UC Officials Strive to Cope with Cuts Made by Governor

By J.W. Akers-Sassaman
Capital Correspondent

SACRAMENTO — Although University of California officials have not ruled out a hiring freeze or student fee surcharge, there is "still hope" that a $37 million midyear budget cut imposed on the university may be reduced or rescinded.

UC officials said they are unsure how the university will cope with the cuts, which the Deukmejian administration imposed in an effort to overcome an unexpected $900 million budget shortfall.

The 2 percent cut Governor George Deukmejian imposed on the running of student agencies, including the UC, is expected to save the state $100 million.

"I don't know," UC President David Gardner said Monday when asked about how or where the university would trim its budget. "We are in the process of analyzing some possible cuts in the budget. We're not foreclosing any options."

The midyear cuts will be difficult for the university to make, Gardner said.

"Because the 2 percent cuts come in midyear," he said, "in effect, they're a 4 percent cut for the remainder of the year. And because 50 percent of the university's budget is uncuttable, the remaining programs face what

Staff Members Move into New Engineering Building

By Patrick Whalen
Assistant Campus Editor

The new Engineering II building is teeming with activity, as engineering departments once housed elsewhere on campus have moved in and begun work.

Professors moving into the new facility from Engineering I agreed that, unlike their previous quarters, the new building offers a chance for separate divisions to work next to each other, but it doesn't have as much space.

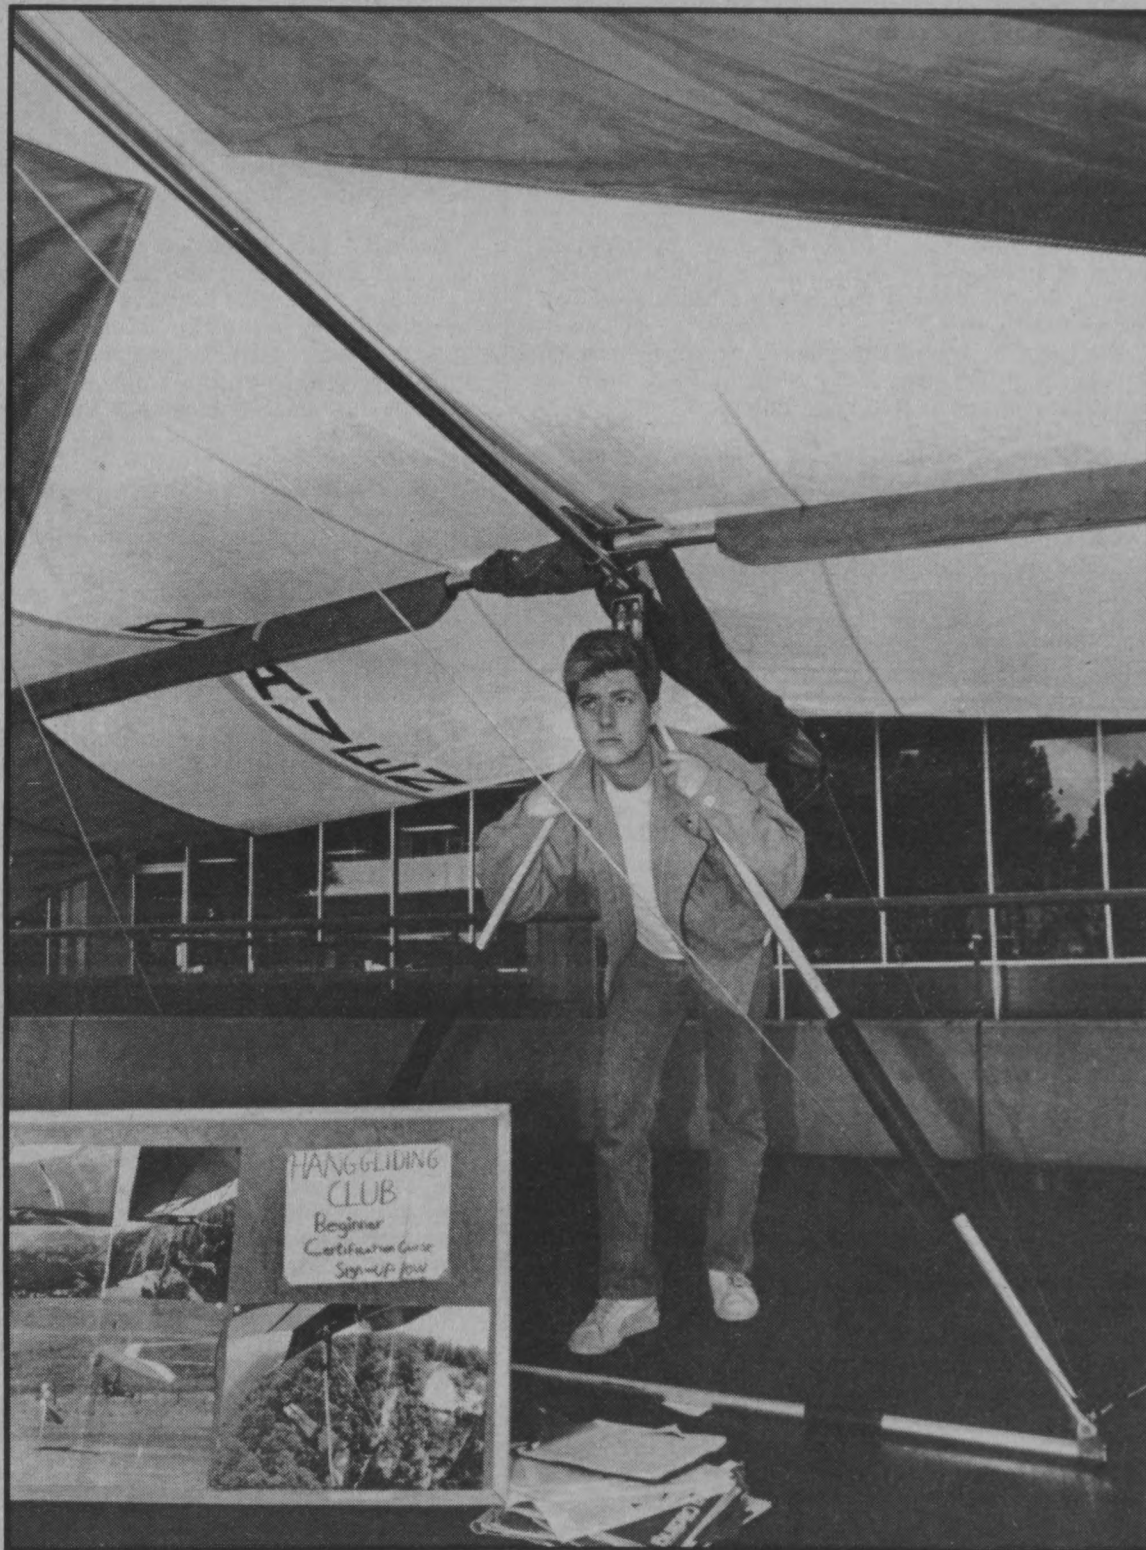

"My new office is nice and has a great view," mechanical and environmental engineering professor Fred Millstein said. "But it's also a little too small. It's about 20 percent smaller than my other office."

However, he said the new building is definitely an improvement. "It's nicer than the old place ... because now all the mechanical engineering faculty are together and we're able to work together better. Plus, labs that were once over in (the) Physics (building) are now over here," he added.

Chemical and nuclear engineering department staff, who previously worked in the Arts building, also cited a lack of space in comparison to their last facility.

"Well, to be frank, it's smaller than where we were before," chemical and nuclear engineering department lab assistant Joe Doyle said. "But UCSB is growing by leaps and bounds and we'll now be able to get more use out of Fly Like An Eagle, Take Off With Me! — UCSB Hang Gliding Club member Peter Maniskas demonstrates a takeoff in front of the UCen yesterday. The club was trying to increase its membership and promote the sport at the same time. An estimated 40,000 people have tried the sport in the last 15 years. Hang gliding requires serious commitment and a considerable amount of time to learn, but is now considered to be safer than scuba diving, rock climbing, or flying single engine airplanes.

State Officials Work to Halt Use of Fake I.D.

RICHARD O'ROURKE/NEXUS

A Department of Motor Vehicles investigator said it was possible that fake I.D.s have been issued from the Goleta DMV.

By Larry Speer
County Editor

The risk of criminal prosecution is not deterring students from using false identification to circumvent California's drinking age of 21.

Approximately 60 people were caught attempting to obtain false identification from Santa Barbara County offices of the California Department of Motor Vehicles in the past six months, but many more passed by undetected, DMV investigator Richard Cathcart said.

Licenses are checked against records in the main DMV computer in Sacramento, Cathcart said, but he refused to list any other methods DMV investigators use to test the validity of I.D. card applicants. "We do catch people, using many different techniques," he said.

Jerry, a 20-year-old Isla Vista resident, used a friend's birth certificate to obtain a California identification card from the DMV office in downtown Los Angeles. "They were so busy I doubt that they even looked me up in their computer," he said.

Cathcart claimed his office is doing "as much as we possibly can" to curtail issuing fake I.D.s. "It is difficult to tell if someone is attempting to get a fake I.D. The ones who are doing this are taking advantage of our agency," he said.

"We accept the birth certificate as proof of age and assume that those coming to our offices are honest and their documents are legitimate. We realize that it is fairly easy to falsify the necessary documents or just lie to us," he said.

There are five DMV investigators in the South Coast area. Two work out of Oxnard, two work in Thousand Oaks and Cathcart handles Santa Barbara County. "Some sort of system requiring additional proof of birth, possibly requiring another identification besides a birth certificate, would allow us to check the applicants out better," Cathcart said.

Those caught attempting to obtain fake I.D.s can be charged with one of two violations. Section 20 of the Vehicle Code states that it is a misdemeanor to knowingly give false information to the DMV, and such an act is punishable with up to a $500 fine and/-

Multimillion-dollar Lawsuits in Dupont Plaza Hotel Fire Filed

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Lawsuits seeking a total of $19 million have been filed on behalf of two victims of the Dupont Plaza Hotel fire, charging hotel management with negligence in the blaze that killed 96 people and injured more than 140 others.

The suits involve a Puerto Rican man who died and another man who was injured. They were filed Monday in U.S. District Court, one day after commonwealth Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon said investigators found proof the New Year's Eve fire was set intentionally.

The family of 63-year-old Juan Rosario Torres, who worked at the hotel, is seeking $9 million in damages. Its suit charges Torres suffered greatly before his death because of the "intentional negligent and careless acts of the defendant."

The suit names as defendant Hotel Systems International of Santa Monica, Calif., which attorneys for the plaintiffs said owns the Delaware-based San Juan Dupont Plaza Corp.

A second suit, seeking $10 million in damages, was filed by Jose Aponte Rodriguez, who was in the casino when the fire broke out. Aponte Rodriguez suffered a broken ankle and a concussion.

The suits contend the 20-story luxury hotel was negligent in failing to install fire-prevention measures such as a sprinkler system, fire walls, and lighted exits, and for failing to have a safe evacuation plan.

Torres' suit also accuses the hotel of "closing and sealing the casino doors and entrapping the decedent." Hotel officials have denied the casino exits were locked at the time of the fire.

Hotel management did not immediately respond to the suit. The New York Times Today quoted a high-ranking federal investigator in San Juan as saying the fire started after an arsonist ignited furniture stored in plastic wrapping "in the ballroom area" of the hotel.

Talks Between Government, Rebels Resume in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines — About 500 farmers raised clenched fists and cheered communist rebel negotiators today as the rebels entered new peace talks with the government. A former senator urged both sides to guard against dogmatism and U.S. interference.

A senior official, meanwhile, expressed doubt that President Corazon Aquino will suspend part of her government's draft constitution to meet a key demand of Moslem rebels for ending their separate Islamic insurgency in the south.

The farmers, who marched from central Luzon Island to demand land reform, cheered as the three negotiators for the communist-dominated National Democratic Front arrived at the State Auditing Office for two hours of closed-door talks with the government.

During today's session, the National Democratic Front submitted a 10-point list of priorities for the talks which include release of remaining political prisoners, punishment of military and government officials guilty of violating human rights agreements, an end to torture, disbanding of civil militias and private armies and a "thorough reorientation and reorganization" of the armed forces.

Reagan Budget is Dismissed by Democrats as Unworkable

WASHINGTON — With the ink barely dry on President Reagan's $1.024 trillion fiscal 1988 budget, it already is being dismissed as unworkable by congressional Democratic leaders as the White House struggles to save the spending plan from an early burial.

The budget calls for sharp cuts in many favorite Reagan targets: food stamps, student loans, housing and mass transit programs.

It proposes cutting in half over the next five years farm subsidy programs while increasing defense spending annually at about 3 percent on the top of inflation over the same period.

To generate additional revenue, it relies heavily on sales of federal assets and loans, and calls for user fees for many federal services.

While the chief emphasis in the new budget proposal is on deficit reduction, it also outlines a number of hefty increases: a three-fold increase, to $1 billion, in funds to help find new careers for displaced workers who have lost jobs in import-battered industries; an enhanced $500 million program to combat the AIDS disease; and $1 billion in new funds to modernize the nation's air traffic control system.

But early indications were that the new budget might be headed the way of the past two Reagan budgets, which were largely ignored.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, a Florida Democrat who will open congressional hearings on the budget Wednesday, said: "It looks to me like the budget does not really have a future."

Reagan-opposed $18 Billion Clean Water Bill Reintroduced

WASHINGTON — Big bipartisan blocs on both sides of Congress joined to challenge President Reagan by reintroducing on Tuesday the $18 billion water-quality bill the president vetoed last November as too expensive.

In the Senate, more than 70 members co-sponsored the Clean Water Act reauthorization legislation, which was introduced and cleared without Republican challenge for floor debate next week.

On the House side, leaders have scheduled a vote Thursday on their identically worded bill, which carried the backing of more than 160 representatives.

Lawmakers in both chambers predicted that a second veto by Reagan would be overridden by Congress, which was prevented from trying to override the 1986 veto because it came after Congress had adjourned.

"I can only hope that now Mr. Reagan will see the wisdom in signing the bill," said Sen. Robert Stafford, a Vermont Republican. "Otherwise he will have to brace himself for an overwhelming veto override, a real embarrassment."

The legislation would give states $18 billion through 1994 to build sewage and wastewater treatment plants and improve the quality of the nation's waterways.

Pentagon Investigating Missile Attack on U.S. Navy Helicopter

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon says it will pursue an investigation today into an unprovoked missile attack on a Navy helicopter that was flying a routine surveillance mission in the Persian Gulf.

The attack, which the Pentagon said occurred Monday morning, came as the chopper approached an unidentified merchant ship sailing off the coast of the United Arab Emirates. The vessel fired a single surface-to-air missile, which the helicopter managed to evade, the Pentagon said.

Defense Department sources said the merchant ship had steamed late Monday into the port of Ash Shariqah in the United Arab Emirates and that the helicopter's home ship, the destroyer O'Bannon, was in international waters when the attack occurred. Efforts will be made today to positively identify the merchant ship, the sources said.

Criminal Charges Filed Against Bus Drivers after DMV Probe

LOS ANGELES — Criminal misdemeanor charges have been filed against Rapid Transit District drivers who allegedly have operated buses without valid licenses.

"It's simply not acceptable for anyone to be behind the wheel of a bus unless they have a valid license," City Attorney James K. Hahn said Monday in announcing the complaints. "Not even one driver should be behind the bus illegally, much less 23 of them."

The City Attorney's spokesperson Ted Goldstein said 29 other drivers have arrest warrants out for failing to appear on earlier charges of having suspended or expired licenses.

But RTD Police Chief James Burgess said that all of the district's approximately 5,000 drivers are properly licensed, and the charges brought against the 23 drivers, and complaints launched against several other employees mentioned by Hahn, all are for previous violations.

"Number one, we're satisfied that all our drivers currently operating vehicles are properly credentialed," said Burgess. Number two, the investigation by attorney Hahn shows that...overall, he's talking about one-half of 1 percent of our total operating force.

Hahn accused RTD management of being lax in screening and monitoring its drivers.

Burgess said that for the past four years, RTD has cooperated with the DMV in a program to spot drivers who violated traffic laws.

Malcom Lucas Appointed as Chief Justice by Deukmejian

SACRAMENTO — Gov. George Deukmejian on Tuesday formally appointed Malcom Lucas as chief justice of the California Supreme Court.

Deukmejian announced his intention to name Lucas chief justice on Nov. 26, but he could not make the formal appointment until Rose Bird's term expired Monday.

Lucas, 59, a law partner of Deukmejian in the 1960's, served 12 years as a federal district judge until Deukmejian appointed him as associate justice of the California Supreme Court in 1984.

Lucas will remain as associate justice on the court until a panel consisting of Attorney General John Van de Kamp, Associate Justice Allen Broussard and Presiding Justice Lester Roth of the state Courts of Appeal in Los Angeles convenes and votes to confirm or reject the appointment.

Broussard is acting chief justice until Lucas' appointment is confirmed.

Tent City Refugees Continue to Hope Shelter Will Reopen

LOS ANGELES — More than 100 homeless people bedded down on a downtown sidewalk early Tuesday after being ordered out of a pedestrian tunnel where they had found shelter since their temporary tent city was closed for lack of insurance.

"We're going to stay here; that's about the only thing we can do," said Joe Fisher, 42, one of those wrapped in an assortment of blankets and sleeping bags and preparing to spend the night outdoors within sight of city hall. "The missions are full," he said.

Shortly before midnight Monday, Los Angeles County security officers cleared the group from a tunnel at the music center where they were planning to spend their second night, said police Sgt. Charles Mealey.

"We're out here in front of the tent, exposed to 40-degree temperatures on the hard, cold sidewalk," said Ted Hayes, organizer of the project intended to call attention to the plight of the city's homeless. "It's not right. It's just not right."

Hayes, who had earlier announced plans to renew an insurance policy for the encampment, said he would appeal today to the county Board of Supervisors for help in getting permission to reoccupy the tent.

A.S. to Discuss Starting Quarters Midweek

By Mairin Smith
Staff Writer

As a result of the "confusion" created by starting Winter Quarter on Monday, the Associated Students Legislative Council will discuss a bill asking campus administrators for a return to the policy of beginning the quarter in midweek at tonight's meeting.

Council member Emilio Pozzi, who authored the bill, claims that Monday's Winter Quarter beginning has created chaos in the registration process.

"This Winter Quarter represents the first time in 20 years that classes have started on the Monday immediately following the winter break, and this change has resulted in a great and unnecessary amount of confusion for both staff and students," he said.

Long lines at both the UCen and Cheadle Hall, a postal delay of administrative materials and a one-half-day period for dormitory residents to move in all prompted the drafting of the bill, Pozzi said.

In other business, Leg Council will resubmit a bill opposing a ban on open containers in public areas in Isla Vista. The bill's authors claim the ordinance would be ineffective because it would be hard to enforce and will not achieve its stated objectives.

Council will also discuss United Farmworkers President Cesar Chavez's upcoming Monday visit to campus, as well as a bid to take over the I.V. Recycling Center.

Leg Council's New Year's resolution is to have greater contact with UCSB's student body, members said. They hope to fulfill that resolution early and urge students to attend the first meeting of Winter Quarter.

A.S. Legislative Council meets today in UCen 2 at 6:30 p.m.

room we have," he said.

"Some professors have more room and some have less, it just depends. It's a brand new building and it's going to take some time," he added.

The engineering materials program, the chemical and nuclear engineering, and the mechanical and environmental engineering departments started to move into the three-story building late November as construction neared total completion. Facilities Management Planning and Construction Manager James Julian said.

The construction, which first began in January 1985, was completed ahead of schedule and under budget by the Continental-Heller Corporation of Sacramento, who contracted for the building in 1984, Julian said. The total cost was $15.8 million.

The space formerly occupied by chemical and nuclear engineering will be used for "academic-type situations," said Glen Winans, assistant provost for budget and administration of the College of Letters and Science.

"We're looking at a number of options, including classroom space for other departments or even adding on more rooms to the building itself. The campus now has an even greater opportunity to make progressive gains," he said.

Juvenile Crimes Increasing in Santa Barbara

By Karl Larsen
Reporter

Juvenile crime has increased in the past few years in Santa Barbara, with the majority of offenses being alcohol-related.

Juveniles were responsible for 10 percent of felonies and five percent of misdemeanors committed in 1985, Santa Barbara Police Department Crime Prevention Officer Richard Abny said.

"The big one is drinking or related crimes ... such as drunk driving or minor in possession," said Raimundo Montes de Oca, Santa Barbara deputy public defender in charge of juvenile cases.

Drug-related crime is another predominant problem among young people. Of the 449 misdemeanors committed by juveniles in 1985, 170 were connected to drugs and 36 directly involved marijuana, Abny said.

"I know a lot of people who smoke pot. I know a lot of people at S.M. (San Marcos High School) who do cocaine ... mostly girls," said one San Marcos High School student, who requested anonymity.

"My brother is a (cocaine) addict. He sold his bed, his stereo, he stole my dad's stereo, his money ... he dropped out of high school in the 10th grade," the student added.

"I'd say about 25 percent of my acquaintances smoke pot. I probably know about three other people who took cocaine," another San Marcos High School student said. "Everywhere I've been — friends' houses, at concerts — I've been offered drugs ... but I have willpower and I turned it down."

A third student also knew a number of people "who are into drugs.... I heard of a girl at school who got caught in a car with a guy running cocaine."

Burglary is another frequent crime committed by juveniles, often in the form of shoplifting.

"I knew the people that broke into Raceway Hobbies in Magnolia (a local shopping center) ... as soon as they were inside, they found an open door to a shoemaker

San Marcos High School students are frequently caught shoplifting at Sav-On Osco Drug, according to Santa Barbara police.

RICHARD O'ROURKE/Nexus

next door. Then they went next door (through the ceiling) to a camera place, but one guy fell through the roof and they had to get out," the first student said. "They set off the alarm ... they got caught," he added.

One student expressed his belief that "more than half of the people rob other people." He said that last weekend, he "met a group of guys ... trying to steal a case or two of beer from a grocery store."

Juveniles tend to commit crimes around the areas they congregate, creating a problem for local merchants, Abny said.

"They (San Marcos High School students) still come in on their lunch hour, but it's hard to measure (how much is lost)," Sav-On Osco Drug store manager

Frank Florez said.

"We know they do get to us in several ways. Sometimes they eat and drink in the aisles before they leave. We try to deter it rather than catch it. Everybody (on the staff) stands in strategic areas, watching," Florez said.

Florez said he receives little support from San Marcos High School officials, despite the fact that he must call the police approximately four out of five days because of juvenile shoplifters. "The high school ... their feeling is it's not their problem," he said.

"It's more of an annoyance to our customers. Some of them won't come in during that (lunch) time," he added.

According to Abny, gang activity is not a major problem in Santa Barbara but does affect other areas of the county. He estimates that less than one percent of all crimes committed by juveniles are gang-related.

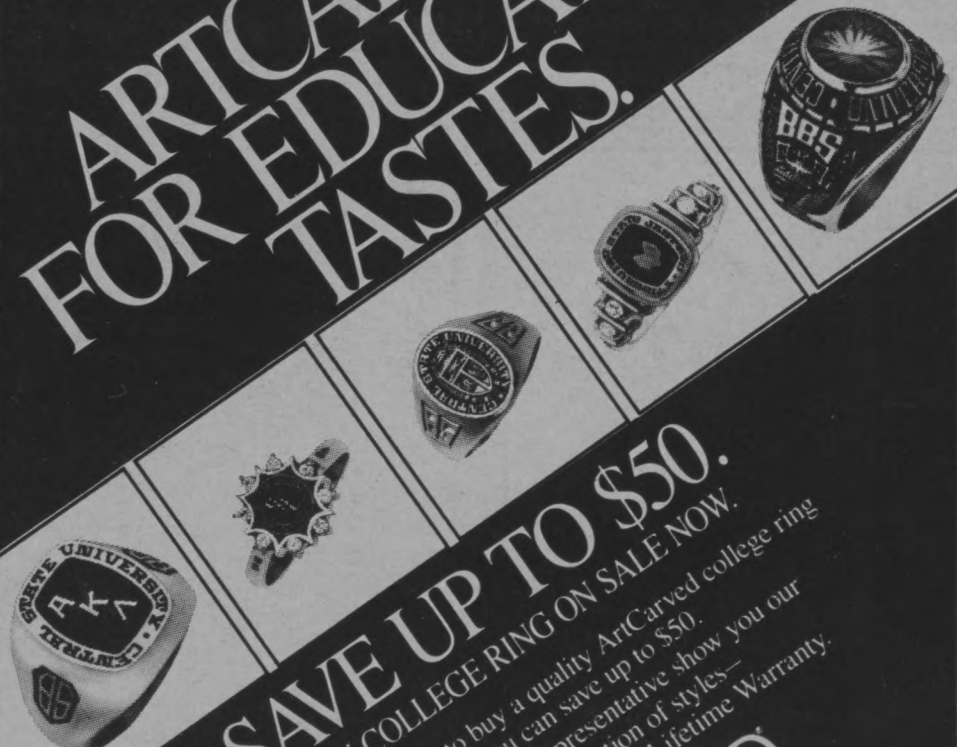

"We have gangs here," Santa Barbara District Attorney Tom Sneddon said. "We've sent a number of gang leaders to prison, 28 out of 32, but only in the north county, which is Santa Maria and Guadalupe. The gang problem in Santa Barbara is somewhat less," he said.

Determining exactly how much activity takes place is difficult because there is no concrete definition of gangs, Abny said.

GEORGE (HOUDINI) DEUKMEJIAN WOWS THE CROWD BY PULLING OUT $1 MILLION FOR HIS BUDGET FROM THIN AIR!

Faulty Logic

Editorial

Promises, promises. Politicians must maintain a steady supply of promises to keep the masses happily appeased. Our state governor is most definitely a politician and very adequately fills this requirement. True to the stereotype, many of his promises are also empty ones.

In the case of the University of California, a supposedly high priority for George Deukmejian, higher education has once again become threatened by a stroke of his own pen.

Keeping in step with his mentor in the White House, Deukmejian recently submitted a questionable budget for approval. In his effort to trim a $900 million shortfall, he has imposed a 2 percent cut for operation of student agencies such as UC. The action has far-reaching consequences and saddles UC President David Gardner with a load of difficult decisions to make.

Primarily at issue is where $36 million can be cut from a system that already cries out with a myriad of needs. Problems such as overenrollment, the need for new or updated facilities and increased student and faculty services are characteristic of not only UCSB, but the other eight UC campuses as well. Administrators are currently attempting to negotiate with Sacramento to avoid the budget proposal. If the measure stands, however, UC officials will face extreme difficulty in determining which areas must cope with the restrictions.

To begin with, half the UC budget is locked into unalterable expenditures. The full effect of the cuts will be concentrated more heavily on the remainder, rather than spread throughout. In addition, the cuts are being unloaded at midyear, which basically doubles their fiscal impact.

The story is actually a quite familiar one. Unfortunately, bureaucrats have a disturbing inability to learn from past mistakes. In January 1983, Deukmejian instituted a similar array of budgetary limits on UC. The result was a backlash of purchase delays, student fee surcharges and a faculty hiring freeze. To even consider such a proposal again brings the governor's fiscal abilities into serious question.

When Governor Deukmejian first took office, he made it clear to the California populace that the well-being of the state's educational institutions was of prime concern. But when forced to overcome debt and determine who gets what, the subject of his cheerleading, education, is one of the first targets for the axe.

And that's not all. President Reagan's recent budgetary appropriations have also seriously hampered students by restructuring such areas as Guaranteed Student Loans. This federal aid will now carry more stringent payback scales and higher interest rates.

Attending a university and remaining in that university has turned into a major challenge. The last thing students need to contend with are further difficulties. Hopefully, the State Legislature will recognize this — and the problems it will cause for administrators — and vote against the proposal.

UC should also strengthen its position by soliciting student and faculty involvement in a fight that directly concerns all members of the institution. This type of coalition defeated Proposition 61 in the November election; it can work again.

1971: the most beloved and remembered school year was the year when my school won the basketball championship when I had my first girlfriend. It was also the year when I had my first cigarettes, the year when I experienced my first political crisis of my country was getting deeper and darker; the mass organizations were expanding and spreading in our bodies. Every sector of Salvadoran society was organized to demonstrate their anger towards the conditions to which the majority of the people were being subjected. Organizations were a vehicle for popular expression.

A couple of years later the military dictatorship unleashed against these popular movements but, above all, against the peasants. In the capitol city, San Salvador, where I was a student, the university and high school students. The dictatorship says "...the communists disguised themselves as peasants to deceive the people and give the impression that they were really against the government..." The brutal repression was machine gunning the people at bus stops, midnight attacks on homes, students' bodies mutilated on community sidewalks, threats, etc. All of this repression was happening with the military and death squads were merely killing "communists."

It is a historical fact that students become rebellious and faced with injustice — in my country injustice and in everyday realities. From the moment you wake up in the Hello, can I speak to the Ayatollah Khomeini? I am sorry the Ayatollah is not in right now, can I take a message?

May I ask who's speaking? Mr. Rafsanjani.

Oh, hello, Mr. Rafsanjani, this is President Reagan. You're kidding.

No. Now listen, this is important. How would you like $30 million in military equipment?

Of course we'd love it. But who would give Iran this type of equipment? I mean we are an international pariah.

And we are the international devil, right? That still doesn't rule out the deal.

What kind of a deal? Arms for hostages.

Now I know you are not President Reagan. Who are you anyway?

No, I am serious Mr. Rafsanjani. Let me put my wife on the phone to convince you.

Hello, Mr. Rafsanjani, my man means it.

Oh my God, I don't believe it. Put him back on the line. So is it a deal Mr. Rafsanjani?

Well, I will have to check with the Ayatollah, but I am sure we can work something out.

See it's not so hard doing business with us after all. No, not at all. The pleasure is all ours.

Hello, Commandante Violente, this is George Bush. Good to hear from you George. More bad news? No, good news, very good news. We have $30 million for you.

$30 million? I don't understand — didn't Congress just reject aid for us?

There is more to the U.S. government than Congress. But doesn't Congress have to approve foreign aid?

I am glad to see that you have been studying your civics books, Commandante, but it doesn't have to work that way.

Oh, you mean the funds are illegal.

No, no, not illegal, just not through regular channels that's all.

And the President knows about it?

You don't think a decision like this could be made without the President's knowledge do you?

I don't know. I just hope this doesn't create any problems.

Don't worry about it. We can take care of it on our end. Now dammit be grateful, we just got you $30 million.

Muchas gracias, Senor Bush.

President Reagan.

Yes. This is George Bush.

George, you sound depressed. Is there something wrong?

You bet there is. The Iran-contra affair is threatening to undermine my presidential ambitions. For six years, I have been loyal. I have put in my time, waiting for a chance at the presidency. And now this blows up in my face.

The people of El Salvador, throughout history have known only misery, repression, and suffering. The word "democracy" which has been so badly misused by the different regimes has become an empty and meaningless word. Freedom and democracy can only be enjoyed by the wealthy few and military who are being financed by the Reagan administration.

I did not need anyone to tell me that my people were living in misery. I did not need anyone to tell me that wealth was badly distributed, that the armed forces which are supposed to defend the national "sovereignty" are simply a private army which safeguards the interests of the oligarchs.

One day, after Constitution class, I was sitting at a bus stop and two peasants approached me and asked me for 25 cents so that they could have lunch. At that point, I told myself that something more needed to be done to begin to solve this crisis besides giving them 25 cents. As a result of this, when I was about 12 years old, I joined a high school organization and, the next thing I knew, I found myself participating in demonstrations and chanting things like, "Stop the high cost of life," "Stop the repression," and "Freedom to the political prisoners." These demonstrations were most often met by bullets as well as persecution to the participants after they occurred. For those reasons I HAD to leave my country, my classmates, my first girlfriend, my family — my roots. They (the government) take away your life one way or another.

1986: El Salvador is a very well defined situation. On one side, there are those who, after losing thousands of their companeros as well as realizing that their voices weren't being listened to, joined up with the Furundo Marti National Liberation Front (the armed opposition in El Salvador). The FMLN is the culmination of years and years of political struggle using peaceful means that brought about a never-ending stream of blood and little, if any, change. In addition, other organizations arose as a result of this crisis such as trade unions, teachers' unions, student unions, mothers of the disappeared and so on. These groups are struggling for the immediate needs of the Salvadoran people as well as working towards increasing the unity among the Salvadoran people at large.

On the other hand, we have President Jose Napoleon Duarte and an army of more than 40,000 troops as well death squads and other paramilitary strike forces which are advised, financed, directed and equipped by the United States. The inevitable question has to be asked: Why does the richest, most powerful country in the world align itself with one of the most brutal and bloodthirsty regimes in the Western Hemisphere?

Is it because U.S. national security is at stake? Is it because the Reagan administration is attempting to prevent the Russians and/or Cubans and/or Nicaraguans from setting up their "bases?" These arguments can't possibly be taken seriously because, as I stated earlier, the injustices are internal. In addition, the Salvadoran people don't need a Soviet (et al.) advisor to come tell us that we are watching our brothers and sisters be slaughtered and our children starving to death.

This war is a natural product of the factory in El Salvador that produces social injustices, inflation of more than 100 percent annually, daily saturated bombardments with white phosphorus and napalm on villages of noncombatants, the denial of the right to learn, and so on.

The struggle of my people is for the right to be treated as human beings, the right to have food and medication as well as the right to have control over our own country. We want to be the architects of our own destiny. We want a constitution that does not institutionalize murder, rape and torture — and we are ready to achieve all of this, regardless of cost. We have already made a down payment with 60,000 lives, and another nearly 2 million refugees (internal and external), thousands of orphans, invalids, sightless and psychologically damaged people.

It is the responsibility of the North American people to be at the very least informed of the atrocities that your government sponsors in my country in the name of "democracy." I am appealing to you to make a comparison between your way of life and the one I have just described to you. I am asking you to raise your voice and fist in protest of what your government is doing. It is up to you to stop this genocide and prevent the seemingly inevitable invasion of my country. And lastly, I am asking you to contact the UCSB office of the United States Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador (CISPES) at 961-2139. My people need your solidarity.

George, take it easy. It's not good to be so ambitious anyway.

Dammit, I was born to be ambitious. I was reared to be president. And now I may not be able to achieve my calling in life.

Boy this is bothering you George. Why not just unburden yourself? Tell everything you know about the affair and get it behind you.

Are you kidding? We are both embroiled in this, I cannot say a thing.

Well, maybe you are right.
Of course I'm right. How did we get into this mess anyway?

Wasn't it your idea George?
My idea? My idea! Well, maybe it was partly my idea, but it seemed like such a good idea at the time. And now. Oh, hell.

Calm down George. This will all pass soon.
Where do you get your goddamn confidence from?
From Nancy.

That helps me a lot.
George, why don't you go out and play some tennis? It would help you relax. Goodbye.

Goodbye. Well maybe tennis is not such a bad idea after all. That or tranquilizers.

Hello, Colonel Oliver North, this is President Reagan.
Oh, you.
Hey is that any way to talk to a man who called you a national hero? Ollie, please understand.

No, I can't. I am being hung out to dry to take the heat off the administration.

Ollie, we just want you to waive your fifth amendment rights, come forward, implicate yourself, and get this crisis behind us.

That's all?
Sure, all I ask of you is to tell who knew, what, when.

You knew about the transfer of funds from the Iranian arms sales to the contras on February 12, 1986.

I did?
You did. Don't you remember?

No, I don't. I must have been on drugs that day.
I thought Nancy didn't tolerate that.

Prescription drugs.
Still.

Ollie, please understand. I am confused, I am hurt, I don't know what to do. The people just don't believe that I am telling the truth.

There is good reason for that.
What is it?

You are not telling the truth.
I am not?

On February 12, 1986 you authorized me to transfer funds to the contras.

I did?
Wait, I don't want to go through this again.

Through what again?
Forget it?

Forget what?
You just did?

I did?
You did.

The Other Side of the Scandal

It would seem that President Reagan has finally run out of luck, would it not? Indeed, news of dealings with Iran and the subsequent siphoning of profits to the contras has severely damaged the administration's credibility. And this is only the latest in a series of foreign policy "blunders." First came the disinformation campaign designed to destabilize the regime of Moammar Khadafi. Then, we saw Reagan "sabotage" the Reykjavik summit by refusing to sacrifice the Strategic Defense Initiative in the name of an arms control agreement. To complicate matters further, Reagan recently decided to violate the (unratified) SALT II Treaty by activating the 131st B-52 bomber. One is led to believe by all this that maybe we all made a mistake in re-electing Ronnie. Maybe the credibility of the president has been hopelessly shot and faith in this esteemed office will inevitably deteriorate. Then again, maybe not.

With all the one-sided stories and reports surrounding recent foreign policy initiatives, it has been exceedingly difficult to achieve any kind of objective understanding of America's role in world affairs. Granted, convincing arguments have been made with reference to the failure of the Reagan Administration to have any visible success on these initiatives. Unfortunately, fewer arguments have been made on the success of Reagan and his conduct of foreign policy. I, for one, am convinced that there are two sides to every story and feel that not enough has been said in support of the president.

Most everyone would agree that Reagan, in his six years as president, has re-established faith and credibility in the office. Nixon's Watergate scandal destroyed public faith, and a change in the role of the President was inevitable. Ford and Carter were unfortunate enough to have been caught in the immediate post-Nixon years. They will not be remembered for their iron-fist tactics and the overall impression of their terms is somewhat mundane. This is certainly understandable since both Ford and Carter had to watch their step and be fully "accountable" so as not to arouse the suspicion of a nation that was still reeling from Vietnam and Watergate. In 1980, though, the nation was once again ready for a strong president — one who would take a tough stand on defense, not back down to the Soviets, and who would restore a strong sense of patriotism through the nation. Reagan has done all this and more. His re-election in '84 bears strong testimony to his unprecedented popularity. In light of this it has been hard to imagine what, if anything, has gone wrong.

Much of the blame most definitely falls on the press. Speculation on the long-term implications of certain policy initiatives began long before the whole story was out. Such shallow reporting only serves to mislead the general public and, as we have seen, damage credibility to the point where an administration becomes powerless. Surely this is not in the best interests of our nation. At the risk of sounding un-American, I feel the media should be less concerned with uncovering scandals which paralyze the nation and more concerned with re-evaluating their role in American society.

In particular, the emerging controversy over the arms sales to Iran, while newsworthy, has been reported in such a way that the public has been misled. Nowhere has there been any mention of the repeated overtures of the Iranian government to the U.S. — overtures which were sincere and could not be ignored. The opportunity to improve America's stance in the Middle East was too good to pass up. In these terms, it is difficult to imagine that the whole affair back-fired as it did. The fault in this instance lies only partially with Reagan, and only in the sense that he was unaware of the activities of subordinates. Yet through all the accusations and denials, Reagan has steadfastly taken the flack directed at the administration.

I'm convinced that Reagan will prevail (I use the term cautiously) through all this, just as he has in the past when faced with adversity. Such leadership not only strengthens a nation's pride on the domestic front, but it also enhances its image in the eyes of the rest of the world. A strong president we asked for in '80 and '84 and a strong president we got. Few would argue that Reagan has not fulfilled this role. In the words of another president, Theodore Roosevelt: "Far better it is to dare mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure, than to take rank with those poor spirits who neither enjoy much nor suffer much, because they lie in the gray twilight that knows not victory nor defeat."

No Skateboard Ban; Policy to be Examined

By Tizoc Tirado
Assistant Campus Editor

A new campus skateboarding policy to strengthen existing regulations will be presented to the UCSB Bicycle Committee today by a subcommittee formed to investigate skateboard hazards, but committee members said there will be no skateboard ban.

If the recommendations are adopted, the Bike Committee will present the plan to the Chancellor's Physical Planning Committee, Environmental Health and Safety technologist Jeff Chung explained.

"There is a campus policy now," said Chung, who chairs the subcommittee, "but it needs to be strengthened."

The proposed policy stipulates which areas skateboarders can ride in and designates certain areas as "off-limits," Chung explained.

"It is not the Bicycle Committee's intent to ban skateboards," he said. "We are seeing how we can set up rules and regulations that would allow pedestrians, bikes, skates and skateboards to work together."

The proposal has met with opposition from members of the Associated Students Legislative Council, who plan to discuss the committee's decision at its meeting tonight.

"They (Bicycle Committee members) said they would let us look at the data before the meeting, but they didn't share it with any of us. Therefore no decision should be made tomorrow," Leg Council member Emilio Pozzi said.

"It's a bad time to have a meeting. We have to make sure that no decision is made until we make everyone aware. I don't want it to be another Arbor Bike Path thing," Pozzi said.

To settle the controversial issue, the subcommittee's six members plan to make concessions to both skateboarders and pedestrians, Chung said.

The skateboarding subcommittee formed after a November workshop discussing the pros and cons of campus skating, as well as ways to improve the situation.

"We called about 37 people," Chung recalled. "They all signed up for the workshop (at the last Bike Committee meeting in November), but only six showed up."

Resulting from the lack of attendance, a summary of the November meeting will be presented as well, Chung said.

"This meeting will be open to anyone interested in the issue," he said. "I don't think it will be very controversial because they know skateboards are here to stay, unless statistics show that they're a threat to people on campus ... right now they don't."

Student Health Service Chair John Baumann, who heads the Bike Committee, urged concerned students to attend the meeting. "People might find it worth their while to come and get their two cents worth in," he said.

FAKE I.D.s

or six months in jail.

According to Section 118 of the Vehicle Code, it is a felony to perjure yourself while giving information to the DMV, and can bring two to four years in jail and/or a fine of up to $10,000.

A deputy attorney in the Santa Barbara District Attorney's office said DAs in other counties have differing philosophies on which charge to bring, but said fake I.D.s generally have a mandatory minimum fine of $100 in this county.

Altering legitimate I.D.s is also quite common, Cathcart said, agreeing with law enforcement officers that there are many students in I.V. using cut, chalked or marked licenses.

An anonymous 21-year-old I.V. resident claimed he has used a marked I.D. since his freshman year. "I have a friend who's an art student, and among his talents is a pretty good aptitude for changing

I.D.s. He can change the date of expiration, the birthdate and the red 'Under 21' stamp. It worked for me everywhere."

Dave, an 18-year-old dormitory resident, changed his Arizona license with a pin. "I etched an eight and made it look like a five in my birthdate. It works everywhere. I just went skiing in Aspen, and if I didn't have it, the trip wouldn't have been the same."

Another dormitory resident has a friend "in the business of making fake I.D.s." According to Jim, his friend photographs legitimate licenses covered with false information on the lines for name and birthdate. He then processes the film and gives the buyer five copies for $25. Approximately 10 people in Jim's dorm have obtained fake I.D.s in this way, he said.

Other students admitted to using friends' licenses, older brothers' and sisters' licenses and other kinds of identification cards, but did not experience as much success as the ones using fake cards obtained from the DMV with their own picture on it.

"I have two fake I.D.s. One is my next door neighbor's and the other came from a one-hour photo place where the guy made I.D. cards. It looks totally phony, but works some of the time," Gary, an 18-year-old freshman, said.

Most local establishments have been diligent in their efforts to stop the sale of alcohol to minors. The Graduate, the Six-Pak Shop and the Pub all have a book with examples of the licenses from every state, which they use to check out-of-state I.D.s.

Woodstock's Pizza has a policy of asking for secondary identification if the I.D. is questionable, Woodstock's general manager Jean Aerni said. "We can only check up to our capability. We might take a fake I.D., but in most cases we scrutinize pretty well."

The Pub requires secondary I.D. for anyone attempting to use a California I.D. card while drinking, Pub manager Luis Sanchez said. "We have an outstanding record as far as selling to minors is concerned," Sanchez said in a previous interview.

Campus police often monitor I.D. checking at the Pub on busy nights like Thursday's Pub Night, Campus Police Lt. Bob Hart said. "We look for alterations, pictures that don't match or any indication that it might be false. We probably get four or five and there's no telling how many people are deterred when they see the officer there," Hart said.

Sanchez said there is no problem with the officers coming into the area, and that they serve as a warning to people who would try to pass fake I.D.s.

Pruitt's Village Market in I.V. checks I.D.s for nearly all people who buy alcohol, night manager Barbara Woodcock said.

"You have to have a California driver license or a secondary piece of identification to use an out-of-state license or California identification card. We have caught a lot of people this way, and we confiscate their licenses," she said.

is actually an 8 percent budget cut. That's going to be hard to do." Gardner said he hopes the cuts will be rescinded or reduced. "There is active discussion in the state capitol," he said.

Ron Kolb, the UC president of communications, echoed Gardner's feeling about cuts. "Our people in Sacramento are talking to head people. We hope we can get an adjustment, but we still don't know." Though UC officials have still not decided what areas will be cut if the budget decreases remain intact, they should have "identified potential areas of cuts and ways to cope" within a week, Kolb said. "Nothing has been ruled out, not even fee increases," said Kolb, adding that making the decision is "going to be difficult." Deukmejian administration officials did not return repeated phone calls Tuesday to discuss a reduction or repeal of the cut.

Great Gaucho Strip-off, UNLV Expected to Sell-out ECenter

Gaucha quiz (I love these):

Why is this year's PCAA home opener for UCSB's Runnin' Gauchos (next Thursday, Jan. 15) different from previous years?

A) Sports Information Director Jay Lucas, accompanied by Asst. Sports Information Directors Bill Mahoney and Diane Riedeman, will sing the national anthem in three-part harmony.

B) The UCSB song girls will don baggy leotards in honor of the opponents' trademark: baggy shorts.

C) Some disappointed students will be turned back from the Events Center.

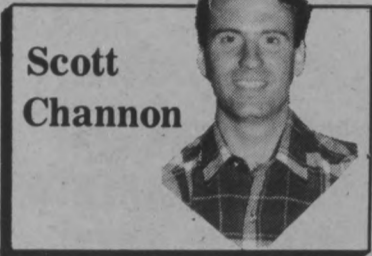

D) The First Annual "Great Gaucho Strip-off" will take place at halftime.

E) The top-ranked team in the nation will invade the Events Center.

F) C, D, and E.

The answer should be a familiar letter to many UCSB students: F.

Even though its still over a week away, Santa Barbara is all a-buzz about hosting the nation's number-one team, the Nevada-Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels. Of course the Rebels have to win home games against San Jose State and Utah State to remain numero uno, but that's almost a given the way UNLV has played at home this year. In their home opener against UC Irvine — the only PCAA team to beat UNLV last season — the Rebels edged the Anteaters, 117-72. Lotsa luck San Jose and Utah.

But the Gauchos won't need luck. They're planning on a surprise attack this year. Since next Thursday's contest will be UNLV's first road PCAA game, members of the team and boosters are going to disguise the Events Center as UNLV's Thomas and Mack Center, red paint and all. The Rebels will walk in, disregarding the two-hour plane ride, and feel at home. That is, until halfway through the first half when all the people in the stands rip off their red sweaters to expose a sea of blue. The Rebel players will surely become homesick and throw (up) away the ballgame.

But seriously folks, the UNLV game is expected to draw a second-straight sellout. In last year's contest, a capacity crowd of 6,000 filled the ECenter for the first time.

According to UCSB Athletic Ticket Manager De Foresta, 2,500 students will see the game this year. The 1,500 reserved seats have already been sold, while a good number of the general admission tickets have been sold as well.

"We're going to limit it (sales of general admission tickets) so 2,500 seats will be left for the students," Foresta said.

Last year, nobody was turned away at the door, but people were left standing, mainly because not every seat was taken.

"This year we will literally have to fill every seat," Foresta said.

At halftime, many people will probably remain in their seats to get a glimpse of the "Great Gaucho Strip-Off." Teams consisting of four males and four females will see who can strip and dress the quickest. For more information, drop by the intramural office next to Rob Gym. The competition will continue through the remainder of the home games, with the finals set for February 28, when the Gauchos host Utah State.

You may ask: Why compete? I'll tell you why. The winning team gets $1,500. And that's not monopoly money.

GAUCHOS GOIN' PRIME TIME: ESPN recently announced that it will broadcast live the UCSB-Fresno State game on January 29 in the Events Center.

When I first heard this, I pic-

SCOTT LEVINE/Nexus

Last year during the UCSB-UNLV game the Events Center did not have to turn away fans. This year they may have to.

tured Dick Vitale clutching his bald head in disgust, while exclaiming, "Get me some real college hoop. When's the first flight to North Carolina?"

However, Vitale won't be making the trip. Maybe next year,

Dick.

Anyway, maybe the UCSB students can rise to occasion and bring a few surfboards (just to promote a stereotype) and paint their faces blue and gold. Start thinking ahead.

ATTENTION GRADUATING SENIORS

IF YOU INTEND TO COMPLETE ALL REQUIREMENTS FOR GRADUATION BY THE END OF THE WINTER QUARTER 1987 YOU MUST FILE AN "UNDERGRADUATE PETITION FOR GRADUATION" BY JANUARY 16, 1987 WITH THE OFFICE OF THE REGISTRAR

only this petition will put your name on the list of degree candidates for March graduation.

there are no exceptions to established deadlines.

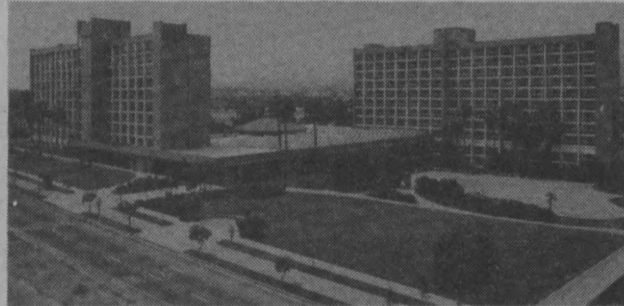

Pizza Bob's Trivia Quiz

Tuesday's question was: What football team has won the most games in the Rose Bowl?

Diane Brewin submitted the correct answer — Pasadena City College. For a number of years, Pasadena played all of their home games in the Rose Bowl and, according to PCC's sports information, won over 25 games on their home turf.
