Dos Pueblos High senior Fred Besançon expresses frustration over a government that he says makes a college degree necessary for success, but unattainable through fee hikes.

UC Cost Closing Door on the Class of '97

By Sandra Brilliant
Staff Writer

With the University of California's yearly fees topping $4,000 come September, high school students have more on their minds than "Beverly Hills, 90210" or what to wear to the prom this year.

Many local high school students believe that the recent fee hikes will make it more difficult, if not impossible, for them to receive an education through the UC system.

"I think it basically scares the hell out of all of us," said junior Nicole Camarena, whose angst-ridden admission

Steve Meister, who teaches this student government class, said that high school students have been busy filling out college applications all year and are well aware of the impact that the recent series of fee hikes will have on their academic careers.

"The students in the leadership class have a really good idea of what to expect from the application process and are well versed on the financial aspects of going to college," he said.

Confused by the state's budgetary priorities, students wonder how they are going to be able to afford to receive the education that they believe they must have in order to get a

Melton Trial Could Go to Jurors' Panel Today

Testimony of Student Accused of Rape Given

By Brett Chapman
Staff Writer

Witness testimony in the trial of a UCSB student accused of raping three women is expected to come to a close today, sending the case to the jury for deliberations.

Timothy Melton III faces six counts of sexual assault stemming from three incidents alleged to have occurred at his Goleta home in 1991. Melton's co-defendant in the case, former UCSB student Schacobie Manning, pled no contest earlier this year to rape charges he faced in connection with two of the incidents.

Manning was sentenced Friday to one year in prison and five years of probation as a result of a plea bargain. While not an admission of guilt, a no contest plea acknowledges that a jury would probably arrive at a guilty verdict based on the amassed evidence.

Police investigations originally focused on two incidents in December 1991; one on the 17th, the other on New Year's Eve. However, upon hearing of charges against Melton, a third woman came forward and accused the UCSB senior of date-raping her in May of that year.

As a result of the new charges, the case underwent another investigation. Several other delays ensued when Melton changed attorneys just after the case entered the pretrial motions phase in January.

Melton concluded his testimony Monday after extensive cross examination by Assistant District Attorney Arnie Tolks. Tolks' questioning jumped back and forth between the various incidents involved in the case, apparently in an attempt to confuse Melton.

Tolks elicited discrepancies between some of Melton's early statements and his current testimony.

Melton testified Monday that after drinking with Manning and one of the alleged victims Dec. 17, the three left between 11 and 11:30 p.m. to see another friend. Tolks said that when police questioned him 10 days after the incident, he could not recall specific times.

"[I was] probably trying to be vague," Melton said. "I was sure then."

Tolks asked if he simply did not want to tell the officer, and Melton replied, "Yes sir. I hadn't talked to anyone else. I knew I didn't have to talk to him."

Halloween is Close Enough for Precautionary Planning

By Lisa Sato
Reporter

It's never too early to plan for a drunken frenzy of iniquities and illegalities; for a UCSB-sanctioned committee, Halloween 1993 is right around the corner.

The Major Events Committee, which was formed in December 1986 in response to a particularly tumultuous Rugby Weekend and Halloween, is made up of students, school officials, landlords, local businesses and law enforcement representatives. Its main purpose is to minimize the disruptive influence of college students' activities on the community.

In past years, the group has sought to localize Halloween and Rugby Weekend festivities by working with safety monitors from volunteer group Red Alert and putting up portable toilets to cut down on public urination.

For the past three months, the committee has been focusing on Halloween 1993. Members want to make the annual October party a safe, localized event, according to committee Chair Naomi Johnson, who is also director of UCSB's Campus Activities Center.

"[Outsiders] don't care about the community. They don't live here, so they don't care what happens to I.V.," she said. "Halloween is becoming a dangerous event, and there are no longer enough funds for law enforcement to support this trend."

While the committee, which reports to Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Michael Young, does not have policy making authority, the group serves as an intermediary between the university and community, and will suggest preventive measures for a safe Halloween weekend.

Some measures the committee has come up with for cracking down on Halloween revelry include: allowing no on-campus visitor parking, using roadblocks to cut off I.V. to traffic, sending representatives to other universities explaining the severity of being arrested and imposing a tax on all alcohol sales.

The committee is also planning to ask local vendors not to sell bottled beer and to avoid having beer and alcohol specials during Halloween weekend.

Open Service to Mourn César Chavez Set for Tonight

By Ivy Weston
Staff Writer

UCSB's Chicano Studies Dept. will be holding a special memorial service for the late César Chavez tonight from 5-7 p.m. in Chemistry 1179.

Chavez, the United Farm Workers union director who devoted his life to improving the plight of farm laborers, was found dead shortly after 9 a.m. April 23 at a friend's home in Arizona. Chavez died of natural causes, according to a dispatcher at the Kern County Coroner's Office.

The format of the service will be an open-mike session to enable students, children, UCSB staff and community members to express their grief at Chavez's passing.

"The main thing is that everyone will be given an opportunity to mourn and express their thoughts," Chicano Studies Dept. Chair Yolanda Broyles-

Gonzalez said. "Students are particularly welcome to come and speak."

Scheduled speakers will include: professors from the Chicano Studies Dept., two graduate students who were teaching assistants to Chavez while he taught a class at UCSB last spring, the director of the Santa Barbara branch of La Casa de la Raza, a teacher at San Marcos High School, a Northern Chumash Council elder and a representative from the UFW.

Artwork by fourth-graders from Santa Barbara's McKinley Elementary School and music played by Francisco Gonzales will also be presented.

"[Francisco Gonzales] learned the songs on the picket lines with César Chavez," Broyles-Gonzalez said.

The film No Grapes and portions of Fighting for Our Lives will be shown. Both films were made by

Christopher Gets Lukewarm Response on Force in Bosnia

PARIS (AP) —Hesitant European allies withheld approval of President Clinton's strategy to use force in Bosnia on Monday, pushing in the meantime for peacekeeping troops to oversee the agreement signed Sunday by the Bosnian Serbs.

Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher said he was skeptical that the peace agreement would hold up. A senior U.S. official on the trip said the United States would support the plan if the Serbs did follow through.

The United States might commit about 2,000 troops as part of a first phase, diplomatic sources said.

His task was shaping up as a test of the Clinton administration's powers of persuasion as well as the strength of the transatlantic alliance.

Christopher left Britain without specific endorsement of either air strikes against Serb artillery sites or the lifting of a weapons embargo that has hampered outgunned Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Prime Minister John Major is concerned that the war could be expanded if more weapons reach Bosnia.

"We're all quite skeptical and we're not going to be deterred. We are not going to be thrown off stride."

Warren Christopher
Secretary of State

And, arriving in Paris, Christopher found the French government in a dissonant mood. Foreign Minister Alain Juppe has described the division of tasks in the U.S. military as unacceptable.

Juppe said that the planned U.S. air role would mean "having some flying in planes and dropping bombs and others, the Europeans," searching for cover on the ground.

France, with 5,000 troops in Bosnia and Croatia on humanitarian missions, is concerned that an allied assault on the Serbs could expose them to new dangers.

The British and French prefer putting the emphasis on such measures as protecting civilians in Bosnian cities and villages with "safe havens." The job could require up to 50,000 troops, including thousands of Americans.

Christopher, expressing doubt that the Bosnian Serbs intend to adhere to the peace agreement their leader, Radovan Karadzic, signed Sunday in Athens, said in London: "We're all quite skeptical and we're not going to be deterred. We are not going to be thrown off stride."

Other Bosnian Serb leaders have questioned the plan, which calls for a cease-fire, an interim government in Sarajevo and establishment of 10 cantons along ethnic lines. They are also hinting the Bosnian Serb assembly would reject the plan on Wednesday, as it has rejected settlements twice before.

Americans Heading Home After Mission in Somalia

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) —American troops pulled out their pocket cameras for some final pictures Monday as they left the compound they have called home for months.

The adjacent squatter camp is still there, but the residents aren't starving anymore. Burglars still try to get through the barbed wire fence each night to loot the headquarters of Operation Restore Hope.

Over the past five months, the U.S.-led multinational effort has virtually eradicated starvation and helped restore some semblance of order to Somalia.

On Tuesday, the United States turns control over to the United Nations, which will call the effort Operation Continue Hope. More than 4,000 Americans will remain for about a year.

Lt. Gen. Robert Johnston will surrender command to Lt. Gen. Cevik Bir of Turkey, who will lead a U.N. force that will eventually reach about 28,000 troops.

There's little doubt there's been a drastic change in Somalia. The streets are relatively safe, at least during the day. Markets are thriving.

"I think we made a tremendous difference," said Maj. Ken Roberts, the U.S. Army spokesman who was heading back to Fort Hood, Texas. "We've done what we set out to do. Now the Somali people have to come together and rebuild."

President Defends Police Action in May Day Clash

MOSCOW (AP) —President Boris Yeltsin said Monday that police acted legally when they blocked a May Day march that turned into Moscow's bloodiest confrontation since the 1991 coup.

A hardline leader blamed the government for the violence, and said protesters would march again Sunday, this time to the city center "no matter what." The government has not said whether it will block the march.

Saturday's street melee erupted during a march by Russian nationalists and pro-Communists. When police blocked marchers from leaving their authorized route, protesters hurled bricks, sticks and flag poles at police who fought back with truncheons, shields and water cannons.

The Interior Ministry said 205 police were injured, with 27 hospitalized, according to the Interfax news agency.

Officials have estimated that at least 70 protesters were hurt.

Circumstances of Koresh's Death Under Investigation

WACO, Texas (AP) —The discovery that cult leader David Koresh was shot in the head before a quick-moving fire killed his followers raises as many questions as it answers.

Who killed him? When? Why? What does it say about the end of the 51-day standoff with federal authorities?

"It's a good question," Jeff Jamar, the FBI special agent in charge during the standoff, said Monday. "The gunfire told us somebody was getting shot. Just who and why is the question."

On Sunday, authorities said X-rays and dental records proved that the charred body and fragmented skull found three days after the fire were the remains of the 33-year-old Koresh.

Toxicology tests will be used to determine how much carbon monoxide laced his body. The higher the level, the greater the likelihood Koresh was alive when fire engulfed the compound April 19. Results will take at least a week.

Preliminary results showed Koresh died of a gunshot wound in the forehead, Justice of the Peace David Pareya said. He said he did not know whether any weapons were found near the body.

Koresh's mother-in-law, Mary Jones, said he wouldn't have committed suicide.

"God the Father told him you can't do that. He says under no circumstances are you to kill yourself," said Jones.

State Department Employee Arrested on Spying Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) —The FBI accused an American employee of the U.S. Embassy in Athens of spying Monday but did not disclose details of the charges.

The employee, Steven Lalas, 40, of Dover, N.H., was held without bail after a brief federal court hearing in Alexandria, Va. He was advised of his rights by U.S. Magistrate Barry Poretz, who will hold another hearing Wednesday to determine whether there is probable cause to continue to hold Lalas without bond.

The contents of an affidavit detailing the charges against him have not been made public.

State Department officials who requested anonymity said Lalas, a communications officer, had top secret clearance with access to cables assessing U.S. policy toward Greece.

Union Activist Appointed to Succeed César Chavez

KEENE (AP) —Arturo Rodriguez, an activist with the United Farm Workers since his college days a quarter of a century ago, was announced Monday as the successor to the late César Chavez, who had been the only president in the union's 31-year history.

Rodriguez, 43, vowed to continue "the dogged persistence which was one of the greatest lessons César taught us. ... Our opponents must understand that we will never give up. We will keep plugging away ... until the grape boycott is won, until farm workers have the final victory."

The new UFW president was the union's first vice president before being promoted by the executive board on Sunday. He is married to Chavez's daughter, Linda.

Rodriguez holds a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan, in contrast to Chavez, who never finished high school. But Chavez founded and ran the nation's most prominent farm workers union for three decades before he died of natural causes on April 22 at the age of 66.

"People have asked what the UFW will do without César Chavez," Rodriguez said at a press conference. "He has already shown us the way. We will continue strict adherence to the principles of nonviolent struggle for which he sacrificed."

Authorities Begin Probe of Fatal Air Show Accident

EL TORO MARINE CORPS AIR STATION (AP) —Spectators' videotapes and film were being scrutinized for clues to the cause of the fatal crash of a 1956 jet fighter during an air show, an investigator said Monday.

Crash probes also looked into the histories of the jet and its pilot, who died in a fireball in front of a half-million spectators Sunday.

The modified F-86 Sabre had been in military service in South Africa and Canada before being used in a civilian aerobatic act, authorities said.

James A. Gregory, 40, a pilot from Amelia Island, Fla., was killed when the single-engine jet hit the runway at the bottom of a loop maneuver.

The National Transportation Safety Board was looking into the backgrounds of the plane and pilot, and planned to interview pilots familiar with the F-86 Sabre, an Air Force workhorse during the Korean War, said spokesman Gary Mucno.

Chicano Filmmaker in Focus

By Diana Ortega
Staff Writer

Film director and Chicano activist Jesus Trevino characterized his work as an offshoot of a cataclysmic time at a lecture Monday afternoon, part of a month-long series on the Chicano political movement of the late 1960s.

Trevino recalled his early years as a young college student involved in the Black civil rights movement during his talk, "The Camera as Politics: the Chicano Movement and the Origins of Chicano Film."

Trevino looked back with remorse over a fragmented Chicano cause that was overshadowed by the national recognition the Black civil rights movement garnered. "I was aware of Chicanos, of our condition, but we didn't have an organized movement at the time," he said.

The filmmaker immersed himself in Chicano politics following the '68 Blowouts — when 4,000 high school students dependent about the declining state of secondary education in the Los Angeles Unified School District walked out of their classrooms.

"The walkouts turned on this repressed Trevino. Suddenly I felt proud of being Chicano," he said.

Trevino began his film career shortly after graduating from college, when he met up with a recruiter interested in minority applicants to a new experimental film college. Trevino used his craft to document anti-war protests, demands for bilingual education and police brutality experienced by Chicano activists.

"It was really media being used to organize politically," he said. The decision for non-participation in protests and the desire to use the media for political reasons was a moral compromise aided only by the fact that history would be documented, he said.

In 1970, Trevino was hired by the L.A.-based public station KCET as a staff producer, writer and director. There he received an opportunity to document the aims of a fledgling movement.

Trevino's growth as a documentary filmmaker was almost stunted in 1972 when right-wing citizen action group Accuracy in the Media threatened the broadcast of what was to be his most influential work. Yo Soy Chicano, which links the past with the current political climate, was the subject of the unsuccessful ploy by AIM to remove what they saw as an inaccurate historical portrayal.

The documentary is replete with re-enactments of early Chicano civil rights struggles, and contains interviews with key political players such as Dolores Huerta, a United Farm Workers leader.

Yo Soy, a 1985 follow-up, found that while Chicanos had made some gains in terms of political representation at the state level, a dismal future and worsened conditions lay ahead for them as a whole.

While Trevino's warning against political inaction hasn't changed, the packaging of his message reflects the varied activism of a post-Chicano movement, said Mario Garcia, a Chicano studies and history professor.

"It's almost impossible to suggest that there is a Chicano movement today. It's much more fragmented than that," Garcia said.

Trevino is currently working on a Chicano version of Eyes on the Prize, the mid-'80s docudrama mini-series that recounted the epic struggles of Black civil rights movements. He is also working on securing funding for two screenplay adaptations.

Film Series Puts Spotlight on Mothers and Daughters

By Natasha Hillis
Reporter

A four-week Wednesday film series exploring the relationships between mothers and daughters is currently being presented by the Women's Center in celebration of Mother's Day.

"The common themes include the pluses and minuses of being a single parent, its challenges and rewards, and what makes it special," said Farfalla Borah, coordinator of the Sexual Harassment Prevention Program at the Women's Center.

Although attendance at last Wednesday night's showing of Terms of Endearment was small, Lori Guynes, who organized the series, hopes that more people will turn out for the upcoming films.

"I want people to have the opportunity to look more critically at feature films and what they say about women," Guynes said. The series "is an accessible tool to have people look at popular culture, women in the media, and to see if our own realities are being represented," she said.

Discussions following the films will address "the complex and fragile relationships between mothers and daughters and how these relationships influence the way we, as girls and young women, grow up," Borah said.

Teresa Espana, another of the discussion leaders and a Women's Center staffer, is concerned with the social portrayal of mother-daughter relationships. "It is amazing to me that some of my peers still think being raised by a single mother is a freaky situation," she said.

The three remaining films in the series are Imitation of Life, Mermaids and Gas, Food, Lodging. The films, shown free, will be screened May 5, 12 and 19, respectively, in the Women's Center lounge.

While the first three films, including Terms of Endearment, had male directors, the last one, Gas, Food, Lodging is a semi-autobiographical story directed by Allison Anders.

"It will be interesting to see the differences in how relations are reflected and portrayed with male directors versus female directors," Borah said.

Presentation of Dr. Fisher's Work and Character Unfair

Christopher J. Guerin, Ph.D.

I find it very interesting that Ellen Whitaker claims to know the truth about animal research (Daily Nexus, "End the Cruelty," April 29). I think it is all too obvious that Ms. Whitaker wouldn't recognize the truth if she fell over it.

Ms. Whitaker's letter is full of distortions, misleading statements and outright lies. For example, she implies that Dr. Fisher pays the tuition of graduate student Bob Fariss because he is connected with CFAAR. This is misleading. Dr. Fisher pays Mr. Fariss's tuition because he has to. It is a policy of the graduate division that all graduate students who are employed as research assistants must have their tuition paid by the professor who employs them. Ms. Whitaker claims that painful experiments are performed in Dr. Fisher's laboratory; another lie. It is a matter of public record that Dr. Fisher's experiments are done under the supervision of a highly qualified veterinarian and that anesthetics and analgesics are always used. She claims that Dr. Fisher uses kittens when she knows that he has not used kittens in his research for over 10 years.

Ms. Whitaker implies that only scientists with a financial stake in Dr. Fisher's work support it; another blatant lie. Dr. Fisher has been supported, (by Ms. Whitaker's own admission) for 21 years by the National Institutes of Health. He is the recipient of a MERIT award, very few of which are given. His grant applications compete for funding with others from all over the U.S. In the years he has been receiving ing funding literally hundreds of scientists have reviewed and approved his work. Does she think that all these persons have a financial stake in his work? Perhaps she also believes that Elvis was kidnapped by space aliens.

In an attempt to give an appearance of credibility, Ms. Whitaker quotes "experts" who criticize Dr. Fisher's work. It is no surprise that all of these "experts" are animal rights extremists. The experts consist of: 1) a nurse. Has he ever been involved in scientific research? If not, what expertise does he have

A List for Those

Peter Bouckaert

Over the past few years, the administration has persistently claimed that a commitment to diversity is one of its highest priorities. However, the practice of the university seems to contradict this public stance. Black student enrollment has declined from 3.3% to 3% and finally to 2.7% over the last three years. Qualified Black faculty have been fired or have had to fight prolonged battles with the administration at every level of promotional decisions. In fact, there are very few minority faculty members who have been promoted or even retained without incident.

The recent controversies surrounding the firing of Otis Madison, Rhonda Levine and Dr. Anthony Hill, the promotion struggles of Dr. Claudine Michel and Dr. Yolanda Broyles-Gonzales, and the university's refusal to hire Dr. Rudy Acuña all seem to clearly suggest a racial and political bias towards the hiring, promotion and retention of minority scholars, and an inexcusable lack of institutional support for the well-being of ethnic studies departments.

In light of these troubling and continuing historical patterns of discrimination, a coalition of student groups has been formed in order to preserve the quality and diversity of our education. As a coalition representing a large percentage of UCSB students, and in the interest of our education, we make the following demands:

Reasons to Live

Students Won't Have to Spend Their Lives Rooting Around in the Dirt for a Degree

Editorial

Now we all know why we voted for the Man from Hope: Moneymoneymoneymoneymoneymoney. Cash dollars, American. Makes ya proud, doesn't it? Proud to be an American.

If you don't know what we're talking about, wake up. You may be able to eat soon. Bill Clinton says so. President Bill Clinton. And if he gets his way past that grumpy wanna-be-Nixon and sexagenarian Bob Dole and his Republican gridlock brigade in Congress, students may soon be able to actually pay for their educations without selling blood, joining the military, or selling blood by joining the military.

Clinton has proposed to lend $10,000 to any student who says they want him to. And it's gonna be at a lower interest rate than those vitality-sucking private banks. And you can pay it back by sweeping streets and digging trails, maybe even join the Peace Corps. And if you don't wanna do that, then the IRS will just take it outta the check you get from that great job that Clintonomics is cooking up for you college-goers. This is America.

Bob Dole doesn't like it. But Clinton says it will save the government up to $4.3 billion annually through 1998 by alleviating the mountain of defaulted government-backed student loans that hit Washington each year because graduates can't find jobs (or because they're lazy or greedy or forgetful, probably thankless). But Republicans don't believe the figures. "Clinton should be concentrating on reducing the deficit, instead of proposing new multi-billion dollar entitlement programs," said Rep. Marge Roukema (R-New Jersey). She ignores the fact that we have to pay these entitlements back.

ment. Amazingly, this time it's aimed at the young instead of senior citizens. One must wonder how important the deficit would be to Roukema if someone asked her to vote to curtail the incredible entitlements allowed to people Bob Dole's age.

In any case, it is feasible that in a little while students will have one more option in what has become the financial endgame of getting all the way through college as the regents yearly make it more impossible. $10,000 could really make the difference for a lot of people who now find themselves too poor to afford school, yet too rich to obtain substantial student loans.

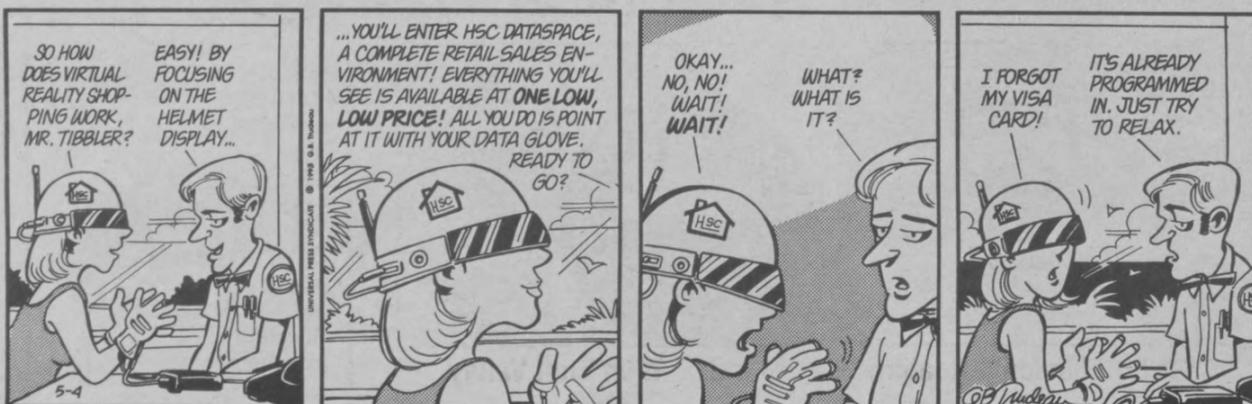

The national service repayment option is interesting as well. Jobs are proposed to fall under the fields of education, environmental protection and human services. Presumably, this means we'll be teachers' aides, national park ditchdiggers and custodians at social services bureaucracies. Jobs, jobs, jobs. Or is it coerced volunteerism? Either way, students get enough money to get them a little closer to a degree and the country gets some well-trained, unskilled labor with no salary demands or union wages. That's big government innovation making our lives better. Hear the applause?

In the days of the Great Depression, the men of the Civil Conservation Corps would go up in the mountains, root around in the dirt for a week, hit up the paymaster, go to Chico, Calif., to get drunk, then go back to the mountains to root around.

Clinton has put this forward in good faith, and if he follows through with some of his much-ballyhooed political capital, he can probably get it through Congress. This is tangible evidence that there is someone in Washington who knows we exist. And people laughed at "Rock the Vote."

Diverge on the 'Truth' About Animal Research

to evaluate Dr. Fisher's work? 2) an anatomist who obviously does not understand ophthalmology well enough to realize the clinical relevance of Dr. Fisher's work, 3) a "neurophysiological researcher" who has no articles indexed in the National Library of Medicine or Current Contents nor any books in any library of the University of California system — how is he qualified to offer an opinion? and, 4) a veterinary ophthalmologist who states "There is no point in doing this experiment" but who is presenting research similar to Dr. Fisher's work at a scientific meeting in Florida next week (surely the height of hypocrisy). What an obviously qualified bunch to criticize Dr. Fisher's work. What Ms. Whitaker fails to point out is that Dr. Fisher is a highly respected member of the vision research community who is constantly called upon by physicians and other scientists to speak about his work. Perhaps she should find some "experts" who do not have a bias against animal research and ask them about Dr. Fisher's work.

Ms. Whitaker further demonstrates her remarkable incompetence by implying that she searched every clinical database in the National Library of Medicine and could find no mention of Dr. Fisher's work: baloney! If she had gone to the library and accessed Medline (the NLM database), she would have found 18 articles Professor Fisher published since 1989. If she had bothered to consult her own friends in Animal Emancipation she could have asked for a copy of their 1990 publication "Whose interest does Steven Fisher serve?" which states, "We consulted the database called Medline. Medline listed 60 articles published by S.K. Fisher since 1983." Could it be possible that Ms. Whitaker is so ignorant or so incompetent as to have missed all of Dr. Fisher's articles; or did she have another agenda in mind, e.g. misleading the readers of the Nexus.

Finally, as to Ms. Whitaker's four friends with retinal disease who are angered by Dr. Fisher's work, I hope they feel strongly enough about their convictions to refuse any treatments developed via animal research. I hope Ms. Whitaker refuses any such treatments. I truly respect their right to do so, but I most certainly do not accept that they have the right to deny the benefits of animal based research to the entire population. They remind me of the pro-life forces who seek to control women's bodies according to their moral agenda. Ms. Whitaker, thank goodness, does not have the right to make decisions for others based upon her own moral code. Neither does she have the right to lie about the character or the work of a man such as Professor Fisher. Could it be that she is not certain enough about her position to convince others with the truth?

Local Pro-Researchers Only Confuse the Facts

Ria Bacigalupa

How sad that, while anti-vivisectionists attempt to rechannel mis-used tax dollars from experiments such as "Torpor in OB/OB mice" (i.e. "inactivity in obese mice," UCSB experiment #ACC 367) into real medical research that genuinely helps alleviate suffering and cures humans, students are kept pathetically uninformed and closed-minded by an adherence to a paradigm desperately in need of subverting.

"Question authority" should be a slogan universal to all students seeking higher education. Sadly, at UCSB we have students such as Eric Strzepek and Bob Fariss, and professors such as Steven Fisher and Robert Jacobs, who defensively cling to archaic notions based upon paternalistic dogmas that are destined to destroy us. Is it not time for an intellectual and moral revolution founded upon respect rather than exploitation? Or are we far too concerned with maintaining a frightening status quo that is perpetuated by small groups such as CFAAR (with apparently less than a dozen active members) that not only siphon our tax dollars into ridiculous experiments, but gleefully hand over to the university 46% of every federal grant they receive?

Is the underlying motive for keeping vivisection alive on this campus a genuine concern for suffering masses, or a genuine concern for money? I vote for the latter.

Tiffany Jones

It never fails to amaze me how a corrupt and exploitive status quo defends itself via feeble attempts to discredit its progressive opposition. Eric Strzepek is a prime example. Each year during anti-vivisection protests, he and his sole companion appear, screaming hysterically about Denise Ford's diabetes. Last year, he and his compadre were escorted away from the Animal Emancipation demonstration by police. This year, he was not only warned by police but was ridiculed by local media, who quipped that the real terrorism did not appear to be coming from the anti-vivisectionists. He also was asked by one anti-vivisectionist if he would care to calmly discuss the scientific merit (or lack thereof) of vivisection at UCSB. He had no answer.

Perhaps vivisectionists at UCSB and throughout the nation have realized that the only way to defend their illegitimate experimentation is by diverting the attention of the public to nonissues. It is amazing that UCSB points to medical breakthroughs attained by others while continually refusing to discuss their own experiments. They proudly say that they are part of a superior sect seeking a cure for (among other things) AIDS, while their own documents (often withheld or censored) attest that their idea of AIDS research is watching the courtship rituals of fish.

We all can figure it out sooner or later. UCSB vivisection simply has nothing to do with saving lives. It's time to stop screaming about diabetes, heart disease, terrorism, baby haters, and all the other garbage that is thrown in the face of people in an effort to blind them from the truth. Let's hear about exactly what UCSB is doing, and more importantly, exactly how many diseases have been cured by the likes of such compassionate and peace-loving persons as our dear friend Eric.

Those Who Truly Want Diversity

MATT RAGLAND/Daily Nexus

1. As our foremost and unconditional demand, we demand that the administration reverse its decision to not renew Otis Madison's contract, and that the administration offers Otis Madison a three year contract as a lecturer.
2. We demand the immediate creation of an ad hoc committee to investigate the administration's promotion practices towards minority faculty, lecturers and staff.
3. We demand an immediate creation of a time schedule for the creation of a masters and a doctorate program in Black studies.
4. We demand an expansion of institutional support for ethnic studies programs, including a 50% increase in ladder-rank Black faculty by Fall 1995.
5. We demand the creation of a council of minority affairs which would have direct input to the administration on minority faculty promotion and retention decisions.
6. In order to reverse a continuing trend of declining Black student enrollment, we demand the creation of a permanent, full-time recruiter position within the EOP Black/white component.
7. We demand a reorganization of the Black/white EOP component, because the current staff is not adequately serving the needs of Black students.

The Reader's Voice

Put Up, Shut Up

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I would be a whole lot more impressed with A.S.'s opposition to the new student services building if students were not paying higher fees for a new A.S. office building with views overlooking the Lagoon. They don't seem too worried about fees for the new UCen because A.S. gets great offices. If Aaron Jones is so concerned about our fees then he ought to be talking about how much he is going to reduce A.S. costs, what programs are going to be discontinued, and how much he is going to reduce next year's fees. All I hear is blathering about what the governor, the regents, the administration and everyone else in sight is supposed to do.

As president, Jones hasn't even proposed reducing A.S. costs and fees, let alone done anything about it. Until A.S. cuts their own costs and reduces the student fees which A.S. can directly affect, the rhetoric about increasing student fees is just so much oral flatulence.

Aw Shucks

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This year at the University of California, Santa Barbara, the students of the Israel Action Committee successfully organized a Yom Hashoah program in honor of Holocaust Remembrance Day. As you are aware, the full day of activities included a victim name reading in an 8-foot barbed wire cage, a speaker from the Simon Wiesenthal Center, a poster series and a candle lighting ceremony which moved many people and provided information for those unaware of the severity of the Holocaust.

We would like to thank you for the prompt and accurate coverage in the prewrite and follow up on the day's activities. We would especially like to thank both Natasha Hillis and Ronnie Beth Nadell for their reporting. A tree has been planted in Israel in the name of the Nexus staff in appreciation of your help.

EVENTS: Committee Says Boozers Begone

 Despite these precautionary steps, some I.V. merchants believe nothing can stop people from buying alcohol. "The problem is that people are going to buy beer anyway, even if it's not on special. The only solution is to not sell beer, and I can't see that happening," said Isla Vista Market store manager Jon King.

The committee is also working to minimize the number of arrests and injuries due to alcohol-induced behavior.

Approximately 1,000 arrests were made Halloween weekend 1992, and less than 100 of those cited were from Santa Barbara County, according to Johnson and Associated Students External Vice President Mark Milstein.

Milstein, who is a Major Events Committee member, said that 90% of the problem stems from outsiders. "There are too many people, too many arrests, too few police, too little law enforcement being carried out, and too much energy and funding that the county has to expend for Halloween," he said.

"Halloween isn't what it used to be. Nobody dresses up anymore, and major concerts that were once held at Storke Field can no longer be held because there are not enough law enforcers to monitor other areas than beachside of I.V.," Milstein said. "We are trying to be more proactive, to do something to change Halloween instead of just damage control."

However, limiting the influx of outsiders into I.V. is problematic, one student said.

"I don't think you should ward off outside schools. There's nothing you could really do to keep people from coming in. We just need more police to make sure things don't get out of hand," said junior communication major Shelly Burrola.

Reinforcement from the California Highway Patrol and the Sheriff's Dept. is expected in force this Halloween, committee members said. Their strategy will be much more strict than last year in terms of arrests and following through with prosecutions.

The CHP will have routine spot checks to catch motorists driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, and will crack down on underage drinkers and enforce open container laws, said Dee Acker, Community Service Organization coordinator.

While the success of the committee is uncertain, Milstein said the outcome is sure to send a stern message to outsiders. "Don't come if you're going to be a problem. The party isn't over, but the lawlessness is," he said.

TRIAL

Melton seemed to be distancing himself from Manning with regard to the December incidents Monday. When he, Manning and a 19-year-old woman left his house Dec. 17, they dropped him off at a friend's house and the woman said she wanted to return with Manning, Melton said.

"I can't be more specific other than that I was about to leave and [she said] she was coming back with Schacobie," Melton said. "She never said to me, 'Tim, I think that you had raped me.' ... She said she was upset about whatever happened when I wasn't there."

The 21-year-old woman involved in the New Year's Eve incident accused Melton and Manning of raping her in Manning's upstairs apartment. However, Melton and other defense witnesses said that he was in his own room during the time he is said to have committed the crime.

According to Melton, he went up to Manning's room to get the two to get ready to leave for a New Year's Eve party. As he climbed the stairs, the alleged victim stepped out of the bathroom completely naked, having just showered, Melton testified.

Melton vehemently denied ever coming in direct contact with the woman and alleged that she also blamed him for what happened to her. "She said that she holds me responsible because I invited her over," Melton said.

Lazandria Richey, who was in Melton's room on New Year's Eve testified that the defendant left the room repeatedly, but only for two to three-minute intervals.

Sheriff's Dept. investigator Gary Kitzman, appearing on behalf of the prosecution, testified that he took a statement from Melton's roommate, Mario Davis, accusing Manning of forcibly detaining the alleged victim during the New Year's Eve incident. Davis, however, made no mention of any involvement by Melton, Kitzman said.

"[Davis] statement to me was that [the alleged victim] was being controlled by Schacobie Manning," Kitzman said. "When I asked him to explain what he meant by 'controlled,' he said she had run out of the house and Schacobie Manning had to bring her back in."

The third alleged victim in the case filed charges after reading a newspaper article identifying Melton in the December incidents. The woman has accused Melton of forcing her to fondle him and perform oral sex on him during an encounter on May 31.

However, Melton said she performed these acts voluntarily. When she refused to have intercourse with him, he admitted to getting angry, but insisted that he did not rape the woman. "I got up, told her to put her shirt on and I'd take her home," Melton said.

Tolks called up Christopher Futch, a mutual friend of the woman and Melton, to confirm her testimony. Futch said that the alleged victim told him about the incident and described it in a letter she wrote to him.

Futch then accused Melton of asking him to burn the letter and not testify against him. "I inferred that [the statement] could have been to get rid of that letter," Futch said. "What was stated to me was that, 'It's a shame that they're using a Black man to get at another Black man.'"

Although Futch said the alleged victim had always been a stable person, Melton's defense attorney, Century City lawyer William Graysen, took testimony from another mutual friend that suggested otherwise.

SDSU senior Dean Martinez said that Futch had called the victim "spacey, erratic and sometimes in a different world."

Both attorneys indicated that they had finished calling witnesses. Judge Patrick McMahon said unless one of the lawyers changes his mind Tuesday morning, the jury would hear closing arguments when the trial reconvenes and then be given instructions before being sent to deliberate.

A verdict could come as early as Tuesday afternoon.

Studentitis: A Manageable Problem

Most students suffer from what we commonly refer to as "studentitis" or student syndrome. This is usually due to stress related muscle tightness after 3 exams and 5 papers due next week on top of spending endless hours sitting in uncomfortable chairs with your head hanging down staring at notes until the words begin to blur. This adds up to a lot of joint stiffness and muscle tightness making students prone to injury and unnecessary aches and pains.

Though a common problem, the care and prevention of these aches and pains is simple and mechanical. The doctors in our clinic can evaluate your condition and determine the direct cause of your pain. Then chiropractic adjustments along with physical therapy can relieve the cause of symptoms and restore your mobility quickly and easily. We will also teach you self help techniques including stretching, exercise and proper nutrition that can help prevent "studentitis" from reoccurring.

good job. "They stress so hard that it's so important to get a college education and then they make it so hard to get it," said Fred Besançon, a senior who is planning on attending Cal Poly San Luis Obispo in the fall.

Dos Pueblos senior Mark Weymouth agreed. "I think the government is nipping itself in the tail when it doesn't put enough money into education and helping kids go to school," he said.

Many students considering a UC school are worried about the financial burden their parents will bear.

"It's more stress on your parents," said Kim Duerner. "I know my parents just went back and got more jobs to pay for [my] school."

Students with several siblings said that the fee hikes will lessen their chances of going to college because their families will only be able to afford to send the eldest children.

"Some of us have older brothers and sisters that are already in college ...

and now we are going up and we don't have the money," said senior Juan Hernandez.

The community college system may look like a more financially feasible post-graduation choice for some students. Some believe that a two-year college will also make for a smoother social adjustment.

"I think a lot of people go to city college because not only can they not afford a UC at that moment, but I think a lot of people don't want to go straight from high school into a UC right away," Camarena said.

And once students are in a UC, there's no guarantee that fees won't continue to rise. "I think it's scary to think about what the prices may be by the time we graduate," said Dos Pueblos senior Devin Poolman.

Sylvia Cameil, a guidance counselor at Dos Pueblos, is not sure that all students have a real grasp on the cost of going to college. "We really haven't had the alarm or surprise because it's one thing to look at it abstractly and another to live it," she said.

"I graduated from Berkeley when fees were $69 a year. So as a UC graduate, I am alarmed," Cameil said.

Despite the rising fees in the UC system, Cameil says that counselors try not to focus too much on the expense when they assist students with school selection. "We try initially to not think about the cost of the school because we try not to limit the range of schools," she said.

However, Cameil believes that the parents of these college hopefuls know only too well their possible expenditures.

"I think parents are more aware of costs than the students," she said. "More parents are looking at the city college system or at UCSB and just have the students live at home."

Ivy Edwards, mother of high school senior Jeremy Edwards, is one of many parents expressing concern over the rising costs in the UC system.

Jeremy's three older brothers all lived at home while attending UCSB when fees were lower. "We chose UCSB so they could live at home," Edwards said. "We felt that we couldn't afford to send them somewhere else."

Jeremy was also accepted to UCSB but has chosen to attend the U.S. Military Academy at West Point instead. Ivy Edwards said that with the recent fee hikes, UCSB is too expensive for their son.

"For Jeremy, we can't afford [UCSB]," she said. "West Point will be four years of a free education. Between that and UCSB, he chose West Point."

Armando Medina, father of senior Michael Medina, is concerned that the recent fee hikes will make it more difficult for middle-income families like his to send their children to college.

"It makes it hard for people like me who have mortgage payments and other payments to afford to send their kids to college," Medina said. "It enhances the chances for lower-income families to send their kids, but it's harder for us to get the loans."

Sigrid Camarena's daughter Nicole is only a junior and has a trust fund for college. But, she too is upset over the rising costs.

"It's changed so much," Sigrid Camarena said. "Things are so out of reach unless you have a great amount of money behind you."

Black Tide Set for the Ultimate Trip

Men in Nationals; Burning Skirts Out

By Brian Banks
Staff Writer

When the 1993 season began and the UCSB men's ultimate frisbee team came back from its first extended vacation in six years, it set a goal.

The 1992 squad had become the only UCSB team since 1985 not to advance to Nationals. The Black Tide did not want to go back-to-back with that achievement, and the team's mission was born. So UCSB compiled a 17-4 record and a #4 national ranking heading into last weekend's Regionals at Stanford. But with a #3-seed in the tournament — from which only two teams advance to Nationals — prospects were not in UCSB's favor.

But a funny thing happened on the way to Nationals. UCSB upset #2-seed Humboldt State in the semifinals before losing in the finals to advance to Nationals for the seventh time in the last eight years.

"The feeling was up there," said UCSB captain Steve Dugan, whose squad lasted seven games in two days, including a four-hour final against UC Santa Cruz. "The game against Humboldt was really hard. We weren't sure if we could beat them."

The Black Tide downed Humboldt State, 13-12, in a game characterized by constant lead changes. UCSB tied the game at 12-12 when Dugan hit Garthe Nelson in the end zone, then won it quickly after a Humboldt turnover. UCSB's Andy Crews shut down Humboldt State's Kevin Ellis, one of the nation's leading players.

In the final, with the game played to 19 instead of the usual 13, UCSC outlasted UCSB, 19-17. The loss dropped the Black Tide into the double elimination bracket, where it beat Stanford, 11-9, to advance.

UC Santa Cruz went undefeated in the tournament to claim the West region's only other berth in the Nationals, which will be held Memorial Day weekend at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania.

Twelve men's teams and 12 women's teams from across the nation advance to Nationals, but UCSB's women's ultimate frisbee squad won't be among the participants. The Burning Skirts fell to Cal, 15-6, in the semifinals and then lost in the double elimination bracket, 14-12, to Stanford.

"We played a lot of games Saturday, and by Sunday we were tired," Anne McGloin said. "Especially after the Berkeley game. They are ranked #1, have a lot of experienced players, and we played exceptionally well.

"After that game we were burnt."

The Burning Skirts, who also failed to advance to Nationals last season after going in 1991, won three of their four games on Saturday.

"Eve Smallfield was our most consistent player," McGloin said. "On offense and defense, she was definitely a key player."

Track and Field Teams Score at Final Prep Meet

UCSB's annual Nick Carter Invitational, held last Saturday at the campus track, gave the men's track team one last chance to brush up on skills before the season's most anticipated event.

With the Invitational came a series of personal records, and the Gauchos look forward to the Big West Championships held at Irvine this upcoming weekend.

The highlight of the event was Frank Smith's recognition as Collegiate Athlete of the Meet, and along with it the Nick Carter Trophy. Smith placed first in the long jump with a 23'9" jump, and second in the triple jump with 47'10".

Freshmen Eli Gladden and Rob Henderson took the first two places with 6'8 3/4" and 6'4 3/4" respectively in the high jump.

"The Gauchos have kept momentum rolling and with so many excellent performances and personal records, this team is ready for Conference without a doubt," UCSB Head Coach Pete Dolan said.

Placing second in the 200-meter dash was sophomore Dan Huber, who had his best race of the season in 00:22.3.

Another personal record was set by senior Marc Kallick in the pole vault with a 14'6". Kallick, who also placed third in the discus, looks forward to qualifying for the NCAA Division I Championships at Tulane University in New Orleans.

"With a total of 7,400 points needed at Conference Championships, Kallick is well within his reach to qualify for nationals," Dolan said.

"We had an excellent meet and now that everybody is rested, we will have light workouts this week and emphasize mental preparation," Dolan said.

JC Transfer Signs; Three Vie for Olympic Fest

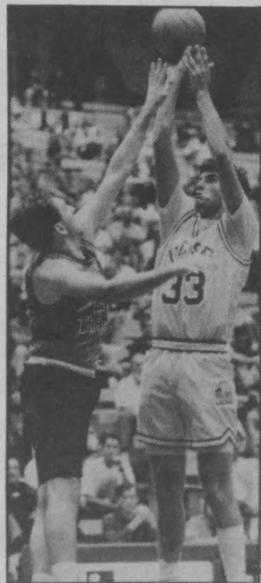

By Brian Banks
Staff Writer

Exit Michael Meyer and Paul Johnson. Enter Wayne Butts.

The official changing of the forward was confirmed last week when UCSB men's basketball Head Coach Jerry Pimm announced the signing of Butts, a transfer from Central Florida Community College.

Butts is expected to challenge returning backups Bill Barry and Mark Flick for the starting job at the small forward position.

"He is at a position we needed," Pimm said. "We need some help at the 3-spot. We looked around the country to fill the void, and [Wayne] is a good athlete with good skills with the size and strength to rebound in our conference."

Butts, a 6-6, 210-pound native of Georgia, attended USC his freshman year and was a medical redshirt. He averaged 16 points and five rebounds per game as a sophomore after transferring to Central Florida Community College. He was named to the All-Tournament team in the NIT, and was All-Mid Florida Conference. Pimm said that the signing of Butts ends the coaching staff's search for a small forward, but that the Gauchos "are always looking to add good students and good athletes."

In other men's basketball news, freshmen Kyle Milling and Chris Ford, and redshirt freshman Rob Ramaker, are under consideration for the summer Olympic Festival to be held July 18-28 in San Antonio, Texas. The event, which is used to foster young collegiate talent, features 12 players on four teams representing the north, south, east and west.

Only players with less than two years of college experience are eligible for consideration.

"We hope we can get some guys on," Pimm said. "It's good competition and they get a lot out of it. It's really concentrated basketball for 10 days."

In other news, Meyer, who was named UCSB's Best Defensive Player for two consecutive seasons, was awarded an NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship last month.

Only seven Division I men's basketball players are selected for the award, which grants Meyer $5,000 for postgraduate study at the university or professional school of his choice. Meyer is a biopsychology major and carries a 3.40 gpa.

The SCOPPETTONE SCORECARD

by
Dino Scoppettone, Staff Writer

Geez. Let me tell you, it's only Tuesday, and already it's been a hectic week. Between midterms, looking for a job (unsuccessfully, I might add) and bugging the cartoonist here to put me in his "Andy Pharo" comic strip, I've barely had the time to scope out the topic of this week's diatribe. Suffice it to say I needed some help.

And help was there, in the form of fellow sportswriter Mike Kohn (not to be confused with Marc Cohn, last year's Grammy winner for Best New Artist). After shooting me several ideas, the worst of which involved Barbara Uehling skating hockey for an Eastern college, he came up with something workable.

"Why don't you write about some kind of Isla Vista Olympics?" he said.

Now why didn't I think of that? I was even at the real Olympics last year, and the thought never crossed my mind. After all, I.V. during the springtime would be perfect for some kind of Olympic Games. Sun, clear skies, beach volleyball, lots of gratuitous nudity — what conditions would be better?

Forget about events like the long jump and the hammer throw, however. We're talking a more realistic type of Olympics, one that almost all of the Isla Vista population would be able to engage in. There's something for everybody in these Games, which would include:

- Timed Cruiser Stealing — Gold medal goes to the one who can dismantle a bike lock the quickest. Separate categories for bike with kryptonite locks and bikes with no locks at all.

- T.A. Line-Up — Teams attempt to get as many people as possible to line up at Tio Alberto's at 2:30 a.m. for a burrito. Team is disqualified when a member leaves due to lack of patience or a need to vomit.

- Sing-Along at Giovanni's — Both an individual and team sport, the object here is to see how long said individual or team can sing along to Van Morrison's "Brown Eyed Girl" before they screw up. Contestants must be drunk and obnoxious. Current World Record: 57 seconds for individual, 19 seconds for team.

- Tar Scrape — Participants must jog down the beach for two miles, then try to remove all accumulated tar from their feet. Baby oil not allowed.

- Led To Wake The Dead — Another late night activity, the object here is to play Led Zeppelin at volume 10 (or 11, if you have a Spinal Tap amplifier) for the longest possible time after 3 a.m. Contest ends when police/irate neighbors shut you down. Separate division for fraternities, where the record is 3 hours, 7 minutes. Note to contestants: If a neighbor shuts you down, you may not (repeat, not) fire a pellet gun at them.

- Buddy Count — Not to be confused with Ice-T's rap group, this is simply a concentration game. Participant must correctly discern number of times a typical I.V. guy uses the word "buddy," "guy," "dude" or "pal" over a two-hour period.

- Car Squeeze/Car Gap — Seeing as parking can often be scarce in I.V., the object here is to fit car in smallest possible space, making sure people on either side of you can no longer get out of their spaces. Alternate division involves parking car in such a way that you take up two spaces, so no one else can park.

- Seat Saver — Event takes place at selected Gaucha basketball games. Contestants must try to save as many seats as possible, either by tuggery, cajoling or spreading out their sweatshirt/jacket/furry farm animal over the bleachers.

- Motocross — The most traditional event of the Isla Vista Olympic Games, the motocross event takes place in the muddy pit right behind the baseball field, where the bleachers should be. Event will take place during selected Gaucha baseball games.

- Vers-a-hell — A new event this year, where contestants must decide the most inconvenient moment to shut down one of the Bank of America Versatel windows, resulting in a line of over 20 people. (Note: contestants may not enter both this event and T.A. Line Up.)

With a little work, this thing could fly. About the only people that wouldn't be able to compete would be the students that hole themselves up and study 15 hours a day, stopping about as often as a groundhog sees the sun during the winter.

Then again, I kind of hope it doesn't work. That way, Mike Kohn won't get that big fan following he's been craving, and I'll be saved the horror of having some weird German guy knife me in the back because he wants Kohn to have his own column. Well, I guess that's sort of far fetched. After all, something like that would never happen.
