Dance the Night Away

It just simply happens sometimes.

The stress of everyday life, the problems at work, homework piling up, your boyfriend or girlfriend driving you crazy, it's all enough to drive you slowly insane. Step by step the pressure mounts until finally there is only one thing you can do to relieve it all.

Go dancing!

And the absolutely best place to go and relieve all that mind-numbing tension by dancing to some groovy music has to be at Zelo's dance club and restaurant on State Street.

At least, I know that's what I always do.

It's Thursday nights that are special for me and all my friends. We start to look forward to the day before Friday almost as much as we do toward the entire weekend, because that is the day we all decide we've had enough of this damnable college life and we pile in the car to head on over to Zelo's for a little body moving and tension relieving.

Thursday nights are special to us because that means it's Twitch Night and some really great '80s and '90s music is going to be played.

What's great is that Zelo's not only has a killer dance floor but it also has a full bar and restaurant available for those people who feel a little parched after dancing. I, of course, can't dance worth a damn so I usually require a shot cluding the all-important Thursday night.

But Thursday's not the only cool day to come, either, not when Friday is Club Night, and Tuesdays they even have the time warp going on with some platforms!

That's right, the platforms. Zelo's has two of them and they make all the difference. Over the dance floor they have the long platform where you can keep an eye on the crowd below from behind a set of iron bars! That way you can dance the night away (using the bars as an accessory, of course) and keep an eye out for cute members of the opposite sex. Or on the other hand, if you're down on the dance floor, you can watch the moves of the cute person dancing away up on the stage until you get up the courage to go up and dance with them.

It works, trust me.

Yes, I love Zelo's. It helps me deal with so many urges all at one time. I get out my urge to dance, my urge for liquid refreshment and my urge to find some cute person to spend the rest of the weekend with all taken care of at once. I can't think of any place better to do that.

Zelo's is at 630 State St. Call 966-5792 for more information.

of tequila before moving out onto the dance floor, but after that you can't stop me or anybody else, for that matter.

But if you're under 21 don't worry. Those people 18 and older can get in, too, on weeknights, in-totally groovy disco and retro music.

But if you want to know, I'll tell you a secret. You know what really makes Zelo's the coolest place to dance anywhere around here? It's the pheasant, but if his shooting skills weren't too warped by moonshine, he may have feasted on venison or wild boar.

There is a small eatery not too far from here where the fine delicacies mentioned above are offered on a regular basis, and the atmosphere is exactly that of a 19th-century cabin. Tucked deep in the Santa Ynez Mountains, the haven I speak of is the Cold Springs Tavern.

The entire restaurant still has the same rustic interior as it did when it was built more than a century ago. Originally frequented by stagecoach passengers en route to Santa Barbara from the east, the menu is adorned with rules concerning "prairie schooner" etiquette.

Of course, raw history isn't all the Cold Springs Tavern features. The full bar and thick wine list are a welcome sight for any weary traveler, unless, of course, they are the designated driver (the long and winding road to the Tavern is not advisable for the tipsy). What's more, the dimly lit walls are decorated with old pictures, wagon wheels, candles and a bunch of other trinkets that were unrecognizable but undoubtedly very useful a hundred years ago.

But the sole reason why a restaurant exists is the food, which is precisely why the Cold Springs Tavern has existed for so long. As I mentioned earlier, this is one restaurant where you'll find delicacies out of the ordinary, so when you go there make sure to be bold and try something you've never had before.

I ordered the venison, a meat I've wanted to try for years, and was certainly not let down with my first bite (or the following 17, for that matter). Marinated in a rich red wine sauce, the plate was also graced with garlic mashed potatoes and freshly baked bread.

My companion, not being of mountain breeding, ordered the tamer yet still scrumptious seafood pasta, along with a salad and steamed vegetables.

After a little goading, she tried a bite of the deer and also found it to be quite succulent, if not a little chewy.

Although we were full and quite satisfied when the meal was done, we could not resist splitting a slice of bourbon pecan pie a la mode. I don't know how accessible ice cream was in Santa Barbara County a century ago, considering that this region is notoriously poor for natural ice production, but we didn't let that creative anachronism get in the way of the pie we agreed was the best we'd ever had.

And so, the next time I feel like roughing it without actually going out into the wilderness and setting traps and getting dirty and whatnot, I'll head right back to the Cold Springs Tavern. Uncle Hephaestus would be proud.

The Cold Springs Tavern is at 5995 Stagecoach Rd. Call 967-0066 for reservations or more information.

I don't know about you, but when I get into that romantic mood and need a place to take that special someone, I think of two words — Paradise Cafe.

Not counting its wide variety of delicious oak-cooked fish and authentic Italian dishes, Paradise Cafe offers an exalted ambience that most restaurants can't even compete with.

First of all, I love the option of either outdoor or indoor seating. Trust me, it's a huge difference depending on the kind of experience you're looking for.

The outdoor escapade enables a couple (day or night) to enjoy the temperate Santa Barbara weather and a choice of select wines from the Paradise Cafe vino list at the same time. I recommend an evening visit to get the full effect of the stars, while enjoying an appetizer of grilled prawns. In the dark any dining fantasy is possible.

On the other hand, the sunlit porch is a nice spot for lunch and for looking at the passers-by. Plus, their Santa Ynez omelette, which you can only get during lunch, is to die for.

However, the indoor adventure sets a whole different homey atmosphere. With plenty of light and space to enjoy a large group, it's definitely a place to party. The wall-to-wall hardwood floor reminds me of home, but also describes the relaxed yet aesthetic beauty of the building in its simplicity.

Ah ha! I bet you thought there's only indoor and outdoor service. However, for those times when you have to wait for a table, there's a comfy bar that's fully stocked (trust me on that one).

OK, so I've talked about how great the ambience and atmosphere are, and you're probably wondering, what kind of food do they serve and how expensive is it. Well, I'm glad you asked.

Let's take dinner first, because that's my favorite meal of the day. For the more conservative budget, there's the standby Paradise burger or grilled eggplant sandwich.

However, if you go and don't opt for the pan-broiled halibut, oak-grilled salmon, linguine with tomatoes, or basil and clams (if your mouth isn't watering by now, something's wrong with you), then you truly missed out. It will set you back at least $12, but I think in the end it's all worth it.

The lunchtime menu boasts everything the dinner one does, but in addition offers omelettes for those Sunday brunch-goers. Like the dinner prices, it's not fast food, but you know you get what you pay for and that's the whole point. At the Paradise Cafe you get great food, in a romantic scene at reasonable prices.

If you don't believe what I'm telling you — just look into your date's eyes in the morning — that should say it all.

The Paradise Cafe is at 702 Anacapa St. Call 962-4416 for more information.
