Few of my weekend adventures downtown do I recall without incident, but the first time I went down to Mel's was a full-on life-changing experience. I had strayed but once from the State Street scene, and I did not know where else could offer me a good stiff drink with my fun. Little did I realize that getting away from it all would bring me closer to that goal.

I entered Mel's under the familiar round street sign. The place had been around for 60 years; it had strong foundations. I needed this place to while away a few hours of leisure time. I was easily able to secure myself a seat at the bar, and soon the barkeep came over to entertain. He had many a story to tell, and brought a tear to my eye when he showed me a portrait of a beautiful movie star from the old days.

The ample drinks kept flowing as I conversed with my fellow guests, watching some television at the end of the bar. With each dry martini, I swore to myself that I would have another, and then another. I invited my closest friends to the luxury of the real bar atmosphere, and they were grateful.

Take a step back. Get perspective. Drink different. Drink at Mel's.

I had a dream one day. I dreamt that there could be a place created for the equal pleasures of sushi, pool and drinking. Everybody would enjoy themselves at this place so much they would go again and again, wishing never to leave. Then my dream came true.

Q's Sushi-a-Go-Go on State Street downtown had my dream; its owners erected an edifice worthy of consideration when you next travel for a weekend night of fun. Behind the lavish facade is a place for all to enjoy. It took me one trip to be reeled in hook, line and sinker for the joint.

The sushi bars are especially delicious, with their exotic variety of raw fish and vegetables. Many patrons choose to enjoy these dishes with a tasty beverage drawn from one of the many fully stocked wet bars. Once satisfied, they drink a little more and shoot pool to their hearts' content.

In my mind, nothing could be better. In fact, I rarely enjoy doing anything else anymore. I highly recommend Q's for anyone looking for a good time.

Of all the things Monkey liked to do best, he enjoyed strolling around outside on the streets of wherever he was living at the time. He enjoyed seeing all the people doing things and going places Monkey couldn't get around to all at once, and so with his imagination, he attempted to live vicariously through just watching people come and go. But he didn't have that much free time, so he usually had these daydreams when he himself was in transit from some Point A to another Point B.

Monkey paused for a brief moment of reflection. Then he paused again a few years later.

One bright morning, he was walking by a local church to go shopping when he saw a big pile of dog stuff deposited neatly on the sidewalk. Being a nimble little fellow, he deftly stepped aside and proceeded, noticing only that "Hey, that pile of dog stuff was very neatly deposited on the sidewalk there."

He was planning on going to the local organic food store to get some food that agreed with his stomach. Too many pesticides on the fruit and vegetables in conventional markets mixed in with the minerals and metals in the municipal water supply had disgusted Monkey to the point that he had, on this bright morning, chosen to find a new source of nutrition.

So after he came back the same way with a fat sack of leafy greens and herbs for sustenance throughout the day, he noticed that the pile of dog stuff on the sidewalk now had a footprint in it. Monkey thanked his lucky stars that it wasn't him that fell victim to the treacherous mire. He chuckled for a moment when he remembered a joke a friend had told him; that a pile of dog stuff would be a "dog log," and a pile of dog stuff after it had been stepped in was a "dog waffle." Again, he proceeded onward.

He came back once more, on his fine local eatery. He was walking past a post office when a piece of paper caught his attention. He bent down only to find that before the paper had been written on, a drop box where kindly folks could drop their mail had been intended. It had been intentionally left there.

Monkey thought that that was a bit of a waste. He said to himself, "Man, these criminals who try to thwart the chaos of the world are a pain toward another. That is worse than the pain of a drop box across the street."

But then he thought he would like to reverse this heinous wrong against civilization. He went to the door of the office and volunteered to construct a new drop box. That sole act of kindness about the situation, as he now had a drop box, was all right once more.

It made him a lot more sure of himself. The other day, after being harangued by the righteousness of some feisty people dressed in red, white, and blue.

That damned fool was the luckiest man on the face of the earth.

reading some literature about the problem. "Why bother?" Monkey thought at the time. "I want something done, I do it, and I do it."

But these people who were his friends, if he wanted something done, he should have done it himself.

He was invincible! No one could stop him! Then they got him on plagiarism ...

But feeling lazy doesn't mean he renounced his responsibilities. If he was going to trust his business with someone else, he wanted to make sure that they were going to do as good a job as he would. He interrogated the clipboard jockey.

"Is the government good at what it does?" he asked.

She looked away and mumbled something.

"Is it expensive?"

She said something about her candidate reducing the price of elementary school education or lowering taxes. Monkey was getting bored. He had stuff to do. So he walked off while the lady was still talking.

On the way home, he walked past the church again, and the dog waffle had changed again. A bicycle had left its tracks in it and all Monkey could think about was that the stuff had probably been flung by the tire onto the bicyclists' back and how that would have been unfortunate for him and that this story was getting really ridiculous ...

COCKTAILS

60 Year Tradition

SANTA BARBARA

Aside from the obvious people-watching advantages of being located on State Street, Calypso offers a fun kick-back atmosphere as well as an assortment of delicious dishes and drinks.

Perhaps you'll be more gutsy than me and willing to try a meal with "Jamaican jerk" sauce, but if not, you can choose from a variety of salads, sandwiches, burgers and Mexican meals. I can vouch for the tastiness of its soft tacos, and my dining companion, who claims you can judge any place by its burger, assured me that his was a high-quality sandwich.

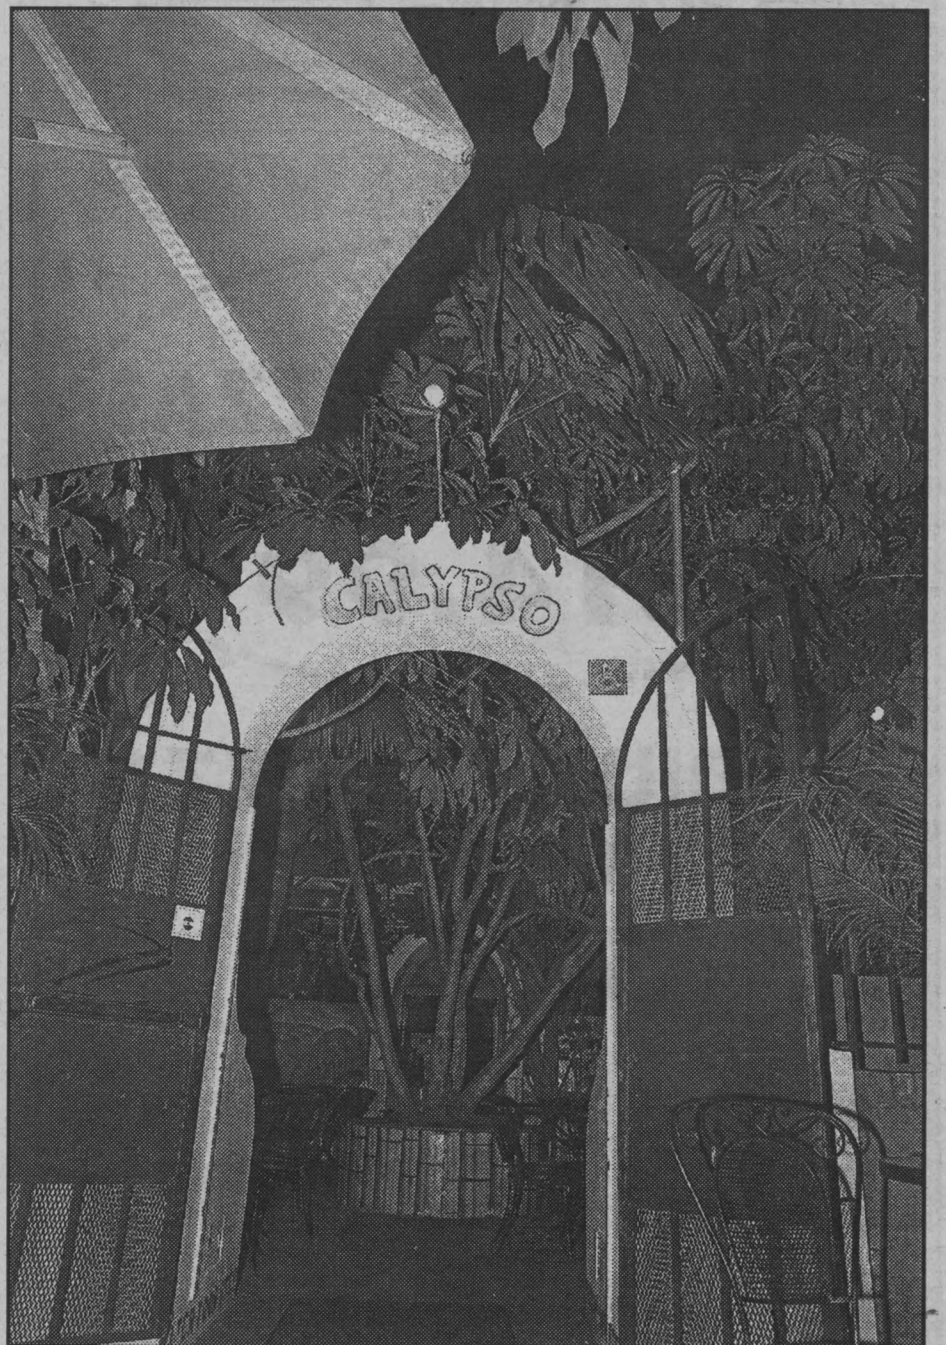

As we sat at a table for two on the sidewalk outside of the main bar and patio area — both of which become booming centers of downtown frolicking for Monday night football and weekend revelry — we enjoyed the comfort of a server who never rushed us and drank from glasses that never emptied. We were surrounded by friendly people — the servers, patrons and passersby. Who wouldn't be amiable about two-for-one drinks?

When our meal was finished, we met up with friends who were taking advantage of the warm patio and heat lamps immediately inside Calypso's doors. We shared a few more drinks, played a game of pool and went home with the feeling of a night well spent.

If you find yourself in the mood for a good meal or a good drink, head to Calypso for a guaranteed good time.
