Santa Rosa to be Completed by this Friday

By Adam Moss
Campus Editor

The $3 million renovation of the Santa Rosa Residence Hall will be completed on Friday, according to the contractor, possibly allowing students to move in on Monday.

Originally scheduled to be completed Sept. 9, the renovation deadline was extended to Sept. 16 because of complications involving the building's heating system and delays in the removal of asbestos-insulated water pipes.

Although Parton and Edwards, the general contractor for the project, did not initially agree on the extension date, it now says the construction will be finished Friday. However, the university will check the dorm for any areas that may require further work after Friday, Parton and Edwards Superintendent Dana Anderson said.

Any further work requested by the university will probably be finished before Monday and then the dorm will be ready for occupancy, Anderson continued. "We haven't had any (further) extensions," he explained. "We're just trying to get the job done as quickly as we can."

Another factor in the renovation's delay was that university architects were sometimes slow to make decisions and forward them to the contractor, Anderson said. However, he believes the university was still "just trying to get the job done" as well.

Although Parton and Edwards has declared Friday as the completion date for the renovation, UCSB Public Information writer David Salisbury said there is no set date for completion of the renovation. "It's still up in the air," according to Salisbury. "Obviously, everything isn't going real smoothly with the project," he said.

In addition to physical hindrances, Parton and Edwards has encountered financial problems in dealing with the Santa Rosa renovation — the university has been required to withhold a million-dollar payment to the contractor, according to Salisbury.

The payment had to be stopped when a Parton and

Collision's Oil Slick Pollutes Channel

By Sheryl Nelson
County Editor

Oil continued to bubble up from the sunken freighter Pac Baroness Wednesday, leaving Coast Guard officials few options but to monitor the slick's movement as it pollutes the Santa Barbara Channel.

The unsalvageable Pac Baroness sank to a depth of approximately 1,300 feet after colliding with another ship approximately 15 miles off of Point Conception Monday.

As many as 40,000 of the 386,000 gallons of oil on board the sunken ship has risen to the surface, Coast Guard Captain Robert Janecek said. Currently, the slick is moving in a northwest direction and will head out to sea if the weather cooperates, he explained.

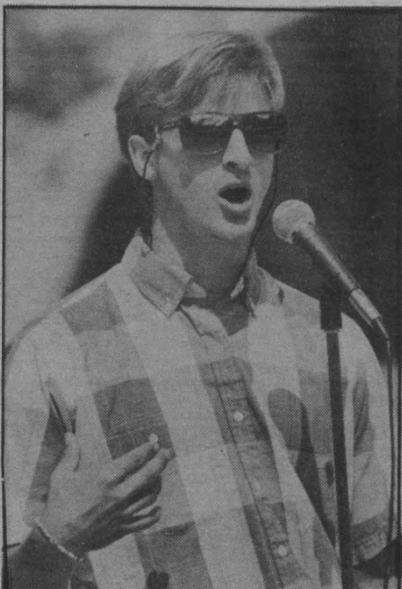

The Coast Guard has used planes with radar detecting equipment to fly over and examine the oil slick, but dense fog has made it difficult to view the slick's dimensions. Currently, it is estimated to be six miles long and up to three miles in length, Janecek said.

The Coast Guard is "pleasantly relieved not to find any oil moving to the Channel Islands," but beach clean-up crews are prepared to act quickly in case the oil "impacts the coastal areas because of wind changes," Janecek said.

However, the government agency will continue to monitor the movement and the size of the oil slick with water buoys acting as markers, Janecek said.

Rally Protests UC Ties with Weapons Labs Scientists, Engineers Criticize Involvement

RICHARD O'ROURKE/Daily Nexus

UCSB mechanical engineering graduate Vince Ruddy denounces UC management of two national nuclear weapons laboratories.

The University of California has lost its dignity and integrity, and must work to regain it by cutting ties with the nation's military-industrial complex.

This was the message delivered by speakers at a Wednesday afternoon rally sponsored by members of Scientists and Engineers for Responsible Technology.

Speaking to a crowd of about 50 people in Storke Plaza, UCSB engineering graduate and SERT co-founder Vince Ruddy told listeners that graduating from the University of California "was one of the most painful experiences of my life."

"After four years of hard work, of getting good grades, of achieving various awards ... it could be said that I have a lot to be proud of," he said. "Unfortunately, pride was about the farthest thing from my mind when I went up to the platform to receive my certificate."

"My four years of hard work were rewarded with the knowledge that my university was irresponsibly administering the weapons laboratories at Los Alamos and Lawrence Livermore, and in doing so have been lending a direct hand in perpetuating the nuclear arms race," Ruddy said.

Ruddy and other members of SERT believe the University of California has been profiting by opposing arms control agreements.

"Time and time again, it has been the officials of the Lawrence Livermore and Los Alamos laboratories, which our university administrators, who have been primary resisters to the most important arms control treaties of our time," Ruddy said. "It makes me wonder what it is that these people are afraid a nuclear test ban will accomplish."

Ruddy and other members of SERT believe the University of California has been profiting by opposing arms control agreements.

Also speaking at Wednesday's rally was engineering graduate Ted Miller, another SERT co-founder. According to Miller, the reason behind the founding of SERT was "basically to apply technology to things that will improve the world, rather than screw it up," he explained. "We need to ask ourselves 'What should we develop?' not 'What can we develop?'"

Yesterday's rally was similar to one held last week at UCLA, where the University of California Regents voted to continue university management of the two nuclear test labs.

Former Dean Passes Away

Former UCSB Professor and Associate Dean of the College of Letters and Science Upton Sinclair Palmer, 81, died Tuesday after suffering a stroke.

Born in Louisiana, Palmer attended school in both Texas and California. He graduated from the University of Redlands in 1928 and went on to earn advanced degrees from the University of Iowa and the University of Michigan.

Palmer came to California State College at Santa Barbara — which eventually became UCSB — in 1947 and worked on the organization of local and state speech events. He later became president of the Western Speech Association.

In his 27 years at UCSB, Palmer served as president of the campus's Emeriti Association, was head of the UCSB speech department and was an associate dean of the College of Letters and Science for the past 10 years.

Warships Find Floating Mines More News from Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain — American warships swept a strip of the central Persian Gulf on Wednesday to recover mines believed planted by the Iranian ship that U.S. helicopters attacked this week. Although there was no official word on how many were recovered, shipping executives, speaking on the condition they not be named, said the Navy had found eight of the moored, contact-type explosives. Commercial ships were warned away from the waters about 50 miles northeast of Bahrain.

Here is an update of the current situation in the Gulf region.

—Iran has vowed revenge for the American attack and the Iranian president said in New York that the two countries are moving toward war. U.S. embassies and military bases worldwide were warned to be alert for possible terrorist attacks.

—Despite the increased tension in the region and the possibility of more floating mines, gulf-based shipping sources said that the reflagged Kuwaiti tanker, Gas Prince, had begun a southbound voyage under U.S. escort.

—There was new fighting in the Iran-Iraq war. The Iranian official news agency said Iraqi warplanes struck industrial and residential areas at Bakhtara in western Iran and that Iranian artillery bombarded Iraqi military and industrial targets in southern Iraq.

—The state-run Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi jet fighters flew 87 combat missions during the day, one of the highest totals in recent weeks.

Opposition Factions Squabble Over Presidential Candidates

SEOUL, South Korea — Rival factions of South Korea's main opposition party publically squabbled Wednesday when supporters of Kim Dae-Jung urged Kim Young-Sam to drop out of the presidential race. Supporters of Kim Young-Sam immediately rejected the call and responded by demanding Kim Dae-Jung renounce his presidential ambitions.

Kim Young-Sam, 60, is president of the Reunification Democratic Party. Kim Dae-Jung, 62, who came close to victory in the 1971 presidential election, serves as the party's permanent adviser.

In a related development, about 300 students fought riot police for nearly an hour at Yonsei University after a rally in which students called for opposition unity. Students threw firebombs and stones while police fired tear gas. No injuries were reported.

Whiskey Bottle Among Artifacts Recovered by Titanic Salvagers

PARIS — 100 reporters were on hand for the opening of the container holding 800 items plucked by salvagers from the Titanic, which sank 75 years ago on its maiden voyage.

The five pieces displayed Tuesday included a pale green whiskey bottle with a small crack in its side, filled with murky water; a silver ladle, its engraved handle covered in a tar-like substance; a pair of gold spectacles in mint condition inside the leather case still bearing the name of the Paris optician who made them; an elaborate bronze grill used to cover a duct on the ship; and a fluted serving bowl.

Jacques Montlucon, a spokesman for the Electricite de France laboratory, which is treating the artifacts for exposure to salt water, donned a pair of thin rubber gloves and pulled the items one by one from a red plastic container.

The lab was originally created to perform metal surface tests for application on nuclear power plants. It has branched out to several fields and has treated materials ranging from Napoleon's iron cannon to a 14th-century leather shoe.

House Okays $3.5 Million in Aid Earmarked for Contra Rebels

WASHINGTON — The House on Wednesday approved $3.5 million in new "humanitarian" aid to the Nicaraguan contras and House Speaker Jim Wright said he expects it to be the last U.S. aid ever sent to the rebels.

The money was part of a stopgap spending bill to keep the government running after the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30. The measure, approved 270-138 after little debate, was sent to the Senate, where it is not expected to encounter major opposition.

The contra aid money had been worked out in a bipartisan agreement between Wright, D-Texas, and House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois.

The $3.5 million represents the proportion of this year's $100 million in contra aid money that had been used for food, medical supplies and uniforms and would be needed to sustain the rebels into November in their battle against the leftist Sandinista government in Managua.

Biden Refuses to Comment on Rumors He's Leaving the Race

WASHINGTON — Presidential candidate Joseph Biden is meeting with family members and close aides as he struggles to decide whether to abandon his seriously damaged 1988 Democratic presidential campaign.

"I'm not going to make any further comments on the presidential race," Biden said.

Biden's campaign has been struggling for more than a week to recover from a string of disclosures.

The first blow fell when it was disclosed that Biden had lifted campaign speech material from British politician Neil Kinnock, delivering a personal anecdote as if it were his own, followed by reports — swiftly confirmed by Biden — that he had plagiarized material for a law school paper more than 20 years ago. Finally, on Monday, Biden confirmed published reports that he had exaggerated his academic credentials and accomplishments in a heated exchange with a voter in New Hampshire last spring.

Senate Revives Gramm-Rudman Law to Delay Balanced Budget

WASHINGTON — Senators planned to consider revising Gramm-Rudman yesterday after the House voted Tuesday night to approve strengthening the legislation that lawmakers hope will guide the federal government out of an era of massive budget deficits.

The new Gramm-Rudman proposal sidesteps Supreme Court objections to the mandatory spending cut mechanism in the 1985 version of the law by changing the way reductions are ordered. It does not require a balanced budget the 1993 fiscal year.

The Gramm-Rudman language is part of a larger bill that would boost the government's debt ceiling to $2.8 trillion, enough to finance federal borrowing through May 1989, after President Reagan leaves office.

Top Gun Fighter Shoots Down Air Force Reconnaissance Plane

NORFOLK, VA. — A U.S. Air Force reconnaissance jet was accidentally shot down Tuesday by a Navy F-14 fighter over the Mediterranean Sea during NATO exercises, the Navy said.

The Air Force RF-4C jet was downed by an air-to-air missile fired by the F-14, said Cmdr. Jolene Keefer, a spokeswoman for the Naval Air Force Atlantic.

A helicopter picked up the two Air Force officers, who had ejected safely, and took them to the USS Saratoga, said Keefer.

Berkeley Will Ban All Plastic Food Containers as of Jan.31

BERKELEY — Foam plastic food containers made with chlorofluorocarbons will be banned from the 400 fast food outlets and mini-markets in this ecology-minded community because they damage the Earth's ozone layer, the city council decided Wednesday.

Councilwoman Nancy Skinner said the unanimous vote, which came at 1:15 a.m., called for the city to prohibit the purchase of plastic foam products containing CFCs as of Jan. 31.

Also passed was a recommendation that encourages city merchants who receive more than 20 percent of their revenue from fast food to establish a voluntary program to cut in half their use of non-biodegradable packaging, she said.

Environmentalists who spearheaded the campaign contended that CFCs released by the breakdown of plastics are threatening Earth's existence by devouring the ozone layer that keeps out dangerous levels of ultraviolet rays.

Police May Have Captured One Suspect in Kidnap-Murder Case

LOS ANGELES — Police shot, wounded and captured a fleeing man Tuesday whom they believe was involved in the kidnap-killing of a 14-year-old San Fernando Valley girl and the wounding of her best friend.

Roland Norman Comtois underwent surgery at County USC Medical Center Tuesday afternoon after he was shot twice in the abdomen when he ran from officers who approached him in a residential neighborhood near Dodger Stadium, said Los Angeles Police Department Lt. Dan Cooke. Cooke said Comtois' condition Tuesday evening wasn't immediately known.

They said he resembled a composite drawing of the killer. His vehicle, a motorhome, was similar to the one described by the girl who survived Saturday's attack, police said.

Cooke said Comtois, about 50, was shot as he tried to scale a 12-foot fence after he fled the officers.

"He took off running and ran into a gated area, where he tried to crawl over the fence," Cooke said. "After the officers shot him, he either fell or jumped over the other side, where he was taken into custody."

'I Just Thought I Wanted to Shoot Someone' Says Youth

OAKLAND — Police say a 15-year-old boy who "just wanted to shoot somebody" admitted killing a young woman whom he did not know at a summer rock concert.

The boy, whose name was not given because of his age, was booked on a murder charge for the July 25 shooting of 18-year-old Elizabeth Dallas. Elizabeth was shot in the head from a speeding car just as she was hugging her boyfriend in the parking lot of the Oakland Coliseum after seeing a Grateful Dead-Bob Dylan show. There were no clues to the shooting until a $5,000 reward was offered, police said.

The suspect, a junior high school student, is already in custody on drug charges. He'll be arraigned in the killing Thursday in Alameda County Juvenile Court. If convicted, the maximum sentence he could get would be custody by the California Youth Authority until he is 25, in 1997.

New Quarter to See Open-container Ordinance Tested

By Wade Daniels
County Editor

A fledgling open-container ordinance that has had its share of violators will now be put to the test because students have returned to UCSB, according to a Isla Vista parks district official.

The ordinance prohibits possession of an open container of alcohol, or consumption of alcohol, on public streets, sidewalks, alleys and parking lots. However, drinking is still legal on beaches, park grounds and bluffs.

Passed in March by the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors, the ordinance is intended to address problems of alcohol abuse such as litter and noise.

However, it was difficult to determine the ordinance's impact during the summer, because few students remained in Isla Vista area, said Janet Langley, Isla Vista Recreation and Parks District street sweeping supervisor. But, "the street has been covered with trash the last week or so, since students have been coming back into town," Langley said.

"All in all, people that have lived and been in the area are obeying it," I.V. Foot Patrol Deputy Ray Pinmental said. "I believe that many of the new students are not aware of it ... but we make them aware of it," he said, explaining that the text of the ordinance is posted in front of the Foot Patrol office and officers also inform people orally.

"I believe people tell their friends ... but there's always those that slip by and aren't aware of it," Pinmental added. "It's still a relatively new ordinance."

Occasionally, violators of the ordinance are under the age of 21. A minor in violation of the ordinance is also in violation of a business and professions code that prohibits minors from possessing alcohol, I.V. Foot Patrol Sgt. James Drinkwater said. However, a person in this situation would only be cited for the business and professions violation, a misdemeanor, Drinkwater said. "So, actually, the ordinance only really applies to adults," he concluded.

However, some minors caught for minor in possession violations say they have been threatened with citations for open container violations as an added fine.

While I.V. resident Marc Shubb was being cited for a minor in possession violation, the arresting officer threatened him with an open container violation as well, according to Shubb.

"He made it sound as if he was doing me a favor by not doing so, saying, 'Well, we're in a good mood so we are only going to get you for minor in possession,'" Shubb explained.

Before it was passed, the ordinance received the support of local law enforcement officials, but met strong opposition from I.V. residents who expressed feelings that it was another government intrusion into their lives.

I.V. Playground Dedicated to Neighborhood Children

By Wade Daniels
County Editor

With a swift downward chop, 5½-year-old John Nguyen broke the purple ribbon at the steps of the new Isla Vista Children's Park play unit that has been dedicated to the children of the community.

About 25 local children waited impatiently during the Wednesday afternoon ceremony to play on the 20-foot-high redwood/plastic-metal structure that has swings, ladders, platforms and a "tornado slide."

"I'm excited that we can finally dedicate this play equipment to the children of this neighborhood," IVRPD Board Chair Lisa Rothstein said in an opening speech. "The (IVRPD) is always working to make Isla Vista a more safe, beautiful and happy place to live. It's projects like this one that, for me, make the effort worthwhile."

Approximately $23,000 was spent to purchase and install the new structure and renovate existing facilities, said Glenn Lazof, IVRPD general manager.

A state-authorized Roberti Z'berg grant funded $20,137 of the project, while the remainder was paid for with funds from a 1975 voter-approved park bond.

At the ceremony, Rothstein also raised concerns about the possible future of such projects. "I am specifically concerned about the current proposal to force Isla Vista into a city of Goleta," she said.

"Measure Q, on the ballot this fall, will put Isla Vista in the hands of the Goleta City Council and could ultimately dissolve the park district. Isla Vista is a unique community and the intimate understanding of local control is essential," Rothstein added.

Response to the upgraded park was generally favorable. "I like the spinning-around one," Nguyen said, referring to the "tornado slide" that drew the most attention from the children. Nguyen's only complaint was that when too many kids are going down the slide, "you get bumped in the back."

"It's nice to have something nice and shiny and new for the children to play on in the area," Isla Vista Youth Project director Luann Miller said. "I think this is more interesting to them too.... It's going to be real popular."

Despite community approval of the completed work, some feel the park could stand further improvement. "The park doesn't have water for the lawns and I'd like to see the (Goleta Water Board) put a water meter in," ceremony attendant Alice Chouinard said. The park previously had a "partial meter" that allocated water for part of the year to the park, according to Chouinard.

The parks district has approximately $50,000 worth of projects for other I.V. parks in progress, but bond funds are running low, so the IVRPD is soliciting community input for the design of a new park bond proposal.

The Pub: An Island of Relaxation in a Sea of Stress

Great Beers and Gnarly Nachos Trademarks of Campus Cantina

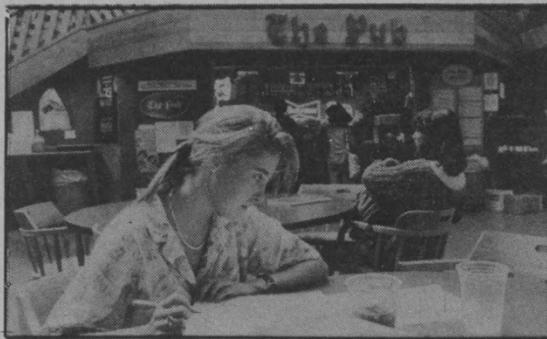

By Sean O'Connor
Reporter

Do you ever hear sounds of merrymaking from beneath your feet while walking to the bookstore, or see smiling people making toasts while you swelter in line simply to make an appointment to stand in another line? This island of relaxation amidst the turmoil of first-week stress is the Pub, located on the bottom floor of the UCen.

"The Pub is a place where faculty, staff and students can get together and let their hair down — talk on a personal level," Pub director Luis Sanchez said.

As in previous years, the traditional Pub Nights will be held every Thursday. They are free and entertainment is always provided, Sanchez explained.

Pub Nights are the best time to drop by the Pub, according to former Pub employee Laurie Scanlon. "(Pub Nights) draw a lot of people ... from I.V. street people to professors — everyone just comes and mingles," she said.

Some party, some study in the Pub. Junior Stephanie Culver takes advantage of a quiet moment to have a soda and peruse her notes between classes.

Scanlon enjoyed working at the Pub and had some interesting experiences while an employee. "One guy, one night, he was really drunk and he just pulled his pants down — I guess he was hurting for attention and he got it," Scanlon related.

This year's first Pub Night gets underway this evening, with entertainment provided by Mojo Nixon and Skid Roper, a novelty rock'n'roll duo that recently made an appearance on the "Tonight Show."

As well as the free Pub Night entertainment each week, the Pub will also host Pub Showcases. These concerts will be put on by the World Jazz and Music Society through the A.S. Program Board and admission will be charged.

Although Pub Nights and showcases are open to all ages, only those with proper identification will be served alcohol, Sanchez said.

"We need a second picture I.D. with a California I.D. card or a temporary license," said Sanchez. "The problem with the I.D. cards is that a lot of people use an older brother's or sister's birth certificate to get a fake one," he continued.

"Any license that is expired or altered will not be accepted," Sanchez said. Only a passport or a current California driver license will be accepted alone, he added.

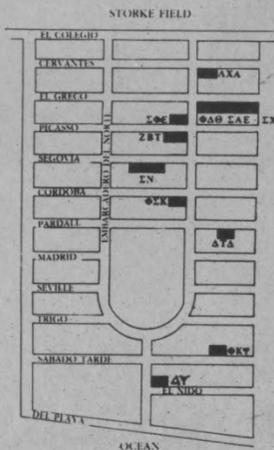

Clubs and committees are also invited to use the Pub as a meeting place and tables may be reserved for that purpose, Sanchez said.

"I like the Pub because great people come here. Here is where political decisions on the student government level are

Student Health Services Center Aids UCSB Students

By Dana Furby
Reporter

Although it began in the former Army barracks now occupied by the biology department, the UCSB Student Health Service center is anything but a relic.

Since moving in 1970 to its current location across from Pauley Track, the center has been able to expand the programs and services it offers students.

Among the center's services are daily programs dealing with eating disorders, drug and alcohol abuse, nutrition, and birth control, in addition to counseling on sexually transmitted diseases and stress management, said Sabina White, director of the center's Health Education Office.

SHS also supplies the student population with primary medical care. To accomplish this, the center maintains a staff of 24 doctors and 10 nurses. Specialists, including psychiatrists, pediatricians, orthopedists, dermatologists and gynecologists, are also available as needed, at no charge to registered UCSB students. Although the center offers optometric and dental services, the costs of these services are not included in student registration fees.

For serious injuries or illnesses, the center maintains an emergency room capable of performing minor surgery and emergency evaluation of patients for referral, SHS Clinics Coordinator Howard Beckwith said. Even pharmaceutical goods, X-ray services and physical therapy are available at SHS.

Despite the center's many offerings, some students complain they have received inefficient or impersonal care at SHS. Director of Nurses Celia Breyfogle admits that there are occasional problems, but believes they are not always the center's fault. "We try very hard not to give a student the runaround. Sometimes a student doesn't communicate clearly what his or her needs are, and it's difficult to direct him. And, sometimes it is our fault," she explained. "When you see four to five hundred students a day, it's virtually impossible to make everyone 100-percent satisfied."

SHS Director John Baumann urges any student with a complaint to follow it up. "If a student is unsatisfied with the care he or she has received, we'll do anything we can to make the student satisfied. He can come directly to me," Baumann said.

Most students, however, find the services at the center satisfactory. "I thought I had strep throat, so I went to get it checked out," sophomore Erica Avon explained. "They were helpful and friendly. They explained exactly what was wrong and listened to my input, too," she said.

"Our physicians are first-rate," stressed Baumann. "They are on par with physicians from the Santa Barbara Medical Clinic or any other private physician. The feedback (from students) has been overwhelmingly positive."

"I think we do very well," said Breyfogle. "We do have limitations. The time and space available is limited, and sometimes simply the amount of scientific knowledge limits us. You always wish you could do more for the patient, and do it more quickly." Overall, however, Breyfogle is "very proud of the staff and how hard they work."

"I very much enjoy working with students," said Baumann. "Everyone here is here because they like to work with college students."

made, have been made and will be made," former Associated Students Legislative Council member Emilio Pozzi remarked about the service provided by the Pub to the student government.

"The Pub serves a vital role in campus life," Sanchez noted. "There is a large campus population under 21 (years of age) and we like to keep the Pub open to everybody, regardless of age." Only on Grad Night, held once at the end of each school year, is access limited to those 21 years of age or older.

Many UCSB students have found the Pub to be a convenient and fun place to hang out. "You can have a beer and relax, and the fact is that it's very big — you don't have to cram in. And it's a centralized location where everybody can come," Pozzi said.

Senior Dana Rucker also spends time visiting the Pub. "I come here to kill a little time. It's a good place to hear music. I find the people are friendly, but they need more tables," she said.

Sanchez displayed enthusiasm for his job, concluding, "The Pub is a great place; I love it, other people love it, and I hope even more will come and give us their support."

UPDATE

Edwards subcontractor, Claremont-based William M. Lockhart Corporation, wrote a letter to the university on Aug. 27 alleging that Parton and Edwards had not paid $805,407 owed to the Lockhart Corporation. "I assume it (the Lockhart claim) is so that Parton and Edwards doesn't take the money and run," Salisbury said.

Legal stipulations require that the university must withhold 125 percent of the $805,407 due, which totals approximately $1,006,759, Salisbury explained.

Salisbury believes the "stop notice" will not have any direct effect on the completion date of the renovation. "I think that would have to depend on how Parton and Edwards is responding to the situation," he said.

Anderson confirmed that Parton and Edwards has not been paid for any work since Lockhart's claim.

Lockhart was paid everything owed it until Aug. 27, and Parton and Edwards was approximately "a day away from getting paid (by the university) to pay their (Lockhart's) bill," Parton and Edwards Supervisor Steve Krauthoff said.

"Lockhart made their problem our problem 'cause we're the general contractors," Krauthoff said. "Even the university is just caught in the middle of all this stuff. Our basic thing is to get the job done, regardless."

Lockhart has been paid $134,000 for painting and "dry wall" work done this summer at the dormitory, Lockhart Marketing Director Richard Nieto said. "They (Parton and Edwards) owe us $805,000," Nieto said.

If Parton and Edwards were to pay some of the money that Lockhart claims is due, Lockhart would drop the stop notice, Nieto continued. "We've told them if they would release partial funds to us, then we would release the stop notice," he explained.

But, Parton and Edwards cannot release partial payment to Lockhart until the stop notice is dropped, because the university payment will in turn be paid to Lockhart, Anderson said.

The stop notice also prevents Parton and Edwards from paying any subcontractors that were hired to work on Santa Rosa. However, one worker from Wynne Painting, another Parton and Edwards subcontractor, said that Wynne has been told it would receive payment.

The Lockhart demand for $805,407 is actually higher than the contractual agreement, Anderson said. There were additional costs for the Lockhart job above the contract price, but Parton and Edwards must still ask the university for reimbursement before paying Lockhart for these costs, he explained.

CASE Provides Students Free Academic Skills Aid Center's Goal to Better Abilities

By Bill Florence
Reporter

The UCSB Center for Academic Skills Enrichment, designed to help students achieve scholastic success through free workshops and a writing lab, is not a place for remediation, according to the center's acting director.

"People misunderstand our mission," CASE interim director Michele Peterson said.

CASE is available to and used by all class levels, including graduate students, Peterson stressed. "Those who get Bs but want to get As make up our average population. Their GPAs are above the GPAs of the whole UCSB student population," she said.

Data on the 1986-87 school year is not yet available, but during Fall Quarter 1985, the average student's grade point average was 2.31, whereas those who used CASE during the same time period had a collective GPA of 2.67.

"You can see that the students that come here are not necessarily in a lot of trouble. They often just want to improve their skills and they realize that in high school or junior college they weren't responsible for using their notes as a primary source for information to pass a course. So, they don't have the notetaking skills that they would like to have," Peterson explained. "That goes for reading skills, too. They never had the volume of material to read that they will read here."

Some of the many workshops offered by CASE include Effective Speaking, Problem-solving Strategies, and Rapid Reading and Textbook Underlining. The workshops are free to all registered UCSB students, but are subject to limited enrollment.

However, the most popular workshops offered at CASE are Time Management and Notetaking, according to Peterson. Freshmen are the primary participants in these workshops, she said, adding that students can return to the CASE office for one-on-one help after attending a workshop if they desire. The CASE Writing Lab also draws a large number of students to CASE as well, she said.

Housed in Room 209 in the CASE building, the Writing Lab has a part-time staff of six people, including Peterson. Students are allowed to attend the lab for up to one hour, by appointment, per week. "Only if a writing counselor thinks there is a special need will a student be seen for more than an hour a week," Peterson said.

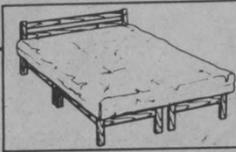

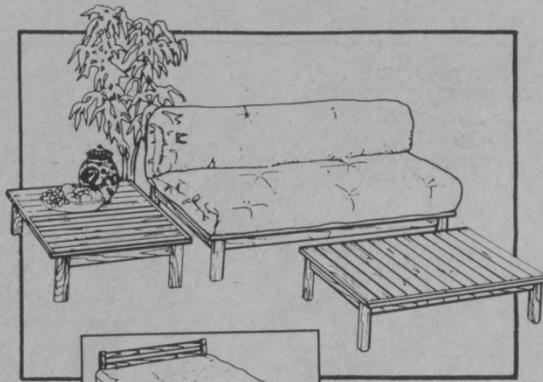

For those who have difficulties with tests, CASE offers three different workshops: Essay Exam Preparation, Objective Exam Preparation and Problem Solving Preparation, which is geared toward students in math and science. There is even a Preprofessional Exam workshop, for those who plan to take tests such as the GRE, LSAT, CBEST and others. "We offer mock forms of these tests. Students will come in on a Saturday morning and take, say, a sample GRE. Then we help them score it. In this way, they find out where their weaknesses are," Peterson explained.

Evaluations of success are conducted after every CASE workshop, Peterson explained. Students are given forms to fill out and from these CASE employees determine the directions workshops should take, she said.

UCSB Dean of Students Leslie Lawson has worked to encourage the use of CASE through summer orientation programs for new students. "We know students are utilizing the center," Lawson said. "I'm glad that we turned them on to it."

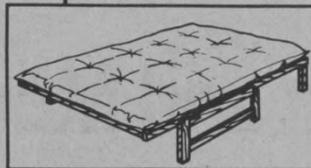

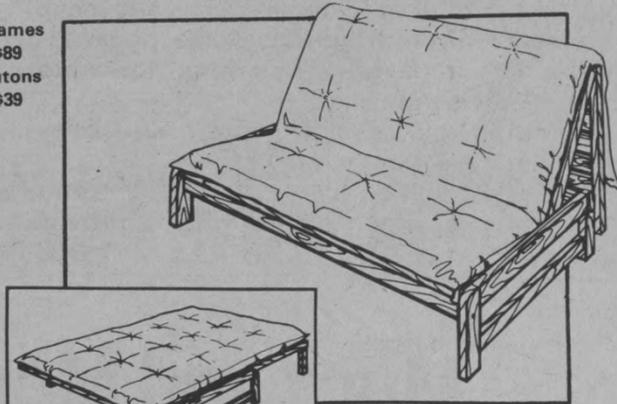

Now in its fifth year, CASE is funded through educational fees, part of which comes from students' registration fees. (See ENRICHMENT, p.11)

Editorial

We have already seen many weird twisted political paradoxes in 1987. But for a year that started with so much hope for the Democratic Party, it sure has turned into a nightmare.

It's been a year that began as a nightmare for the Republicans, and especially for our hallowed leader, President Reagan. Today, the Teflon President acts as if every day is a drowsy summer afternoon.

And, 1987 has seen the death of two presidential campaigns. Both casualties are Democrats. Gary Hart, as close to the White House as any presidential hopeful, was caught with his fingers in the nookie jar, and was condemned by the public and the media for his extramarital activities.

Currently, it is Joe Biden's turn in the wringer. Evidently, the good senator has been lying about his law school record, and has taken a fancy to quoting other people in his speeches without proper attribution. The media is on his heels like a pack of rabid dogs, and he will certainly become a political memory, joining Hart and many other ruined politicians in what Hunter S. Thompson calls the "dark pit."

However, with the fall of two would-be shining stars, there is something terribly out of whack that almost shocks the conscience. Wasn't it only yesterday that our esteemed president seemed on the edge of that same pit? Wasn't it only yesterday when we witnessed sweaty politicians in Washington trying to unravel the intestines of the Iran-Contra arms affair, a deal that provided arms to a terrorist nation partially responsible for the death of 200 marines in Lebanon? Two candidates are gone because of minor transgressions, while Reagan weathers a storm that fails to compare with the misdeeds of his political colleagues.

Somehow, we as a nation, and especially the media, have lost our perspective. We have minimized the conduct that brings about death, not only in Central America, but in the Middle East too. The Iran-Contra hearings played second fiddle to the Gary Hart scandal even days after the story first broke. Infidelity took priority over things like mining the harbors in Nicaragua. But, maybe this fact should not be so surprising.

Reagan has survived his share of media controversies. He's made it through Grenada, cutting social and welfare programs to the bone and having dangerous men like James Watt and Ed Meese on his cabinet.

Our sense of judgment has become so skewed that instead of deploring real injustice, we choose to crucify people for adultery, an act that more than 50 percent of Americans themselves indulge in. In the present case, we'll hang Biden for lying and plagiarism — another popular action many of us enjoy. Imagine, a politician not lying — what a concept.

Admittedly, these are not qualities we want to see in our highest elected official, and these are traits we need to know about before the elections roll around. Yet compared to what Reagan has done while in office, the moral discrepancies of Senators Biden and Hart are petty and inconsequential.

Not many seem to see it that way, however. The democrats are sinking quietly into the mire, and the republicans are still standing tall. Not that there is anything wrong with that.

It's just a matter of perspective.

You've just joined with some of this country's most prestigious faculty and scholars who endorse whole-heartedly a 'race to the end' with the Soviet Union. So that we may come out on top after the missiles fly and the radioactivity hits the fan, we push hard for weapons like the Neutron Bomb, and most recently, the Strategic Defense Initiative. God forbid stopping nuclear testing — stopping the detonation of nuclear bombs would prevent X-ray laser research from continuing, which is essential to our Star Wars gem. Besides, top level physicists and arms control experts the world over see a nuclear test ban as the most significant and important step in halting the nuclear arms race, and we wouldn't want that, would we?"

But they don't have access to all the super-duper top secret information that the lab officials have. In saying things like this, and in relying on the fact that most people taking jobs at weapons facilities are apathetic war-heads in the first place, we're sure to squelch all of this kind of softy-liberal doubt before it can slow down our progress toward completely defense-based economy.

So, in spite of the fact that there are two ongoing congressional investigations into illegal lobbying and other unethical behavior by the weapons labs, and ignoring the complaints of over 250 faculty (including some 50 physicists, two Nobel laureates, and numerous members of the National Academy of Sciences), we've decided to go ahead with another five years of arms race endorsement. Sixty-two million dollars is a lot of money, and if we don't do it, someone else will. Editor, Daily Nexus:

Entering students' GPAs may be up this year, but their manners are evidently way down. Class of 1991 (and a few scattered transfer students): why did you decide to start off the year in such poor taste?!

I just came from the Chancellor's Convocation for New Students, where I was very embarrassed for the many students who so rudely got up and stomped out of the Events Center in between the distinguished speakers' addresses. It was incredible to me to witness such a lack of common courtesy. I emphasize "common"—you weren't asked to perform any impossible or demanding chore, but simply to act relatively mature, politely remaining seated through a gathering held in YOUR honor. Even when there were a mere twenty, then TEN minutes to go before it would conclude, you just had to make a rude exit. Why?! If you're saying, "Well ... everybody else was doing it..." then the first lesson to learn here at UCSB is that "following the crowd" is not an acceptable excuse any more, as it may have been in high school. Rather, our wise new chancellor offered some very valuable advice to you: to "take charge" of your life and not let others do the choosing for you. I find your behavior particularly disgraceful in view of the warm and personal welcome she gave to you, calling you "her" class, as you both are beginning your first year at UCSB.

As a Summer Orientation adviser who shared your enthusiasm for being here and who did my best to help you learn about and prepare for college life over the past few months, your actions at the convocation today were disappointing. As a human being, I just could not believe your audacity.

Next time you have the opportunity to choose between being rude or polite — whether in a large gathering or on a more personal basis — please consider the benefits of doing the latter, not only because of how it will make you look, but more importantly, because of how you will make others feel.

A New Project for the Homeless

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I would like to welcome back all returning students and greet with warm enthusiasm our new freshman class and transfer students.

Last year, if some of you remember, an inspiration hit me out of the blue during dinner time. The thoughts that were triggered while I was boiling some hot dogs created a very successful fundraising venture known to us as PROJECT MACARONI. I would like to thank each and every one of you who contributed to PROJECT MAC. I am proud to say that with the simple request that each student contribute 33 cents (the price of a box of macaroni), the Project raised approximately $800. The money is being donated to the Let Isla Vista Eat school breakfast program. Your contributions helped ensure that the students who participated in the breakfast program attended classes on a full stomach. Studies have shown that children who eat a good breakfast before attending the first classes of the day perform far better academically than those students who are hungry.

This year the A.S. Community Affairs Board's Homeless/Hunger Project will be reaching out to the community and its members through a variety of activities such as, fundraising, a Hunger/Homeless Awareness Week and volunteer recruitment and placement in a variety of agencies located in the community.

The main goal of the Project is to create an accurate understanding of who the homeless people are, and awareness of the causes that lead to homelessness, and what we as concerned students for a better and more compassionate community can do for the homeless people.

There are many ways of becoming involved. You can help with awareness week, volunteer with the LIVE breakfast program at the URC (University Religious Center) or the I.V. Elementary School, work on ongoing fundraising and most importantly become involved in the political issues of the homeless.

If nothing else, people are invited to go down to agencies such as the Salvation Army and sit and have a meal with the people there. If you're real courageous have someone reserve a bed for you and sleep in a shelter for a night. Open your eyes to the issues, you can meet some pretty neat people out there, or at least the most real people you have ever met in your entire lives.

If you are concerned about the issues and want to become involved, please contact me at the A.S. Community Affairs Board office on the third floor of the UCen (961-4296). We can make a difference.

Sincerely,

BRIGET LYNN WANDRUFF

Food Services Deserve a Boycott

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Don't let them get away with it! As you've probably realized by now, Food Services has abused its monopoly of the food outlets on campus and has raised their prices by a completely unjustifiable amount. These price increases have ranged up to 35 percent and perhaps higher. We must put a stop to this greedy profiteering. There is no reason for such a jump, as the past year has been one of exceptionally small inflation and the price increases have not been accompanied by any increase in the salary paid to Food Service employees. Has anyone seen an increase in quality?

I call on the A.S. to organize a boycott of the food services until prices are restored to a more reasonable level. If the A.S. refuses to do this, we can organize the boycott on our own. A week-long boycott of all the Food Services, starting next Monday, should be enough to force a retraction by the management. Let's hit them where they are vulnerable — in their well-lined pockets!

The Man Does Have Office Hours

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Believe it or not — I am terribly hard to get a hold of. Between school politics, attending class, and having fun, I've noticed that my daily schedule becomes quickly filled. Although this busy agenda of bureaucratic meetings, studying at the library, and working on issues of the Associated Students is very important, I also want to set time aside so we can talk.

If something is on your mind concerning issues of the campus, local community, or world, please feel free to come on up. Even if you just want to hear what's brewing within your student government, and, at the present you don't have a clue, I am encouraging you to ask.

I have set aside walk-in hours, Monday afternoons, from 1:00 to 3:00, to talk to anyone willing to walk up one flight of stairs to the third floor of the University Center.

But wait — I'm obviously not the only Associated Students' Representative that you can talk to. The third floor of the UCen is filled with student representatives willing to answer and listen to any questions or concerns you might have. IT'S TIME FOR YOU TO GET INVOLVED.

Earthquake Danger Zones Cause Geologists Concern

By Deborah Bloom
McClatchy News Service

SACRAMENTO — California geologists are leading an international effort to answer one of the most troubling and elusive questions about earthquakes: where do they hit hardest?

The results may eventually help scientists advise city and state officials about areas most vulnerable to being wrenched apart by an earthquake, possibly even on "microzoning" urban areas to limit building in high-risk regions, according to Brian Tucker, acting state geologist.

"Our nightmare is that a big earthquake hits in the year 2000, the Los Angeles basin is wiped out and we haven't done this kind of work," Tucker said. "We don't know how it will turn out. But we don't want to look back and say, 'We should have done that.'"

The experiment, at the heavily monitored Parkfield section of the San Andreas fault, has drawn scientists from more than 15 countries, including Japan, Italy and France. The researchers are preparing, starting this month, to test their predictions on how the shock waves of an earthquake roll through the ground and where they do the most damage.

Several countries are also setting up similar experiments on home ground for comparison with the California study, coordinated by the Division of Mines and Geology in the California state Department of Conservation.

Private engineering firms — from California and elsewhere around the world — have donated several hundred thousand dollars' worth of time and equipment to prepare for the experiment, said Tucker.

The ongoing experiment will cost roughly $500,000. The state government's cost is about $70,000 in equipment. The rest has been contributed by private specialists, including one Japanese engineering firm that did almost $200,000 worth of drilling and test explosions in the study area.

"The beauty of it is not only that the work has been done, but that all these people are so involved with it," Tucker said. "There's a lot of recognition of how important these results could be. And, in fact, we wouldn't have hosted this party if we weren't expecting to see results."

Beyond the question of predicting when earthquakes will occur, scientists have recognized for years that it can be almost equally difficult to predict where the worst damage will occur.

The 1985 Mexico earthquake, for instance, caused far more damage in Mexico City — some 250 miles from the actual breakpoint of the quake — than it did closer to the source. Further, within the city itself, some neighborhoods were destroyed, others left standing.

Researchers are preparing to test predictions about the behavior of earthquakes and where they do the most damage.

That same, apparently erratic pattern shows up in other earthquakes as well. In 1983, the small town of Coalinga in California's San Joaquin Valley suffered more than $30 million of damage. Yet the nearby town of Huron, about the same distance from the earthquake's epicenter, simply endured a bad shaking.

"In both cases, we know that the building standards didn't vary so much from place to place," Tucker said, "although that's important, too. But what we're trying to understand is the variations in how the soil conditions and local geology affect ground motion."

Parkfield, on the San Andreas midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, is the logical place to do the experiment.

That segment of the San Andreas fault apparently generates medium-sized ear-by the owner of the sunken Liberian freighter have cleaned up approximately 70 barrels of oil from the perimeter of the spill, which is eight to 10 miles offshore, Janecek said. The oil on the outside of the slick is the easiest to remove because it has been clumped together by the wind and currents, he explained.

To test the dissolubility of the oil, a DC-4 aircraft began dropping 100 gallons of an oil-dispersing agent on the leading edge of the slick Tuesday afternoon, when it was about six miles offshore, Janecek said.

The Coast Guard has no intention of continuing to use the dispersant, since its use is a controversial environmental issue, Janecek said.

Environmentalists have also voiced concern that the 23,000 tons of copper sulfide concentrate locked in the sunken freighter are hazardous. But, the substance is "very insoluble and would not be toxic" to marine life, said National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Lt. Francesca Cava at an afternoon press conference at the Coast Guard's Santa Barbara headquarters. "The cargo seems to be no danger to any form of (ocean) life," she said.

However, Environmental Protection Agency official Jerry Clifford believes there may be some ecological damage to fish that are in the egg and larval stages. "It could be months before we know the overall impact," Clifford said.

And, Santa Barbara fishermen are particularly concerned about the environmental impact of the slick. The area of the pollutants is "very rich in marine life.... You can only assume that the critters won't be too happy about this," said Tom White, owner of Santa Barbara Shellfish.

The cause of the Monday collision between the Pac Baroness and the Atlantic Wing is officially undetermined, Coast Guard Lt. Mike Hathaway said. The Coast Guard will work with both countries on the investigations, he said.

Although Peterson would not disclose how much money CASE receives each year, she said that the funds are used to pay for the full- and part-time staff, as well as for a variety of budgetary expenses.

More than 5,000 students used CASE last year, an increase over previous years and an indication to Peterson that CASE is working.

Bob Mueller, a graduate student at UCSB, reacted positively when asked about CASE. "I hear it is absolutely excellent," Mueller said. "I never used it as an undergraduate, but I plan to when I turn in my dissertation." As a graduate, Mueller is allowed only so many hours of CASE time per quarter, he explained.

thquakes with surprising regularity about every 22 years. The U.S. Geological Survey has predicted that a moderate tremor, about 5.5 on the Richter scale, will occur at Parkfield in the next four years.

Parkfield abounds with geologic instruments measuring strain and motion on the fault, recording the frequent tiny tremors that barely shake the ground.

But, the California geologists and their colleagues wanted to go further. In a small valley called Turkey Flat, about six miles from the San Andreas, they installed a series of devices, called strong-motion accelerographs, that measure how the earth moves as the quake rolls through.

Participants in the experiment are being provided with extensive information on the shape, form and geology of Turkey Flat.

Armed with those facts and given their own theories of earthquake movement, each will make predictions of how tiny tremors will rock Turkey Flat and whether bigger shocks will shake it up in a different way. The first group of predictions will begin this fall and continue into next spring.

"It will give us a chance to compare precise ground conditions with levels of shaking," said Chuck Real, a seismologist with California's mines-and-geology division. "We hope to benefit from a long period of research in understanding that ground motion in great detail."

Two Japanese earthquake specialists, visiting briefly in Sacramento, said they hope the Parkfield experiment will allow them to test some major theories in their own country on planning cities that will best endure earthquakes.

Kojiro Irikura, of the Disaster Prevention Research Institute at Kyoto University, and Kazuyoshi Kudo, of the University of Tokyo's Earthquake Research Institute, worked at Parkfield this summer gathering information about Turkey Flat and readying their predictions.

The Japanese are already microzoning some urban areas by earthquake risk, using a somewhat controversial method. The current Japanese technique identifies risky regions based on the effect of very small tremors. Some geologists say the method is unreliable because a larger shock might behave entirely differently. Kudo and Irikura hope to compare the microtremor predictions against the real thing during the Parkfield quake.

If the Turkey Flat results confirm that microtremors are a good — and much cheaper — way of predicting ground motion, the Japanese government will have more confidence in their use, they said. The technique could also be adopted in the United States, where it has not caught on, Real said.

Tucker said other ground-motion theories will be tested, as well.

From looking at earthquakes in places like Peru and Turkey, Tucker suspects that some valleys may react to tremors almost like a shaken bowl of Jell-O, held tight at the edges but wobbly in the middle. Scientists have theorized that Mexico City was vulnerable because it sits on an ancient lake bed atop soils very prone to turn almost liquid when shaken.

Both Japanese and U.S. scientists acknowledge that identifying risk-prone urban areas doesn't necessarily translate into governmental action.

"I hope that this work will help protect people in Japan during earthquakes," Kudo said. "But, it will take a long time, I think. If a building meets building codes, then the government won't deny it. It takes a long time for these kinds of findings to make changes."

Tucker acknowledges that it isn't always easy for governments to restrict building in profitable development areas, or to require building owners to retrofit to meet new microzoning standards.

NFL Out on Strikes, Baseball at Bat

It's in the air. As we rapidly approach the 1987 baseball playoffs and that fall classic thing, there's a curious excitement as to which four teams will actually take part in post-season play.

But before I go into yet another round of biased predictions, it's important that we get an idea of what to expect in the next 25 days or so:

- First of all, be prepared for a lot of talk about a possible championship team from Canada.
- Get used to the sights and sounds of sports gurus Vin Scully, Joe Garagiola, Bob Costas and of Marv "don't call me fat" Albert.
- Be ready for plenty of old playoff and World Series footage and trivia.
- And finally, be listening for those familiar words heard during big games in households all across the land: "Hon, could you get us some more chips?"

As for the participants in this year's festival, there is only one group o' guys who will surely be one of the four.

The Giants have been in first place since early August. They have a six-and-a-half-game lead with 11 to play. Look for them to finish in the division's top spot pretty much uncontested.

American League West leader Minnesota is currently coming off four consecutive wins at home and an unsure four-game lead over the A's. It's "prove 'em all wrong" time for Kirby, Kent and Co. over in the Homer Dome.

St. Louis has won four in a row and maintains a three-and-a-half-game lead over the Mets. They embark on a series with the I-l-lowly Pirates, while the Mets take on those pesky Expos. Even without first baseman Jack Clark, my smart money is on Ozzie and the Redbirds.

Toronto or Detroit? Your guess is as good as mine. Both have the momentum, although the experience edge goes to the Tigers. But the Jays have that nut George Bell who is making a name for himself at the major league level.

Let's switch directions and talk a little about those boys over on the gridiron for a moment.

They couldn't have picked a worse time to take the shoulder pads off. Everybody knows nobody really pays attention to football until after baseball's through.

We all know that as soon as we get a little baseball playoff nectar on our lips, football can take a hike. And at the same time those weasels are taking away our Sunday afternoons, we'll get some daytime World Series games.

So much for a bunch of angry sports fans. Autumn is here, which means baseball — serious baseball.

If this year's regular season serves as any sort of foreshadowing for the post-season, and if last year's playoffs are any indication, then expect this to be another October to remember.

Time now to go out on a final limb: St. Louis over the Giants for the National League pennant. Toronto over Minnesota in the American League.

Although Toronto will be looking for its first World Series title, the Cards will end up saving face for a disappointing loss to the Royals in '85.

The Leader in Intramurals Wants Those with Interest

By David Miller
Sports Writer

In 1986-87 an estimated 6,000 UCSB students, alumni and faculty participated in intramural sporting events each quarter, giving the university one of the largest collegiate intramural programs in the nation.

And as the 1987-88 intramural calendar begins to heat up, the program shows no sign of slowing down.

"So far this quarter, we've had quite a few people sign up, although it's hard to tell exactly because we're still conducting registration," said Intramurals Director Paul Lee. "Despite our limited resources with facilities, time and money, all of our sports continue to be very popular."

According to Lee, intramural participation is much larger at UCSB than at other universities because of the proximity of the student community to the school and "the fact that UCSB students generally tend to be more health conscious."

The intramural program offers a wide variety of sports, with several competitive levels for both men and women. This quarter, the program offers nine league activities. Special events include the annual 5K and 10K Turkey Trot foot race, innertube water polo and racquetball tournaments. For a comprehensive listing, see the intramural sports office adjacent to Robertson Gym.

"Interest, not skill, is the prerequisite," Lee said. "This is a great opportunity for individuals to compete in an atmosphere of sportsmanship and recreation."

To many students, playing intramural sports is just as much a part of the college experience as going to class.

"IM's have always been a great release for me," said Curt Trammell, a four-year intramural participant. "After a long trip to the library, nothing sounds better than a tough game of floor hockey."

Dave Spaulding, a teaching assistant in the biology department, noted that "to be able to take some time out to play a little hoop and sweat a bit is a perfect way to end the day."

If you are more of the judgmental type or would just like to pick up a little extra cash, officiating positions are open as well. Officials — unlike players — are required to go through training seminars which prepare and acquaint them with the rules and regulations of the sport they will be officiating.

"It can get pretty ugly out there when games get close and players start heating up," said Chris Molony, an intramural basketball official last year. "But in the end, most people realize that we're out there doing the best job that we possibly can."

All that is needed is the interest to be involved. Teams can be formed by a few friends or individuals may sign up to be placed on teams. "It's important to keep in mind that this program is run by the students," Lee added. "Therefore, its structure is indicative of what the students want."

San Diego State Aztecs Blank UCSB

Men's Team Finishes One-for-San Diego

By Scott Lawrence
Assistant Sports Editor

Yesterday evening, the UCSB men's soccer squad played the tail-end of a two-game series with soccer teams in the San Diego area. After just getting by the Seagulls of United States International University on Tuesday afternoon by a slim 1-0 margin, the Gauchos travelled to San Diego State University for a Wednesday evening match.

The Aztecs of SDSU are a tough team, with a far-west ranking of fifth going into last night's action.

UCSB went into play with a record of 3-1-2, but added another loss to their record after SDSU blanked the Gauchos by a score of 2-0.

It was the second time in seven games that the Gauchos failed to mark even one tally on the scoreboard.

The Aztecs were able to stifle UCSB's often explosive offense that, earlier in the season, was able to tie the nation's number-one team Fresno State.

At the same time, SDSU executed just enough offense to secure the victory.

The extent of the Aztec attack was a pair of goals by two different forwards. Pat Henderson and Chris Keenan each scored once in an attempt to improve on an already formidable far-west ranking.

Since tying the Bulldogs of Fresno State in their season opener, the Gauchos have recorded victories over Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and St. Mary's College by scores of 2-0 and 3-1, respectively.

UCSB also lost to Stanford and kicked to a double overtime deadlock of 2-2 against the Warriors of Westmont College.

After last year's campaign, the Gauchos had compiled an overall record of 8-11-3 for a winning percentage of .432.

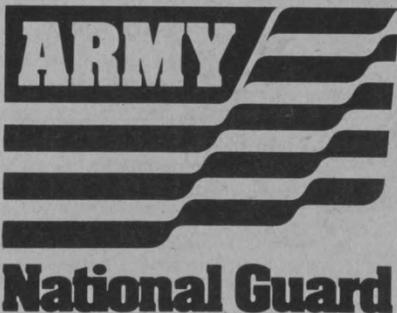

In hoping to improve on last year's performance, UCSB Head Coach Andy Kuenzli stated, "We will have more of an attacking style this year. We will look to attack in a much quicker way. I hope and believe that we will be able to score more goals this year."

With fifteen games remaining in this year's effort and a forward line led by junior Tim Von Steeg and sophomore William Gould, UCSB can look forward to bettering last year's mark of eight wins.

The next foe on the Gauchos' list will be the squad from Loyola Marymount University near Los Angeles.

The contest will take place on Monday, Sept. 28 at Harder Stadium.
