom to do what one wants, self reliance, and an internal balance between what one has and what one wants. "I think it's good to say 'not being afraid to make mistakes' instead of 'being courageous,'" Barnum commented.

The group defined intimacy as openly sharing oneself and knowing one's own space and the other person's. It was said to be a willingness to give and receive, to be flexible, and capable of unselfish caring. It also includes trust and respect.

"Intimacy is about knowing and being known in some kind of equal exchange," Scheff said. "The hard thing is to balance knowing and being known in a relationship. It takes time, work and practice. There will always be tension between autonomy and intimacy. It's an unresolved conflict."

Scheff illustrated her point using two extremes, the couple that spends all of its time together, locking themselves into the relationship. They have intimacy, but not autonomy. They face the danger of having their relationship become boring and flat, unchanging and solidified. Neither of them will bring anything new to the relationship, Scheff said.

The other extreme involves what Scheff called "married splits," people that arrange to have lots of autonomy and hardly any intimacy.

Barnum added autonomy can include a variety of fears. "Everyone is afraid of getting close," Barnum said. They are perhaps rejected as a child or a teenager and assume the attitude that they are "never going to get that close again," Barnum said. "People often do not necessarily want closeness, but want to avoid being abandoned," he added.

"Somehow a lot of relationships are not goal-oriented," Barnum said. "It involves being a friend to the other's excitement, and being willing to compromise but not sacrifice. If I want to go to New York and you want to go to Big Sur, that doesn't mean we have to end up in Des Moines," he said. "It should have a synergistic quality; you plus me equals a much greater us."

Two lectures remain in the series being given by the Student Health Services. They are titled, "Laughing Your Way Through Sex," and "Intimacy." Lectures are given on Tuesday evening at 5:30 in the Student Health Center Conference Room.

Foot Patrol

Early Tuesday morning approximately 10 off-duty Isla Vista Foot Patrol officers were reportedly seen firing bottle rockets and M-80 firecrackers toward a fraternity house in I.V. If this account of the incident is valid, the professional integrity and ethical standards of these "law-enforcement" officers must be seriously questioned.

Aside from the fact that the officers were clearly acting illegally in setting off these rockets, they of all people should have recognized the possible dangers involved in their actions. When asked by several students to stop their disruptive activity, the officers reportedly justified their actions by saying that some of the fraternity members had recently engaged in the same behavior. This reasoning seems a poor excuse for illegal conduct — especially coming from those who supposedly represent the epitome of law-abiding citizens in our society.

At a time when police/student relations are strained due to allegations of excessive force in handling bike law violators, this off-duty behavior by the officers is particularly irresponsible and imprudent. The Foot Patrol officers' actions will now only serve to further aggravate the situation and create a greater rift between the two groups.

In light of the fact that students, through registration fees, are now paying the university's share of funding for the Foot Patrol, we must ensure that these acts of misconduct are not overlooked by the university or police department authorities.

Additionally, this incident points out the lack of student accessibility to a system which they are financing. Formal lines of communication between the officers and those whom they are paid to serve should be established by the two groups. An open dialogue and better access will help resolve recent allegations and provide each side with a clearer understanding of the other's point of view.

While disciplinary action must be taken against those officers who took part in the firecracker incident, the crucial issue is preventing an escalation of further police/student conflicts. If the situation is not dealt with immediately, the credibility of the university and local law officers will be damaged.

IVCC

Unhappy with overcrowded housing, high rents, the poor condition of the roads in Isla Vista? Now is your chance to become involved in such community issues.

On Nov. 8, elections for the Isla Vista Community Council will take place. A total of nine seats are available on the council, with only six candidates presently running. It is now possible to fill the three remaining seats with write-in candidates.

The IVCC was formed in 1972 as a result of a law passed by the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors. This legislation approved the formation of a municipal advisory council in those communities which are not cities. Because I.V. has not gained cityhood, the council has no voting power and must instead act as a consultant to the Board of Supervisors.

One of the most pressing issues now before the council is I.V. incorporation. The majority of the current members feel it is the top priority. The board also concerns itself with improved housing, lower rent, better roads, more parking and a variety of other issues which affect daily life in our isolated community.

Although IVCC does not have a legal vote in the county, it is crucial that I.V. interests are represented and accurately relayed to the larger community. An active and informed council can help institute change for the better. We urge you to take part in the upcoming election by casting your vote or by becoming a member of the IVCC. Help institute needed change in I.V.

LETTERS

Struggle

Editor, Daily Nexus:

As a black student, my feelings are sincerely crushed by the lack of sensitivity and ignorance towards the needs of blacks portrayed by Tod Piccus in a letter entitled "Vote" in the Nov. 1 edition. Tod, you state "How would voters in Chicago and those supporting Jackson react if the 'National Association for the Advancement of White People (NAAWP) were to form." I feel that it is my duty as a peer to educate you since you apparently know little about the reason behind the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). It is just a name to you that sounds discriminatory, please listen to my soft scream of "bloody murder" as you so state.

Founded in 1909, the NAACP is a civil rights organization that works to end discrimination. In a time when dogs were treated better, 60 Negro and White citizens organized in Canada (not allowed to assemble in public in N.Y.) not to be discriminatory, but so that Negroes may gain full citizenship as Human Beings. The NAACP took action to enforce anti-lynching laws in a time when it was legal to hang Negroes. The NAACP has since sought to ban discrimination in education, employment, housing, public accommodations and justice to name a few things.

You, Tod, take these things for granted when you mock the name of the NAACP in this way. I assume your parents have provided you with a wonderful education here in Fantasyville USA. But let me state to you sir, unless you research such organizations you are being deprived of an education money can not buy. A cultural education.

Many may say "Why do blacks always hark on something that happened 200 years ago?" It is the very aftermath of that tragedy that exists today in various forms and attitudes and we encounter it on a daily basis. Without considering Black unemployment or average income, take a look at something closer to you. Count the number of Blacks in your classes. It is no coincidence. There are "back lashes" indeed.

All I ask you, in the name of love of all mankind, is that you do some research on the NAACP and talk to some Blacks to gain a broader perspective of what the struggle is all about.

Shocked

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I was shocked but not surprised to read Chris Hopkins' letter to the editor in the Nov. 1 issue of the Nexus. Come on Chris, let's get real and examine the facts. If you have followed the events in Grenada, you will find that Greg Nylen accurately stated what the news media, Grenadians, and American students have witnessed. Your personal dislike for the Reagan administration does not disqualify the facts.

Chris, I don't know if you've ever spent time in a totalitarian communist country, but having relatives in East Germany has privileged me to see what the people are subjected to. But you needn't travel abroad, you're fortunate enough to have a free press to inform you. Well Chris, why don't you pick up your newspaper and read about KAL 007, the crushing of Poland's Solidarity movement, the tens of thousands of Vietnamese boat refugees murdered by communist patrol boats, the brutal assault on Hungary's

Freedom Revolution and the building of the Berlin wall to prevent the masses from fleeing to freedom (not to mention the thousands shot while trying to scale the wall.) Did you "weep for every one of these senseless deaths?" Did "intellectual mediation" or "diplomatic means" prevent these and other countless atrocities from occurring? It is ignorant to assume a narrow perspective of Grenada in light of these tragedies. It is cruel to assume that the people of Grenada and other totalitarian states support their governments simply because they do not (cannot) fight back. Remember, the people of Grenada "cheered" when American soldiers arrived.

One other point Chris. You self-righteously judged Mr. Nylen by stating "the value you place on human lives other than your own seems too small." Have you considered that some of us are actually willing to fight and die for the freedom of others? I hardly call this selfish.

Mr. Hopkins, it is easy to take a rosy view of totalitarian communism from the safe, warm confines of California. I suggest you, Ms. Rothenstein and Mr. Mokuku all take a nice vacation together. Start out with skiing in Russia, then hit the surf in Vietnam, on to East Germany for wiener schnitzel and apfelkuchen, and wind it up by frolicking on a sunny beach in Cuba. Then come back and let's see if you don't still have a one-dimensional view of the world. And don't bring your cameras. They don't allow photographs to be taken out of these countries.

Invasion

Editor, Daily Nexus:

The American invasion of Grenada proves one thing (as if it needed proving): American foreign policy, especially in Latin America, is based on a principle of ownership and on re-making others in our own image. Grenada is a symptom of American arrogance. It expresses a need to prove Ronald Reagan's and America's corporate "manhood."

The only difference between the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the American invasion of Grenada is that the U.S. had the good sense to choose a country with the military strength of your average summer camp. The Marines can kill a few Marxists and a few civilians, "capture" a few Cuban prisoners (if they were Americans, the word in the media would be "hostages"), and pick up a tan.

The whole thing brings to mind the words of comedian Will Rogers in the 1930s. When American tempers were flying over the sinking of an American gunboat on the Yangtze River while "defending American interests," Rogers asked, "How would we feel if Chinese gunboats went up and down the Mississippi River defending Chinese laundries?"

This might be particularly appropriate time for us to learn to pray for our enemies. The paraphrase Pogo, "we have met the enemy, and it is us!"

Freedom Of The Press?

It is hard to remember when last hysteria was so rampant. John Chancellor all but dropped his pipe last Wednesday, deploring the absence of television cameras in Grenada. William Safire writes as if we had launched an amphibious operation against Israel. Anthony Lewis wonders, in great big headlines, "What Was He Hiding?" He being Mr. Reagan, what he was hiding being the purity of the Cuban-Grenadians.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., managed three sentences one might have expected to hear in Hiroshima 60 seconds before the bomb fell. "The president is in violation of the terms of that treaty of the Organization of American states. The president is in violation of the War Powers Act on Grenada. The president is in violation of the Constitution of the United States as far as freedom of the press is concerned." I would forgive all three if I could toss in that the president is in violation of Lowell Weicker.

There are two questions before the House. The first of these is: Was it prudent for the White House to bar the press early on in the Grenadian campaign? The second question is: Was it constitutionally infamous to bar the press early on in the Grenadian campaign?

Here is a reconstruction, as reported to me:

Day One. No press permitted. Total priority given to the military operation, pending the success of the rescue mission.

Day Two. A pool of reporters admitted, under military supervision.

Day Three. Fifteen reporters admitted, under military supervision.

Day Four. Thirty reporters admitted, again under military supervision.

Day Five. Sixty reporters admitted, no longer under military supervision.

Day Six. Seventy-five reporters admitted in the first shift, free to go anywhere. Seventy reporters in the second shift, free to go anywhere. Thirty are still in Barbados, and are being offered military transportation to the area.

Was it a good idea to keep the press away during the first day? It would appear to me that there are two reasonable positions on the question. The first one would have press representatives saying: The safety of our reporters is our problem, not the Pentagon's, and if we choose to risk their lives that's our business, not theirs. The second would have the Pentagon people saying: Look, that's all very well, but it is in the

Year Of The Big Fix

How would it be if we picked some year in the near future and didn't buy anything new at all that year? We'd spend the entire 365 days fixing things we already have. It's gotten so everyone's throwing it away and buying a new one instead of having the old one fixed, and that seems wrong.

Wouldn't it do just as much for the economy and more for the ecology if I spent $2,500 having my old car done over instead of spending $10,000 for a new one?

There's going to be some job relocation necessary but it wouldn't do any harm at all if those people in Detroit who make cars, spent a year fixing them. They might be more careful when they went back to the assembly line.

It's hard to believe our economy has to depend on selling us things we don't really need. There must be another way. There are a thousand things I keep buying that I don't need. I've got four electric shavers but three of them don't work. I have three 1/4-inch drills but only one is operational. There are two ice cream freezers in the garage but the motors on both of them need work. We have two retired toasters and a closet full of gadgets that just barely don't work anymore. I don't need new models. I need someone who'll fix my old models.

I'd start not buying from the ground up. I'd have all the old shoes I own soled and heeled and I'd put new shoelaces in all of them. Then I'd shine them and wear them. I wouldn't buy any new ones.

I'd go through my closet, bring out the clothes that need work and take them to the tailor or sew on a few buttons myself. The art of turning a frayed collar might be revived.

I don't think we need any new houses for a year, either. The building industry will howl but there's plenty of work for them to do. Like Detroit, they could learn a little about building new ones by fixing the ones they put up ten years ago.

Everywhere I go I see perfectly good houses that have been abandoned. Why couldn't the building industry and the people nature of things that our military would seek to provide protection for the press and we simply do not want that kind of distraction. Both points of view are defensible. They do not draw a line between those who favor and those who oppose the First Amendment to the Constitution.

Next question: What might have been the ulterior motives in the Pentagon's refusal to permit reporters other than under military supervision during the four ensuing days? Well, let's think. Maybe after our Marines landed they discovered that, in fact, the whole Cuban detachment in Grenada was engaged in making Band-Aids for the Third World, and it would have been terribly embarrassing to have invaded a country whose foreign visitors were so innocently engaged.

But if that was the reason for keeping the press under supervision, the Marines had an awful lot to do during the three days before the press was free to spread out and do its investigative reporting. Surely if the Cubans had been innocently engaged in Grenada, and the ammunition and arms already resentment.

Strangely enough, though, I was genuinely disappointed when I wasn't selected as one of the finalists. And herein lies the most lethal trap of all; I was actually willing to allow myself to be viewed exclusively in terms of my physical attractiveness if being viewed in this manner would pay off in ego gratification. If, by being judged attractive by the women, I could gain even the slightest feeling of control over them, I'd be willing to go along with the game a little longer. But what a price to pay. I was seduced into believing that my physical attributes could be a source of power over somebody as long as I surrendered all other personal qualities I might have possessed. I was willing to become something less than human.

The male beauty contest was an experience I'd rather not repeat, yet the saddest thing of all is that what I tolerated for twenty minutes is probably endured by many women for a lifetime. In a society where, for every $30,000 the average man earns per year the average woman takes home $16,800, where many women are constant victims of media exploitation, where "true fulfillment" for a woman seems contingent on finding a successful husband since she rarely can earn enough herself to raise a family, it's no wonder that a lifelong beauty contest becomes one of the only options available to women. Society's message to women is clear: if you want to succeed you have to be pretty, and to be pretty you can't be threatening to men.

Having been judged by what my body looks like and having felt the dehumanizing effects of this experience, I can safely say that I won't see just a shapely figure anymore when I look at a woman. I'll see an entire human being who might have the same hopes and fears that I would have had if I were in her place. If I learned anything last Friday I learned that men and women are more alike than they are different. We share a common bond of humanity, and when we're ready to view one another in the light of our shared humanness, we'll undoubtedly realize how equal we really can be.

who want houses rebuild those instead of building new ones?

Why cut down more trees when we have wooden houses rotting for want of a little care and a coat of paint?

Why dig up more iron ore to turn into cars and farm machinery when we have cars and farm machinery rusting away that only need a little mechanical repair and some grease?

It would be a year in which no new books would be published. Each of us would read the books we bought in past years and never read. The writers are writing faster than the readers are reading. The readers need time to catch up and I speak with firsthand knowledge when I say that it wouldn't hurt if the writers spent a little more time with their work.

No new games at Christmas! Sorry, Atari. Sorry, Parker Brothers. We have enough games in our closets. We'll dust off our chess, our checkers and mahjong sets and bring out the Monopoly, and the Scrabble boards. Maybe we'll play Michigan.

In the back room, attic, garage or basement, there must be a lot of old Hula Hoops, roller skates, bongo boards and wagons for the kids to play with. Maybe there are even some stilts, a pogo stick, a bike and a Flexible Flyer.

If no one is selling anything new, this could hurt television and newspapers which depend on advertising revenue. Newspapers might have to charge what it costs to produce them. Network television would have to find some other way to collect from us. How much would a newspaper cost if we had to pay for it directly? For all we consumers know, it might be cheaper in the long run to pay for both directly.

Well, I'm dreaming, of course. We're not going to stop buying new things, but I sense something basically wrong. It's wrong to be using up the earth's resources and throwing them away as fast as possible so we can make new ones because our economy depends on sales.

"discovered" — enough, in the opinion of one Pentagon spokesman, to equip every man, woman and child with a deadly weapon — at least one Deep Throat in Grenada would whisper to someone from The New York Times, The Washington Post, AP, UPI, ABC, NBC and CBS, that the Pentagon staged the biggest theatrical hoax in modern history?

Is France a free country? I'd say so, by and large. Though when De Gaulle had his press conferences, the reporters were told what questions to ask, and when he felt it necessary to do so, De Gaulle simply shut down the whole of French television. Great Britain free? Yeah, on the whole. In the Falklands expedition Britain had reporters there, but they were kept more or less locked up on the ships.

The final point. I think it was a mistake for the Pentagon to forbid reporters. That is a long way off from being apocalyptic about their having come to a different conclusion.

In A Woman's Shoes

By JIM ROSATI

A few days ago I had a horrible yet enlightening experience. I don't believe this description is overly mysterious or unintelligible since it is often the most disagreeable episodes in our lives that compel us to examine our beliefs about ourselves and other people and perhaps make some positive changes. Well, a week ago last Friday I resolved to make some changes.

I attended Warrin Farrell's workshop "Why Men Are The Way They Are," the purpose of which, as I saw it, was to aid women in discovering what forces might shape men's attitudes toward women, and to allow them to experience first-hand what men go through when interacting with members of the other sex. During the first segment of the program Dr. Farrell identified socialization, peer group reinforcement, fear of rejection and pressure to be successful (I may have missed a few) as the constituent elements of the negative attitudes men can develop toward women.

The lecture/discussion was informative and interesting, and I found myself nodding in agreement with most of what was said. Yet in retrospect I find that I was listening with at best a kind of cool objectivity; it never occurred to me that I could use the discussion as a guide for examining my own beliefs about women. It was because I have so vague a notion of what I would be like to be in a woman's shoes — having practically your whole being defined by your physical desirability — that the last part of the workshop had such profound influence on me.

For twenty minutes, during two role reversal exercises, I got to play the part in which the women of our society are cast; it was all at once frightening, embarrassing, anger-provoking and misleadingly alluring. The most powerful lesson came from the male "beauty contest" participated in by a good number of the men attending the workshop. At first I thought it was kind of funny to be lined up in front of a room full of women, both young and old, gawking at us, whistling and screaming "take it off, baby!" After being coaxed into removing our shirts to the cheering approval of the female audience, I spotted a few familiar faces in the crowd as well as a photographer lurking in the back of the room. Beginning to panic, as photos of my pale, somewhat-out-of-condition body would surely be plastered over a page of the Nexus when they reviewed this embarrassing charade, I imagined myself as the laughing stock of all my friends. It was at this moment that the word "reputation" took on a whole new meaning for me. I suddenly felt the fear implicit in "reputation" for women: the fear of being regarded solely as a body, worthy only of solicitous stares and ridicule, the fear of exaggerated claims and boastful talk over which you have no control, and, underlying all these, the fear of being considered something less than human. The humor of the situation had worn off by this time, giving way to a growing

Goleta Valley Water District Candidates

Topliffe Supports Local Water Problem Solutions

This is the seventh of eight articles featuring each Goleta Water Board candidate running in the Nov. 8 election. The eight candidates are running for the three seats opening on the board.

By DINA KYRIAKIDOU
Assistant County Editor
Carrie Topliffe, candidate for Goleta Valley Water District in the upcoming elections, is concerned with the development of local water sources in order to cover the water deficit, improving the water quality and preventing underground toxic contamination of water sources.

"I'm involved in the Goleta Water Board race because I think that people who are environmentally sensitive have got to take a stand on progressive issues ... or we're going to lose that base for environmental protection," Topliffe said.

"I do think that Isla Vista is an area that needs more representation within the community at large. I think that we have a very dense population; we have specific needs," she added. "Obviously the best way to solve some of our needs is through incorporation (of Goleta and Isla Vista) which would be very beneficial both to the university community and Isla Vista."

"We have a lot of good ideas here and we need that incorporation base to feed them the financial support to develop these services."

One of the issues that has to be dealt with is the water deficit which has to be cleared up, Topliffe said. "I think that it's a danger to our economy and the integrity of our region."

She said that people might not understand the deficit since they turn on their tap and water runs.

"We have firm entitlement to roughly 10,000-11,000 acre feet a year and we serve 16,000. The rest is made up from what we buy surplus from other districts. Of course, if you have prolonged drought nobody has surplus to sell you and then you're considerably short of your supply," she explained.

"We'd have to ration and we'd probably have a severe damage to the area of agriculture. So I think we have to develop the local water sources to cover the deficit. And if we don't do that I think we're going to get state water jammed down our throats," Topliffe added. "State water will be an environmental disaster for this area, because we would forever lose the ability to do our local planning. It would be out of our hand."

Carrie Topliffe

Another important issue is the water quality. "The Goleta water is a joke," she said. People who pay for supplemental sources of water should be asked whether they want to put that money into improving our tap system, she added.

Concerning toxic contamination of groundwater supplies Topliffe said that even though we don't have the industry which pollutes at this point, "this is the only time to take care of it as a preventive measure. If we don't take care of it now ... at some point down the line it's going to be too late."

"The Isla Vista Community Council is an advisory body and I think they should continue to use that advisory capacity," she said. Topliffe commended the several public meetings and hearings in the area. "I think there's real effort to solicit opinion to governing, decision making bodies."

"The west campus in particular is very environmentally sensitive and I support a full environmental impact report before any building goes on," Topliffe said. Although

"I'm sensitive to housing issues and I think that it's obvious that more student housing is needed, I'd much rather see it on campus than in Isla Vista, because I think there's more room for it (on campus)."

"But if we're going to develop this area for student housing further, the university has got to maintain a very good water conservation program. It has also got to hold itself to its enrollment figures. Every year it's a little worse," she said.

"You have to come up with the structures so that you're not continually overenrolled. Any housing that is built should be tied to a commitment to keep enrollment within the projected amounts that are satisfactory to the university and the community," she said.

"I've been a strong supporter of this bill, have written to Gary Hart (State Senator, D-Santa Barbara) about it and studied it extensively," she said about Assembly Bill 1362, a bill which would regulate underground storage of hazardous materials and provide regular inspection.

"I think it's very important that we do protect our water supplies in these ways," Topliffe said. "I'm committed both to bills of this type and plus to voluntary efforts by the community."

She explained that such measures are the point of argument between the government and the industry lobby. But if the water is contaminated it will also affect the industry, so there has to be cooperation on such bills.

"I think I'm very qualified to represent Isla Vista and the concerns of this population, just because of my involvement in the community here and being in touch with a lot of those needs. In terms of my background, I took two years of undergraduate chemistry at UCSB, so that I would be very comfortable with technical issues," she said.

Topliffe is a journalist. "I'm a professional researchist and that's a very important qualification for public office," she added. She is the present I.V. Parks District director.

Foot Patrol...

Santa Barbara County and the university fund the Foot Patrol. The Foot Patrol was funded by the Regent's Opportunity Fund until this year when Chancellor Robert Huttenback channeled those funds to support research projects. Student registration fees fund the university's share of the Foot Patrol this year which Schwartz believes entitles students to more input in police policy.

"There should be some form of community input into the grievance procedure to provide an objective viewpoint," Schwartz said.

"Funding for the I.V. Foot Patrol has been switched to reg fees without student consultation. Other areas (funded by reg fees) have student input. We feel this is unfair and that students should have input commensurate to the funding," Schwartz added.

"That (Foot Patrol funding) is a totally independent topic. We're mixing topics up. I think it is important to deal with the issues at hand. I've offered to meet with Tom Thurlow and Mark Schwartz over and over and over again. We just met (recently) finally and if they are going to comment on that subject then they have an obligation to say what I have said," Kroes said.

Kroes added that there are several avenues open for student dialogue concerning police matters, but these avenues have been neglected by Schwartz and Thurlow.

Schwartz denied that Kroes has been available for a meeting saying "It's just not true. He has been unavailable. Monday is the first time he has ever asked (to meet with me)."
