

Weekend Connection

Alex's Cantina

great food and great friends

It had been three months since I had met with June and April, the two other members of my exclusive lunch club. They had been studying abroad, so when we finally got together last week, we had some serious catching up to do.

We found ourselves in our usual dilemma: "What kind of cuisine should we sample today?" Since both had recently returned to California, they longed for something Santa Barbara-esque. After a few minutes, the growls emanating from our stomachs led us to Alex's Cantina.

We had to make up for lost time. I mean, after two months of eating alone, we had the appetites of voracious tigers. We ordered a huge pile of delicious nachos, a heaping plate of thin crispy chips overflowing with soft and steamy cheese, layered with beans and guacamole that was just the right consistency, not like the clumpy kind you find in the supermarket. Olives, salsa and sour cream topped off this amazing mound, which was a meal in itself.

After finishing off the appetizer, we submerged ourselves in a basket of warm tortillas. Just then, our gargantuan dinners arrived.

My enchiladas took just a few minutes to gulp down. The order was filled with sumptuous chicken and draped with a cheese sauce that was fit for the gods. The black beans and rice that accompanied my dish were equally tantalizing. With April sampling my entree, my plate was soon wiped clean.

June was just as pleased with her selection. It had taken her over 20 minutes to decide on a chimichanga, because there were just too many tempting entrees to choose from. She squealed in ecstasy after her first bite.

She had aroused my curiosity, so I sneaked a taste while she was reaching over for a tortilla. I too, was engulfed in emotions bordering on disbelief and complete ecstasy. It was the ambrosia of Mexican cuisine.

April, in the meantime, was herself enraptured by a sizzling platter of beef fajitas, bell peppers and onions. Neighboring customers oohed and ahed at the display and smell of the new arrival.

She allowed me a taste of her dinner begrudgingly, and justifiably so. My taste buds were in bliss. The beef and veggies were seasoned to perfection, and the dish came with more of those divine beans and rice. I snagged some of those too.

In between bites we managed to get in some conversation, although I must admit that we were so wrapped up in our delectable dinners that I can't recall much of what was said. Oh yeah, we decided to return to Alex's next week to induct our newest club member, May.

With all the business settled, we set out for home, a couple of take-home entrees in hand in case we needed a snack later on.

Alex's Cantina is located at 5918 Hollister Ave., in Goleta. Call 683-2577 for more information.
