Hosting the Folks: A Brave, New World

By Reynard Van Nguyen

When parents and other relations come to town to witness your graduation, they may be inclined to do something nice for you while they're here to celebrate your inauguration into the real world. Encourage them. Have them take you out, have a good time. That kind of thing.

The odd thing about this summer ritual is that while the graduate may be the star for the day or weekend, the guest of honor if you will, he or she is also the host, the one who knows the sights and smells and savors of the area, the one who must do the entertaining. This "guest-host" status goes beyond what Joan Rivers did on "The Tonight Show" before she gave it up to sink into obscure mediocrity; it conveys a responsibility which shows that, even if you told them you never went out because you were at home studying, you have a clue about your surroundings — enough to play guide.

The key is to know what kind of folks you've got for yourself. Some parents may want to see college life verite, to experience Santa Barbara, Goleta and Isla Vista as you, the student, did. For these people, start the evening watching the sun go down while the couches light up on the streets of I.V. After breathing in a few lungfuls of burning synthetic upholstery, take them back to your apartment, handing out lots of change on the way, and serve them whatever's left in the fridge. Add lots of ketchup. Say things like, "Yes, this does cost me $325 a month. No, the roaches come free."

Not everyone will want this kind of treatment, however. Or survive it. Many folks will want to experience the local fare that you never had: eating out and not getting a burger, sub, burrito or pizza, for example. Have them take you to a place that is near the sea but doesn't have an apartment complex between it and the shore. Downtown has a number of such places, and you can watch the German tourists ride on their four-wheeled pedal cruisers. Say things like, "Hey, why aren't they taking our order at the register? Hey, hey, isn't that my bike chassis welded to that bench?"

Take your family on a cruise down State Street. Explain that all the bartenders know your name because they're all T.A.s you once had; they're just working their way through grad school. Learn where the art museum is beforehand so you can show that you know where it is, implying that you've been there. Same thing with Earthling Books. While miles away from campus, it has that intellectual air that people expect, although it doesn't sell shot glasses with Greek letters on them. Say things like, "Hey, I bought this used for $35.99; they have it here for $12.50. Must be on sale, huh?" It shows you've been reading.

The most important thing is to have fun — the good, clean kind that you will be increasingly limited to as an adult. Maybe even turn things around and have your parents show you what they do for entertainment in the real world. Say things like, "I love you, Mom and Dad. Is this the rest of my life?"

Avoid Bad Gifts

By Fred Farnsworth

Nothing's worse than a bad graduation gift. In high school, for example, all my friends got really cool stuff for graduation: cars, trips to Europe or Hawaii, things like that.

I got luggage. (Or, in the words of Charlie Brown, "I got a rock.") Nothing sends that subtle message of "Get out of the house, kid" like a nice set of luggage. And this wasn't just normal luggage, either. This was the Suitcase from Hell.

About as big as a good-sized desk, this unholy valise could probably serve as an emergency shelter or apartment. There have been occasions when I couldn't use this suitcase because it's so big it won't fit in somebody's auto trunk. This is a really big suitcase. Once again, the subtle subtext was still evident: "Not only do we want you out of the house, but we want you to take as much of your stuff as possible with you." The gift that keeps on giving.

Now, five years later, while I am enjoying the irony of using that very same suitcase to move my unemployed self back into my parents' house, I have begun to worry about what sort of graduation gifts await me this time around.

Of course, the best of all possible gifts would be cash, but I don't foresee that happening. Instead, I can imagine such joys as some nice, sensible appliances for when I finally get that apartment. I have a lot of things in my future to worry about, but whether or not I'll be able to purée really isn't toward the top of the list. Along the same lines, new pots and pans might seem like a constructive idea, but since all I've learned to cook at college is Top Ramen, I don't see any gourmet dinner parties in my immediate future.

Another nice, sensible gift would be a new suit to wear to all of those great menial Mcjob interviews I have to look forward to. Hooray.

Actually, pretty much anything would be OK, as long as it's not luggage.

Give the Perfect Item for Global Thinking! Gear to Stuff w/Stuff

By Cindo Bonaface

Is your son or daughter graduating? Is that fact provoking a conflicting combination of pride and dread? The pride comes from the awareness that your child has achieved a distinction that, despite some people's pretenses to the contrary, places him or her in the educated elite. The dread comes from not having any idea what happens next.

Nevertheless, this ceremonial rite of passage often necessitates thoughts about gifts to commemorate the event. These being the 1990s, the diploma is often nothing more than a receipt for the thousands of dollars flushed into the university system, so something else is sometimes needed to make graduation day a special occasion.

Ask a recent graduate what he or she would like to unwrap after the traditional tassel toss, and likely answers might include: a job, a car, their debts paid, a plane ticket to some exotic destination, their room back. However, such things are not possible for every parent. Job and car are usually outside of parental control, but if travel is on your young grad's mind and you don't relish the idea of them moving back home, there is hope.

The perfect gift for this occasion is luggage. Just roll that word off your tongue and you'll see what I mean. Luggage. If the offspring of your loins desires adventure on another continent, there needs to be something to carry stuff around in. Something less expensive, and more suggestive, than airfare.

A good set of luggage can inspire a person to achieve in a way that a nice watch or stock certificate cannot. Luggage is to be packed, toted, used. If your graduate moves back home, brand-new luggage may remind them that life is meant to be lived on the move, travelling from place to place. Or at least getting off the damn couch.

Luggage may also provide extra impetus toward job-hunting. An empty suitcase is just begging to be filled. A full duffel bag is pleading to be taken to far-away locales. This cannot happen without income, however. Just picture your cynical former student being laughed into the employment office by the derisive presence of a frame pack. It could happen.

The perspective needed to truly arrive at adulthood can also be gained through a good set of carryables. A gift of luggage says, "Yes, I love you and want you to succeed. But I'm not paying for a trip to Greece, and if you really want to go, you'll work to get there on your own."

Hopefully, the message received will be: "Yes, I shouldn't depend on my folks for fulfilling my needs. But this beautiful Samsonite shows that they care."

Now that we've gone over the reasons behind giving the gift that keeps on trekking, let's examine the different types of luggage available. If your grad is an outdoorsy type, perhaps the ticket is a good rucksack or frame pack. To carry one's important worldly possessions on one's back is the dream of some Kerouac-inspired would-be wanderers with a fresh geography of English degree.

For the economics, po-

 litics or law major, a garment bag may be the appropriate gift. Imagine the dreams of jetting off to important meetings, being sure to pack and protect the official wear necessary for the tough world of finance and negotiation. A briefcase is dandy, but also quite bland.

An art major might enjoy a pack with lots of sealable pockets, suitable for stowing away paints, inks or film without the worry of leakage. A bio major may enjoy this kind of thing for collected specimens, a chem student may like separating volatile substances while on the road.

The truth is, pockets are important to everyone. When encouraging a young adult to strike out on his or her own, it is important to emphasize organization — keeping things in their proper place. When it's time to turn in that old bookbag for some serious gear, it is still important to have a place for pens, pencils and calculators. Contrary to what you might hear, the life of the mind doesn't necessarily disappear after walking down that aisle in the funny clothes.

Furthermore, the potential traveller should be encouraged to look upon each pocket as the repository for a unique souvenir leading to entertaining stories for the next generation. Speaking of the next generation, if it is at all possible, get the best luggage on the market. A properly broken in carrier is a treasure to behold, and a pleasure to wear/clutch/lug.

If the luggage survives the globetrotting we dream of, it becomes a legend in its own right. Think of the stories: "This hole here? Bullet that ricocheted off the Great Wall in '98 and imbedded itself in my toilet paper. Pack saved my life!"

Perhaps the reality won't be quite so romantic, but why not dream a little? Just be sure you can carry what you need and everything will be OK. Well, tell your kid that anyway.

Unlike many cultures popularly thought of as "primitive," most of the people of the United States have no rite of passage to "adulthood."

That, one supposes, is why we dress up like monks and flay sheep once a year.
