Police Tell Students to Be Suspicious of Magazine Salesmen

By Tizoc Tirado
Assistant Campus Editor

Though door-to-door magazine subscription sales have often proven successful for both vendors and consumers, a recent trend of harassment and burglary has prompted local authorities to warn residents to use caution when dealing with aggressive magazine salespeople.

On Oct. 14, 1986, UCSB police responded to a possible burglary-in-progress call from residents of the Family Student Housing Complex who sighted a male moving from apartment to apartment turning door knobs. When questioned by officers, the man claimed he was selling magazine subscriptions for a publisher's service in Texas.

The man was later arrested when he could not produce a Santa Barbara County Solicitors License or permission from UCSB to solicit in the area.

Unlicensed or "hard-sell" tactic magazine solicitors have been the cause of several complaints submitted to UCSB police in recent months, UCSB police detective Chris Profio said. Though not as frequent as in Spring 1984, recent incidents have indicated the problem of excessively aggressive salespeople is still around, he claimed.

"I can't remember the number of calls we got in October. There were several," said Profio, who (See MAGAZINES, p.14)

Controversial Cartoon Leads to Editors' Drafting of Resolution

By Randolph Klein
Reporter

A group of Southern California college newspaper editors will present a resolution calling for a coordinated response to threats regarding freedom of the press, when the California Intercollegiate Press Association holds its convention this weekend.

Drafted by UCLA Daily Bruin Editor in Chief Ron Bell, the resolution was developed at a March 20 conference of editors from community colleges, California State University campuses, UC campuses and private institutions.

The Southern California editors are hoping to link up with their northern counterparts at a media law roundtable discussion at the CIPA meeting, which will be held in San Jose.

The need for such a resolution arose from a cartoon printed in the Daily Bruin. A comic strip, "UC Rooster," in the Feb. 11 edition of the paper featured a character who often sarcastically answered questions about the university.

The strip had a person asking the rooster how he was admitted to UCLA. "Affirmative action," the rooster replied.

According to UCLA Editor in Chief Ron Bell, he was confronted by angry students the next day. "They would not let me leave my (See CARTOON, p.11)

Bill Increases Punishment of College Rapists

By Wendy Derish
Reporter

State Assemblymember Tom Hayden, D-Santa Monica, has proposed a bill to make protection against rape on California's campuses a serious campus priority.

Hayden announced the bill March 17, calling for the creation of mandatory student education and orientation programs dealing with rape on all college campuses, but did not include additional funding measures in it. The bill also calls for the imposition of stricter penalties on students convicted of rape or sexual misconduct by a university conduct committee and more sympathetic treatment of victims in these proceedings.

"My intention is to encourage a process of educating and protecting students against the increasing pattern of sexual aggression," Hayden said.

Hayden's new legislation is supported by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Santa Barbara, who will sponsor a state senate bill this week to go along with Hayden's proposal, according to Hart's field representative Anita Ferguson. Hart's "companion bill" will be similar in content to Hayden's, and deals with many of the same concerns, she explained.

"The need for the new legislation came from the recent publicity about rape at UCLA, and the gang rape at UC Berkeley, where the guilty students received only light penalties," Hayden's administrative assistant Judy Corbett said.

The bill would enforce stiffer penalties for students convicted of sexual misconduct or rape through university disciplinary channels, including suspension, expulsion from school, loss of scholarships, separation in dormitories and loss of affiliation for fraternity members.

According to Corbett, another factor behind Hayden's proposal was a national survey conducted by Kent State psychologist Mary Koss, which found one in every eight college women will be raped. Ninety-five percent of all cases go unreported and 85 percent of the rapes are committed by acquaintances, or "date" rapes, the study declared.

The University of California is an autonomous body of the state government, and therefore state law requires regent approval to affect the UC. "The bill will be written so it requires state, private and junior colleges to abide by it, and then it is optional for the regents. We advise them to do it, and since the Legislature is a source of their funding, they usually hear what they say," Corbett said.

A bill's language is the most important aspect in determining whether it is followed or not by the regents, Senior Public Information Office Representative Liha Villanueva said. "(In dealing with rape) the university has to abide in criminal matters. We have leeway on what the state expects us to do about the problem (of rape). We exercise our autonomy depending on the final language of a bill."

While Hayden's proposed legislation is still in the developmental stage, the UCSB Women's Center has already begun a "long-term process of annual evaluation and implementation of rape prevention," Women's Center Rape Prevention Director Cheri Gurse said. "The legislation will be a checklist for the educational programs, studies and policy changes that have already begun at the Women's Center."

Gurse supports Hayden's bill because "it is calling for the formalization of procedures of (See RAPE, p.3)

Reagan, Mulroney Meeting to Discuss Acid Rain and Trade

OTTOWA, Canada — President Reagan was prodded by Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney Sunday to enter negotiations leading to a treaty mandating controls and deadlines for curbing acid rain pollution.

However, the United States said it was standing pat with an already announced, five-year, $2.5 billion clean-coal technology research program.

Reagan and Mulroney met at a summit where their domestic political problems were a backdrop to nagging differences on trade and acid rain.

"We come as friends and partners sharing similar dreams and goals for our people: peace, freedom and prosperity," Reagan said at an arrival ceremony in a huge airplane hangar.

At a photo session preceding the talks, Reagan said, "I think we can make some progress," in the discussions, and added that "We both want an answer" to the acid rain issue.

In a television interview before Reagan's arrival, Mulroney urged tougher U.S. action on acid rain, calling for Congress and the administration to agree to "an enforceable treaty to make sure that the damage that is so devastating is arrested and stopped."

In remarks prepared for a state dinner, Reagan expressed hopes for achieving a comprehensive free trade agreement with Canada, saying it would send "a resounding 'no' to those who would stand pat, to the naysayers and to the fearful who advocate protectionist barriers."

Warsaw Pact Asks for Talks on Atomic, Chemical Weapons

VIENNA, Austria — The Warsaw Pact is attempting to include short-range nuclear missiles and chemical weapons in new talks on reducing military forces in Europe, say senior NATO diplomats involved in setting up such negotiations.

NATO wants to keep any new talks restricted to traditional conventional arms and is resisting the Warsaw Pact suggestions, the negotiators say.

The two sides also disagree on whether the talks should be restricted to the two military blocs or open to other countries, according to the Western negotiators. One diplomat accused the Warsaw Pact of trying to exploit the differences within the Atlantic allies on the matter.

NATO and the Warsaw Pact agreed to consider new talks on non-nuclear weapons in early 1987, after years of deadlock at the 16-nation Mutual and Balanced Force Reduction negotiations on troop reductions in central Europe.

France Announces Ouster of Six Soviets on Spy Charges

PARIS, France — The Foreign Ministry disclosed Sunday it ordered six Soviets to leave, not the previously announced three expulsions that led to Moscow's retaliatory ouster of six French diplomats and business representatives.

France has not named the six Soviets expelled.

In a low-key announcement last week, France said it was expelling three Soviet diplomats. That followed the arrest of seven people, including a Soviet-born woman, on espionage charges.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry announced in Moscow Saturday that four French diplomats and two businessmen were being expelled. It called French expulsion of the Soviets unjustified. France said the same Sunday of the Soviet order.

The French Foreign Ministry statement said: "It is a measure of pure retaliation, lacking any justification. The French government can only regret the inspiration of this measure contrary to the interests of relations between the two countries."

It said the six French in Moscow "in no way breached their obligations."

Senator Says Soviets Should Pay for Embassy Debugging

WASHINGTON — A leading Senate Democrat said Sunday that before the Soviet Union opens its new embassy in Washington it should be required to reimburse the United States for the cost of making the new American Embassy in Moscow secure.

The proposal, by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, followed reports that the new embassy in Moscow, which is still under construction, has been laced with listening devices, implanted in prefabricated concrete pillars and panels that were made by Soviet crews.

"The fact is, this embassy can never, ever be made secure, ever," Leahy said on the CBS News program "Face the Nation."

Leahy, a former vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said his proposal revived an idea he had offered two years ago with Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.

"I think we ought to do what Chiles and I said a couple of years ago, and require payment from the Soviets for the damages that have been caused in that or not allow them into their new embassy here in Washington," he said Sunday.

The recent concern over embassy security also stems from the arrest of three U.S. Marines who have been guards at the current embassy. Two of them are accused of having let KGB agents into the building and are charged with espionage.

The new U.S. embassy, which was scheduled to be occupied in 1989, has already cost $190 million, and technical experts estimate that $20 million to $40 million more will be required to deactivate or remove bugging devices.

Bridge Collapses into River; Rescuers Cannot Find Victims

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. — An interstate highway bridge over a rain-swollen creek collapsed Sunday, sending at least three cars and a tractor-trailer plunging about 80 feet into swirling, muddy water.

It was not immediately known how many people might have been killed or hurt when the four lane span on the New York State Thruway collapsed shortly before 11 a.m., said state police Troop T commander Edward Vanderwall.

More than 50 rescue workers rushed to the scene, but could not reach the vehicles because of the "boiling water" of Schoharie Creek, said Thruway Authority Arthur D'Isabel.

"There is no possibility of rescue," said Vanderwall, whose unit patrols the thruway, part of Interstate 90. "We still are not sure who or what is in there.... The water is just too high, too fast and too dirty."

Woman Claims Bakker Forced Additional Sexual Encounter

NEW YORK — Jessica Hahn said she was forced into sexual activities with a second evangelist shortly after a sexual encounter with Jim Bakker, even though she told Bakker she was a virgin and feared getting pregnant, Newsweek magazine said.

The 27-year-old former church secretary said her session with Bakker, 47, in a Florida hotel seven years ago lasted for "what seemed like an hour and a half," the newsmagazine reports in its April 13 issue, saying it obtained a copy of the transcript of a taped statement.

The tape was made several years ago as she told her story to her legal advisers, said a source close to the scandal who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hahn said that after she told Bakker she was a virgin and worried about becoming pregnant, he said, "I've had an operation. Don't worry about it, you'll appreciate it later."

Newsweek said Hahn said she was then forced into sexual activities for another hour with an evangelist working with Bakker.

Secretary of Education Says Schools Are Hijacking Reform

SAN FRANCISCO — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett charged Sunday that teachers and other special interest groups are "hijacking educational reform and holding it for ransom" in several states.

Bennett said he sees signs of backsliding in legislatures in Indiana, Texas, Maine and elsewhere that could jeopardize the entire movement to improve America's schools.

In a speech to the Education Writers Association, Bennett named the National Education Association as a prime culprit for retarding the progress of reform.

"The American people have paid and paid dearly for education, but as yet they have not been given their money's worth," Bennett said.

"In some places the education reform movement is being hijacked and held for ransom," he said.

The most persistent opposition is from those who demand "lots of money first" before schools can be fixed, he said.

Keith Geiger, vice president of the 1.8 million-member National Education Association, said that Bennett and President Reagan "probably have caused more backsliding than anybody, if in fact we're going in the wrong direction."

But Albert Shanker, president of the rival American Federation of Teachers, said he agrees with Bennett that "there are states where there are groups saying that 'Until we get all the goodies we want, we're not going to move ahead.'"

L.A. Red Cross Nurses Decline Recent Offer, Strike Beginning

LOS ANGELES — Nurses at the American Red Cross in Los Angeles and Orange counties walked off the job Sunday, just half a day after voting 2-1 to reject management's latest contract offer.

It was the first strike in the Red Cross' history, although a federal mediator had to be called in six years ago to avert a walkout.

The Red Cross Sunday canceled 11 scheduled trips by bloodmobiles, mostly to churches, said Ralph Wright, an agency spokesman.

"We decided to cancel the bloodmobiles for the safety of donors," Wright said, adding that it could be several days before the mobile service is fully restored.

Dozens of chanting strikers picketed outside the Los Angeles Red Cross Blood Services Center on Vermont avenue, and at another center in Van Nuys.

The dispute between Local 535 of the Service Employees International Union and the Red Cross centers on staffing, unscheduled reassignments and management refusal to pay licensed vocational nurses as much as registered nurses, said union spokeswoman Theresa Conrow.

More than 180 of the 225 nurses and technicians who handle blood donations for the Red Cross voted against the contract, Ms. Conrow said.

The union initially had threatened to walk out last Thursday but postponed that work stoppage until a vote of union members could be taken. The union's contract expired last Tuesday.

Wright disputed a statement by Dee Contreras, the local's chief negotiator, that a walkout would increase problems with already scarce blood supplies in the two counties.

RAPE

(Continued from front page) education and punishment of rape," she explained. She is optimistic about its possibilities because it will "involve more staff and departments in the (definition) of date rape as a problem."

A study done during Spring Quarter 1986 found that there are between three to ten rapes committed each week at UCSB. Although date rape prevention programs exist at residence halls both on and off campus, Gurse claims "date rape is a very big problem at every college," and is hopeful the new legislation will bring more funds to rape prevention programs across the state.

The bill would also affect the way trials are conducted, making them more sensitive to rape victims, Corbett said. If the bill passes, investigators would not be allowed to bring up a rape victim's past sexual practices, a companion would be permitted to join the victim in court and hearings would be closed at the victim's request, she explained.

Ferguson believes opposition to the bill could come from those in the senate who do not want to take away local authority and put state regulations on college campuses.

In the first of a seven-part lecture series about "The Lessons of Chernobyl," UCSB human ecology Professor Emeritus Garrett Hardin will discuss human reliability in dealing with technology, today at 4 p.m. in Girvetz Hall.

Entitled "On Human Error," Hardin's speech may be the most controversial of the series, according to UCSB environmental studies Lecturer Barry Schuyler, coordinator of the series. Hardin will discuss the correlation between advances in technology and human error.

"The main focus is that the weak point, the Achilles' heel, of the nuclear energy problem is human reliability," Hardin said. "Although the reliability of machines can be increased almost without limits, human reliability has very serious limitations. The reliability of the whole system is limited by human reliability, which there is no prospect of improving."

"This is a fundamental limitation; then this means nuclear energy is not the resource that can be trusted by humanity," he added.

When he first articulated this idea 10 years ago, he did not garner a positive response. "I spoke to a convention of nuclear people on the same topic. They listened politely and that was the end of it. They didn't object, they didn't respond, absolutely nothing — because, of course, this threatened their whole livelihood," he said.

The series, sponsored by UCSB Arts and Lectures, the Environmental Studies Program and the Office of the Chancellor, is expected to answer questions concerning present and future effects of last year's Chernobyl nuclear accident.

At least 110,000 Soviets were forced to evacuate their homes when the fourth unit of the nuclear power plant at Chernobyl exploded on April 26, releasing tremendous amounts of radiation into the Soviet Union and Europe.

"When the accident happened, it seemed appropriate to get some experts in the field to address some questions," Schuyler said.

The series includes six lectures and a wrap-up panel discussion featuring four nuclear power experts.

"There are all kinds of different sides to the whole question of what happened in Chernobyl — what its implications are as far as regulations in the United States, environmental effects, social effects, politics behind it and questions about the future of nuclear power," said Films and Lectures director Roman Baratiak.

"I think it's real important we keep that particular incident in front of us and consider (it) whenever we're looking at future ideas about nuclear power," Baratiak continued. "And just how people respond to a major accident like that — did the Soviets get the information out to people or did they suppress the information when they knew there was an accident? And how do you deal with an international incident like that?"

Dr. Robert Gale, a well-known UCLA medical specialist in the field of bone marrow transplants, will discuss "The Medical Consequences of Nuclear Energy: Lessons from Chernobyl" on April 28. Gale led a team of Americans to the Soviet Union to perform transplants on Chernobyl victims.

Currently, Gale is doing a study on what happened to the approximately 135,000 exposed to radiation.

Richard Wilson, a physicist at Harvard and chair of the American Physical Society Study of Severe Nuclear Accidents, will give a lecture entitled "Chernobyl and the Future of Nuclear Power" on April 14. Wilson was a participant in last summer's Vienna Conference on the effects of Chernobyl.

"I'm very much interested in Professor Wilson's views, because he has just been to Chernobyl," Schuyler said.

Wilson visited the nuclear power station V.I. Lenin, located near Chernobyl, in February and also the Kurchator Institute of Atomic Energy in Moscow where reactors are designed. In addition, he talked with Soviet citizens.

Russian immigrant Zhores Medvedev will talk about "The Environmental Effects of the Chernobyl Accident" on May 5. Medvedev, of the Institute for Medical Research in London, studied the environmental and ecological effects of the 1958 Kyshtym Nuclear accident in the Soviet Union and the effects of the Chernobyl accident.

"I'm looking forward to Zhores Medvedev, because he's from the Soviet Union and immigrated to London. What will be interesting to hear from him is about the accident back in 1958. That area is now pretty much a dead zone. People can't go into that area," Baratiak said. "He did a big study on that and will be able to talk about the environmental effects of Chernobyl."

Rhode Island congressman Claudine Schneider, a member of the House Committee of Science and Technology, will be lecturing on "The Politics of Chernobyl: Toward a Least-Cost Low-Risk Energy Policy" on May 11.

"(She's) one of the brightest younger members of congress. She is a very able and excellent speaker," Schuyler said.

James Asseltine, Commissioner of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, will cover "The Implications of the Chernobyl Accident for Regulation of Nuclear Power in the United States" on April 21.

CALPIRG FEE

In Spring of 1984, students voted to assess themselves a $3.00 quarterly fee to support the program of the California Public Interest Research Group. This fee will be assessed in the following manner:

1. All students who wish to support the CalPIRG program will automatically be assessed the $3.00 quarterly fee.
2. Students who do not wish to support CalPIRG must complete the following simple procedure:
 - a. Obtain a blue CalPIRG fee waiver card from the Offices of the Dean of Students, Off-Campus Studies, or the School of Education, or at the CalPIRG table in front of the UCen Thursday and Friday, April 9 and 10, 1 am to 3pm.
 - b. Fill out your name, alpha number, and perm number on the card.
 - c. Return the completed card to any one of the above offices, or to the CalPIRG Office - Trailers 306 B & C. The deadline for waiving the fee for Spring quarter is January 30.
 - d. You only need to complete this process once during your UCSB tenure. If you have already waived the fee, you need not do so again. If you decide at any time to reinstate the CalPIRG fee, you may obtain a yellow add-on form, using the same procedure.

CalPIRG is the state's largest consumer environmental protection group, with over 90,000 members statewide. CalPIRG is run and funded by students, like you, who wish to enhance their college experience.

Thank you for supporting CalPIRG

Student Job Openings

Applications are now available for Spring Quarter writing positions at the UCSB Daily Nexus. All positions are paid and training is provided.

General assignment reporting posts on the campus desk provide an opportunity to cover student, faculty and administration politics, UC regents, faculty research, long-term campus planning and special events.

General assignment posts on the county desk allow students to report on Isla Vista and Santa Barbara County news, including topics such as I.V. business, housing, homeless, AIDS, Board of Supervisor actions, and other related subjects.

Although students do not need to have experience to work at the Nexus, knowledge of one or more of the above fields and a talent for writing are preferred.

Applications can be picked up at the Nexus office under Storke Tower. They are due by noon Monday, April 13, with the first mandatory training session at 4 p.m. the same day. Inquiries should be directed to William Diepenbrock, editor in chief.

New buildings, like the extension of Kinko's Copies on Pardall Road, continued to pop up in Isla Vista to meet the needs of a growing student population.

New Buildings Rise in I.V. as Population Continues to Grow

By Penny Schulte
Reporter

With an increase in its population, Isla Vista is making room for more buildings and businesses to accommodate the needs of its inhabitants.

Among the new buildings being erected is an extension by Kinko's Copies Etc., where Kinko's plans to open a self-service computer center called Computer Magic.

Scheduled to open in July, Kinko's manager Leeann Palmer believes the computer center "is a necessary service in I.V. that the students can use." MacIntosh Plus and IBM PCs will be available for student use, but user fees have not yet been determined, she said.

The new building, which will also be used for storage and office space, will be housed in Kinko's parking lot. "The lot will still have the same number of parking spaces with an additional two in the back," Palmer said. There used to be a big area in the parking lot for cars to turn around that only wasted space, she explained.

Another building, on the other side of Kinko's, will house three retail shops. Only one of the shops has been leased so far.

Chuck Loring has obtained the lease and is in the process of turning the space into Field House Clothing, according to Merrill Lynch realtor Bob Tuler.

Due to the existing water moratorium limiting new construction, building owner Steve Sakauye was able to build in that location only after he made special arrangements with the Goleta Water District. The district denies any application that requires an increase in water usage, Water Board engineering assistant Dana Frieauf said.

Sakauye, however, arranged to share Piccolo's already existing water meters, according to Suzanne Kochan, coastal planner for the county's resource management.

Piccolo's now must undergo retrofitting, replacing old water fixtures with new, low-flow fixtures to compensate for the new building, Kochan explained. "They're on a plan of limited water use, so the new shops will have to be low water use developments."

One of the new establishments to open in I.V. includes a pizza parlor on Pardall, the fifth such establishment in I.V. However, despite the competition, Giovanni's Pizza owner Danny Babai is optimistic about the parlor's future success.

This is Babai's third restaurant in the county. "I have the product no one else in the country can copy. Students are already talking about it," Babai said.

Babai, however, is disappointed with the county's sign ordinance, which states he cannot put his sign on Embarcadero del Mar. "I want to put it on the side of the building where all of the traffic is (Embarcadero del Mar), but they say I have to put it on the front of the building."

County planner Marta Machacek explained that a business can have only "one sign on each street frontage." Since Giovanni's is not on a corner lot, Babai is only allowed to put his sign on the front of the building.

IVCC Holds Town Meeting to Get Input on Cityhood Proposal

The Isla Vista Community Council will hold a town meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. to allow area residents to give input on the selection of a new council member.

The District 5 IVCC seat, formerly held by Heidi Peyerfite, has been vacated since she was voted out of office for poor attendance, IVCC member Javier LaFianza said. "She never came to any of the meetings, so we voted her out."

I.V. resident Mike Lupro will be nominated for the position at the meeting due to the interest he has shown, said LaFianza. "To get someone appointed we have to have a town meeting. The purpose is to let interested citizens vote on the appointment."

In other business, council members will discuss an I.V. cityhood proposal for the November ballot, LaFianza said.

"Community input is needed to draw up the boundaries. After we decide on the exact plan, we are going to start pushing for signatures to get it on the ballot and before the State Lands Commission."

A plan calling for the incorporation of I.V., Goleta and Hope Ranch into one city has already gone before the Local Agency Formation Commission, the county government entity responsible for reviewing these types of proposals. IVCC hopes to get the I.V. cityhood proposal on the ballot in November to compete with the incorporation proposal, LaFianza said.

The meeting will be held at 889 Camino del Sur in the I.V. Recreation and Park District meeting room, and all community members are encouraged to attend, LaFianza said.

QUESTION #2.

HOW CAN THE BUDGET-CONSCIOUS COLLEGE STUDENT SAVE MONEY?

- Save over 50% off AT&T's weekday rates on out-of-state calls during nights and weekends.
- Don't buy textbooks when "Monarch Notes" will do just fine.
- Save 38% off AT&T's weekday rate on out-of-state calls during evenings.
- Count on AT&T for exceptional value and high quality service.
- Hang around with the richest kids in school; let them pick up the tab whenever possible.

If you're like most college students in the western hemisphere, you try to make your money go a long way. That's why you should know that AT&T Long Distance Service is the right choice for you.

* AT&T offers so many terrific values. For example, you can save over 50% off AT&T's day rate on calls during weekends to 8 am, until 5 pm Sunday, and from 11 pm Sunday through Friday.

Call between 5 pm and 11 pm, Sunday through Friday, and you'll save 38% off our day rate.

Ever dial a wrong number? AT&T gives you immediate credit if you do. And of course, you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections any place you call.

To find out more about how AT&T can help save you money, give us a call. With a little luck, you won't have to hang around with the rich kids. Call toll-free today, at 1 800 222-0300

Speakers at Conference Focus on Afro-Americans in Business

By Brian Cosgrove
Reporter

In an effort to promote Afro-American achievement in both the business and academic worlds, the UCSB Black Business Association held its first annual business conference Saturday in the UCen.

The conference, which is the BBA's biggest event of the year, drew approximately 50 people from professional business firms, UCSB and other California universities.

Several prominent speakers, including Gene Hale, chairman for the Los Angeles Black Business Association, and J. Melvin Muse, president of a Los Angeles-based advertising firm, gave a variety of presentations dealing with Afro-Americans in business.

One of the purposes of the business conference was to establish BBA as a legitimate force in the business world, at UCSB and at other universities. BBA adviser Mark Armstrong, the Educational Opportunity Program student affairs officer, said the association "is attempting to network itself with similar programs of other universities and eventually even expand on a national level to both universities and private companies."

Muse praised the association for its commitment to the future of Afro-Americans in business and advised attendees to work "for your life" instead of working for money.

Racism is a major preoccupation in the Afro-American business world, Muse warned, stressing that attention should be focused "less on racism, more on work, on action."

The goal of the BBA is to further gains made by Afro-American students and to provide positive role models and leadership for youth. The organization strives to aid Afro-American students in their effort to earn scholarships and internships, and to pave the way toward achievement in life.

Kenny Smith, a freshman tailback for the UCSB football team and a member of the BBA, said the conference was an "opportunity to know successful people and to get a knowledge of the business world."

The BBA was founded two years ago and is currently under the leadership of co-chairs Veronica Jordan, Michelle Wilkins and Felicia Cousar, all UCSB students.

Inflation, Stationary Budget Threaten Cut of UC Library Serials

By Garner Eastham
Reporter

Due to the rising costs of serials and the plummeting value of the dollar in Europe, libraries on all nine UC campuses are being forced to cancel their subscriptions to numerous journals and serials.

Decisions concerning what journals will be canceled will be based on recommendations from faculty members. These recommendations will be reviewed in a few weeks, according to Joe Boisse, UCSB's head librarian.

Decisions have been difficult because most of the journals the library currently subscribes to are fairly important, Boisse claimed. Most of the less important ones are inexpensive or even free, so canceling them would do nothing to help the budget, he said.

The cutbacks will affect researchers, faculty and graduate students who depend on the publications to keep them aware of advances in their fields, according to history Professor John Talbott, who chairs the UC Systemwide Committee on Libraries.

"It will have less of a direct impact on undergraduate students because they don't actively consult the periodicals in question," Talbott said. "Indirectly, faculty might miss some material that might be useful in teaching undergraduates."

The whole decision making process has been "very time consuming and very frustrating," according to Norma Kobzina, UC Berkeley's chair of the UC Librarians Association. The number of serials to be canceled will depend on their individual costs, she explained.

The primary difficulty with the budget is that while prices of books and serials continue to skyrocket, the library's budget doesn't call for any inflationary augmentation. Because of this, the library estimates that "its expenditures for serials will be between $235,000 and $300,000 in excess of funds that have been allocated," according to a memo from Boisse's office.

A prime example of the increases in the costs of periodicals can be seen in Science of the Total Environment. This magazine from Amsterdam Publishers has risen in cost from $520 to $945 for a year's subscription. Because it is relatively important, this magazine is not likely to be cut, Boisse said. UCSB currently subscribes to between 20,000 and 21,000 serials, an estimated 35 percent of which are foreign.

The costs of foreign journals have especially skyrocketed due to the decline of the dollar in the European market. Boisse called these increases "just the tip of the iceberg in terms of increasing costs of information."

Library budgets are set by state legislators and are out of the hands of the universities themselves. The magnitude of this problem continues to grow because "there is little possibility that (the libraries) will receive any inflationary augmentation for the '87-88 fiscal year," Boisse said.

While all of the libraries are trying to work together to make sure that the campuses don't cancel the same subscriptions, this collaboration has not been approached "very systematically," Kobzina claimed. Berkeley, however, will cancel "probably no more than 30 titles," she said.

While some students expressed great concern over the issue, others had sentiments similar to sophomore Bruce Marchant. "I'm sure that there's a lot of magazines that no one hardly reads," he said.

"There's a lot of magazines that only a few classes are using," freshman Greg Hing said. "The library should keep the magazines that the majority of classes are using to benefit the most people."

Deciding which serials will be cut and which will remain is a process still underway. The library faces a May deadline for its decision. "Obviously, we don't like to reduce the materials we are using ... but it's a fact of life we have to live with," Boisse said.

"The best way to remedy this," Talbott added, "is for the state to allow for a university budget that will allow these price increases to be taken into account."

It's That Time of Year

Editorial

Ho hum, another crappy day in paradise. The ocean is warming up and Mr. Weatherman forecasts 100 straight days of sunshine and cool breezes. And while we won't go so far as to further this pretty picture by describing Disney-like scenes of chirping birds and singing bumblebees, it's pretty nice around here this time of year.

The metamorphosis that occurs at UCSB around springtime is a peculiar thing in the world of higher education. And it is taken very seriously. No room here for the units that were stacked on during winter quarter. Pack up the turtle-necks, whip out the shades, make sure to register for classes that only assign reading as homework and pass the tanning oil.

People hate UCSB for what we have here. We're continually chastised for being blessed by Mother Nature with the world's most agreeable climate. Party school, they say. Kids just surf all day and everyone is blond.

Okay, so we know how to have a good time. But what appears to some as a "hedonistic" atmosphere has allowed for the procurement of some of the nation's brightest professors and students, who also want to get into the action.

UCSB is a hotbed of academic activity throughout the year. It shows in the many hours students spend fighting for limited study space and enrollment in already impacted classes. Unfortunately, it is also evident in the high stress-victim caseload at the Student Health Center. There's a lot of worrying done on this campus over a myriad of issues, from grades to social change.

And even with such fervor, not everything gets addressed. For example, students recently decided on an electronic marquee for a senior gift instead of a giant condom for Storke Tower. But we still don't know whether the lagoon should remain a repugnant biology experiment. Or if, with a little cement instead of muck, it would better suit the campus as a swimming pool. Then there would be no need to locate a new aquatics center.

We make light of it, but students know that the problems facing this campus aren't always so cheery. There's a constant hustle and bustle, and we never have enough time to do the things we feel we must.

But who are we kidding? Let's not be so masochistic. If the need is there to work yourself, why not take advantage of what makes everyone else jealous (especially us journalism junkies trapped in our self-imposed subterranean fishbowl) and relax. Spring is here.

BOSTON — Elizabeth Reese doesn't fit the public profile of a victim of sexual harassment. She isn't a secretary or a mine worker. She wasn't backed into a corner of her office or chased around the desk. She wasn't propositioned or threatened with the loss of her job. Nobody laid a glove on her.

Nevertheless, this 33-year-old Washingtonian has in her bank account a freshly minted check for $250,000 in damages for sexual harassment. In a District of Columbia courtroom last fall, she beat the odds and beat the indifference of a firm that refused to pay attention to a pattern of verbal abuse.

Three years ago, an attractive, self-possessed young professional woman who had never encountered sex discrimination was greeted by her superior with these words: "Elizabeth, do you f--- for the firm?" From then on, as she said in court, this man persistently told her that she should prostitute herself for business, and then told others that she had. His incessant, lewd inquiries into her sex life and his insinuations tracked and finally stalled her career in marketing at the Washington branch of the architectural-design firm, Swanke, Hayden & Connell.

"I had all the usual thoughts," says this woman. "Am I being too sensitive? Am I bringing this on

Why This Ed

Robert Apatow

(Editor's Note: The following column will begin a weekly series that will raise questions about the state of education in America today.)

Why this education? Americans spend billions of dollars a year for education. America's youth, on the other hand, devote the better part of their time trying to avoid education. What do these people want to achieve and what do they get?

"GRADUATION"

In the early sixties John F. Kennedy had national goals which culminated in the moon landing. Imagine the students of America on that same journey. As it stands today their only thought would be to touch the moon and return as quickly as possible. They are strapped into their seats, face forward, speechless and lifeless as they carry out their programmed functions detached and uninterested. Throughout each day of the flight they follow the same routine. The cockpit they sit in prevents them from turning their heads. All day they are bombarded with trivial details, so that they never have a moment to even turn aside from the work and gaze out the window at the marvelous wonders or contemplate the splendor of the universe they travel through. Upon their return to Earth would such travelers ever desire to journey again?

Education is the tool through which society is shaped. How are we affecting the youth of America? What values are learned? As children we have primarily one job or purpose — to go to school. In what way do children understand this purpose in relation to their own lives? In school they learn the meaning of success and failure. How does this affect their own view of self-worth? There is much talk about excellence in education in America, but how does this relate to excellence in living. From where does excellence arise or creativity or genius? Are the stolid regimented and monotonous classrooms of America the breeding ground for such qualities?

As students move to higher education does much change? The subjects usually become a bit more interesting, more freedom is granted, but the same institutional values remain. How important is true learning in this education? The answer lies in the methods, structure and content of this education.

Plato recognized long ago that learning results from myself? Am I doing something to intimidate this man? This kind of thing destroys your self-esteem. It gets you wondering about your capabilities and your objectives."

Transferring the Guilt to Those Who Deserve It

Harassment Ruling Encouraging for Women

Beth Reese tried everything she could imagine to deal with the situation herself. She tried making jokes. She tried confrontation. She tried, one after another, going to the partners in the firm. "Nobody took it seriously." The same firm that restored the Statue of Liberty let the woman in the office be smeared.

Because she liked the work, because she was good at it, because the harassment came from one manager, "I took it and I took it." The very last straw, the very last day, was when Reese saw this man approach a colleague, seven months pregnant, with a bent coat hanger in his hand. Looking directly at her womb he said, "I guess I am too late for this." Beth Reese then and there decided to quit and to sue.

"This man took my job away from me. I couldn't perform my work. This man reduced me to a wreck. This man put a screeching halt on my career," says Reese, who still struggles to maintain her composure when she talks about her year at Swanke.

"When she came into the office, she looked like a rape victim without the bruises," says one of her lawyers, Susan Brackshaw, with just an edge of melodrama. "She was shaky, self-questioning. Every woman who comes in on this kind of case says, 'I just know you aren't going to believe me.' Each one feels like an isolated being."

The issue wasn't whether this man was a sleaze. Or whether the firm was guilty of bad management and wild insensitivity. Sleaziness and bad management aren't illegal. The question was whether verbal attacks — with the knowledge of the company — would be accepted by the jury as harassment.

There are two sorts of sexual harassment that fit the definitions of sex discrimination. One is called quid pro quo, when an employee is required to engage in sex to maintain her job. The other is when an employer creates a hostile or offensive work environment. As one court put it: "A requirement that a man or woman run a gauntlet of sexual abuse in return for the privilege of...work...can be as demeaning...as the largest of racial epithets."

The lawyers who took this case to court worried that a jury might say, "This is the modern world, this is the way people talk and behave in the business big leagues." Victories in these cases were spotty enough to give them pause. "My lawyers asked me what my goals were in filing the suit," remembers Reese. "I wanted someone to make this man stop. Even if I took it to court and lost, I would have made someone wake up."

But the jury of seven women brought in a verdict that would wake up even a $29-million-a-year corporation such as Swanke. When the lawyers' fees are added to the judgement, the bill is close to $750,000. Her tormentor, by the way, is no longer there.

As for Reese? "I feel as if I've been circling National Airport for two years. It's changed everything in my life. I don't know that I'll be as naive and trusting; I'm afraid I'll be hard and cynical."

But such a case as this has a ripple effect, encouraging other women and warning other companies. A judgement against hands-off sex harassment is still rare. Reese is just beginning to understand that hers is more than a personal victory.

Education?

questioning. In Greek the word to learn is the same as the word to inquire. When a student is possessed with a question he becomes self-motivated to learn, and thus develops a relationship with the subject. Our classes are established according to the opposite principle. The classroom is oriented around the professor's questions and thoughts — the one who supposedly knows — rather than the students. Without sincere questioning, the student in unmotivated and lacks a genuine concern or interest in the subject.

This is the state of mind for a great number of students. After formal education has ended how many students continue actively inquiring, and how much of what they studied is retained? Moreover, while in school, how much freedom is allowed for the calm reflection and contemplation of the significance of ideas in one's own life? The truth is the stress and pressure placed on students prevents them from any leisurely thought or reading. In Ancient Greece leisure was the time devoted to such studies.

Instead, this education today places the emphasis on tests. Tests have two purposes. They show what the student has yet to understand in a subject, and they provide a means of grading. After a test, when the student is confronted by his lack of knowledge, misunderstanding and questions, the class ends. The student quickly learns that the system places higher value on grades than on learning, and so the student adjusts his attitude accordingly.

In this education where no emphasis is placed on remembering or reflection, what is the value of the subjects studied? Why do Americans spend as much time in school? Certainly it is better to work and get paid than to pay to work. Ideally, what should be the goal of education? What is the goal of this educational system? How can these goals be incorporated into American education at all levels? These are questions that must be asked, especially by students. We are the consumers of this product. What are your educational goals? In what ways are you dissatisfied? In what way could education be a more enjoyable and worthwhile experience? What are the alternatives and why aren't they attempted? These are some of the questions I will to discuss here this quarter, questions which will hopefully generate a louder discussion of the purpose and practice of education.

Tattle Talk

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Looking down from my seat in political science I noticed a crumpled up newspaper. I should have left it as if it was in the gutter because it certainly didn't belong in a political science classroom. This right wing, fascist student newspaper attempted to influence my world view with emotionalistic appeals that were not based in fact. Based in Freudian repression/projection rhetoric, they told us that left wing policies are simple solutions for simple minds. I failed to find, however, any alternative policy proposals or any clear knowledge of politics. I was told that Mexico was a great and prosperous country. If I remember correctly, the last time I was in T.J. the exchange rate was 1,000 pesos to the dollar. I was also told that Nicaragua has a bad economy just because it does not practice capitalism. Whether this is the case or not, they seemed to forget that they are involved in a war that was not of their own making.

Perhaps the best inaccuracy was when Brian Nomi told us that Howard Baker is our new Secretary of State!! He is the Chief Presidential Advisor!! To call President Reagan's blatant disrespect for international law a simple mistake is blasphemous. President Reagan has violated our trust and has done so repeatedly in the past and with an early deployment of SDI seems to want to do it all over again. He has broken U.S., O.A.S. and several S.A.L.T. treaties in office with a passion that is fueled by his one sided, isolationist and non-conciliatory ideology. Ollie North is not a hero. He acted above and beyond his position in the NSC — if you took the time to read the Tower Commission report you would know this. This is against the law. By the way Brian, get a spell-check program for your computer — it's okay to have divergent, non-sensical opinions but please do not expect us to take you seriously when you spell Lebanon, L-e-b-e-n-o-n, and Ayatollah, A-y-a-t-h-o-l-a!

NELS C. HENDERSON

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Conservatism lives at UCSB. It does indeed endow a rational, puppie-loving American with a true sense of hope, in a world gone mad with cynicism, to read the insightful, tolerant and long overdue patriotic words of our newest publication. The Tattler conveys an America long since relegated to the history books. It infuses values and ideology in which we no longer seem to concern ourselves with. We must be thankful for that.

We must get down on our knees and thank Pat Robertson or a fabulously trim Oral Roberts, for the forboding gift embodied in the form of The Tattler. There is truth here and we must not close our eyes to it. We must look and listen. It is not often that we are allowed to study pig-stupid men and women in the flesh, and we must be thankful for this opportunity that The Tattler affords us.

Where else could we be reminded of the horrors of racism unless we were able to see it in print, in pig-stupid grammar, right here on campus. Yes, I will send Pat Robertson my rent money. We will be reminded and we will not forget. He has delivered to us the words, thoughts and infantile drawings of a handful of "students," who I am sure, will someday end up on a rooftop, firing rounds from an M16 at fleeing school children.

What do you do with pig-stupid men who cannot read or write, and insist upon using a typewriter? I still have a difficult time believing this publication was not issued in jest. I would like to believe that this species could not afford the busfare to Santa Barbara from the rifle ranges of the Bible Belt. Perhaps I am wrong. Perhaps they even drive their Blazers to school and go to class. It is a scary thought.

I am very fond of our country and its form of government. It is painful to listen to duckheads talk about politics that have been read to them from the back pages of Soldier of Fortune magazine. However, there is hope for them in a world that gave us Tang. If cats can be taught to urinate in a box, perhaps pig-stupid men can be taught to read.

Honor Award

Editor, Daily Nexus:

In this University, there are countless employees who work very hard to make the student's experience at UCSB a positive one. These people go out of their way, and above the call of duty to help, encourage and educate thousands of undergraduates and graduates yearly. Yet, unfortunately, too seldom are their extra efforts publically acknowledged and appreciated. To honor those faculty, staff and administrators who take that extra step to help the students of UCSB, the Margaret T. Getman Service to Students Award was established. This award, in its third year will recognize the extraordinary efforts of three university employees. Now is your chance to thank those people who have helped you and others! Nomination forms are being accepted from March 30 to April 17, and are available at the University Center Information Desk, the Activities Planning Center, the Office of Residential Life, the Counseling and Career Center, and the Alumni Association. Nominations are accepted from all university affiliated people, and will be due no later than 5:00 p.m., April 17 (in the Activities Planning Center). So if you know a UCSB employee who fits the above description, let them know they are appreciated by nominating them for the 1987 Margaret T. Getman Service to Students Award!!

Editor, Daily Nexus:

We would like to add one point of information to your March 30 article on the College of Creative Studies. Many courses offered by Creative Studies are open to all UCSB students, including students in the College of Letters and Science and the College of Engineering.

CCS classes do not appear in the regular UCSB Schedule of Classes due to the fact that they are arranged late, in order to accommodate the curricular needs of current students and to take advantage of current faculty's expertise. Students are welcome to come by the Creative Studies office (in Building 494, kitty corner across from the Psychology building) and pick up a listing of our courses, which is usually available about one month prior to the beginning of each quarter. CCS courses can be added to the students' schedules through schedule adjustment.

Special All Staff Meeting

Set for Tues 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

In the Daily Nexus Office

All Nexus staff members are invited to take part in the staff endorsement of the 1987-88 editor in chief. Three candidates are in the running and copies of their proposals are available at the front desk of the editorial offices. Whether reporter, photographer, sales executive or production employee, you only need to have appeared on the last three pay lists to cast your vote.

The session will begin with candidates presenting their ideas at 5 p.m., followed by questions from staff and the vote. The decision made will be forwarded to the UCSB Press Council, which makes the final selection.

Please attend and make your voice heard.

(Continued from front page) office," Bell said, adding that one student said he "should do to (Bell) what they do to roosters."

The Associated Students UCLA Communications Board decided in a five-to-three vote to suspend Bell and Daily Bruin art director Brian Fujimori for one week without pay, effective Feb. 13.

The next day, however, the Daily Bruin advisor told Comm Board that Bell had not been given due process according to the board's constitution. The two editors were reinstated.

As a result of suggestions to Bell and others on the Bruin staff, "we now try to include minority sensitivity when training new staff," Bell said. Other recommendations, such as "setting Affirmative Action at the Bruin and scheduling more minority coverage" are being considered, he added.

Bell considers many of these suggestions to be "a lot more reaction than reason," stating that since things have cooled down, "the minority groups have not followed up" on their complaints. "We do mean to respond to any concerns that exist, though," he added.

"A private publisher can approve and disapprove anything he wants, but (the Sundial) is a public forum and has to be open to all views."

—James Taranto

The controversy did not end at UCLA, however. On March 5, the news editor of Cal State University, Northridge's Daily Sundial printed his own signed editorial concerning the Rooster cartoon.

In it, James Taranto condemned UCLA's Comm Board for having "a double standard... in fact, no standard at all" concerning insensitive and offensive material. He was also critical of UCLA's black student newspaper, Nommo, saying that "most of (its) content arguably falls within the (Comm Board) rule on stereotypes," but that no Comm Board action has been taken.

According to Taranto, the next day, Sundial publisher Cynthia Rawitch called an "emergency editorial meeting about the article." She delivered "an angry lecture, obviously upset," Taranto said.

Taranto was then suspended without pay for two weeks, effective March 9. The reason given for the suspension was that the cartoon had been published without proper identification along with the article. Rawitch, who could not be reached for comment, has stated in other publications that "... I would have suggested that he set it (the comic) apart — rather than plunking it down on the editorial page, which made it look like our cartoon."

Taranto disagrees with her reasoning and said that the decision for his suspension was based more "on the fact that she disagreed with my opinion" than on the issue of proper identification. "In her critique of the issue, she wrote nasty, incoherent comments next to my article, implying racism," Taranto said.

"Another inconsistency is that at first she said that she would have pulled the cartoon, but later said that she would have allowed it if it were identified," he continued. "She was grasping for straws against the piece," he added. Rawitch has stated that "my reaction is completely beside the point in this issue," he said.

"We now try to include minority sensitivity when training new staff."

—Ron Bell

Taranto also questioned Rawitch's authority for suspending him. After consulting the Law of the Student Press, Taranto said, he found that the suspension was unconstitutional.

He said he "informed Rawitch of this, but she would not rescind that suspension." He then threatened to take legal action, he said.

Rawitch based her authority on the fact that a journalism class publishes the Sundial. She has stated that "the publisher is the instructor of the class... not checking with me first about possible negative ramifications of running the strip is a violation of Sundial policy."

Taranto contends that the Sundial is a public forum, and therefore must be open to all points of view.

After the suspension, Rawitch has since established a rule that "editors had to report to her what was going on and gain her approval," a rule that was lifted the day after Taranto's return to the newspaper, he said.

An editorial supporting the suspension was also run in the Sundial. "The whole issue has had a chilling effect on the paper," Taranto said.

Though he cannot gain back the time he lost, Taranto stated that he was trying to "work within the university to have the suspension declared unfair." If his efforts there fail, he said that he would consider taking legal action.

Since the two incidents involving "UC Rooster," college newspaper editors have questioned the role of the First Amendment in college press.

"The whole issue has had a chilling effect on the paper."

—James Taranto

The University of Southern California Daily Trojan recently hosted a conference for Southern California college editors to discuss censorship in the student press.

The meeting featured press law specialists Marion Wymore and Tony Cordero, who discussed the problems at Northridge and UCLA with approximately 20 editors. According to Daily Nexus Editor in Chief Bill Diepenbrock, participants decided that when such problems occurred, all college newspapers would provide coverage. The resolution will be submitted for approval at this weekend's CIPA meeting.

UCSB pitcher Sandy Ortgies was instrumental in putting the Gauchos back on top last weekend.

Women's Softball Team Back on Track After Hawaiian Trip

By Scott Lawrence
Sportswriter

The women's softball team has just completed a weekend road schedule which matched it against conference rivals Cal Poly Pomona and UNLV.

The Gauchos (7-9 in conference, 22-17 overall) started their weekend and good play with a double-header against Pomona on April 2. Pomona is one of the better teams in the country, ranked second in the PCAA, and fourth in the nation. Not intimidated by Pomona's ability, UCSB went on to split the two-game series, losing the first game 1-0, and winning the second by a 5-1 margin.

In the second game with Pomona, the Gauchos were led by senior Sandy Ortgies, who helped the winning cause by spanking a three-run double, giving UCSB all the help it needed to emerge with a victory. Pitcher Pamela Reynolds got the win as Santa Barbara showed that it could hold its own against the top-ranked teams.

On Saturday, the Gauchos traveled to Las Vegas to take on the women of UNLV, who are ranked eighth in the PCAA with a 3-13 conference record. UCSB was once again led by Ortgies who pitched the Gauchos to victory in the first game, and also came on to post a win in the second game.

The Gauchos swept both games of the double-header by scores of 1-0, and 5-4, completing their successful weekend, and at the same time showing themselves, and their fans, that they are indeed "back" from their less-than-spectacular play in Hawaii last week.

"We played really well this weekend and are back in sync in terms of working together as a team," notes second year Head Coach Brenda Greene. "In Hawaii we weren't playing together that well, and because of that we were a little flat. We hit really well and our confidence is back. We've straightened things out, and we should be all right from here on out. We're feeling better about ourselves as a whole."

The PCAA is the best conference in the country in terms of women's softball, with five of its 10 teams ranked among the nation's top 10. The Gauchos finished the 1986 campaign with a conference record of 11-17, and an overall record of 20-30. UCSB is hoping it can utilize its experience toward improving on last year's performance and finishing the season among the league's best teams.

The Gauchos travel north today to take on Cal Poly San Luis Obispo in a non-league contest, and on April 11, the team travels to Fresno to go against the PCAA third-ranked Fresno State Bulldogs.

GaUCHO Basemen Host USIU in Two-game Series

The UCSB baseball team, fresh off a series win over UC Irvine, hosts United States International University today at 2:30 p.m. The Gauchos and Gulls will battle again tomorrow at Campus Diamond.

The Gauchos enter with an 18-14-2 record. Last year after 34 games, the Gauchos were 23-11 and finished 45-19.

The 1986 Gauchos hit .348 as a team; the current squad is hitting .299. That figure may be misleading; the Gauchos have slowly been improving at the plate and should increase that mark to well over .300 at their current pace.

The 1986 pitching staff finished with a 4.67 ERA, while the current staff's mark is 5.06. But once again, UCSB's pitching of late, especially that of the bullpen, has shown improvement.

The 1986 Gauchos finished with a .964 fielding percentage; the current figure is .953. However, in their two wins against Irvine, the Gauchos committed only one error after a horrendous four-error performance in Friday's 10-2 loss.

If the Gauchos plan on switching into overdrive during the conference schedule, as they did last year when they won each PCAA series, these three figures must continue to improve. As for the hitting, designated hitter Tom Logan (.364, 27 RBIs, three home runs), Tim McKercher (.350) and Joe Kemp (.336, 29 RBIs, five home runs) will have to continue their consistent hitting.

Relief pitchers Lee Carballo (1.35 ERA, 3-1, four saves) and Butch Seuberth (2.92 ERA, 2-1, three saves) have, for the moment, stabilized a shaky pitching staff. Seuberth is now the all-time leader with 10 career saves (Frank Spear, in 1983 and 1984, had nine) while Carballo is right behind with nine saves.

UCSB Crew Teams Place Well at San Diego Crew Classic

By Geoff Folsom
Sportswriter

"The boats are aligned, we'll have a countdown start: five, four, three, two, one, etes vous pret partir!" were the starter's commands at the San Diego Crew Classic last weekend.

Every crew approached the starting line anticipating the French commands, fearing the inevitable pain which would test their integrity throughout the 2,000-meter race course. Victory came to the crews who were able to dig deep within themselves, and discover fellow oarsmen and women on the ends of their blades.

UCSB rowed on the edge last weekend. For a transitory six minutes they were truly living, immersed in a battle which adequately reminded all crews of their mortality. More importantly, the Crew Classic exemplified the struggle between man and himself.

The Varsity Lightweight men and women placed fourth and second, respectively, in the Crew Classic Middendorf Cup finals. The openweight women placed second in the Cal Cup finals with an exciting finishing sprint. The openweight men were favored to do well but missed making the finals of the Cal Cup by one position.

The purity of rowing leaves little room for excuses. During a race it's the eight oarsmen's blades synchronously "catching" and "releasing" the water which sends the boat along its course in a centipede-like motion.

A good crew, like a great crew, is efficient at moving a boat through the water. What separates the two is an insatiable desire and necessity to win.

"When you're out there racing blind with pain, you have to assume the role of a warrior," Head Men's Coach Doug Perez explained. "I ran across some literature concerning an Indian warrior tribe. They approached war desiring to face death over defeat. 'Today,' the warrior would say as they entered battle, 'is a good day to die.'"

It may sound a bit fatalistic, but the coach of many experienced years and championship teams is taken seriously by his oarsmen. The apparent simple motion of rowing, with its many hidden intricacies, has been the battleground for young men, and more recently, women in America for over 150 years.

Perez and Head Women's Coach Jan Palchikof are satisfied with their teams' overall performances at the Crew Classic. Both teams are racing about where they should be for the early part of the season. Last year, the rowing team in general peaked too early and faltered slightly at the season's concluding Western Sprints. UCSB's performance at the Crew Classic is an indication that all crews are on the right track toward a victorious season.

The promise of popular publications at bargain prices coupled with an aggressive sales pitch can trap students in a bogus magazine sales contract.

believes the police department had received at least ten calls about solicitors. "It is not something that we write a crime report on every time it happens. These guys are all over the place ... these guys will accost anywhere. How you avoid that, I don't know."

According to Profio, the criminal salesman will usually select a female living alone as a customer. The salesman, usually a "rather attractive" young man, will either confront the woman walking on campus or invite himself into her home, he explained.

"Be it on her bed, be it on her couch, or be it on a bench near the library, he will make her sit there and listen to the entire sales pitch, which is usually along the lines of ... trying to get together enough points to win a trip to Europe or something like that," Profio said. "But these guys don't get trips. They do it for cash."

Because the solicitor may appear to be very friendly and personable, consumers may never question the individual's methods or honesty, Profio said. "What concerns us most are their aggressive tactics. Women are the targeted customer and intimidator is a primary sales pitch."

Although no injuries or serious accidents have been reported in relation to hard-sale solicitors, there have been reports of rude and sexually aggressive tactics when customers fail to purchase a magazine.

Sometimes salespeople push their way into off-campus residence halls, plant themselves office manager Lenore Chapman. "I can't answer for the franchisee because we are just a magazine clearinghouse," Chapman said. "If you do find one (hard-sell solicitor) please call us. We'll be more than happy to straighten this out ... we can forward the complaint to the franchisee and he is expected to do something about it."

Profio agreed that the problem is at the field level. "The parent company is completely legitimate.... The problem is that they had little control over the people that they hire out in the field."

Problems with magazine solicitors are not limited to door-to-account, by sending the consumer a "prize" for which she or he must "sign here."

Although Siegel has not signed any contracts with the organization, the salespeople have continued to aggressively pursue him, he charged. About two weeks ago he received a phone call from a woman who claimed that he hadn't paid a bill for a magazine subscription.

"I told her, 'I haven't ordered any magazine subscriptions,'" he said, "but she started getting pushy ... and said she would call again."

"I feel like I've been invaded," Siegel said. "I fell for it because I'm a student. I was doing homework and I was tired when I got the call ... I feel they're targeting the student population because they're not on their feet."

"The fact is you have the right to say no.... If something sounds too good to be true, then it probably is."

door salespeople. UCSB junior Ted Siegel received a call from a woman who, through a "slick" conversation method coupled with intimidation, sold him a $594 magazine subscription, for a total of seven magazines over five years.

"They call you up and seem like they're someone you know," he explained. Throughout the conversation, which lasted about 20 minutes, the woman always referred to him by his first name. The persistent methods the woman used made it difficult to either

Students need to be aware of their "right to say no," Profio emphasized. Victims often write checks for subscriptions merely to get the solicitor to leave the residence, and stop payment on the check immediately after.

However, students should not have to be put through this sort of pressure, Profio said. "If you want to buy the magazine, buy the magazine — don't buy the salespitch," he said. "The fact is, you still have the right to say no.... If something sounds too good to be true, then it probably is."

Salespeople using hard-sell tactics are difficult for detectives to locate because they generally spend only one to two weeks in any given area, Profio explained.

There is a limited number of actions a police officer can take when confronting these magazine sellers. If the officer feels there is a violation of the law, the violator can be booked in county jail.

If the officer does not see such a violation, the officer may either release the offender with a citation or choose to tell the individual to leave the premises. In the latter case, the officer will write up an incident report of the situation which does not appear on the individual's criminal record.

"Historically we have written more incident reports than anything else," Profio said. "I don't really have the statistics."

The UCSB police department is taking an active role in attempting to cut down on consumer harassment. "I'm not interested in telling the magazine solicitors ... how to go about getting permits," Profio said. "I'm interested in warning the students to be aware of these hard-sale tactics that these guys use."

(Gina Nagler contributed to this article.)

"They (hard-sell solicitors) end up by sort of tricking you into thinking you have agreed to buy the subscription and that the verbal agreement is somewhat binding."

—Ted Siegel

on a potential customer's bed and refuse to leave until a sale is made, Profio claimed.

UCSB is not alone in experiencing solicitor problems. Both UC San Diego and UC Irvine have reported incidents of illegal solicitors stemming from one particular "parent company" located in Houston Texas, according to Profio. "UC Irvine had one of these magazine solicitors as a suspect for sexual assault."

The Texas company, Summit Publishing Service, is owned by R.L. Pennington, who claimed that he could not do much to monitor the problem. "We have little control over the actions of our field representatives," he said.

Because SPS is a magazine clearinghouse, the only contacts made with magazine franchisees are when the company receives the consumer orders, according to SPS hang up or not cooperate, he said.

"She made it seem like a promotional deal and that 'you're lucky you're home' type thing," Siegel said. Although Siegel said he was not interested in buying the subscription, the woman told him he was being tape-recorded and "made it seem like I agreed," he said.

"They (hard-sell solicitors) end up by sort of tricking you into thinking you have agreed to buy the subscription and that the verbal agreement is somewhat binding," he claimed.

However, Siegel contends that the "real scam" is the salesperson's attempt to get the consumer's checking account information. He believes the solicitors try to get written consent, which would allow the company to make direct transactions with the consumer's
