Supervisors Kill County Raises, Include Theirs

By JOHN LEE and
JOHN BAUR

In a complete turnabout from their original position, the Board of Supervisors Monday allowed the expiration of an ordinance that would have provided them with a 32 percent pay increase.

The supervisors also turned down a measure which would have granted pay raises to more than 100 county management executives and elected officials.

Both salary increases were approved at the Board's September 26 meeting, and were expected to receive final approval Monday. The rejection came as a surprise to observers who had assumed that the major battle had already been fought and that this week's meeting would be a pro forma approval.

The supervisors pay increase was vociferously attacked at Monday's meeting by Paul Bundy, executive vice president of Tax-Action, who told the Board, "the raise was an incredible and irresponsible rip-off against our citizen taxpayers." Supervisor David Yeager moved that the Board approve the increase, but the motion did not receive a second and died.

The proposal would have given the supervisors a two stage, 32 percent raise. The salary of a supervisor, presently $18,600, would have been fixed at half the salary of a Superior Court Judge, currently $24,583. The state legislature sets the salaries of judges. By setting their own salaries as a function of the judges', the supervisors would have removed the pay question from the level of local politics.

Unfortunately, the act of removing the issue from politics was a political one, according to Yeager. He had taken a tenuous position politically and was unhappy with the action of the Board. "I think what disturbed people the most was the initial large jump. The old pay scale was based on when it was a part time job and now it's a full time job," Yeager said.

Robert Kallman, the only supervisor to vote against the original motion, was pleased that the proposal had died. "I don't think that's the right way to get a pay raise," he remarked. "I think any pay increase should be put before the voters."

He expressed support for the concept of removing the issue from the political

Proposal Tabled

Isla Vista County Proposed By IVCC

By CATHY NIFONG

Isla Vista may have a chance to break off into a separate county if the Isla Vista Community Council (IVCC) follows through with a proposal to create the County of Isla Vista. Although the proposition was tabled at Monday night's meeting because of insufficient information, discussion will be resumed at next week's gathering.

An IVCC newsletter, however, has set forth the basic ideas for the I.V. county. The newsletter projects a reduction of taxes, increased revenue for the county from State and Federal sources, local control over planning and zoning, preservation of agricultural and coastal lands in perpetuity, and local independence for the fledgling county.

Boundaries for the county would be, approximately, the UCSB campus, up Los Carneros, down Hollister, then west along Highway 101 as far as either Gaviota or Point Concepcion, and then out to the three-mile limit, and all the way back to UCSB.

The projected population of the county is estimated at 22-25,000 people.

According to IVCC Administrative Analyst Howard Dyck, the proposal must first receive 3,000 signatures and a feasibility study by a governor's commission, before it could make the November 1978 ballot with the Los Padres county split proposal.

The Council hopes to have obtained enough information to discuss the possibility of an I.V. County at the next meeting.

The severe parking problem at Francisco Torres was also reviewed at Monday's meeting. Cars parked along the side of Storke Rd. next to the old Married Students Housing, block the existing bike path, causing considerable danger to cyclists forced into the street.

The Council agreed to contact County officials and request that they install "no parking" signs since the Foot Patrol cannot cite people unless the signs are present.

Linnette Baggett said that the actual problem of alternative parking will be discussed as soon as the "no parking" signs are up. "They'll probably have to asphalt over a volleyball court or something," she added.

Another main topic on the agenda was the question of the right of the teepees to exist on Sueno Road. A motion was made to put the alternative living situation on the agenda for October 11 IVCC town meeting.

Alternative living situations, according to Advisory Council Program Coordinator Matt Steen, include trailers, vans, and campers as well as teepees.

IVCC member Walt Wilson also suggested that the owner of the 6730 Sueno lot be asked to seek a variance of the County zoning laws which would allow the teepee village to remain unmolested on their present site.

University Officer Pleads Guilty to Marijuana Charge

By KIM KAVANAGH

Suzanne Saxby, a University Police Officer arrested two weeks ago for possession of less than one ounce of marijuana, pleaded "guilty" to the charges Monday and was fined $15.

Saxby had originally pleaded "not guilty" when she first appeared in court on September 23. But when she returned to court, she changed her plea to "guilty." She and her brother, Peter Saxby, were then fined $15 for the misdemeanor possession charge.

Prior to her appearance in court Monday, Saxby resigned as a police officer for "personal reasons and for personal growth," according to Campus Police Lieutenant Leroy Steinert.

Steinert added that Saxby wanted to "go off and take a look at herself and where she is going. There was an internal investigation commenced on the situation, but it didn't come to a conclusion because of her resignation."

Saxby had been a police officer for eight months, and she was still on her one-year probationary period before her arrest. "She could have been let go at the end of one year if her probation did not prove

Presidents Loeb and Ruibal - Conflicting Roles

A.S.'s Very Own 'Odd Couple'

By LAURA FREDERICKS

Jeff Loeb and Claude Ruibal are two individuals oddly combined in dual roles as Student Body Presidents. Loeb heads up "internal" affairs, while Ruibal deals with the "external," usually statewide issues.

The two seem to work well together, yet when hearing their different interpretations of the job, one wonders whether they may even be too far apart. It is certain that they rarely infringe upon each other's territories.

Loeb feels highly responsible to the students at UCSB, particularly at an individual level. He sees the Legislative Council as the ultimate expression of the people who compose it, thus "...what is going to make us good is good people getting involved." He sees A.S. as a service organization with the primary goal of working for and with the Associated Students.

Ruibal, on the other hand, sees his most important responsibility outside of the campus, on the state-wide level. His new position of co-chairman of the Student Body Presidents' Council takes up a great deal of his time and energy. For Ruibal, working with the Legislative Council is more a behind-the-scenes job.

"Jeff and I have a definite leadership role," he explains, "we must try to spark some enthusiasm into the Council. If they do not react after a certain point, however, there is not too much we can do."

Meanwhile, Loeb explains their roles more in terms of guiding and directing Council. "The members need guidance,"

Garland Snuffer

Yearbook Editor Tries to Beat Students' Annual Epidemic

By STEVE GASTON

All odds may be against him, but Garland Snuffer, newly elected editor-in-chief of the yearbook staff, is not one to be easily defeated. With yearbook sales in the past decade at UC Santa Barbara attracting about as much attention as a "Lefty Frizzle" film festival, Snuffer just may become a blue-eyed, Monrovia legend in his own time if, of course, he can generate enough student interest in the upcoming 1977-78 yearbook.

"Student apathy toward the yearbook has been pretty high the last few years," said Snuffer, "but I can't say that I blame them. In 1976, the editor-in-chief split without any why or what when the yearbook was only half finished."

Apparently, the old Freudian theory of applied apathy went into effect as the '76 yearbook was left in the hands of only three people. Despite their Herculean efforts to get the yearbook out on time, the dedicated remnants of the yearbook staff could not produce the completed copy until the Fall of 1976.

"This really hurt the quality of last year's yearbook too," said

Snuffer, "because we were still trying to make up for lost time spent on getting the one before that out."

Until the early 1970's, the yearbook was sponsored by Associated Students (A.S.) and each student received one if his fees were paid. However, for reasons unknown to Snuffer, the A.S. cut off funds to the yearbook staff which left them morally, spiritually, and financially incapacitated.

"We had to rely on the little money we had left over and what we could get from selling advertisement space," commented Snuffer. "We were in pretty bad shape and will need a good sale this year to break even or, perhaps if we're lucky, come out ahead."

Student apathy toward the yearbook reached epidemic proportions in 1976 as the 384 page annual sold only 1,600 copies out of the total student population of 15,000. "1977 was even worse," said the exasperated editor. "The yearbook sold just over 1,000 copies out of the 15,000 students here. It was a pretty sad situation."

To bolster sales, Snuffer attached the yearbook order form to the reg packet at mailout. As a result, the staff has already received a substantial amount of orders, as well as more applications for yearbook staff than they already need.

Snuffer and his staff have been working all summer looking at bids for printers, selling pages to school departments, and carefully organizing the 77-78 yearbook, and so far Snuffer is quite happy with the progress that has been made.

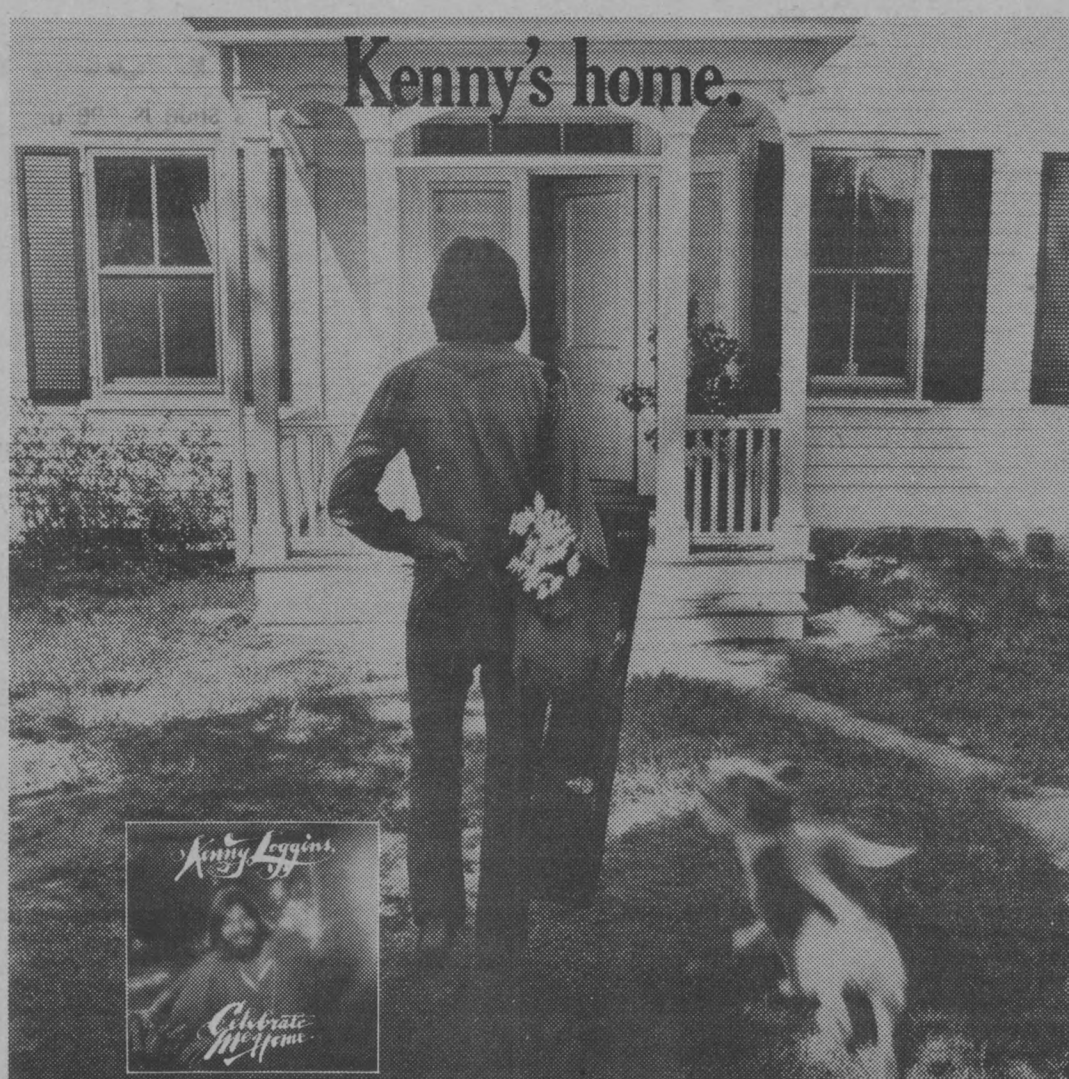

"We contracted Delma Studios in New York with an expert photographer and a new innovation in student yearbook mug shots — optional environmental background scenes." Now, instead of being photographed with a dull and dreary canvas backdrop, you can be shot against a beautiful ocean.

"The photographer will be here November 2 to shoot seniors first and then all the other students," said Garland. "We would also like to try something new in that we will take on-campus group dorm shots as well as off-campus dorms such as the fraternities, Francisco Torres, and Tropicana Gardens."

Isla Vista's Farm Collective To Introduce New Programs

By MARCSLAVIN

The Isla Vista Farm Collective will start several new programs in the coming weeks designed to further its research and education objectives. Originally a part of the former ECO-ACTION group (now Sunrae Recycling), the Farm has been functioning independently for the past year.

The new programs, extensions of those already underway, are planned for four major areas of operation: water conservation, compost, gardening methods, and crops.

Co-op officials already claim much success in conserving water. With various conservation methods they have only used one-third of their water allocation for 1977.

Work is also in progress on an aquaculture project described as an ecologically sound irrigation system employing wholly natural means to filter the water and to balance the nutrients in it.

Various methods of making compost (organic fertilizer) are now being tested. The compost research will continue under the new programs.

Crops raised on the Farm are grown entirely by organic methods. The primary goal of the Co-op is to find the most efficient means of gardening organically.

Pat Boyd, one of five Co-op coordinators, describes the organic gardening initiatives, saying, "There is a real need for an intermediate technology. I see us as a result of that need, as it gets more intense." A comparison of five different gardening methods will get underway as a part of the research expansion.

In addition, three classes are planned for the weeks ahead. One of them, a study of agribusiness with a concentration on local issues, is being offered for credit in conjunction with the UCSB Sociology Department.

Along with the agribusiness class, the University will give students credit for individual research done at the Collective, something which Collective officials say can help graduates get jobs in environment-related fields.

Funding for Co-op projects in the past has come out of the pockets of members and from fund-raising events like the recent vegetarian dinner at the UCen. With the expansion of its activities, however, the group has gone to outside sources for money.

The Farm received $600 from the Isla Vista Municipal Advisory Council for implementation of the aquaculture project, but is seeking needed money for the other proposed activities from the UCSB Associated Students, the Comprehensive Employment Training Act based in Isla Vista, and from the Community Development Fund which consists of University money administered by the Isla Vista City Council.

The Community Development Fund request is being jointly submitted by the Farm and other local groups in need of funds to cover capital investment and maintenance costs.

The Co-op's search for funding is not entirely local, however. Requests have been sent to various foundations and graduate student research organizations all over the country. But expectations are not high that money will be forthcoming from any non-local groups, and Boyle calls the out-of-town requests "just a whistle in the wind."

Two cash crops are grown on the Farm for money-raising purposes. Snowpeas and garlic are being sold and part of the Farm will be planted with flowers in the coming weeks. The flower bed will serve two purposes: to raise money through marketing of the flowers and to provide a park for senior citizens.

The Co-op is planning to add shade trees and benches to their land so that elderly Isla Vista residents can come out and relax on warm afternoons.

Jay Fortman, Co-op financial coordinator, says he hopes the three elements of education, food and the senior citizen service will make the Farm eligible for aid from the Santa Barbara Charitable foundation.

Even without the funding, they would like to have what Coordinator Boyd calls "a real backbone of energy" to establish the Isla Vista Farm Collective as a viable community group.

Members need only work three hours a month and can take home whatever they grow. Formerly located on campus, the Farm is now on Los Carneros Road.

Discrimination: A Misnomer

By HAL KOPEIKIN

The discussion of the upcoming Bakke "reverse discrimination" case has increasingly become dominated by emotion and tainted reasoning. Due to the personal relevance of school admissions and employment opportunities, it is less than surprising that many fail to examine the facts and actual significance of this issue. The importance of this case requires that we emerge from the mire of self-serving rhetoric based upon fallacious facts and affective logic, and rationally analyze the nature and implications of the problem.

The label, "reverse discrimination," is a misnomer. If a person is denied equal opportunity on the basis of some irrelevant criterion (e.g., race, sex, religion), he or she is a victim of discrimination. Regardless of an individual's group membership, decisions based upon that membership rather than competence or qualification constitute discrimination pure and simple. The pernicious and supposedly illegal practice of discrimination is defined by its procedure, not by its referent.

If one contends that discrimination is immoral, he or she does so without regard to the exact features of the victims. There is little question that Allen Bakke was rejected from medical school on the basis of his race. It is ironic and disheartening that some of those so long oppressed by similar injustices express no sympathy for his plight. If individuals contest discrimination only when they are its victim, they certainly are not supporters of equality: They disdain privilege only when it is to their disadvantage, and thus are the true protagonists of racism, sexism, etc.

The use of race as a criterion for selection to graduate school is a blatantly discriminative procedure. Some contend, however, that it is justified viz. a viz. the de facto racism inherent in our system. This contention has two fatal flaws. Consider the use of standardized tests for school admissions. Some minority-group members cite these tests as the epitome of injustice since, they claim, they are not reliable predictors of success for minority students. This is simply not the case. The SAT, for example, has been repeatedly demonstrated to be an equally reliable predictor of achievement for middle-class and minority students (see, e.g., Munday, 1965; Stanley and Porter, 1967; Cleary, 1968; Thorndike, 1971; Darlington, 1971; Angoff and Ford, 1973; Cole, 1973; Cleary, Humphreys, Kendrick, and Wesman, 1975). These studies show that a given score predicts the same success whether the testee is a white middle-class male or not. In fact, a test that cannot be proven to be relevant to the criterion it is being used for, and therefore fair, cannot be utilized in selection procedures (Griggs, et al., v. Duke Power Company; United States, et al., v. Georgia Power Company).

Secondly, using a discriminatory process in the pursuit of equality is contradictory and dangerous. To confer privilege on the basis of race to end racial discrimination is comparable to participating in intercourse to preserve chastity, or killing in the name of pacifism. Many will agree that de facto discrimination unfortunately exists; but if they abhor this condition, how can they support its infinitely worse de jure counterpart?

Aside from the moral objections to quotas and other forms of official discrimination that I have raised, the acceptance of such means could be a real practical disaster. A legal precedent allowing racial or sex considerations could ultimately be used against those whom it was originally designed to favor. If the Supreme Court allows group membership to be considered there is no guarantee as to which groups will be wronged. The only thing certain is that the ugly specter of discrimination by law, which has been heretofore banished from this country, will return to haunt us. This time, though, it will be conjured by our misguided consent.

The Bakke decision is indeed a crucial one. The damage done by legal discrimination in the past attests to the ominous possibilities of its reinstatement. If the California Supreme Court's ruling is overturned, a morally reprehensible situation will be compounded, not mitigated. Discrimination must be eliminated, but this will never be accomplished by legalizing it.

A Refreshing Change for Gym Concert-Goers

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am writing you in response to Tim Cronin's letter of Friday, Sept. 30th, in which he suggested that A.S. Concerts have reserved seating for Rob Gym Concerts. It's refreshing to read the editorial section and find some constructive criticism for a change.

The idea of reserved seating is one we at Concerts have been considering for some time now. The chances of such a system being enacted in the near future are great, but please understand reserved seating at a concert poses many more problems than reserved seating for a Spikers' game.

Most of the problems revolve around extra crowd control for a larger number of people (approximately 1000 more than a Spikers game), and the money needed to pay for it. Contrary to popular belief, we don't walk away from a Rob Gym show with bags full of money even if tickets are more than a Spikers game. The overhead on a concert by far exceeds that of a Spikers game.

These problems are being ironed out and hopefully we will be able to sell seats on a reserved basis at an upcoming show. I hope this brief letter answers some of the questions. I'm sure there are more questions and, hopefully, suggestions as well.

Those who are interested in the future of the Concerts program should realize that A.S. Concerts is part of the Associated Students.

You can show your support by attending tonight's Leg Council meeting at 6 p.m., UCen 2284. There will be a lot of talk about the future of concerts. This is your chance to stand up and be counted. Don't let apathy ruin your concerts program.

Cheadle Ill-Judged

Editor, Daily Nexus:

May I lodge a protest, please, against the wholly unwarranted violence, abusiveness, and lack of factuality of the editorial "Huttenback Exuding Sincerity" in your September 30th issue. Having served on this campus under the regimes of half a dozen top administrators, I can assure you that the basic patterns of I.V. real estate development took shape well before there was ever any question of Vernon Cheadle's coming here; and I might also mention that, in difficult times and under trying circumstances, the frequent, continuing approaches both he and Mrs. Cheadle made to rendering the chancellorship more accessible to townspeople, faculty, and students alike were of a quality no one could possibly infer from your ill-judged and intemperate effusion.

First Shot at Lockers

Editor, Daily Nexus:

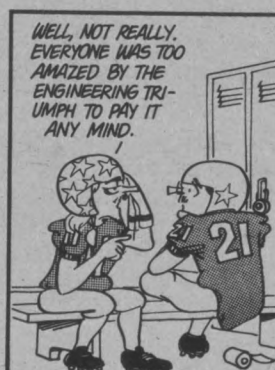

Having been denied a gym locker myself due to not being enrolled in a PA class, I can sympathize with Kevin Young (Nexus, Oct. 3). I called the Athletic Department to ask why they refuse these requests, and they referred me to the Equipment Room Managers. The Equipment Room Managers referred me to the front office. So much for that. However, I did learn from them that even though there were barely enough lockers to accommodate the PA classes, permanent lockers are being assigned to staff and faculty members. The Women's Equipment Room Manager said there is no limit to the number being assigned for staff and faculty women and that currently 50-100 lockers are out. The men's locker situation is even more staggering: 150-200 lockers have been permanently assigned.

Is there no justice? If nearly 300 lockers are being assigned to staff and faculty who are not "currently enrolled in a PA class", certainly one-third of those lockers should be put aside for students who also wish to use the gym for recreational purposes only. If Dr. Negratti does not think it's a problem just because this is the first he's heard of it, then he should check with his equipment managers and ask them how many such requests they've received. Well, after all, they are in separate buildings. I guess I should expect a certain lack of communication within the Department of Athletics... but, REALLY!

DOONESBURY

by Garry Trudeau

Presidents Ruibal and Loeb

Loeb states, "I feel I can help give the Council some direction. I want everyone to have some specific responsibilities; there is a great deal which can be accomplished at the lower, committee level."

Loeb has recently authorized a major re-organization of the council. With six areas of A.S. responsibilities (Program Board, Publicity Board, Community Affairs Board, Academic Affairs Board, Finance Board and Administrative Board) Loeb would place the Leg Council Reps on oversight committees where they would act as both chairpersons and committee members.

Loeb also wants the committee structure re-named as Commissions. "A chairman's role is limited to bureaucratic and organizational duties," he said, "A commissioner has a far broader scope."

Ruibal commends Loeb for these plans but prefers to keep his energies directed toward projects in the external arena.

His current interests include an investigation into graduate and undergraduate admissions standards, both of which, he reports, are being reviewed by a new UC wide task force. "I am trying to take the long range view on this," says Ruibal, "and consider what we will want to be doing in five years."

Ruibal is also concerned with the issue of financial aid. He acknowledges a number of general problems in the area and is looking forward to the first national meeting on financial aid programs which will be sponsored by the Federal Office of Education this January.

When discussing this year's Legislative Council, Loeb takes the more personality-oriented view saying, "I think we are off to a good start. I do not see the deep concern I had hoped for from the members but nor do I feel the antagonism of past years."

Ruibal, once again, assumes the broader view. He compares UCSB to larger schools such as Berkeley and concludes that "they have a lot more money... it's like a huge industry. You must keep in mind what you have to work with and in that case, we're excellent."

Their peers also acknowledged the differences between the two as well as their ability to work well and effectively despite those differences. Elliot Warsaw and Mike Siefe, both RHA Representatives, commented on the presidents' roles and differences.

According to Warsaw, the officers of Legislative Council here always remained somewhat aloof to the representatives. "Jeff has sort of alienated himself; he seems inaccessible at times," says Warsaw. He describes Ruibal, on the other hand, as "more the kind of guy you would go to for help."

Siefe sees them both as hard working and conscientious. "With Jeff," he says, "there is a sort of ego situation" while "Claude is more laidback, behind-the-scenes."

Siefe explained, however, that the Council appreciates all the hard work Loeb has done and the projects he has been working on. He said, "It will be interesting when Claude takes over the chair from Jeff because then the pressure will be on him and maybe things will change."

Gaucha Soccer Team Travels to San Jose

The UCSB soccer team travels to San Jose State today to challenge the unbeaten Spartans. The Gauchos are coming off a split decision in last weekend's Santa Barbara Soccer Classic, where they beat the University of Santa Clara, 2-1, before dropping to Colorado College, 2-0.

A victory over San Jose won't be an easy task, as they are one of the top-rated teams in the West with a 5-0 record. They demonstrate stern ball control and utilize an excellent passing game to mow down opponents. The Spartans boast the services of last year's leading scorer in the nation, Ismael "Easy" Perez.

The Gauchos will not be playing at full strength, with team captain Ralph Hawes a doubtful starter and Abe Rothman and Vincente Franco slowed up by injuries.

UCSB coach Al Meeder stated that San Jose will be gunning for the victory. "Last year we beat them 3-2 in double overtime," he added, "But we can play with them. Nobody is going to blow us out."

Despite a slow start this season, Meeder commented that the Gauchos are playing well and have demonstrated many bright moments.

IM Basketball Sign-ups Underway

As a UCSB student, you probably have discovered that your weekends are packed with activities and social affairs. Weekdays are full of classes, labs, etc. For those of you looking for a weeknight diversion or an excuse to take a study break, the intramural department offers several evening athletic leagues, including coed 6-person basketball.

Tuesday and Wednesday nights in Robertson Gym you can practice your skills and vent your aggressions to the tune of bouncing basketballs and stomping feet. Coed play generates a socially-oriented atmosphere and involves an assortment of fun rules.

Last year's program is being expanded this year, provided a sufficient amount of teams sign up. Teams and individuals can sign up in the Intramural Trailer by Rob Gym by October 6. A roster including team players' names and alpha numbers is required.

Each team consists of three males and three females, with students, staff and faculty all eligible. The "A" Division is geared to more experienced teams, while the "B" Division encompasses a wide range of abilities. A manager or team representative must attend the mandatory managers' meeting October 10 from 5:00-7:00 p.m. in RG 1125.

Alice Henry is Always Busy

A Woman with Dual Roles at UCSB

By JERRY CORNFIELD

Trailer 304 hardly resembles that of an administrative outpost. Right now Alice Henry has little time to notice.

At this moment inside the mobile unit next to Robertson Gym, Henry is busy directing the forces under her guise, as she is UCSB's Sports Coordinator for Athletics and Leisure Services.

Somewhat undefined is her 'title,' as her duties primarily entail coordinating both the Women's Inter-collegiate Athletics program and Intramural (IM) set-up. Separately either job is difficult. Combined, the two areas can raise the blood pressure of even the calmest individual.

"I enjoy what I'm doing. Yes, there are a lot of deadlines to meet," nodded Henry, who is beginning her third year on this campus.

Speaking of both areas (Intercollegiate and IM), Henry commented, "I like Intercollegiate Athletics and I like Recreation and Intramurals. I like the involvement in these areas. I enjoy the students who participate and I enjoy the coaches. I also enjoy the student staffs (the ones who assist immensely in the IM program)."

A year ago Henry's job was strictly IM director. Then Dr. Al Negratti (Director of Athletics and Leisure Services) made the "hoped-for" appointment from a considerable amount of applicants.

"We are very fortunate in having a woman of the caliber of Mrs. Henry, and her appointment to the department is going to give it a dimension much looked forward to in women's sports," said a pleased Negratti. "It's a welcome addition."

Having always been interested in sports, Henry's experience prior to UCSB was at Westmont College. From 1967-69 and 1972-74 she instructed in physical education, coached women's Varsity Volleyball, Basketball and Tennis, and coordinated the Women's Athletic Program.

After coaching so extensively, the inevitable question loomed.

"Of course I miss the close comradery you have with the student athletes and the challenge of strategy," replied Henry. "But my involvement in this position and the responsibility I have satisfy that," she added. "It keeps me involved in Intercollegiate Athletics without coaching. I made a decision and I plan on sticking with it."

With her additional duties involving the school's six intercollegiate teams, Henry has a simple approach. "In the area of women's sports, of course we want winning teams."

To accomplish this, quality athletes are necessary to build a squad. This is one area of which Henry speaks quietly.

"In the area of recruiting and scholarships and several other things, there are concerns by numerous coaches in schools across the country."

Why the worry? In women's athletics there is no recruiting allowed. A female athlete must make the initial contact with a school before that school can attempt to sway her to go to their institution.

While this is a concern of Henry's, there is also the IM department to keep running.

"I would say in the area of intramurals our goal is to accommodate as many students as possible," she said. "With the limited facilities and personnel it's hard." Last year 11,500 students, teachers, administrators and non-students participated (this includes individuals involved in more than one sport). This year will see an additional upsurge.

"The program has been increasing each year and we've reached our maximum now."

ALICE HENRY

County Pay Raise

spectrum, but not if that effort included a pay raise.

Kallman also led the fight against the raises for other county management positions. He contended that it was unfair to raise the salaries of management when other employees were not considered.

Although he voted alone at the original consideration of the proposal, Kallman was joined Monday by Supervisors Bill Wallace and Robert Hedlund, and the increase was defeated 3-2, with Yeager and Board Chairman Harrell Fletcher in support.

Wallace stated that he did not feel the proposed increases were unreasonable, but agreed with Kallman that the timing was wrong. He later moved to place the proposal on the supervisors' agenda again next Monday.

The salary increases for management personnel had been recommended in a report by the Hays Association which found that county salaries were well below the salaries of similar jobs in private business. The proposal had been endorsed by the Santa Barbara County Taxpayers Association.

Police Officer Pleads Guilty

satisfactory," Steinert said.

According to Sneddon deputy Santa Barbara county district attorney, two University Police Officers went to the Saxbys' home on a social call on Monday, September 19. At that time, they observed one marijuana plant and some "loose grass" laying around.

The officers then took Saxby to the University Police Station and obtained a search warrant to investigate charges of cultivation, possession, and use of marijuana.

When the officers returned to the Saxby residence, the pot plant had been pulled up, and the Saxbys were officially charged with possession of less than one ounce of marijuana. Two other residents at the Saxby home were not criminally charged.

The two officers involved in the arrest were not available for comment at press time.
