The Rape of a Hero

I knew I wouldn't survive -- Like the weathered stone walls of an ancient castle, my defenses had never been breached.
Yet, as I might,
I couldn't end this engagement My life was that of a magnificent whose drama had to be played to the final stage.

This uneasy feeling was new to Lacking emotion, I fearlessly better men for less than nob without so much as a forethought I had impudently challenged them and rode them euphorically Yet now, my heart beats so in as to break free of the res imposed by my chest.

So I stood there staunch and undaunted, dering the tempest to strike However, with the grace of in an elegant waltz, she came upon me.
Striking lightly under my never touching the skin, until I stood there naked

Like that of an enchanted gently flowing blonde h her soft white shoulder her supple neck.
The serenity of her radi glowed with the light borne forth on a warm And in a cherished moment with a caressing touch she rent my callous
