Students Hear About Plan for Racism Policy on Wednesday

By Tizoc Tirado
Assistant Campus Editor

A new UCSB racial harassment policy may be in place within a month after the details are ironed out between administrators and members of Concerned Students Against Racism, Dean of Students Leslie Lawson said at meeting on the issue Wednesday.

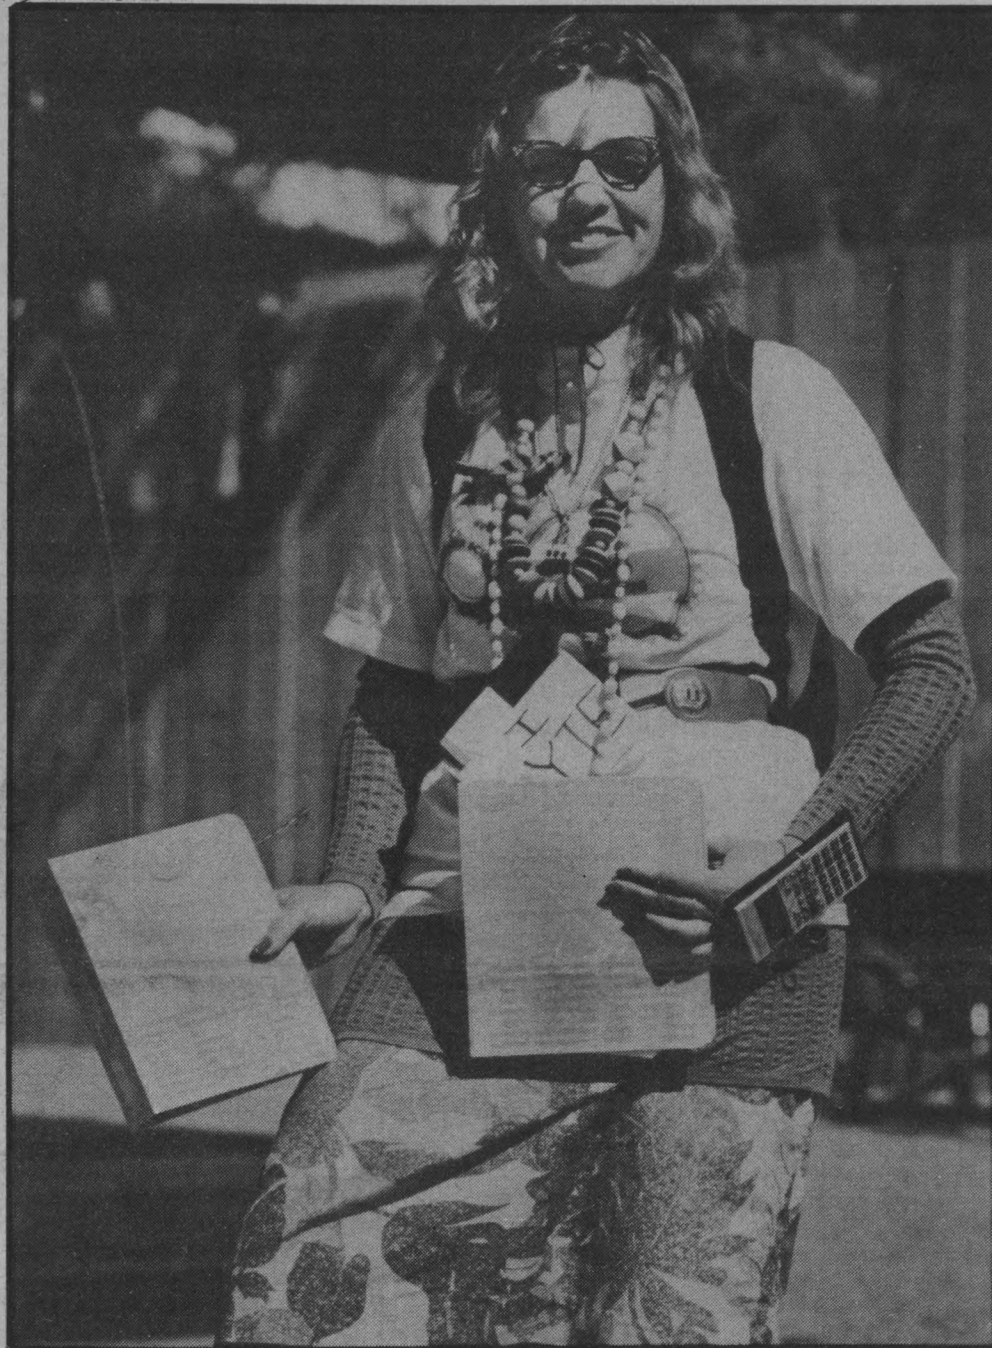

Although disappointed that administrators had not met the list of two-week demands presented to the group at its last "Word Up" meeting, CSAR members still intend to see their demands met.

Lawson and Women's Center Director Janet Vandevender presented a preliminary draft for a racial harassment policy similar to the one already in place for sexual harassment cases.

Citing the importance of a policy that would guarantee UCSB students a "harassment-free" atmosphere, Vandevender explained that the primary intention was to refine the racial aspects of the current discrimination policy.

However, for the policy to have a focus that represents the students' needs, Lawson said their input is necessary. "We're at the point where we need directions, thoughts on paper ... just to sit down and hash it out," she said.

Calling for three or four group representatives to aid in formulating the new policy, Lawson and panel members agreed to discuss and revise aspects of the (See MEETING, p.5)

Newly Created Sorority Called Anti-Semitic in Student Charge

A complaint alleging anti-Semitism in the rush process reportedly has prompted university officials to investigate the newly formed Delta Delta Delta Sorority.

Although the university will not confirm that an investigation of the sorority is under way, a Tri-Delta representative and the woman who filed the complaint said the office of the vice chancellor of student affairs is looking into the matter.

The woman, who asked that she not be identified, claimed that anti-Semitic attitudes were circulating among the sorority women evaluating the potential pledges during rush week in January.

The anti-Semitism charge, filed Feb. 17, was denied by sorority representatives. They told the Daily Nexus that about 20 percent of the local chapter's members are Jewish.

The UCSB administration follows a written grievance procedure after complaints are filed, said Harleen McAda, assistant vice chancellor of student and community affairs.

"It will just be an investigation to see what is going on," said the woman who filed the complaint. "If they find there to be discrimination then it should be stopped. I would just like to know what is going on here."

"When I filed the grievance she (McAda) was very concerned. She said that she wanted to make it a thorough investigation."

McAda would not comment on the investigation or its findings, citing university policies guaranteeing privacy to those accused of wrongdoing.

Tri-Delta representatives said they are unsure as to the status of the investigation. "We would like to know what is going on with the investigation," Tri-Delta advisor Anne Gaier said.

Students Express Concerns at Nexus Forum

By Celia Alario
Staff Writer

Readers want more coverage of graduate students, students over 25 and intramurals, according to some of the 15 students who came to the first Daily Nexus campus forums, held Feb. 24 and 25.

The forum was held in hopes of getting comments and questions which would help improve the quality of the newspaper. Although the dialogue was positive, Daily Nexus Editor In Chief William Diepenbrock was disappointed at the low turnout.

"We used $2,500 worth of ad space in the Nexus, sent out 160 letters, ran a front-page article, and wrote an editorial about these forums, and although the people who came and commented were helpful in giving us comments and insights, it's extremely disappointing that so many people didn't want to take time out (to attend the forums)," Diepenbrock said.

"Hopefully it's a sign that they are happy with what is being covered, but as we've said in the ads, the editorial, and the article, we can't measure readers' opinion accurately unless a large number of them take an interest," he added.

Two officers in the Graduate Students Association called for more coverage of issues pertaining to them. "We want to get in touch with the graduate students because we are 2,200 strong, and a big chunk of the campus," GSA External President Anna Brusutti said.

"Our concerns overlap with many of the educational and financial concerns of the community," she continued. "It is hard to pin down and recognize and get in touch with grad students. It (the Nexus) is one resource we have. We value highly the power the Nexus has in getting us in touch with grad students."

Although few in number, concerned students and members of the community asked the Daily Nexus for better coverage on intramurals, students over the age of 25, graduate students and university drama productions.

The editors agreed Brusutti's concern was valid, and responded by encouraging graduate students to write for the Nexus, or to inform the editors about events or issues they would like to see covered.

UCSB junior Les Austin, a student over 25, addressed a similar issue regarding the 1,190 students over 25 who do not follow the conventional route through the university system in the four years after high school. He emphasized the need for and validity of stories concerning the problems of these older students, as well as their different outlooks on campus issues due to their age or past experience.

"I think that somewhere among the 1,190 students there would be an English major or a communications major, or someone who wants to write about (issues important to older students)," Austin said. An example might be a story about "what you do if you have a test and one of your kids has mumps and the other one wants to play drums all day," he said.

Campus Editor Doug Arellanes agreed that this type of story would be interesting.

"That perspective of an over-25-year-old student doesn't usually come into mind. When a student is studying, he probably doesn't think of it, but that perspective, trying to study with two kids making you crazy, would be interesting to read," he said.

Austin also thanked the Nexus for its contributions to the fight for bus service to the off-campus family housing units. "This shows the difference a paper can make if they bring things to the attention of the proper authorities and the public," he explained. "I'm speaking especially in regards to the editorials and cartooning which struck a nerve with officials down at the Metropolitan Transit District."

Intramurals Publicity Director Anthony Salazar asked the Nexus for more coverage of intramural sports, which are "a vital part of athletics in addition to the other teams here at school."

"Coverage of intramural sports isn't what it should be ... 18,000 people participate in intramurals and there is no real coverage," Salazar said. "Intramurals are a recreational outlet for people who work hard and study all day. They enjoy this time to have fun."

The drama department and Associated Students Program Board also asked for more coverage of events, pre-writes of upcoming events and recognition.

Matthew "Duke" Ellington, a local resident and 1959 UCSB alumnus, attended the forum both nights and commented on the need for accuracy of reporting, documentation, and "real" coverage of alcohol-related incidents.

Ellington urged the editors to "be precise," looked comparatively at the papers available to the Isla Vista community, and commented on the low attendance of the forum. "If last night was a show of apathy, what would tonight be, on such a historic night ... the night the bank (See FORUM, p.12)

Soviet Union Detonates First Nuclear Test Since Moratorium

MOSCOW, USSR — The Soviet Union today staged its first nuclear test in 19 months, exploding a device in Soviet Central Asia that ended the Kremlin's unilateral freeze on weapons testing started in August 1985

Soviet officials said they were forced to resume testing for reasons of national security because the United States had refused Kremlin overtures to suspend its own weapons tests.

"The irresponsible policies of Washington made it necessary for Moscow to stop the effects of its test moratorium, and the historic opportunity to end testing once and for all was lost," Soviet army Maj. Gen Gely Batenin told a news briefing in Moscow.

The official news agency Tass said in a two-paragraph report that the test was conducted at 8 a.m. Moscow time and had a yield of less than 20 kilotons.

It was conducted at the Soviet test site near Semipalatinsk in Soviet Kazakhstan, about 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow, "to check the results of research into the physics of a nuclear explosion," Tass said. It gave no further details.

Batenin called the Soviet explosion "a forced measure motivated by security concerns," and said his country did not plan to stage a series of tests to catch up with any possible decline in superpower parity.

NBC Reports Four Kidnapped Teachers in Custody of Syrians

NEW YORK — Three Americans and an Indian kidnapped in Lebanon last month are now in the hands of Syrian army intelligence officers in Beirut who are trying to figure out how to release them, NBC news reported.

NBC, citing unidentified Mideast and Western intelligence sources, said Wednesday that the four had been turned over to Col. Amir Taleh, a senior Syrian intelligence officer.

"We have no independent confirmation at all," of the report, said Dan Howard, a White House spokesman. State Department spokeswoman Deborah Calvin also said she had no information regarding the report.

Professors Robert Polhill, Jesse Turner and Alann Steen and Mitilshwar Singh, an Indian with resident alien status in the United States, were kidnapped from the Beirut University College campus on Jan. 24.

The hostages were turned over to Taleh when it became known Syrian troops were going to move in force last weekend to quell fighting among Lebanon's warring factions, NBC said.

American Archbishop Wanted in Billion-dollar Bank Scandal

MILAN, Italy — Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, the American who heads the Vatican bank, has been named in a criminal arrest warrant in connection with Italy's biggest postwar banking scandal, according to an investigating judge.

The action rekindled questions about the extent of Vatican bank involvement in the far-reaching financial scandal in which Italy's largest private bank collapsed and $1.3 billion disappeared.

The 1982 collapse of Milan-based Banco Ambrosiano cost the Vatican $250 million.

The warrant charges Marcinkus, a native of Cicero, Ill., and two other Vatican bank officials as "accessories to fraudulent bankruptcy" in the collapse, a judge investigating the case told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

"Up to this moment, I have not received anything," Marcinkus, a former papal bodyguard who has repeatedly denied any wrongdoing, told Italian journalists who reached him at the Vatican on Wednesday evening.

Chief Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said he had heard reports but "I know nothing about it."

Tower Report Very Critical of White House on Iranian Affair

WASHINGTON — President Reagan "did not seem to be aware" of the way his arms-to-Iran policy was being implemented nor of "the full consequences" of that policy, the Tower commission said Thursday in a report harshly critical of the leeway Reagan gave to his National Security Council.

The commission, appointed by Reagan himself, said the president apparently was motivated to sell arms to the Iranian regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini by compassion for Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

"By his own account, as evidenced in his diary and notes, and as conveyed to the board by his principal advisers, President Reagan was deeply committed to securing the release of the hostages," said the commission.

In the harshest criticism yet of the president's handling of foreign policy and his own National Security Council and White House staff, the three-member board said that Reagan "appears to have proceeded with a concept of initiative that was not accurately reflected in the reality of the operation."

"The president did not seem to be aware of the way in which the operation was implemented and the full consequences of U.S. participation."

While offering a lengthy description of the arms sale and profits diversion, the report said the whole affair "has been and in some respects still is an enigma....The whole matter cannot be fully explained."

The panel concluded that White House chief of staff Donald Regan — who was expected to resign under pressure within days — "must bear primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House" when the Iran initiative was disclosed.

The report said that the strong-willed Regan exerted more personal control over the White House staff than any other chief of staff has in recent memory and "should have insisted that an orderly process be observed."

The panel also concluded that John Poindexter, the president's national security adviser and North's boss until his resignation last November, "failed grievously on the matter of contra diversion."

It said evidence indicates that Poindexter knew a diversion of the funds to the contras had occurred but "apparently failed to appreciate or ignored the serious legal and political risks presented."

"His clear obligation was either to investigate the matter or take it to the president or both. He did neither."

Poindexter tried to exclude members of his National Security Council staff from knowing about the Iran deal and actively misled Secretary of State George Shultz "on one or more occasions," the report added.

The board said it "found indications" that North "was involved in an effort, over time, to conceal or withhold important information." North was fired over the Iran episode.

A chronology of events written by North was full of inaccuracies, the report said, lending evidence "to the proposition that Lt. Col. North either on his own or at the behest of others, actively sought to conceal important information."

While saying it could not confirm that North had destroyed any documents, the report said it was concerned that some notes appeared to be missing.

The commission noted that former CIA Director William Casey "shared a similar responsibility" with Poindexter to inform the president about the dimensions of the Iran affair. Casey had received information about the diversion almost a month before the story broke but did not raise the subject with the president, the report added.

Appointed by Reagan 90 days ago and lacking subpoena power or an opportunity to question North or Poindexter, the Tower board was unable to trace the chain of money that Attorney General Edwin Meese III has said was diverted to the contras.

At the unveiling of the report, President Reagan announced he would make a nationally televised speech next week concerning the Tower commission report.

Budget Analyst Says Budget Cuts in Education Unwarranted

SACRAMENTO — Gov. George Deukmejian's plan to cut school programs for the disadvantaged and gifted and to reduce first-grade class sizes should be rejected, says the Legislature's non-partisan budget analyst.

A net total of $540 million could be cut from the Republican governor's proposed $39.1 billion budget for next year, Legislative Analyst Elizabeth Hill said Wednesday.

She delivered to lawmakers her staff's 1,447-page analysis of the proposed 1987-88 budget. The Assembly and Senate budget committees will use the detailed document when writing the Legislature's budget version between now and June.

"I do anticipate it will be a difficult budget process (this year) as the Legislature tries to put its priorities on the budget," Hill, who became the analyst last fall, told reporters.

The analysis either rejected most of the Republican governor's new proposals or did not make recommendations because of a lack of information from the governor.

But it does suggest abolishing eight state regulatory boards and allowing parole violators to shorten their prison sentences through prison work.

Hill's report says both this year's budget and Deukmejian's proposal for next year are over the Gann constitutional spending limit imposed by a 1979 ballot initiative, but she said the Legislature could pass some laws that would fix the problem without affecting programs.

Devising a budget for the fiscal year that begins July 1 was difficult because revenues are not expected to increase enough next year to maintain the billion-dollar Deukmejian-supported reserve.

Firm May Have Overestimated Proposed Metro Rail Ridership

LOS ANGELES — A consulting firm may have overestimated ridership for this city's proposed subway system by up to 50 percent, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported Thursday.

The same firm, Schimpeler Corradino Associates of Louisville, Ky., reportedly overestimated ridership for Miami's elevated train by up to 600 percent.

Some Miami transit officials said low Metrorail ridership after about two years in operation has contributed to a $100 million deficit that forced reduction in bus service.

The paper also quoted urban planning specialists who challenge estimates by Schimpeler Corradino that Los Angeles' Metro Rail will be one of the nation's most crowded subways.

Correction

In Thursday's edition of the Daily Nexus, a quote was incorrectly attributed to Shannon Delaney in an article about stress. "I leave everything (in class) for the last moment, then I go to the test feeling like shit.... (To deal with stress) I get a six-pack, lay out on my patio and pass out!" the quote read. This statement was actually made by Sylvia Hochstim. The Nexus regrets this error.

Leg Council Defeats Bill for New Campuses

By Mairin Smith
Staff Writer

A bill calling for statewide local jurisdiction over universities and the creation of three additional campuses in the University of California system was defeated at the Associated Students Legislative Council meeting Wednesday night.

The Isla Vista Community Council, which originally passed the bill last week to counteract overenrollment, sought Leg Council's support. "This is really a system-wide problem. They are projecting a 24 percent enrollment increase over the next ten years. I'm asking you to support legislation that would be system-wide," IVCC member Mike Boyd said.

"The reason for three campuses is if you just have one it makes it harder to pass," Boyd explained. "If they are projecting a 24 percent increase in enrollment then you need three campuses," he added.

Council member Geoff Heathman supported local control over the universities. "I think you have more voice in the county than in the university," he said.

Students couldn't make substantial changes from outside the university, Leg Council member John Schafer said. "I do realize the problem of overenrollment," Schafer said. "My problem with (the bill) is I don't think you can change the university's mind externally as you can internally through a student body."

"I like the idea of having three additional campuses, but I think they should remain autonomous," Schafer added.

"I understand the desire to have input or control over the universities," Leg Council member Kurt Berkenkotter said, "but I think eventually local interests will conflict with the university's."

The bill was defeated eight to four with two abstentions.

In other business, Leg Council passed an administrative policies paper that places 70 percent of the interest gained from A.S. capital reserves in a separate interest-earning account under the supervision of the executive director, with the remaining 30 percent going into operating funds.

"The whole point of having a separate account is to treat it as small capital reserves and take it from there instead of the real capital reserves," said Duncan, the bill's author.

"It will be more accessible because it's not capital reserves and it's not violating the (A.S.) constitution," Executive Director Tamara Scott said.

Internal Vice President Mikhael Smith supported the proposal. "This sounds really cool," Smith said. "Every year the money goes into capital reserves and then it's a pain in the ass to get at, for like a typewriter or something."

The "Send Reagan to Prison" bill, authored by Council member Brad Loel, created a substantial amount of friction during the meeting and was eventually withdrawn.

The position paper called for "the immediate arrest and lifetime imprisonment of the entire Reagan administration (and) the leaders of the following corporations: Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola, Chevron and Gulf Oil corps, General Dynamics, (Bank of America), the World Bank, McDonald's, GM, etc."

Berkenkotter voiced support of the bill. "I think that somebody could challenge that the administration is pretty disrespectful of human rights in general," he said. "I personally think Reagan has committed some crimes and I would like to see the President of the United States go to jail."

Council member Robert Reed marginally supported the bill. "I like your points," he told Loel. "I think they're great, but I think you ruined it with the 'imprisonment.' I don't think we should go around imprisoning people. I think it's a joke."

Council member Matt Duncan was harsher in his criticism of the bill. "I think a bill in this fashion is really ridiculous," Duncan said. He called the Council members supporting the bill "a bunch of liberals jumping on the anti-Reagan bandwagon."

Council member Carol Hunt also found the bill to be questionable. "I oppose this because people come up to me and say they can't believe we would even vote on this."

Council member Christina Porter suggested that Loel withdraw the bill in order to make it more acceptable to those opposing it. "I would really like to see this bill pass," she said. "People are really worried about getting their crisp and clean reputations tarnished. I think Brad should withdraw his bill and work with the crisp and clean, no caffeine people."

After the debate, Loel decided to withdraw the bill. "I'm a little upset but that's okay. My point was missed but I'm not going to cry about it. I'm going to withdraw it and maybe I'll work on it."

Smith did not like the tone of the discussion. "We're supposedly supposed to be working together," he said. "Opinions are coming as attacks and not as discussion on the bill."

"We're leveling people with attacks," Berkenkotter said. "They were personal attacks and that's what I don't like to see."

Porter later offered a formal apology to the council for name-calling.

Tension during the meeting gave rise to remarks criticizing Council members' attitudes towards their positions and towards A.S. as a whole.

"This quarter has been a complete sad joke," Schafer said. "A lot of people just come to the meetings and then, goodbye. For you to have this position and not do anything with it is a real waste of energy."

"I really hate a lot of stuff that's been going down," Internal Vice President Sharlene Weed said.

"I kind of sense that sometimes in this council there are negative vibes," External Vice President Mikhael Smith said.

When asked to explain the tensions, several council members and officers refused to comment.

Leg Council member Chris Heinz suggested A.S. engage in a project to establish a feeling of cohesion. "I'd like to see us come together," Heinz said. "We just need to work on something to show we are a good council."

Conference Prepares Students for Business Life

Up to 250 people are expected to attend workshops, panel discussions and presentations by top business professionals and other experts when the first annual "Pre-Business Conference: A Spectrum of Business Opportunities" comes to UCSB's Buchanan Hall this Saturday.

The event, sponsored by the UCSB Student Alumni Association, will feature discussion sessions led by UCSB alumni and executives from Merrill Lynch Realty, Century Bank, Santa Barbara Bank and Trust, Dean Witter, County Savings Bank, Rockwell International and Xerox.

According to Conference Committee Chair Kelly Irwin, a UCSB senior majoring in business-economics and law, the conference is important because it will help direct those business students who are unsure of where their career choice is taking them.

"The conference is great because it will give students insight into the business world that they wouldn't get in school," she said. "Students don't get this information from their classes."

The event will primarily be attended by UCSB business-economics students, although local community members and high schools have expressed interest in participating, she said.

In addition to presentations by business executives, conference attendees will be able to participate in a panel discussion with business school representatives from UC Berkeley, UC Riverside, UC Irvine, the University of Southern California and the Monterey Institute of International Studies.

Other discussions will be lead by UCSB Career Center specialists, graduate students and professional advertising firm representatives. The presentations will focus on women in business, interviewing skills and how to handle two careers.

"We're very excited about this program's potential because of the large numbers of business students there are at this campus," said Alumni Association Director of Student Relations Kyle Hoffman, the conference's advisor.

"The neat thing about the conference is that students will be able to talk to alumni that were once in their shoes and are now successful," Hoffman added.

Conference registration begins at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at Buchanan Hall, with a $5 charge. A reception will conclude the conference.

MEETING

 draft in a two-hour meeting that has yet to be scheduled.
 Pending student and administrative approval, the policy will await acting Chancellor Daniel Aldrich's approval, as well as the agreement of university legal counsel. If all goes as planned, UCSB may have a new racial harassment policy sometime in Spring Quarter, Lawson said. The change could be extended to the general UCSB regulations, although a policy applicable to faculty must be approved by the Academic Senate, she explained.

The establishment of a UCSB Cultural Center, demanded at the last CSAR meeting, was also discussed. Educational Opportunity Assistant Director Hymon Johnson said the possibility of its establishment is a definite reality.

While construction or establishment of a cultural center may take time to gain approval, Johnson suggested the Cafe Interim as a temporary location. Results are pending administrative response to a letter that Johnson has written on the issue.

In other business, United Front Coalition Chair Jaime Acton, a member of CSAR, reported on the progress of the push for ethnic and gender studies requirements.

Although the Academic Senate's Committee on Educational Planning and Academic Policy unanimously approved a resolution to promote ethnic awareness and understanding in undergraduate education, Acton said the legislation is weak.

"We think the administration should take a stand (to encourage the implementation of an ethnic studies requirement)," he urged. "The chancellor and administration should show us support... written support."

According to Acton, the establishment of such a requirement is essential when looking to the future of California's population. "(Minorities) will be the majority of people in the state and we still won't know how it is to be Afro-American ... Asian ... Chicano ... Latino ... or how it is to be Native American."

Daily Nexus Editor In Chief William Diepenbrock also spoke at the meeting, addressing CSAR members' concerns about minority coverage and the sensitivity of newspaper staff to minority issues. Concern arose when a recently published column omitted Afro-American Astronaut Ronald McNair as part of the space shuttle Challenger's crew and the paper failed to run a prompt correction.

Calling attention to a Feb. 8 dialogue, where members of CSAR met with the Daily Nexus Editorial Board to discuss changes in the paper they felt necessary, Diepenbrock explained that efforts to enhance cultural concern have been made. "You can't guarantee to change people, as you probably know," he said. "But you could encourage people to be sensitive."

Responding to CSAR concerns about lack of minority coverage and staff representation, Diepenbrock said approximately one-fourth of Daily Nexus coverage has been on minority issues during Winter Quarter.

Lessons to Be Learned From the Vietnam War

John C. Muir

These are my opinions. Other veterans of Vietnam, and the other conflicts we have engaged in around the world, may disagree. Many have seen the elephant, few ever view it exactly the same way.

There's a lot of talk floating around these days about flexing our collective muscles, about getting tough on terrorism (particularly inappropriate in view of the recent events in the White House basement and other interesting places), and about standing firm on Nicaragua. Speaking as a veteran of the war in Vietnam, I'd like to pass on what I believe are some of the more important lessons I learned about tough, about terrorism, about death.

Firstly, it is entirely possible, perhaps inevitable, for both sides to be wrong; secondly, seldom, make that never, will the rhetoric match the reality; and thirdly, when we fight against something, rather than for something, we are treading on treacherous ground.

Our motives upon entering into the Vietnam conflict were exemplary. We, as a nation, genuinely wanted to help the people of South Vietnam maintain their freedom. Its possible, even probable, that there were more cynical, more "geo-political," motives, but as a society, our belief in ourselves dictated that our motivation for this most extreme action be predicated on love. By that I mean the kind of love that Bob Kerrey (former Governor of

Frederick Douglass

Dr. Ivan Van Sertina of Rutgers University takes a longer view of Black History that exceeds the 300 or so years of slavery. In his book "They Came Before Columbus: The African Presence in Ancient America," published in 1976, Van Sertina contends that black Africans came to the Americas as early as 800 B.C., that they ruled Egypt in the 25th Dynasty, that they voyaged across the Atlantic long before Columbus or the Vikings. Evidence supporting Van Sertina: similarity of scripts and language patterns found in the Americas to those of African cultures, stone heads and terra cottas depicting Negroid features such as the distinctive kink and curl of African hair, new pyramid evidence, portraits in stone of 10 to 40 tons, paper from wood, north/south direction of major construction, the Mali and Songhai empires of Africa bounded to the Atlantic where ocean currents brought anything caught to America. The Olmec civilization located in the La Veta, Mexico area has just too many significant African related relics to be coincidental in the view of Dr. Van Sertina and offers many new challenges intellectually.

Closer to home, Americans have enjoyed the addition of Alex Haley's "Roots," which served to render a more vivid historic perspective. Traditionally Black History Month stems from the idea Dr. Carter G. Woodson and the National Historical Association who first observed Negro History Week in 1926. Black men and women landed in Jamestown, Virginia in 1619, one year prior to the Pilgrims.

This observance hopefully causes recognition by every American to the 400-year presence of the Black Americans' roots in America that precede George Washington and whose labors, blood, sweat, and tears are Nebraska and Vietnam Veteran) speaks of when he says that love of nation, love of family, even love of self must be the primary motivating force behind war. When this motivational basis breaks down, as it did in Vietnam, the situation becomes immediately untenable. Along with many others to come, one very basic problem developed right away — if we were supposed to be fighting the North Vietnamese, why did we invade South Vietnam? Herein lies the beginning of the problem faced by most of the American fighting forces. The whole situation just didn't make sense. Even to the 18 and 19 year olds who were expected to fight it, the very premise upon which the war was based was totally illogical. Everytime we tried to impose some semblance of logic and order onto the overall picture we came up against the same thing — we couldn't figure out what the hell was supposed to be going on. I'm talking here in a more or less global context of inconsistencies of policy. On an individual level war never makes sense. It is the ultimate in collective insanity.

about, were not, and are not nice people. They are dedicated to the principle that the end justifies the means — thinking which allowed, even dictated, that terror and lies and good old fashioned torture function as their methods of choice. For us, as young people sent into a cauldron of insanity, the real problem developed when, with the best of motives, remember, we started to "fight fire, with fire." Then it simply became impossible to tell one side from the other, just as today the justification for the U.S. re-instituting the manufacture of chemical/biological weaponry is, "The other side has the stuff, so we gotta have it too."

Where then, is the moral division that allows for our superiority? Which side is wearing which hat? It became obvious to many of us, any who cared to look, that the chaos, the destruction, that we were visiting upon the people we were supposed to help, was impossible to justify in any way. We were being asked to burn down Vietnam in order to save it. You can ask a lot of the average American soldier, but you can't ask him to suspend the basic belief system he depends upon to sustain himself, or he will break down. You can ask him to fight for love, you can't ask him to fight against an imagined, or even a real threat of falling dominoes.

Speaking from my own experience, I learned in Vietnam that it matters not at all to the victim whether the bullet that killed him or her came from the left or right, north or south, east or west; whether it was made in Belgium, Yugoslavia, Vladivostok, or Stamford, Conn.; whether it was fired by a patriot, a traitor, a saint or a sinner. Dead is Dead. Having been raised in the best cowboy buckeroo tradition of movie "flesh wounds" and apple pie heroism this realization came as a complete surprise and a very unwelcome shock as I saw young men I knew lying in their own feces and blood and crying for Mother as a result of a gunshot or shrapnel wound.

I had been told, and had no reason to doubt, that there was glory to be had in the pursuit of pride — that war was a true rite of passage for young Americans and, in order to really be a man, I had to participate in some way. Well I participated. I saw the lie, I lived the lie, I can see the lie in action still. We lost 40 people in Grenada. Forty young men died for a political photo opportunity that any competent police force could have handled without firing a shot; Grenada is the lie. Rambo is the lie, Chuck Norris is the lie, GI Joe is the lie. War "toys," is an obscene contradiction in terms, even when its the grownups that are playing with them.

If we must defend ourselves, so be it. But let's do it with our eyes open, understanding what we are asking our young people to do. Killing is the overt part of war. Life after the killing can be equally bad. Living with what we have done has caused more Vietnam veterans to commit suicide since the end of the war than died fighting it. There are no easy answers, but one thing stands clear. If I and my brothers and sisters had known what to expect, the real story, it wouldn't have been any easier to do but it might have been easier to live with afterward.

Understand that there is no clean war. When we sell arms to Iran in some vain, and in vain, attempt to make the president look tough, we must then consider very carefully the 50,000 who have died in the Persian Gulf war since those weapons arrived. They're only Iraqi and Iranian grunts, cannon fodder. Having been cannon fodder myself, perhaps I am a bit more sensitive to their plight than would normally be the case, but I want you to be aware of them too. Just grunts, yes, but you can become one of them with lightening quickness — all the peasant grunts, the poor farmers caught in the middle, the refugees fleeing for their lives, the children who know no laughter. These are what war is all about, no glory, no heroes, only survivors.

I, and many other veterans of all of America's wars, feel a deep responsibility to you, the young people who may be called upon to fight the next war. That responsibility is to tell you the truth.

War is a damning thing, to those who fight it and to those who send them to fight. If we, as a people, ever find it necessary to wage war then let it be with eyes wide open and focused on goals that we will be proud to explain to our children.

Better yet, learn to wage peace as well as we wage war.

The Reader's Voice

Oppressed

Editor, Daily Nexus:

When a people is being oppressed, it is our responsibility as human beings to try everything possible to help them. The Jews in the Soviet Union live with the constant fear of the KGB. The Jews in the Soviet Union aren't allowed to practice their religion or teach Hebrew openly, and they have resorted to secret, underground schools in order for the Jewish religion to be taught to the children. Once the secret institutions are discovered by the KGB, these Jews lose their jobs and live in constant surveillance of the KGB. With the loss of a job, even a highly educated university professor has the choice of either acquiring a menial job or going to jail as it is illegal to be unemployed in Russia. Why don't they leave? They try, however, once they apply for a visa to leave the country they are harassed, tormented, and immediately fired from their jobs. These people are called refuseniks. We know of over 15,000 cases of refuseniks, some of whom have been waiting for 15 years for a visa. As free Americans, we can help these Soviet Jews by writing letters to our government and the Soviet Union, participating in rallies and protests like the one on Thursday at Storke Plaza, and by marching in front of Soviet Councils. Continued pressure on the Soviet government is necessary. Every letter, rally and march helps. Be actively involved in important matters. If you believe in freedom, I urge you to take action for the Jews of the Soviet Union and others who are much less fortunate than us. If you don't take action for the sake of others, who will take action for you?

Absurd Ads

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Jesus Christ! Has anyone noticed the blatant fascism in the personals section of the Nexus? "Looking for a few good men/women ... ensuring the survival of the JEWISH people."

I have no moral, religious or ethical qualms against Jewish people — at least anymore than I do against Christians — but this is crap. This is absurd. Shall we run ads asking for a few good, blond-haired, blue-eyed men/women to ensure the survival of the WHITE, ARIAN race? Of course not.

If we look at history, we will find the core of past (and present) fascist thought firmly ingrained in ads like these. I wish they would stop.

First in Black Achievements

(Editor's Note: In honor of Black History Month, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity will sponsor "First in Black Achievements," chronicling the struggle of Afro-Americans and their contributions to American society. The series will continue throughout February.)

The first doctor in the world to perform a successful operation on the human heart was Dr. Daniel Hale Williams, a Negro. He was born in Holidaysburg, Pennsylvania, in 1856. In 1883, he graduated from the medical school of Northwestern University but stayed there as an anatomy instructor for four years.

Dr. Williams' life is a long list of "firsts." He was the first man to introduce a training program for Negro nurses. He was the practical dreamer whose plans led to the founding of the world's first interracial hospital (Provident in Chicago), an institution that served all races in the mixed community in which it was founded. Dr. Williams served on the staff of Provident Hospital. He was the first Negro on the Illinois State Board of Health, and a founder and first vice president of the National Medical Association. He was elected in 1913 as the first Negro Fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

On July 9, 1893, a man was rushed to Provident Hospital with a stab wound in the chest. Dr. Williams opened his chest, found the pericardial sac, emptied it of blood, and successfully sutured it. Almost overnight Dr. Williams brought fame to the hospital and to himself as one of the outstanding surgeons in the world.

"History is the scaffold upon which personal and group identities are constructed. Black history is important because people need a sense of history in order to make history and without a historical perspective and sensibility, an oppressed people cannot respect themselves!"

Delta rush before, although apparently only the one complaint has been formally filed.

In a Feb. 11 letter to the Daily Nexus, UCSB sophomore Lauren Ekerling described what she felt were discriminatory events that occurred during rush.

"After my interview I overheard two of the Tri-Delta alumni talking about one of the girls," Ekerling said. "One of them said to the other, 'Oh look, this girl is Jewish.' The other one replied, 'Well, we are not supposed to discriminate.' I was so hurt that I didn't even check to see if I was invited back."

Tri-Delta representatives said if the offensive remarks were made, they did not represent the views of any member involved with the selection process.

"You can't take the personal feelings of two women, who just happened to be there helping us out, and impress them against the whole sorority," Tri-Delta chapter President Christin Mastelotto said.

Ekerling also claimed that although a few Jewish women may have "slipped through" Tri-Delta's selection process they will soon be recognized as being minorities.

Ekerling's letter frustrated Tri-Delta members. "We were shocked; I didn't even realize the diversity of our pledge class until after I read the letter. I would say that out of the 85 members of the pledge class 15 to 20 are Jewish," Mastelotto said.

Junior Jill Witte, who was not accepted by the sorority, said she also felt anti-Semitic sentiment during rush.

"I happened to be wearing a necklace with Hebrew letters around my neck and they let me know how they felt," she said. "All of my friends who were wearing anything symbolizing that they were Jewish also felt that they were discriminated against."

"I felt they had a notion of who they wanted, and those weren't Jewish. But they had to pick a couple so people would not think that they were discriminating."

Another woman who participated in the Tri-Delta rush said she called the Activities Planning Center and anonymously expressed similar concerns. APC adviser Mary Beth Callahan confirmed that the call was placed, but would not comment on what was said.

The woman was offended at her placement in a Tri-Delta interview group with two Asians and a black woman. "I realized what they were doing," she said. "They weren't planning on accepting any of us. They didn't ask us about ourselves, but only spoke to us about finances."

"I heard that the Tri-Deltas were anti-Semitic at UCLA and after my interview for this new chapter, I knew they would carry over this prejudice here. I had to call and complain."

One Jewish member of the sorority, who also wished to remain anonymous, defended the chapter's diversity.

"I was at first apprehensive about rushing because of the rumors at UCLA," she said. "But after being chosen as a pledge I met many other Jewish young women. This chapter preaches diversity and we are starting off fresh with certain values, not biased like UCLA might have been."

Tri-Delta Field Representative Susan Turdera claims that religion has no bearing on the evaluation of the potential pledges.

"What we look for is personality, scholarship and leadership," she said. "We don't care what religion they are. We have 120 chapters with members of all different religions. We had to choose 85 girls out of 420. We were looking to establish the most diverse group possible."

Pacific	6	11	.353	10	16	.385
Fresno St.	3	13	.187	8	19	.296

Here are some of the highlights:

— Off a steal, Gaucho forward Brian Vaughns (game-high 23 points) sets the tone early by converting a coast-to-coast reverse slam, bringing an exuberant crowd of 4,326 to its feet. Next time down court, Vaughns hits a 10-foot jumper, giving the Gauchos an 8-7 lead. From there, UCSB never trails.

— These are UCSB's fans. This is 49er forward John F. Hoffman, II, affectionately nicknamed Elvis and Fonzie by the crowd, due to his slick hair-do. Hoffman tries to silence the crowd, which is yelling "Ayyyyy," by hitting a three-pointer with the score at 21-10. He misses.

— Now in the second half, Gaucho guard Carrick DeHart (18 points) cans a three-pointer to put UCSB ahead, 39-28. And here he is again with back-to-back three-pointers, launched from somewhere near Storke Plaza. Score: 55-40.

— This is Brian Shaw (19 points, 12 rebounds, seven assists). He likes to pass to Vaughns. Here's a no-look pass to Vaughns for a two-footer. Here's an alleyoop slam to Vaughns. Score: 64-44. This next pass by Shaw isn't a repeat, you can tell because Vaughns slams this alleyoop down with one hand.

"Shaw had a tremendous game passing the ball," Gaucho Coach Jerry Pimm said.

Shaw, who scored nine points in his previous two games, also had a good time shooting the ball. "They were playing me real tight," Shaw said, "so I was able to drive a few times. I just took what they gave me."

Meanwhile, Vaughns, who scored 21 points in UCSB's 81-77 loss at Long Beach State earlier this month, was on a mission. "I don't feel we should have lost that game (at Long Beach)," he explained. "There was no way they were going to stop me tonight."

DeHart's sentiments exactly. "When you're playing with guys like this, you can't have anything but confidence," he said. "I can't let them down."

"After DeHart hit those three three-pointers," 49er Coach Ron Palmer began, "we were desperately trying to put the ball in the basket."

Desperate times did bring desperate measures, but not baskets. The 49ers shot 35 percent from the floor, while they hit one-of-eight shots from three-point range.

The Gauchos, meanwhile, hit 50 percent from the field, with 61 percent accuracy in the second half. After being outrebounded, 19-18, in the first half, the Gauchos, who rank first in the PCAA with a +6.1 rebound margin, cleaned the boards in the second half, 21-13.

Pimm was obviously pleased, but he said the Gauchos still have a lot of work ahead. "We still haven't played the perfect game, and we're going to strive to play it. We're going to keep working to play better."

Gauchos Host Final Home Game

UCSB hosts its final home game Saturday night versus Utah State (8-9, 15-14) at 7:30.

Should the Gauchos get passed the Aggies, UCSB will finish the season 12-2 at home, 8-1 in PCAA games, and the Gauchos will be assured of their first winning season in 11 years.

Seniors Khris Fortson and Kevin Kenney will be honored before the game.

Right now, the Gauchos are working toward the PCAA Tournament. With the win, UCSB lifted its PCAA record to 9-7, 14-11 overall. Should the Gauchos lose their last two games, they can finish no worse than fifth place.

The 49ers, who have dropped six straight games, fell to 7-10 and 12-17. They remain in eighth place.

Lacrossers Host Division Newcomer Sonoma State

By Mary Loomam
Assistant Sports Editor

With two division games on tap this weekend, the UCSB lacrosse team will attempt to recapture the superior form they had just two weeks ago when they defeated the defending league champion Whittier Poets. Saturday at 1 p.m. the Gauchos will face division newcomers Sonoma State, and at noon on Sunday UCSB will play host to UC Berkeley.

Sonoma State, in their first year of competition in the Northern A Division of the Western Collegiate Lacrosse League, come to UCSB with a relatively mysterious bag of tricks. Presently 3-2 in the league, Sonoma supposedly has a number of good midfield players that excel in transitions, although few actual statistics are available on the team.

Sonoma does however boast a few things that the Gauchos will keep in mind. "Sonoma is well coached and we are expecting a physical game," UCSB Coach John Knapp remarked. "They have a couple of guys that are on the top of the league scoring list."

This shouldn't be a problem for the Gauchos as they will have Mike Latees defending their cage in front of a home crowd. While the fans do a superb job of distracting the opposition, Latees does even better, denying a great deal of penetration of the Gaucho net.

Latees, a recent transfer from Boston College, currently leads the league as a goaltender. While recording 48 saves, Latees has allowed only 17, good enough for a .73 average. At the other end of the field, two Gauchos are in the top scoring spots of the WCLL.

Senior midfielder Pete Reich has scored 16 goals and assisted his teammates on six occasions, while attackman Max Kemsley has recorded 16 goals of his own in addition to one assist.

Sunday at noon, Berkeley will bring their 3-1 record to the lacrosse field. After having lost to Whittier 12-9 earlier this season, the Bears will attempt to make up some ground in order to keep post-season hopes alive. Coach Knapp believes Berkeley will arrive with a great amount of intensity and remain "really high" throughout the game.

Two tallies in the winning column would be a welcome sight to the Gauchos, especially after a disappointing overtime 11-10 loss to San Diego State last Saturday (See LACROSSE, p.10)

UCSB Ski Team Heads to National Championships

For the sixth straight year, the UCSB snow ski team will compete in the National Collegiate Ski Association Championships. Scheduled for March 2-6 at Crested Butte in Colorado, five Gaucho women will attempt to rank UCSB in National standings. The highest ranking UCSB has received was eleventh in the country.

In their last competition, on Feb 14-16 in Mammoth, the Gaucho squad had an impressive weekend, winning the giant slalom event and tying with UCSD for second place in the slalom race. The giant slalom victory awarded the women's squad the conference title which granted them a berth in the national competition.

Team captain Marguerite Naillon will lead the squad and will be joined by Mary Bauer, who currently ranks first as a Gaucho and third in the Southern California league. Nationally, Bauer is in the top thirty skiers. Freshman Gina Thompson, fourth in the league, will be expected to help as will Karen Stutz and Kim Averitt.

The next competition for both the men's and women's squad will be on March 7-8, in Gold Mine, Ca.

Top-ranked Texas Longhorns Host 12th-ranked UCSB Sluggers

By Scott Channon
Contributing Editor

Does the UC Santa Barbara baseball team have respect? Whether or not the Gauchos win any of their three games at top-ranked Texas this weekend, the answer has to be yes.

"I have spent seven years here trying to build this program into something," Gaucho Coach Al Ferrer said. "To think of playing Texas seven years ago would have been ludicrous."

The Longhorns, a traditional powerhouse, are 10-1 this year, while the Gauchos enter with a 7-6-1 record, ranked 12th in the nation.

"We have established ourselves over the past few years," Ferrer said. "So basically what we're doing is taking seven years of work and we're going to display it. I'm terrified, as always, that we're not going to display our true level because of the intimidation factor."

Last year, the Gauchos ran into the "Paradise Factor." After a comparable start to this season last year, the Gauchos flew over to Hawaii for a three-game series against the Rainbows. The Gauchos, plagued by errors, lost all three games, and they weren't very close.

"We have to cut our mistakes," Ferrer said. "Our defense will be the most important factor, then our pitching, then our hitting. Because of that experience last year, I'm pretty hopeful for this series." Since the Longhorns are considered to be the best offensive team in the nation, UCSB's pitching will undoubtedly be tested.

16. New Orleans	6-1
17. Arizona	11-5
18. South Carolina	0-0
19. Baylor	5-0
20. Texas A&M	8-1

Texas rightfielder Scott Coolbaugh hit .336 last season with seven home runs and 52 RBIs. Kevin Garner, a designated hitter, hit .314 with 10 home runs and 62 RBIs.

Texas is led by junior pitcher Mark Petkovsek, who posted a 12-1 record last season.

"Truly anything can happen this weekend," Ferrer said. "If we stay poised and the kids don't let all the surroundings get to them, I think it will be a very good series."

And the chances of winning the series?

"We're going there to win, not for any other reason," Ferrer admitted. "Once you get into the Top-20 teams, it's a matter of whose going well at what time."

Gaucho Notes: In a Texas newspaper last week, an article explained that the Gauchos would be Texas' strongest competition yet this season, and its strongest West Coast competition all year... UCSB rightfielder Joe Kemp currently leads the team hits (.20), runs scored (17), RBIs (17), steals (9) and total bases (29). He has two home runs and is hitting .417. Kemp set a UCSB record earlier this season with five stolen bases... First baseman Greg Vella, batting fourth, and DH Tom Logan, batting fifth, have combined for a .400 batting average (34 of 85). Vella leads the team with three home runs. Logan leads with a .564 on-base percentage... In games they scored in double figures last year, the Gauchos were 21-0. This year, they are 5-0.

KCSB in Texas

KCSB (91.9 FM) will be broadcasting live all three games from Texas this weekend. Today's broadcast begins at 1 p.m., Saturday's at noon, and Sunday's at 11 a.m.

Tony Lopez and Derrick Shirley will be calling all the action.

"We're looking forward to bringing all three games back live to Santa Barbara," Lopez said. "Since Texas is number one, it's probably one of the more important series, prior to league play."

SB Netters Upset Bruins

By Brian Jeffery
Sportswriter

"Upsets occur when everyone is playing well, as we are, and when we are relaxed."

— Kip Brady, 2-25-87

The UCSB men's tennis team pulled off the college tennis upset of the year Thursday, as the Gauchos upset third-ranked UCLA 5-4 on the Bruins' courts. UCLA had drubbed UCSB 9-0 the past two years and the Gauchos came into the match as extreme underdogs.

However, two of the Bruins' top players were sidelined by illness and a third was removed from the line-up for disciplinary reasons.

"As soon as I saw their starting line-up, I knew we would beat them," stated UCSB's number four singles player, Jeff Greenwald. "We were fired up and ready to kick butt."

Following the singles matches, the Gauchos held a surprising 4-2 lead due to wins from the number two singles player, Steve Leier, and the number four through six singles players — Greenwald, Craig Ellison, and Bill Dunkle.

Unfortunately for the Gauchos, who dominated the singles matches, it takes five matches to win a college tennis match. The Gauchos were still one match away from the upset.

"I thought during the break (between singles and doubles matches) that we'd get one of the three doubles matches," number three singles player Scott Morse stated, "and I honestly thought we could take all three. Needless to say, I was a little worried when our first two doubles teams lost."

Following a fired-up UCLA comeback which tied the score at 4-4, all attention focused on the number three doubles match between the Bruins and UCSB's Marc Kreissmann and Craig Ellison. After splitting the first two sets, the Gauchos team quickly found themselves down two services breaks at 3-0 in the third set and dreams of an upset were quickly fading.

From the brink of defeat Ellison and Kreissmann came back and forced a deciding tie breaker at six all in the third set. After winning the first point of the tie breaker, the Gauchos raced to a 7-3 tie breaker win, thus giving UCSB an emotional 5-4 upset.

"There was no way UCLA was going to win this match after all the emotional ups and downs we went through," Greenwald said. "When it got to the third set tie breaker and we were so close to winning, there was no way we weren't going to pull off this upset."

Long Beach State Hosts UCSB Spikers

By Todd Davidson
Sportswriter

The UCSB men's volleyball team could be in for a horrifying evening tonight as they take on Long Beach State in a WIVA matchup in Long Beach. Anyone wondering why this particular match is giving the Gauchos goosebumps could just ask UCSB Head Coach Ken Preston.

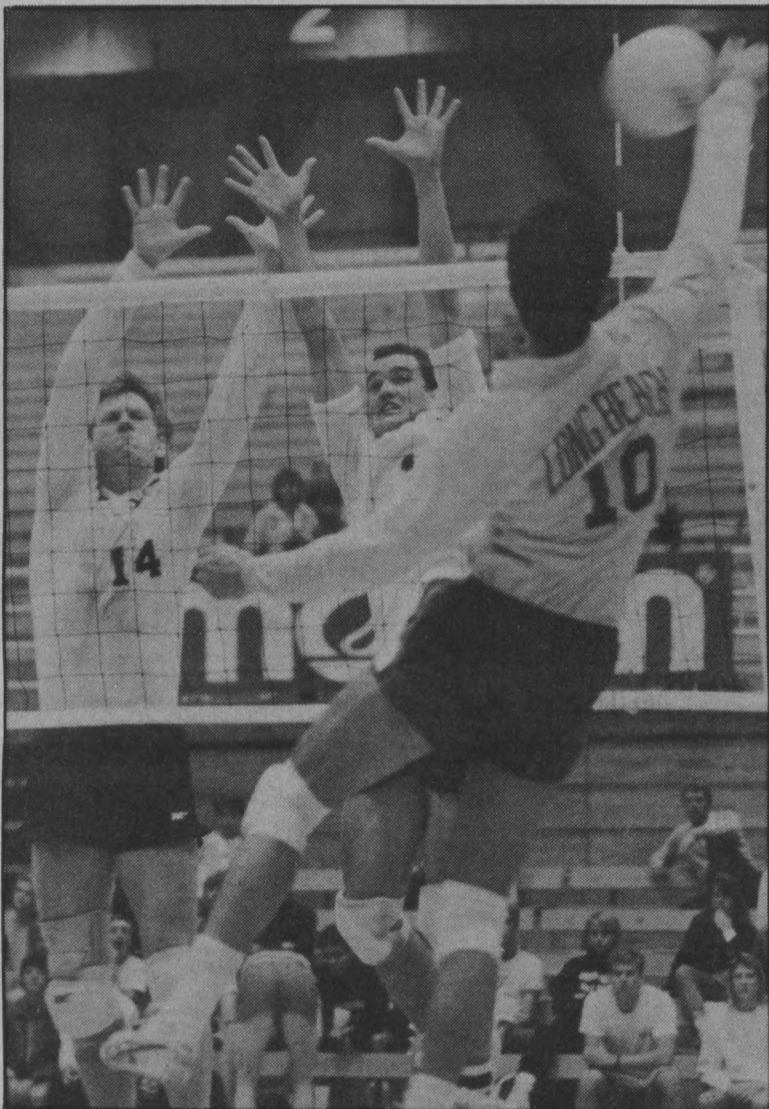

"They're a Jekyll and Hyde type team," Preston said. "They've had a couple of good wins. They beat Stanford (in a WIVA match) and UCLA (in the third-place match of the Michelob Light Collegiate Classic held in the ECen), but they lost at home to Northridge."

By virtue of their demolition of Cal State Northridge last week, the Gauchos, 4-3 in conference and 17-6 overall, should be the favorites this evening. However, one never knows if the 49ers (4-3 and 14-4) will show up as Jekyll or Hyde.

The Gauchos are riding a two-match winning streak, those wins coming against the last place team in the conference (Loyola Marymount) and the third to last place team (Northridge). Tonight's match should offer them a stiffer challenge and give them a better idea of how they match up against a team with a similar record to theirs.

Preston believes the key for the 49ers is how Ali Tazerouni, their talented middle hitter/blocker and outside hitter. "He (Tazerouni) is a good player. He's about 6-6 and he can jump real well. It (Long Beach's fate) depends on him. If he plays well, they play well."

Tazerouni leads the 49ers in kills with 86 and an average of 4.1 per game. Andreas Koch is another offensive threat, with 59 kills and 2.36 per game. Koch also has 14 solo blocks and 26 block assists.

KEITH MADIGAN/NEXUS

The UCSB men's volleyball team takes on Long Beach State in a rematch tonight on the 49ers court.

John Brajevic has 48 kills at a 2.7 per game clip for the 49ers.

The Gauchos have to make up for the absence of Lee Nelson (cut toe) and Scott Drake (back problems) with solid matches from the other regulars. As he has been all season, John "Klubber" Kosty will be counted on to lead the offense.

Unlike their last two matches, tonight's figures to go beyond three games. "We don't expect this to be over in three games," Preston said. "We have to be prepared to go five."

After all, you never know what will happen against Long Beach State.

night. "We definitely have a better frame of mind going into these games," Knapp claimed. "We will have a little more verbal, positive, thinking approach this weekend instead of being too relaxed before the games."

"I want to get that killer instinct back," Knapp continued, "It would be great to get a couple of wins. I'm sure we'll be ready mentally and I just hope that we keep up the intensity."

About 24 percent of the paper's staff are minorities, he added.

"Our minority coverage has faced many of the same problems as our coverage of other areas," Diepenbrock said later. "We're working to improve it. It can always improve."

While CSAR members proposed establishment of a minority consultant as a means of ensuring accurate presentation of minority concerns, such an idea "frightens" members of the Editorial Board, Diepenbrock said.

Their (CSAR) description of the post is basically the same as that for our current editors," he explained after the meeting. "They wanted this person to review articles before print, but that can amount to prior restraint, which is an abridgement of our

First Amendment rights."

"There are currently minority students in editorial posts and given the large percentage of minorities on staff, that number will only increase," he added.

In efforts to pursue funding for reinstatement of a Daily Nexus scholarship for low-income students on staff, Diepenbrock has scheduled a meeting with Vice Chancellor of Student and Community Affairs Edward Birch.

Because of past experiences with "staff burnouts," Diepenbrock reported he seeks not one, but several scholarships to be awarded to students in need, regardless of race.

CSAR member Helen Quan expressed disappointment after the meeting. "They (UCSB administrators) didn't do their homework. The only person that did their homework was Bill (Diepenbrock)."

Emphasizing the importance of working to combat racism at UCSB and the lack of administrative response, Quan questioned a commitment Birch said he had to "do something about it" at the group's previous meeting.

He did not attend the Wednesday meeting. "The fact that he didn't show up frustrates me," she said. "They (administrators) knew very well that we demand their commitment."

"(Today) no one knew what they were supposed to do," Quan continued. "All the heat was placed on ... people that don't have a lot of power. That really discredited them.... We're students, we pay as much as everybody else, they should meet our demands."

Though the last meeting of the quarter, Quan assured the Cafe Interim audience of more than 50 people that CSAR would continue its fight against racism at UCSB.

burned," he said.

Other students talked about reporting errors in the Nexus. One error involved a faulty map of South America printed Wednesday, in which some of the countries were left out and the borders were wrong.

Managing Editor Heidi Soltesz apologized for the error, explaining that the map had been copied directly out of a published text, and thus was not looked over closely for errors.

A few of the students had compliments for the Nexus. Freshman Renee Boggess attended the forum to give some positive reinforcement to the personnel.

"I'd basically like to let you know that there are people out there who like the Nexus," she said.

Although the Nexus is not planning another forum in the near future, Contributing Editor Steve Elzer stressed that the paper is still interested in public comment.

"Just because people didn't turn out, that doesn't preclude them from coming in at any time and offering their concerns," Elzer said.

Arellanes had hoped for more participation in the forum, and was unsure how to interpret the small turnout. "In putting on these forums I'd hoped for more than hearing individual demands. I wanted to have debates on the purpose of the paper, and on philosophical issues," Arellanes said.
