A Meal at the Egghead is Well Worth Waking Up for

NEXUS FILE PHOTO

By Reynard Van Nguyen

It was Saturday morning in Isla Vista — a weekly occurrence on planet Earth, but not one that I habitually observe. Instead, most times I find myself leaving the sensuous embrace of Morpheus after the sun has passed its zenith. In this case, however, I had been granted ample motivation to break through to consciousness in the a.m. — Doneán had informed me that we were going to the Egghead for breakfast to kick off our day.

So I made sure to be fully awake when Doneán called to confirm our meeting. The ringing of the phone happened to stir Odessa as she lay by my side, and although the prospect of rousing Odessa before her time normally fills me with trepidation, I knew that when I dangled the idea of an Egghead outing before her sleepy eyes, she would be unable to resist. I was, of course, correct about that.

The truth is that I don't know anybody who doesn't appreciate the Egghead experience. After all, right in I.V. is an establishment that ranks world supreme in preparing breakfast to suit the famished innards of legions. Just thinking about ordering, receiving and consuming the Egghead Benedict had me up before the alarm bell rang. The eggs are poached just right, set neatly upon slabs of back bacon atop toasted English muffins and smothered in rich French Hollandaise. It is as if it were possible to consume the nation of Canada and enjoy it as the harmonious blend of cultures that defines the world's greatest country.

Odessa and Doneán do not share my enthusiasm for the geogastronomic, and thus they opted for simpler (but by no means less hearty and delicious) meals. With each order of eggs came plates of toast, muffins or pancakes. Also available and readily consumed is the perfect fuel for any endeavor — the home fries. Add bacon or sausage and you've got the meal that makes every other consumed in the course of the day pale by comparison.

Of course, you can trust that no place called the Egghead would produce anything but the finest omelettes in the West. Every savory ingredient you can think of is represented on the menu. I had to struggle to restrain myself from ordering several selections at once. Bacon and cheese! Spinach and mushrooms! Chili! Ooooooooooh man!

Needless to say, gusto was in effect during our eating fest.

A special appreciation must be noted with regard to the servers at the Egghead. No matter how packed the joint might be, each patron receives just the perfect amount of attention. Whether you seek a coffee refill (Odessa is a corpse without God's gift to insomnia) or are hankering for another round of muffins, you need not wait in vain for your wishes to be fulfilled.

In addition, I feel it would be an incomplete reportage of the event to neglect the intriguing artwork that adorns the Egghead. I understand that any subject can be made beautiful in the hands of a gifted practitioner, but I had not realized how many such people had recognized the intrinsic allure of the ovoid shape and transformed this recognition into more than just wall hangings, but rather a collection of observed dream fulfillment.

As we left the Egghead and once again stepped out into the I.V. morning buzz, we experienced a high beyond our expectations. Fortunately, the source of our euphoria is not only legal, but nearby, and we can return to it again and again, secure in the knowledge that we could never overdose.

The Egghead is located at 6580 Pardall Road in Isla Vista. Phone: 968-1993.

Yum, yum, that's a heapin' helpin' of pancakes ... could this be a dream for a lucky diner fiending for flapjacks? This plateful could be yours, my friends - at The Egghead.

ZELO: A GOOD PLACE FOR CHANCE ENCOUNTERS

By Ladella Godessa

Club Zelo has long since become a landmark on the downtown scene, having celebrated its 10th anniversary last Halloween. This is a most impressive achievement in a climate where clubs come and go with dizzying frequency. Then again, you would have to ask yourself this: "What would State Street be without Zelo?"

You needn't cogitate too long and hard to come up with the answer.

Had it not been for a great coincidence, I never would have the unique pleasure of enjoying a delicious meal at the Taj Mahal of toe tappin'.

My good friend Severeina O'leal and I stopped by Zelo to use the bathroom in the early evening. Not expecting to find much in the way of entertainment before the nighttime club scene, we planned to just use the can and head out. We'd be back later.

Much to our surprise, Tad Talrmang was sitting by himself in the dim room enjoying a cool drink and a salad. Severeina, who went to high school with Tad, thought he was the greatest thing since sliced bread. She had always wanted to get to know him better.

So, seizing the opportunity, we asked Tad if we could join him for dinner. Tad responded, "I'd be delighted," he said.

As soon as we sat down, a friendly waitress asked us if we'd like something to drink. Severeina ordered a water and I had an iced tea.

Tad told us while we were making our dinner selections that he had ordered black bean and artichoke soup to go with his dinner salad. Trying to be polite, I complimented his choice.

When the waitress returned with our drinks, Severeina and I both ordered shark salads.

I told Tad I was surprised to see him here, and that I didn't know this place serves dinner. Tad replied, "This is my favorite dinner spot," he said.

Whether it was the gleaming smile or the look of longing, something told me Severeina was so smitten by Tad that she wasn't thinking clearly. While I couldn't tell because of the stuttering, I think she said she was glad we had discovered this place for a meal. "III'mmmm glad umph disovcmph hrrr mealll," she said.

I told her to get a drink because I thought she needed one. "Get a drink and make it a strong one," I said.

"OK," she murmured.

Our salads arrived along with Tad's soup, and everything looked delicious. Tad's bean and artichoke soup actually looked great, I thought. "Your soup actually looks great," I said.

"Thanks, I know," he responded.

The salads had mixed greens and big chunks of marinated shark in a vinaigrette dressing. Tad dove into his soup, and the waitress asked if there was anything else we would like.

Unable to think of a single missing thing, I told her, "No, thanks."

"I'll take another glass of ouzo," Severeina said.

Tad grimaced and said, "Doesn't that stuff taste like paint thinner?"

"Oh no, no. It's great," Severeina said, throwing back the rest of her first one.

As we finished our meals, we decided to stick around and join in the revelry that was beginning to brew around us. The terrific meal was the beginning of a night of good times at Club Zelo.

Club Zelo is located at 630 State St. in Santa Barbara.

THE WILD CAT

962-7970

Locals' favorite bar. The Wild Cat offers pool, jukebox, strong drinks and live music every Wednesday. Call club for info.

WOODY'S

229 W. Montecito, 963-9326

At this Woody's location the patrons can enjoy their mason jars full of beer while soaking in the western atmosphere. I can personally attest to the quality of Woody's ribs. If you don't go to Woody's for the music, then go just for the ribs.

ZELO

630 State St., 966-5792

Kashagoogoo:

Post 4:20 burnout got you down? Come on, I know there's few more brain cells in your cranium starving for beer. If so you should run to the hills and visit Cold Springs Tavern, a fabulous old drinking and live music spot. Quote of the day: "If it wasn't for whiskey and women, I'd have money today." — John Lee Hooker
