"Quite Simply, The Best in Sociability"

Beach Shack

By Daisy Dragnet

Ever since I recently viewed Saturday Night Fever starring John Travolta my soul has yearned to boogie. I know it's hard to believe, but a typical day would surely include a strut down the street — any street. Nay, I lie. It didn't matter where I was, be it a walkway, corridor, bathroom stall, I'd dance. Thankfully the Beach Shack cured my urge to burn baby, burn.

The Beach Shack offered me a Tuesday night with the most excellent theme of "Dangerous Disco." I accepted, and immediately got on the horn to round up the chosen posse: those who I knew would boogie down. My chosen lot were all the more willing to join in the Beach Shack games when I told them about the drink discounts they offer every night until 10:00 p.m.

"Drink," I said, "all you want without blowing your entire paycheck. Beach Shack margaritas are $2, Long Island iced teas are $3 and 14-ounce Coors light drafts are only $1." Don't make us dress up they whined, and I relented but they each snuck in their favorite accoutrement. Chris had his sexy, hairy chest exposed and highlighted by a gold medallion, and Bebee my best friend wore her very special white leather "come ?!# me" boots.

We all got very drunk, but burned off the extra calories by dancing all night to the outrageous Bee Gees, Village People, Rick James, K.C. and the Sunshine Band — hmmm "that's the way uh huh, uh huh, I like it, uh huh." Bebee absolutely loved the margaritas, and Chris loved the crowd full of young, hip, and healthy Santa Barbarians. Gus, our other friend, preferred to sip vodka tonics while having intellectual chats on the Beach Shack's outdoor brick terrace with whoever he could find that didn't want to dance. I just wanted to dance.

Everyone had a great time. Drinking at their two-bar establishment, and dancing on their enclosed dance floor, watching others dance and chatting on the heated outdoor patio were options enough for this crowd. The night could not have been better.

It was loony. Every night at the Beach Shack is a party. Their live band selection, including Common Sense, on different nights is almost as exciting as "Dangerous Disco" — minus the pelvic thrusting and pointing rapidly to the stars only to whip your extremity quickly downwards.

"Life is good," the posse concurred as we all strutted away from the Beach Shack — too soon, even though it was closing. We were sweaty and we were drunk — all of us. But that didn't matter — not tonight. We all had a safe ride home. Bill's famous drunk bus stops in front of the Beach Shack on the weekends — right in front of the Beach Shack until 2:00 a.m. Tonight our nuclear engineer roommate Rod picked us up in the Suburban.

Get a safe ride home with Bill, a trusty friend or designate a driver and then head on down to the Beach Shack any night of the week. It is hands down the most happening place in the not-so-sleepy Santa Barbara area.

Beach Shack is located at 500 Anacapa St.

FIVE STAR FAST FOOD

For over 50 years, Carl's Jr.® has gotten great reviews from those who love great food. Every day, we charbroil all of our hamburgers and chicken sandwiches, because charbroiling sears in the natural juices of the meat. Our fries, onion rings and fried zucchini are all cholesterol-free.

Go For The Food.

We offer one of the most diverse menus around. There's an All-You-Can-Eat Salad Bar, an All-You-Want Beverage Bar, a full breakfast menu and more. Best of all, every guest gets a generous helping of old-fashioned, friendly service. In short, star treatment.

A Taste of Mexico in Goleta

By Lily Chezabell

It had been three months since I had met with Chloe and Ladella, the two other members of my exclusive lunch club. They had been studying abroad, so when we finally got together last week we had some serious catching up to do.

We found ourselves in our usual dilemma: "What kind of cuisine should we sample today?" Since both had recently returned to California, they longed for something Santa Barbara-esque. After a few minutes, the growls emanating from our stomachs led us to Alex's Cantina.

As soon as we walked in the door, the aroma of those homemade tortillas infiltrated our hungry souls. Our seats faced that ingenious contraption that popped out those scrumptious tortillas almost as quick as we could gobble them down.

We drooled as we awaited our basket of warm treats and immediately gorged ourselves on those thick, melt-in-your-mouth flour tortillas. As quickly as the waitress dropped off a basket, we devoured them all and were asking for more.

We had to make up for lost time. I mean, after two months of eating alone, we had the appetites of voracious tigers. We followed with the Nachos Grande, a heaping plate of thin crispy chips overflowing with soft and steamy cheese, layered with beans and guacamole that was just the right consistency, not like the clumpy kind you find in the supermarket. Olives, salsa and sour cream topped off this amazing mound that was a meal in itself.

After finishing off the appetizer, we submerged ourselves in another basket of those heavenly tortillas. Basket number three arrived just before our gargantuan dinners took over.

My Enchiladas Veracruz took just a few minutes to gulp down. It was filled with sumptuous crab, scallops and bay shrimps draped with a cheese sauce that was fit for the gods. The black beans and rice that accompanied my dish were equally tantalizing. With Ladella sampling my entrée, my plate was wiped clean within minutes.

Ladella was just as pleased with her selection. It had taken her over 20 minutes to decide on the chicken chimichangas, there were just too many tempting entrees to choose from! She squealed in ecstasy after the first bite.

Arousing my curiosity, I sneaked a taste while she was reaching over for another tortilla. I, too, was engulfed in emotions bordering between disbelief and complete ecstasy ... it was the ambrosia of Mexican cuisine.

Chloe, in the meantime, was herself enraptured by the sizzling platter of chicken fajitas, bell peppers and onions. Neighboring customers oohed and aahed at the display and smell of the new arrival.

She begrudgingly allowed me a taste of her dinner, and justifiably so. My taste buds were in bliss. The chicken and veggies were seasoned to perfection, and the dish came with more of those divine tortillas. I snagged one of those too.

In between bites we managed to get in some conversation, although I must admit we were so wrapped up with in our delectable dinners I can't recall much of what was said. Oh yes, we decided to return to Alex's next week to initiate our newest club member, Mortimer.

With all business settled, we set out for home, a dozen "to go" tortillas in hand — in case we needed a snack later.

Alex's Cantina is located at 5918 Hollister Ave. Price range: lunch $4.50 — $5.50; dinner $4.75 — $8.95. Hours: 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

MICHAEL D'EPIC/Daily Nexus

Alex's serves up some of the best South-of-the-Border vittles since Poncho Villa crossed the Rio Grande. Nevertheless, don't even think about going there and not ordering one of their many specialty drinks.

Buster's

By J.G. Forrester

There are some wimpy folks out there who want to consider many different dining options before eating, scanning any menu for a good, long time before deciding what type of food they want. If this is you, you don't belong at Buster's.

Buster's is for people who know exactly what they want, be it good ol' fashioned burgers and sandwiches or a big pitcher of beer. Although the menu offers a great selection of hot and cold sandwiches, all the food options are basically the same: a big helping of meat in bread with some condiments and nice, greasy fries. Mmm, mmm, good.

No, Buster's is not a place for vegetarians or people looking for a measly salad — it's for hungry folks who want to grub, grub, grub some good meaty dishes. Chili burgers, turkey melts, french dips, barbecued chicken sandwiches — Buster's has the good stuff for people who know what they want from an eating experience.

But it's also for thirsty folks who love beer, really great beer, which is readily available. You name it, Buster's probably has it on tap — the place has something like 48 million kinds of brews available through the numerous excellent looking taps along the wall. It's like a beer tap hall of fame.

The atmosphere at Buster's is highly reminiscent of Arnold's from the hit television show Happy Days. Buster's big booths give plenty of room for you and all of your friends to kick back, wolf down a few burgers and wash 'em down with a Lowie Dark. Although the bar area is not the biggest thing in the world, it offers great access to the TV and the endless supply of beer, beer, beer.

Buster's truly seems like something from a different time and place — where the burgers and brewskies are available in large portions. A pool table and darts are available for further recreation, and spacious interior lets every table group carry on without being bothered by too much noise from any other table. In the back room, the Star Trek pinball machine — which features a Lt. Uhura caricature with an extremely flattering amount of chest mass — also seems like something out of a previous decade, and helps to make the entire Buster's experience a memorable joy.

Buster's is located at 6396 Hollister Ave. Price range: $3.25-$4.50. Hours: Mon-Sat 11 a.m.-8:30 p.m. Pub 'til 11 p.m.
