A.S. Contested on Decision to Spend Capital Reserve Funds

By Amy Collins
Reporter, and
Steven Elzer
Editor In Chief

The Associated Students Judicial Council may have to rule on the appropriate funding source for a $1,780 Legislative Council travel expenditure after controversy erupted Wednesday night when the legislators voted to send seven colleagues and three students to New Jersey to participate in the creation of a nationwide student organization.

The funding question was spurred by a bill that allocates A.S. money for air travel to the National Student Convention at Rutgers University. UCSB participants hope to form a national network that has been compared to the 1960s activist group, Students for a Democratic Society.

However, a wrench was thrown into the Leg Council approval of the bill hours after the vote was passed when council member David Lehr announced he would petition Judicial Council contesting that the funding was sought through an improper account and that the majority of votes required to pass the bill was not reached. Although Leg Council voted to pay for the trip by utilizing funds from a safety account known as Capital Reserves, funds in this account are specifically earmarked for long-term capital improvements, major projects or expenditures with long-term benefits to students, A.S. Executive Director Tamara Scott explained.

The seven Leg Council members who would be attending the trip abstained from voting while the remaining 10 Leg Council members voted on the expenditure. The decision ended in a 5-4 split in favor of funding the trip, with one abstention.

Because an abstention vote carries with the majority, the bill passed, 6-4. However, even though the required two-thirds majority technically works out to 6.66 votes, rather than seven, A.S. Internal Vice President Glenn Fuller chose to round down to six votes necessary to pass the bill, explained Lehr, who believes this was an improper procedure that Judicial Council should investigate.

"For uniformity purposes ... I've been rounding down since the (legislative) law is silent on it. I announced earlier that that was how I was going to do it.... I've been doing it that way all year," Fuller explained.

Teach-In Educates Students About Dangers of CIA-Campus Relations

By Ben Sullivan
Campus Editor

Declaring that universities should maintain independence from governmental agencies that might compromise their educational and altruistic goals, speakers at Thursday's "Teach-In" in front of Cheadle Hall attacked the Central Intelligence Agency, along with the University of California's ties to weapons labs and United States policy in Central America.

"We got this idea (to hold a teach-in) a while ago," Associated Students Student Lobby Annex Director Jaime Acton explained. Acton helped organize the event for the Academic Freedom Defense Project, a group raising money for the legal defense of 36 students arrested in November 1987 during a protest of the appointment of Senior CIA Officer George A. Chritton Jr. to UCSB's political science department.

However, "it was pointed out to us that if we just focused on the CIA ... we're missing a much broader picture, a much larger vision of the federal government in general and their involvement in the university," Acton added.

"We have to start getting some answers to questions as to why the government funds 70 percent of the research on some UC campuses and what kind of impact that has on the university," he said.

Among the speakers opposing the CIA's presence on college campuses was former CIA agent Vern Lyon, who graduated to the position of CIA deputy director of plans in Cuba before resigning on "moral grounds." In addition, while he was an undergraduate at Iowa State University, Lyon was employed by the CIA to infiltrate student groups.

As a senior at Iowa State in 1965, he was contacted by CIA representatives who claimed to be from a company he had turned down for a job offer, Lyon explained to those attending the teach-in. "They told me they had an offer that was so unique that I shouldn't comment on it to my fellow students," he said. "I thought they were talking about big bucks, so I agreed to sign a document saying I wouldn't discuss that offer. I still did not know who it truly represented, but I had signed the document thinking that it would further my career."

"Once I signed the document, they had me," Lyon said.

"Then they told me who they truly represented and why they were on campus.... They explained what they wanted. It was simple — they wanted me to attend all of the student activity groups; they wanted me to get copies of all the literature, pamphlets and handouts of every group on campus," he explained.

"I was given mission directives from time to time that a certain foreign student had made statements about the U.S. involvement in Vietnam and (was asked) what could I find out about him. Could I get his scholastic records? Could I find out who his friends are, how much money does he spend, where does he live? Could I invite him out for a beer? Could I compromise him?"

"The program I started out in later was given an official name in 1967 — it was called 'Operation Chaos....' When it finally ended, supposedly, in 1973, over 30,000 individuals, students, faculty and

Outspoken Author Noam Chomsky to Lecture

Addressing Strife, Foreign Policy

By Jay Hubbard
World News Perspectives

Linguist/philosopher Noam Chomsky, an outspoken political analyst widely considered to be one of the leading intellectuals on the American scene, will present a free public lecture entitled "Persistence and Change in U.S. Foreign Policy: Latin America and the Middle East," tonight at 8 p.m. in UCSB Campbell Hall.

A prolific writer, Chomsky has been regarded as a distinguished scholar for the last two decades. His works include Aspects of Theory and Syntax, Language and Mind, Problems of Knowledge and Freedom, The Political Economy of Human Rights vol. I and II (with E.S. Herman), Towards a New Cold War, Fateful Triangle: The U.S., Israel and the Palestinians and The Chomsky Reader.

In addition, Chomsky has taught linguistics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology since the late fifties and holds honorary degrees from Delhi University in India, Loyola University, Swarthmore College, the University of London and several other institutions, as well as a Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award from the American Psychological Association.

The following question and answer interview is excerpted from a Daily Nexus telephone interview conducted with Noam Chomsky last week.

DN: Officially, you are a linguist, but you have long been involved in the area of American foreign policy. You've written extensively not only on Central America, but Southeast Asia and the Middle East as well. Have you always been interested in international politics?

Chomsky: Well, it's been a long time — 30 years. My first political article was written almost 49 years ago, when I was 10 years old.

DN: How would you respond to your critics, many of whom argue that your views tend to be on the left?

Chomsky: Well, first of all, I wouldn't regard that as criticism. I'd have to know what they mean by being on the left.

DN: They mean being anti-government and opposing American foreign policy in general.

Chomsky: Yes, I'm opposed to the foreign (See CHOMSKY, p.3)

United States and South Korea Will Announce Military Exercise

SEOUL, South Korea — The United States and South Korea announced Thursday they will hold large-scale joint military exercises this spring despite North Korean warnings that war may break out on the peninsula.

Military officials said the "Team Spirit" exercise, an annual event since 1976, will be held in various parts of South Korea from February to early May.

A statement issued simultaneously in Seoul and Washington did not specify the number of troops participating in the exercise but officials said about 200,000 U.S. and South Korean troops will be mobilized.

The exercise will involve about 60,000 U.S. military personnel, including some of the 41,000 troops currently stationed in South Korea, the officials said.

A U.S. Navy battle group consisting of an aircraft carrier and escorting warships will join the exercise along with U.S. Air Force planes and units, they said.

Canada's Supreme Court Strikes Down Restrictive Abortion Law

TORONTO — The Supreme Court of Canada struck down the nation's restrictive abortion law in a split decision Thursday, ruling it unconstitutional and a violation of a woman's right to control her own body.

The 5-2 ruling vindicated abortion crusader Dr. Henry Morgentaler of Toronto, who has been fighting in the courts for 18 years to secure abortion-on-demand for Canadian women.

"Bravo for the Supreme Court of Canada! Bravo for the women of Canada!" Morgentaler told reporters in Ottawa where the verdict was announced.

"It shows that when people organize and fight, no matter what the odds, they can win," said Lynn Lathrop of the Ontario Coalition of Abortion Clinics.

Soviets Scrap Nuclear Facility Over Chernobyl Incident Fears

MOSCOW — Public opposition stemming from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster has forced Soviet authorities to stop building a nuclear power plant near the Black Sea, a Soviet newspaper said.

The report in Komsomolskaya Pravda stressed that the protest was not an isolated incident.

"Twenty operating nuclear plants and almost all of those under construction are the subject of bitter disputes among local residents," it said.

The article said $42 million was wasted when the project was scrapped in Krasnodar, a southern Russian city which was not directly affected by the 1986 Chernobyl accident.

Complaints said the power plant in Krasnodar, 50 miles north of the Black Sea, would have been located in an earthquake-prone area close to a nature preserve and health resorts.

Kenya Will Export 1.2 Million Bottles of Beer to United States

NAIROBI, Kenya — Kenya will export 1.2 million bottles of beer to the United States this year, a Kenya Breweries official said Thursday.

The East African nation has earned more than $402,000 since November 1986 when it introduced its Tusker Premium beer on the U.S. market, said Peter Burugu, the brewery's transport, sales and marketing director.

The beer, which features a trumpeting elephant on its label, sells in the 48 contiguous states, Burugu said.

Kenya has earned $13 million from beer exports in the last three years.

Polygamist Standoff Ends 13th Day; Leader Wounded; One Dead

MARION, Utah — A quick burst of gunfire Thursday ended a tense, 13-day standoff between a polygamist clan and police, killing an officer and seriously wounding the group's ringleader, who was suspected of bombing a Mormon chapel.

The shooting erupted just after dawn as police, who had secretly infiltrated the clan's compound, used a trained dog to try to isolate Addam Swapp and his brother from the log house they had left moments before, officials said.

In the exchange of shots, the dog's police handler was shot in the abdomen and Swapp fell in the snow with bullet wounds in the arm and chest, said John T. Nielsen, state public safety director.

"It is my understanding that the officer was fired upon first, by whom we don't know yet," Nielsen said. He said an FBI agent was shot in the chest, but was unhurt because he was wearing a bulletproof vest.

However, the shots ended moments later and the clan's four other adults and nine children fled from the house in two groups with their arms raised above their heads.

Senate Okays Measure Repealing '75 Abortion-rights Regulations

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Thursday approved a measure that would effectively repeal 1975 regulations designed to prevent discrimination against women who have abortions or want them.

The 56-39 vote came on an amendment to the Civil Rights Restoration Act, a sweeping measure that has been a magnet for controversial issues since it was introduced in 1984 to reverse the effects of a Supreme Court decision limiting the reach of federal anti-discrimination protections.

The abortion amendment sponsored by Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., said nothing in Title IX, the law barring sex discrimination in education, "shall be construed to require or prohibit any person, or public or private entity, to provide or pay for any benefit or service ... related to abortion."

Cases of Infectious Syphilis in U.S. at Highest Level Since 1950

ATLANTA — After four years in decline, infectious syphilis in the United States has risen sharply to its highest rate since 1950 — possibly, federal health researchers say, because of prostitution and a decrease in resources to fight venereal diseases.

Fifty-six percent of all syphilis cases reported last year came from New York City, California and Florida, but "there were impressive increases in other areas as well," said Dr. Robert Rolfs, a national Center for Disease Control specialist in sexually transmitted diseases.

Surgeon General Seeks AIDS Tests for Entire U.S. University

LONDON — U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said Thursday he wanted to screen every student of a major American university this spring to help determine the incidence of AIDS among young adults.

Koop also proposed similar mass AIDS screening at a few high schools in the United States, but said the government had made no decision on either proposal.

Koop's plan for anonymous screening of students could prove controversial. Civil libertarians have argued that anonymous screening is an invasion of privacy and that screening of a limited population could be the forerunner of mandatory nationwide testing.

Two Navy Hornet Jets Collide at Base of the Sierra Mountains

INDEPENDENCE — Two Navy F-18 Hornet jets collided in flight and crashed in flames at the base of the Sierra Nevada mountains Thursday. One pilot parachuted to safety and the other is missing, authorities said.

The two planes from strike fighter Squadron 161 at LeMoore Naval Air Station in Central California were on a training mission when they collided in flight 15 miles southeast of the eastern Sierra town of Independence about 10:20 a.m., said LeMoore spokesman Dennis McGrath.

"One of the pilots ejected safely ... the status of the other pilot is unknown," McGrath said. The pilots' names were withheld until their relatives could be notified, he said.

The single-seat jets plummeted to the ground in flames, said one witness, Mike Duncan, a mechanic at the Inyo County Road Department. He said he didn't see the planes before the crash, but heard an explosion.

"There was a big single ball of fire coming down," Duncan said. "That single ball broke into two balls and from here it looked like maybe a quarter-mile apart, I didn't see a parachute or anything."

Navy Train Crew Ordered Not to Stop if Boarded by Protesters

SAN FRANCISCO — Crew members of the Navy munitions train that maimed protester S. Brian Willson were ordered several times not to stop if demonstrators tried to board, according to a published report on Thursday.

Contrary to previous Navy statements, federal and law enforcement records also revealed the crew saw someone on the tracks while the train moved across Port Chicago Highway from one part of the station to another, according to a copyright story by the Center for Investigative Reporting published in the San Francisco Examiner.

The order not to stop was issued by the crew's supervisor just an hour before Willson was struck by the train and maimed Sept. 1 as he knelt on the tracks to protest arms shipments to Central America, the report said.

However, Navy spokesman Dan Tikalsky downplayed the report about the crew being ordered not to stop and said the information was included in the Contra Costa County Sheriff's report after the incident.

"The Navy report says over and over again ... that the standing rules were that if anyone were to jump on the train that the train was not to stop until it reached federal property," Tikalsky said.

Draining of Selenium-polluted Ponds Begins at Wildlife Refuge

LOS BANOS — Draining selenium-polluted ponds at Kesterson National Wildlife Refuge began Thursday, five years after officials reported concentrations of the element were killing and deforming birds.

Draining Kesterson signals the start of physical work of cleaning up the refuge. The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation is scheduled to open bids Feb. 18 to dig up selenium-tainted soil under the ponds and turn it into a landfill.

But first, the bureau will pump 1,300 acre-feet of water from the ponds and mix it with 16,000 acre-feet of fresh water in Mud Slough. The mixture will flow into the San Joaquin River and out through the delta, San Francisco Bay and finally into the Pacific Ocean.

The quantity of selenium entering the river from draining the ponds will be "an insignificant amount ... less than one percent of the total load in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta River system," says bureau spokesman Jason Peltier.

But Zeke Grader of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fisherman's Associations contends that "the San Joaquin River is not a toilet, and the bureau should be told that."

UCSB Hosts Education Plan Hearing

The quality of education, research and public services offered by state institutions of higher learning will be the focus of testimony presented on campus today at a public hearing conducted by the California Joint Legislation Committee for the Review of the Master Plan for Higher Education.

At the hearing, which will take place in Engineering II Room 1401 between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., UCSB Chancellor Barbara Uehling and representatives from other California universities and colleges will provide testimony concerning various issues related to the Master Plan for Higher Education, explained Suzanne Ness, a special assistant to the chancellor. Uehling is expected to speak before the review committee at approximately 10 a.m., Ness said.

The hearing is "a fact-finding hearing ... (and) one in a series of hearings that are being held (by the committee) throughout the state," according to Ness. These hearings are part of a continuing review aimed at bettering post-secondary education in the state, she explained.

Among the review committee members who will be present at the hearing are state Sen. Bill Greene, D-Los Angeles; state Sen. Gary Hart, D-Santa Barbara; state Assembly member Jack O'Connell, D-Santa Barbara; and state Assembly member John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose.

Similar hearings have recently been held at private universities and community colleges throughout the state, and the committee plans to visit other UC campuses in addition to UCSB, Ness said.

The review committee will use its findings from the series of hearings to shape future state legislation concerning higher education, according to a UCSB press release.

Gary Hart Expected to Confirm U.S. Congressional Aspirations

State Sen. Gary K. Hart, D-Santa Barbara, is expected to announce his candidacy for the United States Congress during a Sunday afternoon rally at Santa Barbara High School.

If Hart does announce that he intends to run for the 19th Congressional District seat, which represents most of Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, he will be competing against incumbent Rep. Bob Lagomarsino, who is running for his eighth consecutive two-year term.

Following the rally, which will begin at 1 p.m. at 700 E. Anapamu St., Hart will host a Super Bowl party at the Miramar Hotel, located at 1555 S. Jameson Ln. in Montecito, according to press announcements. Those who attend the rally at Santa Barbara High School will receive coupons for two free beverages at the party, according to the announcements.

policy of every government. And the reason is that governments typically are not moral agents. You know, they're not out to preserve human values. They're serving special interests, namely the interests that are dominant in their own societies. And correspondingly, much of what they do, especially in international affairs, tends to be pretty ugly. The United States is no exception.

DN: So you're saying this for every country; not just the U.S.?

Chomsky: No, it's not a blanket comment about everything. (For example) the foreign policy of Luxembourg is not very offensive, but that's because they are so weak they can't do anything. Quite typically, as an over-arching generalization, the more powerful a state is the more ugly its foreign policy is.

DN: Would you say, then, that many of the problems in the world today are rooted in the foreign policies of each nation?

Chomsky: Yeah, it's a tribute. I mean the United States is much more significant than Luxembourg.

DN: Do you see ways of overcoming that?

Chomsky: The question is too general. I mean, on specific issues sometimes there are ways of overcoming things. There are some issues that are very hard to overcome. For example, I think problems within South Africa are going to be extremely hard to overcome. I don't think the U.S. is being helpful. But, even if we were helpful and constructive, I don't think it would help very much.

DN: To what extent do you think the U.S. can be helpful in South Africa?

Chomsky: Well, there are definite things that the U.S. could do. For example, just to take an obvious one, South Africa is illegally occupying Namibia with the support of the United States. First of all, it is illegal (as) determined by the United Nations and so on, and the U.S. is supporting it. And that causes all sorts of problems in the region. That's part of the background for ... (the) South African tax against Angola, for example. So, the U.S. could change its policy on that issue, just to take one thing.

DN: In regard to American foreign policy, in which direction do you think Ronald Reagan has set this country's foreign policy?

Chomsky: Well, Ronald Reagan is at the extreme end of commitment to violence and terrorism, and opposition to social reforms and democracy. He's not out of the spectrum, but he did it at an extreme. First of all, Ronald Reagan himself is a matter of no significance. He's a creation of public relations, who probably doesn't even understand the words on his notecards. But, the people around him, George Schultz, Elliot Abrams, Jeane Kirkpatrick and others, do represent a particularly violent and terrorist element within the general political culture.

DN: Do you foresee changes (in the direction of American foreign policy)?

Chomsky: There are changes, definitely, taking place already. The Reaganite economic managers have severely harmed the American economy. There's a huge debt, a huge deficit, a decline in production. I mean their economic management was for production of waste and for consumption by the wealthy. And the effects of that are very obvious at the moment and there's going to be a long-term effect, long-term costs that are going to have to be paid.

As a result, the U.S. will simply not be able to throw its weight around in world affairs to the same extent, because there will probably be a lower standard of living, austerity, and so on. The result is that suddenly the Russians are not as threatening as they were. We have (had) to take statesman-like stands on negotiations and summits. Nothing has changed in the world. What's changed is domestically, and the result is noticeable change within the Reagan administration.

How do you feel about the FBI spying on political activists who are members of groups opposed to U.S. policy in Central America?

"Personally I don't think it's anything new. I think they just got caught and somehow it made it to the press. It doesn't surprise me."

John Ely
graduate student,
sociology

"I think it's really deplorable and it's a violation of the free speech rights that are written into the Constitution ... although that is the FBI's role, right? To watch what's going on in the U.S."

Karin Eberhardt
senior, Chinese/music

"It's a free country ... if someone's suspicious of someone they can check it out. The government's just as free to do it as anyone else."

Scott Morse
senior, political science/

"I think it's wrong, a person has a right to privacy. Nobody deserves to be spied on. There should be more conclusive evidence to base their accusations on than just belonging to a protest group."

Liz Reinheimer

"Well, it's kind of a touchy issue. It's the FBI's job to spy on people, but it's not a very nice thought to think that somebody's been spying on you. It's hard to answer for sure."

student groups had been identified and files started on them," Lyon said.

These files included information on the subjects' political and social activities, economic status, scholastic records, where the students vacationed and who their friends were, he explained. "You name it, and we collected it and passed it on, not knowing what that information would do to that person in the future."

"When they (the CIA) come to the campus here overtly now — and they could have sent Mr. Chritton or John Jones or Sam Smith, the name doesn't mean a thing — but the very fact that they have sent an officer here to gain legitimacy is ludicrous.... It doesn't bother them to put a man out there as a smokescreen, because you don't know what they're doing elsewhere on campus," he said.

"They're gonna come here and teach? My question is what in the hell are they going to teach? Do you want to learn how to destabilize governments? Do you want to learn how to assassinate people? Do you want to learn how to effectively deploy napalm? Do you want to learn how to contaminate food supplies of children? Do you want to know how to sabotage a diesel electric generator? Do you want to know how to compromise your fellow student?" Lyon continued.

"If that's what you want, then you should welcome Mr. Chritton. But, if that turns your stomach, then I only have one thing to say to you: Get rid of him!" Lyon told the audience.

In addition to Lyon, journalist Lou Wolf, who co-founded and co-edits the Covert Action Information Bulletin also addressed the issue of Chritton's appointment to UCSB by challenging Chritton to show himself at the teach-in.

"George Chritton, where are you? Do you have the guts to stand here and hear this: ... the CIA and its allies, the Pentagon, the Department of Energy, has no place on any campus anywhere," Wolf began.

He went on to describe his experience as a conscientious objector to the Vietnam War, during which time he did alternative service in Laos, where he dedicated himself to work against the CIA after a colleague of his was killed in a CIA bombing raid.

"I hope that if he (Chritton) is as interested as he claims in freedom of speech ... he will share with you, as long as he is allowed to stay here, and I hope that's not long, what he has done ... what covert operations he undertook, how many people died as the result of the operations he was involved in," Wolf said.

UCSB sociology Professor Richard Flacks also spoke at the teach-in, telling of the need for college and university campuses to be places of free intellectual pursuit. "The university's fundamental reason for existence ... is the advancement of man's search for truth and happiness," he said.

"When the university turns away from its central purpose and makes itself an appendage of the government, concerning itself with techniques, vows and purposes, with expedience rather than ideals ... it's not only failing to meet its responsibilities to its students, it's betraying a public trust," Flacks said, quoting a 1968 speech by U.S. Sen. William Fullbright.

"It's time to turn a jaundiced eye on the proposition that what is good for the Pentagon is good for this country, or for that matter that what is good for this country is good for man," Flacks continued. "A university community ought to be part of a world intellectual community, ought to disassociate itself from the power struggles waged by states."

"Some of us that have been involved in the university give it our hearts. We think of it as containing an ideal of independence from bias, from prejudice, from commitment to narrow interests. We think of it as an arena in which what is valued is the quest for truth, not the quest for self-interest," he said.

"We can debate on whether the CIA should exist or not ... but there's really no debate about whether the university can link up with such an agency. We have a different purpose, and if we lose that purpose we might as well shut the university down because maybe the contradictions are too great," Flacks concluded.

Also speaking at Thursday's event was freelance writer Cory Dubin, who has worked in Central America and now speaks on the CIA and its involvement there.

"Where do we draw the line?" Dubin asked. "At what point do we, as U.S. citizens, say 'No more. No more CIA, no more covert operations, no more foreign policy based on racism that results in mass murder.'"

"We have the highest standard of living in the world, and it's just too easy for us to sit around and look at our televisions and be disconnected," Dubin said.

"We can watch death in Angola. We can watch mass murder in El Salvador, and it doesn't seem to affect us. We're encapsulated in our homes, in suburbia, and we feel real good and our standard of living is real high. But, that standard of living comes from the blood of people all over the planet," Dubin concluded.

COUNCIL

Judicial Council could hear the matter as early as today, Lehr said, explaining that an emergency meeting may be called. However, if such a meeting is not held, Judicial Council will discuss Lehr's complaint when it meets Monday. After the council receives Lehr's petition, its members will decide whether they should hear the case or let the Leg Council decision stand.

Regardless of Judicial Council action, the expenditure was strongly opposed prior to the vote, with Scott, A.S. President Curtis Robinson and A.S. Finance Board Chair Larry Lokka all strongly calling for either a reduced monetary request or an alternative source of funding.

To accomplish the unusual financial move, Leg Council overrode a Finance Board recommendation that $600 be allocated to send the 10 students.

Proponents of the trip said the convention could be a historic event for the student movement, while others argued whether the expense would truly benefit UCSB.

Participants want to "establish the direction that the (national) student movement is going to take," according to A.S. Leg Council member Todd Gooch, who will be attending the conference.

"I have been waiting for ... a good avenue that would be an effective means of achieving student empowerment.... For the first time, maybe, we have the chance to do something that would give students empowerment. The idea is to make it a sort of network of values ... with autonomy on the local level ... (so that) students at UCSB ... can affect what decisions are made here at UCSB," Gooch said, explaining the purpose behind UCSB's participation in the event.

But, serious questions were raised when the proposed travel expense was compared to yearly budget totals of other student groups. "My personal opinion is that it is a lot of money when you have not been able to give money to other student groups," Scott told the Leg Council members.

That sentiment was vehemently echoed by Lokka, who at times was yelling at the council. "$1,780 is the working budget for five-plus student groups on this campus.... This is an inappropriate use of capital investment funds," Lokka declared.

On the average, student groups receive

Roomies and Tuna

Jared Becker

Ever since I moved into an apartment last summer, my diet has been in serious decay. I thought that dorm food was monotonous, but little did I know what awaited me in my own little castle.

I remember fantasizing with my roommates about all the great food we could cook in our new apartment. Steaks, pork chops, good spaghetti sauce, endless barbecues. Yum!

Things were good for awhile, but then I started getting nervous when mealtime came around. Every meal looked the same, started tasting the same. Now I get frantic, or just plain surly.

AAARRRGHHHH!!!! I've had enough tuna fish to last forever. I've eaten schools of tuna, fields of beans, tons of tortillas, gallons of chili, way too many quesadillas, a hundred dozen too many eggs and just one goddamn too many bagels with cream cheese. It's gone to far. Something must be done now!!! If you want to help, please send or drop of some tasty recipes at the Nexus office. I need help. Please God, please, no more tuna-fish sandwiches.

But, at least I've never given myself food-poisoning. People who have had it tell me that continuous nausea and vomiting for 24 hours straight is not a very pleasant experience. Democratic presidential candidate Richard Gephardt's campaign made a mistake with food this week. There had been a mix-up in getting reporters to Gephardt's campaign rallies. As an apology the next day, they served reporters hot coffee and steaming bowls of chili. Some of the reporters became ill with food poisoning. They remained sick for 24 hours. I hope Gephardt isn't expecting any rave press in the near future. There's nothing quite as ugly as a sick and vomiting journalist ... except for maybe a drunk journalist.

Speaking of drunk journalists... A recent issue in the highly respected Weekly World News reported that journalists run a high risk of becoming alcoholics, second only to doctors. This little fact will explain many things if you ever come to the Daily Nexus office.

Yes, that's right, the Super Bowl. Once more it's time for that huge spectacle to unravel itself in your living room. Profiles, predictions, interviews, gossip, it's all there. More information than you ever wanted to know about Washington Redskins' offensive linemen or Denver Bronco's linebackers.

But, it's a journalist's dream. To run rampant for a week, slurping booze, popping pills, sucking cigarettes and madly scribbling down the slightest utterance from the star quarterbacks. "What kind of toilet paper does he like?" I asked Nexus Sports Editor Patrick Whalen what it would be like to cover the Super Bowl. He replied "Oh boy, the Super Bowl! Yes, the whole pile of bannanas, the big mound of jelly beans, wine, women and song. Gosh, I would love to be there!"

So, there you have it. I pick the Broncos to win, if for no other reason, simply because no one in Washington is having much luck these days.

Speaking of Washington, Ronald Reagan is up to no good ... as usual. Reagan announced Wednesday that he will not "preside over the comunization of Central America," and formally sent to Congress his request for $36.25 million in aid to the Contras. You'll be happy to know that Reagan will, however be happy to preside over the murder and torture of many innocent men, women and children fighting for their right to self-government without the intervention of Big Bad Uncle Sam.

Political insiders (men with access to the president's colon) say that this final batch of guns and goodies for the Contras is the foreign policy centerpiece for Reagan's last year in office. Which might be a bad thing, because the Congressional democrats are not about to be pushed around in a wide-open election year, and they say they have enough votes to beat the bill in the House. I sure hope so.

Finally, there's my roommate, Doug. I haven't seen him for about a week. Well, that's not quite right. A few nights, I've heard his barking at the window at around 2 a.m., "Hey, Jared. Hey man, it's Doug. Let me in." So I do. But that's about it. I haven't seen his face in the daylight for a long time, and I'm getting worried.

Jared Becker is a worried UCSB junior who had tuna fish for lunch.

'Independence to Interdep

Tom Dudley

An ironic product of the Nuclear Age has been the coming together of people of many divergent interests around a common threat. A big bomb does more than knock out military targets; it is, as Audubon's Hazel Wolf put it, "the Great Leveler of all the forces trying to create a more just and peaceful Earth. Whether it's women's or minority rights, the right of the poor to have a house or of an endangered animal to have a habitat, all issues become irrelevant on The Day After."

The recognition that nuclear weapons threaten both peace and environmental movements is the major factor which united these groups. Building on local efforts to protect land and people's health, the broader implications of environmental concerns were natural products of the community activism of the 60s. Amory Lovins describes this as the evolution in thinking from "independence to interdependence."

Nuclear war was staring us in the face, so for the first time in history, humans had the capability of destroying virtually all that millions of years of evolution had produced. Against this reality, nature lovers out of necessity confronted the consequences of world affairs. Established conservation groups such as the Sierra Club debated the wisdom of treating nuclear war as an environmental issue; newer groups like Greenpeace were born from this nascent alliance, and lived their philosophy by bearing witness, situating themselves at ground zero where atomic tests were to occur on Pacific atolls. Today, the conclusion of the major environmental organizations is that the specter of Nuclear War, and attendant costs of the arms race, along with over-population are the greatest dangers to the global environment and the well-being of all people.

To understand why connections between environmentalists and other social justice/peace groups makes sense, it is useful to consider why people care about nature. A fascination with birds in the childhood garden or early fishing trips with one's father grow into a central theme that these things of nature have a certain value in and of themselves. We care that they exist, not for their usefulness to us, but because we sense that respect toward others promotes the dignity of all life. An ecologist, arguing to preserve a plant that might provide a cure for cancer (certainly an important argument!), will, in a quieter moment, tell you of a sense of justice that other creatures should live, of a rightness that ecosystems remain intact which borders on spirituality. John Muir compared Yosemite's Hetch Hetchy Valley to the temples of history. In this light we can understand that its rebirth upon draining the reservoir compares to emancipation of humans from slavery.

Aldous Huxley asks us to "stop treating things as things." Many who are dedicated to both environmental and peace issues undergo an evolution from humanism, with its expression of regard for human life and dignity, to a broader ethic of respect for all life, plant and animal. This holistic view encompasses wise use of air, land and water, what was termed by Aldo Leopold, the father of modern wilderness management, as the 'land ethic.' A Chinese philosopher called it "the refusal to be foremost of all things."

If prevention of nuclear holocaust brings progressives together, social and ecological justice is what keeps them together. According to Fritjof Capra, "nuclear war, environmental devastation, persistence of poverty in even the richest of nations — these are not isolated problems, but are facets of a single crisis of perception." In 1969, Earth Day gave life to another perception, building on the Vietnam peace spirit to focus on the universality of ecological problems, be they air pollution, lifeless rivers, or endangered species. In Santa Barbara, that concept was brought home as the infamous oil spill which served as the symbol of Earth Day's purpose — at some point, we all pay the price for extravagant life styles, and for rapid, incautious development of natural resources.

The decade following the first Earth Day saw the blossoming of the environmental movement in a democratized arena. From fighting a single nuclear plant or dam, people like David Brower and Amory Lovins, Friends of the Earth movement, assessing the social and ecological costs of world resource use. "Technology is the answer," Lovins, "but what was the question?" The 1972 U.N. Conference on Human Environment made it clear that environmental protection depends on promoting a sustainable future for both developed and developing nations. Management of the products of nature was good, and necessary, for the people and all the organisms which inhabit the earth.

The role of conservation organizations is now clearly defined: protecting the environment and people for the long-term. The very threats of overpopulation, exhaustion of energy resources, required planning for the future, simply fighting the battles of each day. Some of the most exciting developments in the environmental community now involve international issues. Importantly, they involve projects that benefit local peoples as well as nature.

For example, the Audubon Society is combatting deforestation of Nepal projects that conserve and revegetate erodible slopes while providing fuelwood supplies for local citizens. Nature Conservancy sponsors American habitat conservation projects which also provide incomes and education for local peoples. An initiative in Bolivia is an exciting potential to help developing countries reduce their foreign debt while protecting their forests and ecosystems. Conservation International 'bought' $650,000 of a country's debt for a discounted rate of $100,000, in exchange for an agreement to protect over 3 million acres of Amazonian rainforest from deforestation. A win-win situation for all concerned.

In the arms control realm, the Natural Resources Defense Council recently entered into reciprocal agreements with the Soviet Academy of Sciences to set up seismic monitoring to detect nuclear tests as well as

The Reader's Voice

'Shoot to Kill'

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I could not suppress my outraged feelings, when I read the letter by "Craig Barbarosh" and "Jeff Kass" in reaction to the cartoon on 1-20-88. These two gentlemen claim that the Palestinians should be held responsible for the riots in the Occupied Territories. My reaction is that these two are politically blind and letting their emotions do the talking.

Stones and rocks do not endanger the lives of Israeli soldiers, who are wearing bullet-proof vests, helmets, and shields. Ever since the violence began, we did not hear of one Israeli getting killed. Injured? yes. However, 39 Palestinians were shot and killed by brutal Israeli soldiers carrying M-16's, tear-gas bombs, and other fatal ammunition. Worse yet, this number is climbing everyday. These soldiers had direct orders from Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin himself to "shoot to kill," because he wants to show the world that violence leads nowhere.

So, you tell me who is being violent and being the aggressor?! There are plenty of ways to deal with demonstrations, for example: rubber bullets, tear gas, false bullets, compressed hot water, etc. Needless to say, that "shoot to kill" is the most Naziest filthiest way to deal with them.

If these two gentlemen would experience the lifestyle that these Palestinians live, just one day, they will understand what these people are going through. I was born and raised in Israel and lived there for 19 years, and I know how miserable the lifestyle is in the Occupied Territories, as well as, how oppressed and mistreated these people are.

Israel claims that it is the "Oasis of Democracy in the Middle East." If this were true, then why are Palestinians forbidden from expressing their opinions and feelings, and why are they not allowed to demonstrate? Isn't that democratic? Some Democracy, isn't?

Moreover, the entire world, including the U.S., had condemned Israel during the Security Council meeting, two weeks ago, of being fatally brutal. The least you two "political illiterates" can do is agree with the world or shut up. Israel itself, has realized that its fatal ammunition is getting her nowhere, and hence, the government is now using the "Maccot" policy in dealing with the violence.

Finally, I would like to point out that if the Israel soldiers were to stay the hell away from these demonstrations, they would not have been stoned, and the Palestinians would have refrained from throwing rocks, because then they would be endangering their own lives.

Parking Problems

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Regarding the Isla Vista parking situation:

I.V. is indeed suffering from a glut of cars and a severe shortage of parking. However, I must comment on some opinions expressed by members of the Isla Vista Federation on the involvement of UCSB students in the crisis, specifically those of Carmen Lodise and Leo Jacobson. While the streets of this community may be overcrowded, it is not for the Federation to place all of the blame on students.

A case in point is Lodise's remark that, "It is criminal that the university allows people to bring cars." Those schools that only allow seniors to bring cars are most likely not located as far from town as UCSB. In order to get downtown, it is necessary to either drive or take the bus, which provides inadequate service from campus. Jacobson goes one step further by proposing an "anti-car ethic", and suggested that the problem be solved by "ticketing." Is Mr. Jacobson aware that a problem such as this cannot be solved by force? (I use, for the sake of argument, Wednesday's letter by Susan Hamner and Pamela Obenhausser, claiming that there are those who are so desperate enough to park that they will risk being ticketed, and certainly this holds true in I.V. as well as on campus.)

Granted, there is a serious problem concerning the parking shortage, and one viable solution is the addition of a parking structure near Harder Stadium.

Some of the best opportunities for improving U.S.-Soviet relations concern environmental issues, since the USSR and other eastern bloc nations express great interest in air and water quality discussions. Nuclear Glasnost was an outgrowth of the tragedy of Chernobyl, which was ultimately discussed quite frankly by the Soviets. They welcome our participation in reducing the likelihood of accidents, a desperate example that the world has indeed become our backyard. The more we know about each other, and about our global backyard, the greater will be our desire and power to make change.

It is encouraging to see coalitions and consensus-building among many groups working for a sane and stable world. Different paths can lead to the same conclusions, if we allow ourselves to view problems through the perspectives of others. Some of the best examples of progress through coalitions involve Central America: groups like the Environmental Project on Central America (EPOCA) are dedicated to linking environmental problems to their underlying social and political causes, in order to find long-term solutions to the range of problems.

Our primary goal must be to share ideas on critical issues that are best understood by a holistic understanding of the many connections between the problems we face, and the solutions we seek. Environmentalists know how politics work, but need to understand the different approaches to politics by others. But I've been told by not a few social justice people that environmental issues are secondary, and social issues must come first. Clearly these issues all interlock, and are inseparable if we are to provide real, sustainable solutions that improve the quality of life. What could be more just than the right to clean air, food and water, beauty, and caring for all the creatures of the planet? In the words of Jay Hair of the National Wildlife Federation, "we must eliminate the false dichotomy of 'us' vs. 'them'; because in reality it is only 'us'."

Tom Dudley, Peace and Environment Network and Biological Sciences.

Until this is done, however, it is not for the Federation to place the blame on students for an issue which is beyond their control, and to disregard our rights for the sake of a clear street.

Stop the Madness

Editor, Daily Nexus:

"The French government will vote on Feb. 3 on whether to fund a U.S. terrorist group to firebomb the Mayo Clinic and flood the New York City subway system with poison gas to pressure Washington to increase its concern for the homeless." Imagine that.

"The Japanese people will go to the polls on Feb. 3 to vote for the President and members of the Congress of the United States. Because of the United States' multi-trillion dollar debt, and its inability to even come up with a balanced budget for one year, it was decided that in the interests of world financial stability, Japan would do a better job of running things than the people of the United States." Imagine that.

On Feb. 3, the United States Congress is scheduled to vote on giving millions of dollars to destroy farming cooperatives, medical clinics, buses and school houses to pressure the government of Nicaragua to "cry Uncle." For over 100 years, since the days of William Walker, the United States has been making similar decisions for the people of Nicaragua. The people of Nicaragua are really far too weak and stupid to manage their own affairs.

"The Contras are a band of rapists, murderers and terrorists." Does this imply that if they could overthrow the elected government of Nicaragua in a more pleasing manner, it would be all right to fund them? The arrogance and irrationality of the United States is beyond belief.

Before our elected officials vote on funding the Contras on Feb. 3, we must demand that they answer the following questions: "What gives you the right to even consider funding the Contras?" Give them a call at (202) 224-121 ($50 before 8 a.m. for two minutes). Then let's all end this insanity once and for all.

More Isn't Always Better

Michael Perri

The economics of food that our country's government and banks promote is "more is better." Today the world has more food and more malnourished people than ever before. In Latin America, the native economic moguls, the U.S. government, and U.S. banks are more impressed with the profitability of the agro-export market than the well-being of the Latin American peasants, the "campesinos." The result has been that campesinos have been moved off their small plots to make room for the bigger farms which will produce crops such as cotton, coffee and sugar to be exported.

The landless campesinos then move to the overcrowded cities, or roam the countryside looking for some seasonal jobs on some landlord's plantation. The food they eat becomes not that which they have grown, but food imported; food of which is too expensive to buy on their new subsistence-level wages. But to the plantation landlords and U.S. banks, the system of subsistence-level wages which produces export crops is better than subsistence-level farming. Subsistence-level farming produces enough food to eat, but large agricultural exports produce profits. Profits must remain high and costs low if the U.S. banks are to be repaid, the given country is to rapidly modernize, and the plantation owners are to remain wealthy and in power. Besides, to give the campesinos land to grow their beans and corn is inefficient and will hurt the nation's GNP, although more people could feed themselves. When the campesinos demand land reform or rebel and reclaim land from the plantations, they threaten the power structure and are deemed communists.

Traditionally the U.S. has had a lot of arable land and a high demand for labor. For us, bigger and more efficient farms are better. But much of the Third World has an over-abundance of labor and comparatively little land. In the name of progress, an efficient American system of farming has been too quickly adopted to much of Latin America with disastrous results. Campesinos have lost the security of growing their own food and are now at the mercy of the agro-export market. When the market for their goods has a downturn, it is the campesinos who are the first to suffer and to go hungry.

A world economic collapse must be avoided, and thus, the U.S. banks must be paid some of their money back. But we cannot pressure the people of Latin America with our harmful sermons of rapid modernization. We should support a policy in which the people of Latin America can grow the food they need. There are alternatives. Nicaragua, for example, has a mixed economy: campesino associations farm 40 percent of the land, the state 25 percent, and individual owners, mostly large farmers, the remaining 35 percent.

Something must be done. In 1950, 75 percent of the isthmus' people lived in the countryside; in the year 2000, it is calculated, only one-fourth of them will reside there. The already poverty-stricken cities of these regions do not have enough industry to absorb this human tide. If the current trend is allowed to continue, more people will be hungry and probably more of our country's efforts will go into subduing "communist" revolutions in our hemisphere.

It's time for a profound change in policy. Meanwhile, the California Public Interest Research Group (CalPIRG) is sponsoring a hunger rally on Monday, Feb. 1, at noon, where you can listen to speakers on local and international hunger and donate canned goods old clothes and blankets. Take a stand on hunger.

Business-like Look Helps Hoopsters Hold Off NMSU

Poise in All Facets Puts UCSB Past Aggies in 66-63 Victory

By Scott Lawrence
Assistant Sports Editor

It was noticeable as early as one o'clock yesterday afternoon.

A collected, confident Brian Shaw walked through Storke Plaza. Baggy tan shorts, looking nowhere but straight ahead as he calmly transferred Cheetos from bag to mouth.

It signified a new look for the Gauchos as they prepared for last night's PCAA game with New Mexico State. Poise.

Two weeks ago the Gauchos erratically dropped two straight games, getting caught in the hype of returning home after the UNLV upset and in the ECen nickname controversy that was brewing at the time.

However, last night UCSB brought to the home hardwood a new look; a message to the fans that this time they were serious. No more blowing big leads in the second half, no more shooting three-pointers with one-point leads, no more playing solely for the crowd, and definitely no more of those ridiculous efforts at the free throw line.

"We've been feeling good playing on the road," Shaw said after the game. "Coming back, we were a lot more business-like and knew we just had something to prove to ourselves at home."

No. Tonight would see a poised Gaucho unit down the Aggies 66-63, upping its records to 6-2 and 14-3 behind a near flawless performance at the charity line and the renovated three-point shooting eye of senior Brian Johnson. UCSB made 15 of 17 free throws (88 percent), perfect until Shaw missed the back end of a one-and-one with 13 seconds

On the night, Johnson hit five of seven three-point attempts, leading the Gauchos in scoring with 17 points. Dormant for much of the year from long-distance, he opened the second half in a frenzy, hitting three in a row from 19' 9" after the Aggies had taken a 39-38 lead. Johnson scored 11 points in the second half's first eight minutes.

"Before, my shot had been flat, with little trajectory," Johnson said afterward. "(Head Coach) Pimm told me to exaggerate my arc and that's what I did all week. Tonight I felt like I was in a natural rhythm, like I wasn't exaggerating it."

Sophomore Carrick DeHart (14 points) helped UCSB to a 32-31 halftime lead with eight first half points. For New Mexico in the first half, junior Jeff McCool had the hot hand, hitting three of four from long range, scoring 10 points.

The UCSB zone kept the Aggies perimeter for most of the contest, which was fine for McCool. After coming in with a 55 three-point percentage, he went on to hit 70 percent of his attempts, going seven for 10 on his way to a game-leading 22 points.

"Nobody zones us," said Aggie Head Coach Neil McCarthy. "When we see the zone our eyes get big and we start drooling. I thought McCool did a good job filling in where (Willie) Joseph left off."

Joseph, NMSU's leading scorer at 17.1 per game, was held to just one point in the face of Shaw's defense. He was unable to stop his team's record from falling to 4-4 in league, 12-9 overall, while teammate Virgil Harris tried to stop the bleeding, scoring 17 points with nine coming from three-point range.

"(Joseph) had an airball early and then the crowd got on (See WIN, p.10)

Tickets Source of Capitalistic Rise

By Patrick Whalen
Sports Editor

As Assistant Athletic Director Jim Romeo tells it, the euphoria caused by the resurgence of men's basketball on campus was a phenomenon the UCSB athletic department fantasized about. Something fresh, something new. Something exciting.

And something completely foreign to a department that for decades had grown accustomed to bare mediocrity on the basketball court.

So when the bright lights began to blaze, when the media army beefed up and most importantly, when the pressure buckets that win basketball games began to fall and keep on falling, there was a fair amount of bungling.

"You have to understand, this is a new thing for us," Romeo said.

It's new and it's fun, but most of all it paves the way for a giddy trip to the high road of athletic capitalism. There's no way around it.

But it wasn't like nobody saw it coming. Many credit the arrival of Athletic Director Stan Morrison in the summer of 1986 as the match that gave the newly-tagged Thunderdome its light. Others give the credit to fifth-year basketball coach

Cardinal, Lions Invade Campus for First WIVA Season Games

By Dan Vason
Sports Staff Writer

The UCSB men's volleyball team, presently ranked 7th in the nation with a 9-3 overall record, opens its WIVA regular season this weekend.

Tonight, the Gauchos host the #17 Loyola Marymount University Lions (6-3 overall, 0-1 in league), at 7:30 p.m. in Rob Gym, and then battle the Stanford Cardinals (2-7 overall) tomorrow night 6:00 p.m.

Stanford and Loyola finished 12th and 13th respectively in last weekend's UCSB Michelob Light Tournament, and should be tough competition for UCSB. Head Coach Ken Preston however, is confident that his Gauchos are ready, and is optimistic about this weekend's matchups.

"I think we are ready. We'll be going out there to win because these games count," Preston said. "I'm really pleased that we get to start the season off at home. We've got to take advantage of that but make sure that we play it one game at a time."

A significant portion of UCSB's starting line-up was out with the flu during last weekend's 6th place finish in the tournament, but Preston assures that his Gauchos are healthy now, and ready to pound the ball.

"I'm serious. This group of guys is as good as any we've ever had," Preston said. "Physically they may be better, mentally we'll have to wait and see. I think we may need a little work in that area, but these guys are pretty tough."

The Gauchos are led by senior outside hitters David Rottman and Pat Pennington, who provide a formidable one-two punch offensively. Rottman, an honorable mention All-American last year, is a hammer that setter-captain Jon Wallace can depend on to crush the ball at crunch time. Co-captain Pennington is a good leaper who hits well and is the emotional leader on the floor.

"Pat assumes that role really well, he and Rottman are always pushing the other guys to play harder," Preston said. "The two of them do that really well, they are good leaders in that capacity."

Starting juniors Jose "Keno" Gandara, and Lee Nelson are seasoned veterans that alternate hitting in the middle and outside and they provide the Gauchos with a towering block. The starting rotation is completed by freshman David Leath, who is rapidly maturing into an offensive threat in the middle.

"It's a long season, and the home games are crucial, Preston said. "We've got to have the pride to not let any team come into our home and spoil our party."

Loyola is 2-29 against the Gauchos, and finished last season with a 14-20 overall record. They came in last place in the WIVA with a 1-17 record. Presently 0-1 in league thus far, Loyola lost in three games to #4 Hawaii on Wednesday.

Gaucha Cornucopia

BASEBALL

The Gauchos suffered their fourth straight loss against zero victories Wednesday, when a one-out double in the bottom of the 11th inning gave Cal Poly San Luis Obispo a 5-4 win in a non-conference game at San Luis Obispo.

UCSB is now 0-4 on the season. Division II Cal Poly moved to 1-0 with the season-opening victory.

Gaucha batters were able to collect just one hit over the final six innings as Mustang hurler Lee Hancock threw shutout ball for the final five frames. UCSB reliever Paul Crabtree was tagged for the loss after giving up the winning hit to Rich Sheppard after a walk, a sacrifice and an intentional walk to open the bottom half of the 11th.

Catcher Tim McKercher and shortstop Doug Williams each had two hits for UCSB, but that was about it as the Mustangs outslugged the Gauchos 9-6. Mustang pitchers also recorded 11 strikeouts, although Gaucha baserunners were able to steal six times. UCSB has recorded 17 stolen bases out of 18 attempts.

UCSB opens the first of four games at Campus Diamond today at two p.m. when Cal State Los Angeles arrives. On Saturday the squad faces off in a doubleheader against CSULA, and on Super Sunday the USC Trojans move into town for an 11 a.m. contest.

A recent PCAA media poll picked the Gauchos to finish tied for fourth in the strong conference, while a similar coaches poll suggested UCSB to finish fifth. Cal State Fullerton was chosen by both the media and coaches to win the PCAA.

RUGBY

The time has come for the UCSB rugby club as the Gauchos will host Cal Poly SLO in Santa Barbara's league opener this Saturday.

The rugby festivities will commence on the Gauchos' home turf with a 12 p.m. start at Storke Field.

Calling the game physical will be a definite understatement. The Gauchos defeated the Mustangs in their only meeting this year, a 4-0 defensive battle at the Tri-Counties tournament in November.

Said Co-captain Pete Smith: "There's no love lost between the two teams."

Prior to the All-Cal tournament two weeks ago, Dennis Berg, the team's new coach, had only two practices to work with the squad.

But Coach Berg has now had about three and a half weeks to install a more physical attack. Before, the team relied on speed and precision to defeat its opponents. Now, an added dimension is to punish the foe, wear them down, and force them to commit mistakes.

A big plus for the Blue and Gold will be an injury-free squad. In the Tri-Counties tourney last November, the team was missing six starters.

Returning from an injury will be Smith, who with John Tweten and Zeke Buxton will form a formidable part of the team's back line.

The forwards will benefit from the addition of Bill Hudemaker who Tweten said "will really help us out."

A Gaucha victory will catapult Santa Barbara into another tough matchup, a February 6 confrontation with defending national champs, San Diego State.

him," Shaw added. "It was pretty easy for me after that because he never really got back into it."

Helping UCSB's cause were freshman Gary Gray and sophomore Mike Doyle, each pouring in eight points, while Eric McArthur added six.

HOOP TALK

Coming in, UCSB was shooting 61 percent from the free throw line.... Two weeks ago, NMSU was fifth in the nation in three-point shooting. "We knew they could shoot the ball from three points," Pimm said after the game. "But they were a foot away from the line on some of those, sometimes with a hand in their face and two guys on 'em'.... Three Gaucho faithful, John Raich, Mike Lasher and John Quaranta passed out 30 free "Gaucho Towels" to fans. "We made them up to get the spirit of the crowd going, to distract opposing players and follow the fads of other schools," they said. Towels are presently selling for five dollars.... With the victory, fifth year Head Coach Pimm evened his UCSB record at 64-64.... The Gauchos are undefeated in games where they out-turnover opponents.... They are also 9-0 in games where they shoot over 50 percent.

TIX

Jerry Pimm, saying any athletic department staff would be able to prosper with the type of program he has built.

Whatever the reason, the point is that tickets for the Feb. 6 basketball game at the Events Center with the Nevada-Las Vegas Rebels — the perennially top-ranked hotshot powerhouse of the PCAA — quickly and overwhelmingly became the passport of choice to athletic entertainment in Santa Barbara.

And with that came frenzied marketing, game time switches and the rearrangement of the 6,000-seat Events Center to allow a larger seating capacity.

Looking closely at a UNLV ticket reveals that game time is 7:30 p.m. Tip-off, however, will happen at 1 p.m., a change brought on by a television contract made with the PCAA after the tickets were printed. No big deal, the decision wasn't UCSB's and time changes are made all the time. But the contract typifies the efforts the athletic department has directly or indirectly made in its pumping of the basketball program in the face of new-found success.

There's a different look to the ECen now — 175 new seats worth, according to Romeo. The department recently decided to move the press tables cross-court to the predominantly student side of the arena and to boot the band and cheer squad to the eastern end zone. The idea being to give the media a better view and to open up some primo seats to the die-hard fans.

But with the new seats, the inevitable question arises: Who will get them for the UNLV game? Students? Will they go on sale to the general public? Neither.

"We're going to help some of the people who've been helping us so much over the years," Romeo said. "That means facultystaff, boosters, supporters — people like that. The game's an official sellout and it wouldn't be fair to put them back on sale."

Not only would it be unfair, it would usurp the many who are planning to cash in on ticket sales and giveaways when the Rebels come to town.

Santa Barbara radio station KTMS-AM saw what the future might hold and wisely bought 100 UNLV tickets the week of Dec. 23 (when the Gauchos upset North Carolina State), according to KTMS Sports Director David James. The station will be holding on-the-air raffles beginning Feb. 1 leading up to the day of the game.

Ticket-hawking ads have already appeared in the classifieds of this newspaper, and it's been mentioned that some students bought up to 10 reserved seats months ago. For mom and dad, of course.

Other entrepreneurs have created their own brand of T-shirts hyping the game and sell them on- and off-campus. Local merchants and eating establishments have also made their advances in lieu of the game. It's not the Super Bowl but it's as close as UCSB has come to getting a share of the major college athletic hoopla pie.

A different look has also appeared as students wait for doors to open before games at the new student entrance to the ECen near Snidecor Hall: wooden barriers and security guards. These changes are in preparation for, of course, UNLV.

Saturday, Feb. 6 is expected to be a crazy day in the UCSB community. It at least promises to be one of the athletic department's most successful days ever.

It's the biggest game of the year. And a ticket shortage is no fantasy.

holds about $5,000, Lehr explained. This interest is generated from funds earned on the principal Capital Reserves account, which holds about $500,000.

In the funding bill that was passed, proponents of the trip stated that "$200,000 is considered a safe minimum for Capital Reserves and Capital Reserves currently contains over $500,000 (sic) providing a substantial cushion and giving A.S. the opportunity to benefit students by contributing funds to worthy projects (such as the Rutgers conference)."

Leg Council member Dan Zumwinkle, author of the bill, said at the meeting that the expenditure should not be judged on the basis of output, but rather by "input." Zumwinkle explained that because a constitution may be drafted for a new student organization, many minds will be needed to do "grunt work" and to participate in the conceptualization of a statement of purpose and other organizing documents.

"I'm doing it for students, maybe for the country.... I'm not doing this to have a good time," he told the council.

Trip proponents were surprised that the allocation was questioned, when earlier in their meeting they approved another large travel expenditure contained in the minutes of a Jan. 19 Finance Board meeting, in which $3,000 of student fees were approved to send four A.S. Program Board members to Washington D.C. for a five-day events planning conference.

Program Board had planned for the trip months in advance and the proposal was included in a formal budget request prepared last year.

But, Zumwinkle still compared the funding of the Rutgers conference to the money spent on Program Board: "The importance (of the Rutgers Conference) is incredible. And then not to look at this $3,000 that goes whizzing by...."

But, the controversy over the bill did not end. Fuller reprimanded Zumwinkle for proposing the legislation less than two weeks before the New Jersey conference. "We didn't get this bill until this afternoon... the students don't know what we are doing.... How do we know if the students want this done? We can't, because the planning was grossly negligent," Fuller said.

"I think the students need more information before they spend ($1,780).... We are talking about money that is not our own. It is student money," Fuller advised.

UCSB and UC Berkeley are the only two West Coast universities to participate in the conference, proponents said, emphasizing that the money was required to assure maximum input and representation. However, Fuller expressed reservations about the campus acting as a delegate for the entire West Coast: "I don't think we have an obligation to provide representatives for other schools.... The issue is UCSB students, which is who we are going to finance, and what they can do for UCSB."

During the meeting, Fuller also warned that if the Judicial Council were to decide that the expenditure is an inappropriate use of student funds, the 10 people attending the conference may have to pay for their own plane tickets. "You may not get reimbursed if someone decides to bring suit," Fuller cautioned.

While the $1,780 allocation covers plane fare, the travelling students, who include Leg Council members Gooch, Zumwinkle, Mike Lupro, Gina Brown, Markeysha Lawrence, Valerie Yoshimura, and Dan Birdsall, as well as general student body representatives Sarah Nelson, Jaime Acton and Meagan Gildersleeve, will pay for all other costs associated with the trip.
