Perfect Fish 'n' Chips & More

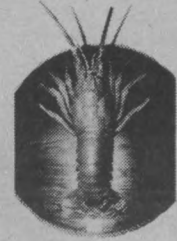

By Reynard Van Nguyen

Every time I go to the Crabby Lobster, I worry. Not because I'm afraid the food will not live up to my greedy expectations (it always surpasses my wildest dreams of savory satisfaction), but rather my fear is that I'll get there and the place will be so packed with piscophile patrons that I won't be able to belly up to any one of my favorite tables. Actually, every table at the Crabby Lobster is my favorite.

Nevertheless, I experience a bizarre mixture of regret and euphoria. The euphoria comes because there's always room for me to pursue my own brand of happiness — fish and chips done right! The regret is that the ready access to each absolutely delicious item on Crabby Lobster's tantalizing menu seems somehow unjust, although I selfishly covet any piece of it that I can.

You see, Goleta's greatest seafood restaurant deserves to be packed with customers every hour of every day, except when the excellent help needs some breathing time. It's not that the place is always empty; I often see my fellow searchers questing for clam or lusting for lobster when I go down with my faithful gal Odessa by my side. But there aren't enough people clued in to the glory of the Crabby Lobster for me to feel that all is right with the world.

The last time Odessa and I went there was, indisputably, the highlight of the past six months. She had been feeling a little blue, as she's a fragile flower who doesn't take stress without bruising. An end was put to that in short order; in fact, the order was so short I can repeat it to you in its entirety: "Two Super Combos, lemonade, ice tea."

In my meditations on why, perhaps, some of you resist what is to me an all-consuming siren call to go down to the Plaza on Hollister and throw caution to the wind, I have come up with two possibilities.

The first is that perhaps your idea of fish and chips is based on a lifetime of palate abuse by people who served you "fish sticks" (or even, yechh, "stix") as if that was at all a satisfactory resolution to hunger, much less a proper introduction to seafood.

With fish sticks, the breasting is pasty, the fish is dry and flat; it's not a pretty thing. At the Crabby Lobster, however, the breasting is crisp, but well herbed and oh-so-flavorful. Even more enticing, the fish is perfect beyond a perfect 10, a perfect host and a perfect accompaniment all put together.

Allow me to digress for a moment; let's talk mollusk. In addition to fried clams and scallops (fried and grilled), the Crabby Lobster features oysters (shots, Rockefeller, etc.). All members of the bivalve family make some damn good eatin'. If this idea makes you a trifle squeamish, get the hell over it or else you are missing out on a treat equivalent to the Seven Wonders of the World times 100 with a fifth of fine Bourbon thrown in!

The second reason why you might not be heading out the door to go to Crabby Lobster already is that there's something about the name that rankles you. Perhaps you get an image of an ornery and pernicious crustacean coming to lash out at you with snapping red claws, and this puts you off. To this I have to say: What do you do with a lobster whose behavior you're unhappy with? You EAT it!! This you can do to your heart's content at the Crabby Lobster.

The Crabby Lobster is at 7127 Hollister Ave. in Goleta, a few doors from Lucky and next to Thrifty. Call 968-2266 for specials, details and hours.

Pasta: Fast, Easy and Delicious. Don't Forget the Bread.

By Ladella Godessa

Spaghetti, capellini, rigatoni, ravioli — at Presto Pasta the choices are many. Between an assortment of pastas, sauces and both vegetable and meat entrees, it would be hard to leave the restaurant unsatisfied — as my friends and I discovered the other evening.

After a long day, Ramona, Chia and I couldn't wait to get to Presto. As we approached the counter to order, we knew we'd find what we like.

"I'll have the Alfredo primavera with fettuccine," Chia told the cashier. Ramona opted for fettuccine with a sauce made of tomato, olives and garlic, while I ordered capellini primavera, which, for those who aren't noodle connoisseurs, means vegetables with thin spaghetti pasta.

As we headed to the soda fountain, Chia professed that she almost got the eggplant parmesan. "That eggplant sounded good, but Alfredo is my favorite."

We looked around the restaurant to scout for a table and noticed many families and friends enjoying different meals. Ramona said everything looked so good that we should come more often to try other meals. "We should come more often to try other meals," she said.

"I agree," I said, as I led us toward a booth.

Shortly after we sat down, a waiter brought our food — three heaping plates with garlic bread and parmesan cheese on top. "Thanks," I said.

"Wow," Chia said, "I can't believe all the entrees are so inexpensive, considering how much food they bring you."

We all dug in, and the waiter asked if we needed anything else. "Do you need anything else?" he asked.

"No, thanks," Ramona said, adding, "they have really good service," after he walked away.

"How are your meals?" I asked my friends. We all agreed that our plates of pasta were the best we'd had in Santa Barbara.

Chia, who usually never finishes what she orders, cleaned her entire plate and proclaimed, "Put a fork in me, I'm done."

After sitting in the comfortable booth for a few minutes to digest our food, we decided to get up and head home, but not before Chia had time to finish off my garlic bread. "I thought you were full," I said.

"It's just so good, I couldn't resist," Chia said.

Elvis Sighted at Paparazzi's

The "King" says
"Ahhhhh I gotta have it."
Paparazzi's Pasta, Subs, Salads & Pizza.

THE KING Chooses to Eat Paparazzi's Pasta

An unnamed source disclosed that Elvis was spotted at the Lucky's Shopping Plaza feasting on Paparazzi's great food. Elvis has replaced fried banana sandwiches with Paparazzi's PASTA, PIZZAS, SALADS, and SUBS. Everyday he eats at the SALAD BAR and at night he gets truck loads of FOOD DELIVERED. Because of Paparazzi's HEALTHY PASTA Elvis is feeling like a KING again.

Locals' favorite bar. The Wild Cat offers pool, jukebox, strong drinks and live music every Wednesday. Call club for info.

WOODY'S

229 W. Montecito, 963-9326

At this Woody's location the patrons can enjoy their mason jars full of beer while soaking in the western atmosphere. I can personally attest to the quality of Woody's ribs. If you don't go to Woody's for the music, then go just for the ribs.
