Tutu Appearance Prompts Rally; Students Call for UC Divestment

By Steven Elzer

and Stacy Hamlet

Approximately 300 UCSB students rallied against apartheid Thursday as a local politician, students, professors and staff members passionately called for total UC divestment in South Africa.

Following Tuesday's on-campus speech by Bishop Desmond Tutu, several students began an all-night vigil in front of the campus library. There they organized the Storke Plaza rally at which speakers called for increased student participation in pulling UC funds out of South Africa.

"By being a UC student, I am supporting racism and as long as our money is in South Africa, we are all supporting racism," student activist Doug Yates said.

Cedric Robinson, director of the Center for Black Studies and associate professor of political science, told students to use their varied fortes and assist in the anti-apartheid cause. "At this time the apartheid movement needs you to begin to think, organize and work," he said.

"We want total divestment now," Coalition Against Apartheid member Martha Cody said to a cheering crowd.

Student protest against apartheid is not simply a fad, Cody told the noon crowd. "We're not just doing it because it's a thing to do," she said. "The message is, the issue of injustice in South Africa has not gone away."

According to Yates, the one tool available to help end apartheid is divestment of funds in companies with business ties in South Africa.

As he spoke, Yates turned away from the plaza spectators and faced Cheadle Hall. He yelled, "Chancellor Huttenback, can you hear

Apartheid Rally Ends in Brief Take Over at Cheadle Office

More than 60 students stormed Chancellor Robert Huttenback's outer office in Cheadle Hall Thursday and engaged the campus leader in a spontaneous discussion on divestment and apartheid.

Huttenback spoke with the students for about 20 minutes before leaving his fifth-floor lobby. Students stayed for more than an hour, when they decided by consensus not to risk arrest by campus police officers who were called to the scene.

The protest began after a noon rally in Storke Plaza, where Associated Students President Ken Greenstein invited spectators to march to Cheadle Hall. He said they would give Huttenback a bouquet of flowers wrapped in paper with the slogan, "liberation of the oppressed."

About 200 rally spectators joined in the cross-campus walk, chanting divestment slogans, but only several dozen crammed into the chancellor's lobby.

The students poured into Huttenback's lobby, but stopped just short of his office, blocking its doorway. As the room filled, Huttenback said, "I don't know what you want with me, I've divested every penny of my holdings from South Africa.... What can I do for you?"

"Why don't you come down and show your support with us," activist Doug Yates said.

Huttenback replied, "I don't have the time."

Students asked the chancellor to urge the UC Regents to divest the system's approximate $2.4 billion from businesses with ties in South Africa.

"You'll probably find the regents won't do anything for a while," said Huttenback, explaining that the ## Committee Recommends Neal Reimburse A.S.

By Phil Hampton
Editor-In-Chief

The Student-Faculty Committee on Student Conduct has recommended that Darryl Neal, the 1984-85 Associated Students president charged with misusing student monies, be censured and asked to reimburse A.S. $750, the Daily Nexus has learned.

In a letter written to Vice Chancellor Raymond Sawyer, Committee Chair David Gold said the campus judiciary body unanimously ruled that Neal violated a campus regulation pertaining to "personal gain."

Sawyer will review the committee recommendations and is responsible for implementing those he deems appropriate. Neal may appeal the decision to Chancellor Robert Huttenback.

The letter said the restitution figure includes $330 in personal expenses that Neal admitted charging to his A.S. American Express credit card, and 25 percent of the charges he made at local restaurants.

The committee — comprising of Gold, two other faculty members, one graduate and one undergraduate student — found the figure to be "fair and reasonable" restitution, according to the letter.

Neither Neal nor Gold would discuss the committee recommendations.

Sawyer would neither deny nor confirm the letter's accuracy. "My only comment is that (letter) is confidential correspondence and I'm displeased it has been circulated," he said.

University regulations, which cite the Federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, prohibit public disclosure of student records about possible disciplinary measures.

Despite Neal's status as a public official accused of misusing public funds, University Counsel Mel Beal determined Jan. 13 that because Neal was a student at the time of the violation, he is protected under the privacy act.

A systemwide legal/policy interpretation advised UCSB officials not to release any information on Neal's case without first securing his written consent.

Neal declined to authorize the release of information regarding the conduct committee's findings and recommendations.

A university audit made public last fall revealed that Neal had charged $3,743 — including $1,905 at local restaurants — to his A.S. credit card over an eight-month period while in office.

A student ad hoc committee recommended Oct. 2 that Neal be asked to pay back the student government more than $1,800 in accountable expenses, and that he be referred to the conduct committee for possible violations of campus regulations.

A.S. Legislative Council approved the peer group's recommendation to send the former president to the conduct committee, but voted against requesting reimbursement.

The conduct committee, by unanimous vote, found Neal innocent of charges that he provided false information to the university and that he "intentionally converted university property for his own benefit," according to Gold's letter.

Gold said in the letter that the committee "relied heavily on the circumstances surrounding the administration of the A.S.

National Urban League
President Denounces
U.S. Economic Policies

MANILA, PHILIPPINES — President Ferdinand E. Marcos said Thursday he will ignore the "crazy individuals" who question the war record on which he built his political career.

He made the comment in a campaign speech to a crowd that included many World War II veterans, after The New York Times published an article citing U.S. Army investigations that found his claims of leading guerrillas against the Japanese to be "fraudulent."

In its Thursday editions, the Times cited 400 pages of Army reports on Marcos' military career. The reports said Ang Mag Maharlika, the guerrilla group he says he led, "never existed" as a fighting organization and was not controlled adequately "because of the desertion of its commanding officer" — Marcos.

The president, now 68 years old, is said here to have now 28, 32 or 33 medals, depending on the Philippine government report accepted. He is described here as the most decorated soldier of the war and claims more honors than Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

His war record is so important to Marcos that he talks about it in nearly every interview and speech, and in 1982 closed down a newspaper that printed articles challenging it.

He says he suffered five war wounds and tells war stories in his campaign speeches for the Feb. 7 election, in which he is opposed by Corazon Aquino, widow of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Marcos blamed his opponents for The New York Times article. "Those who collaborated with the enemy have no right to question the role of the country's guerrillas during the war," he said.

Drop in Oil Prices Threatens
Mexico's Ability to Repay Debts

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO — Mexico could be forced to halt interest payments on its $96.4-billion foreign debt, or seek emergency aid from the United States and international bankers, if oil prices tumble to $20 a barrel and stay there, some private analysts say.

The fall in oil prices in recent days has raised new concerns about the ability of Mexico to maintain payments on its debts and shore up its sagging economy.

"It puts Mexico back in its financial position, the recovery of the economy and its standing with creditors," said Javier Murcio, an economist at the private forecasting firm of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

Robert Pastor, Fulbright professor at the Colegio de Mexico in Mexico City, said, "The further decline of oil prices could really set back everything the country has been trying to do for the last couple of years."

New Delhi Hotel Fire Kills 38
Including One American Citizen

NEW DELHI, INDIA — Fire raged through a luxury hotel before dawn Thursday, killing at least 38 people, Indian officials said. One American was among the dead, and 38 people were hospitalized.

Several leaped to their death from the 10-story Siddharth Continental Hotel, which is near the airport in the upper-class Vasant Vihar suburb, fire officials said.

Police and fire officials said it was the worst hotel fire in the Indian capital since independence from Britain in 1947.

About half the victims were foreigners but names were not released pending notification of relatives, police said. The victims included a West German diplomat and his wife, an Argentine diplomat, three Britons, two Japanese, two Australians, an Iraqi, a Soviet citizen and the American.

National Urban League
President Denounces
U.S. Economic Policies

WASHINGTON — The National Urban League on Wednesday called the Reagan administration "a Rambo-like destroyer of civil rights gains" and said its economic policies have left black Americans struggling to survive.

The chasm between blacks and whites widened even more in 1985, as most whites enjoyed economic recovery while blacks "slipped further and further to the rear of the parade," league president John E. Jacob said in issuing the organization's 11th annual assessment of black America.

"The signs of a nation moving toward a state of being permanently divided between the haves and the have-nots were plain to see over the past months," he said.

Jacob noted that unemployment among whites was 5.9 percent at the end of last year, while 14.9 percent of the nation's 27.9 million blacks were out of a job. "If whites had such a high unemployment rate, it would be called a depression," he said.

Jacob was particularly harsh on the Justice Department's efforts to revise a presidential executive order signed by Lyndon Johnson in 1965 which authorized the government to set numerical hiring goals and timetables for firms holding government contracts.

Jacob said budget cuts during the Reagan years have seriously hurt federal programs for children, young adults and the unemployed. He said "the most tragic aspect of all" is the staggering number of black children living in poverty — 51.1 percent in 1985.

EPA Proposes Banning of All
Carcinogenic Asbestos Products

WASHINGTON — The government moved Thursday for the first time to ban deadly asbestos, a widely-used substance that officials say causes up to 12,000 cancer cases annually in the United States.

Under a two-phased attack, the Environmental Protection Agency proposed an "immediate" ban in five product categories, mostly in the construction area. Over the next decade, EPA said, it wants to cleanse the environment of all products containing the known carcinogen.

The decision, attacked by an industry group as "unwarranted," culminated more than six years of regulatory soul-searching within the government and months of in-fighting between EPA and the Office of Management and Budget.

The ban, when fully implemented, will avert as many as 1,900 deaths from asbestos-related lung cancer over the next 15 years, EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas said.

U.S. Orders Flight Operations with Aircraft Battle Groups Near Libya

WASHINGTON — The United States has ordered its two aircraft battle groups in the Mediterranean Sea southward toward Libya and notified civilian air traffic officials there the carriers will be conducting flight operations over the next week.

Pentagon sources said Thursday that the moves in no way presaged any type of military attack on Libya and that all operations would be conducted in international airspace and waters.

One official added, however, that the exercise was intended to demonstrate that the United States would not be intimidated by an increased Soviet naval presence in the region, nor by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's decision to place his own military forces on alert and to pledge continuing support for Palestinian terrorists.

"It's asserting the right to passage in international airspace, with plenty of notice to everyone in advance of our peaceful intent," one source said.

A White House official denied reports that the exercise was a deliberate provocation of Khadafy.

Bishop Tutu Praises
Attempts to Evict
S. African Consulate

LOS ANGELES — South African Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu on Thursday applauded attempts to evict the South African consulate from Beverly Hills, saying the City Council "is using the kind of pressure we are calling for."

Calling the move forceful but non-violent strategy, Tutu said the action would send the right kind of signals to leaders and victims in his country.

South Africa moved its consulate from San Francisco to Beverly Hills five years ago. At that time, the Los Angeles City Council passed a resolution asking the State Department to keep South Africa from opening "any consulate ... in the greater Los Angeles area."

On Tuesday night, the City Council in Beverly Hills voted 4-1 to ask the State Department to order the consulate to move out of the city, and Tutu was asked about the vote during a news conference Thursday morning in Los Angeles.

"I am glad the council is using the kind of pressure we are calling for. You are trying to send certain signals to victims of apartheid," said Tutu, whose battles against South Africa's system of racial separation won him the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize.

The council has no power itself to evict the consulate, but, "We certainly have the right to make a moral statement," said Councilman Benjamin H. Stansbury Jr.

"We see no purpose in this consulate being in Beverly Hills," he said, adding that if the federal government wants to maintain communication with South Africa, "let them do it in Washington, not here."

State Department spokesman Robert L. Bruce, in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., said there would be no response until a letter from the Beverly Hills council was received.

Voyager 2 Explorations Discover
Weak Radio Signals from Uranus

PASADENA — Voyager 2 has discovered Uranus emits weak radio signals, suggesting it has a magnetic field that could reveal the length of a day on the planet and whether it has a molten rocky core or liquid oceans.

"If you want to know how long a day is on Uranus, you have to measure the magnetic field," Ed Stone, Voyager project scientist at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, said Thursday.

In addition, "If you have a magnetic field, you have to have an electrical current" to create the field, Stone said. That means Uranus must have flowing, electrically conductive material in its interior.

Such material could be molten rock in the planet's core or electrically charged particles in liquid oceans, he added. While temperatures on Uranus are far below the normal freezing point of water and many other materials, its incredibly high atmospheric pressures could prevent water or other substances from freezing.

Voyager 2, which explored Jupiter in 1979 and Saturn in 1981, makes its closest approach to Uranus and the planet's five major moons today — the most distant objects ever visited by spacecraft from Earth.

regents have a committee to review South African investments.

"I think you have the right instinct, I don't agree with you tactically. I sympathize with your view.... It's very frustrating," he said.

"I am not a representative of the students, they are part of my constituency and I'm always happy to relay your thoughts," Huttenback said.

"I am as much against apartheid as any of you, but I don't totally agree with divestment," he said. "I probably had more experience with apartheid than any of you."

Several students then asked, "Which side?"

Huttenback asked the crowd if any had read the two books he has written on South Africa.

"I have read your books and neither one has suggested that apartheid should be ended," said Peter Shapiro, a UCSB library assistant.

While Huttenback remained firmly against UC divestment, he did say "business can be the strongest influence to ending apartheid."

"You listen to Tutu ... I'm not going to get hung up on this divestment thing. The regents have a policy," he said.

As protesters questioned the chancellor, the group broke out singing "We Shall Overcome." Mikhael Smith, UCSB Student Lobby Annex director, handed daisies to the administrators present. Vice Chancellor Edward Birch accepted his flower and began to sing with the protesters.

Huttenback was sympathetic to

The flowers that students gave to Chancellor Huttenback lay on a desk while the campus administrator discusses his views on South Africa.

the frustrations evident in the room. "These people have only one issue, which is divestment," he said. "I don't know an issue that is more complex."

"They are feeling a certain level of frustration.... They ask themselves, what can they do when they are so many thousands of miles away," he said.

The chancellor could offer no alternative to ease the students from their divestment stance. He said that without a solution to the racial strife, he expects increased sabotage in that country.

Businesses in South Africa, however, are bearing down on the white-minority government, he said. "The people most adamantly against apartheid is business. They realize it is destructive to their profits."

After the chancellor returned to his inner office through a back door, students began to demand that he write a column for the Daily Nexus.

This article would explain "his views on the system of apartheid in South Africa, on divestment and what he is personally doing to end apartheid and what he thinks that we, as students can do to end apartheid," said protester Trish Ricci.

The students threatened not to leave the office until their demand was met, but Greenstein met with Huttenback on their demands and reported that the chancellor "would not be bullied."

Huttenback said later that he would have no problem writing such a column "sometime."

Greenstein told the group if the chancellor "doesn't write an editorial ... we can come back another time." Anti-apartheid rallies are being planned for every Wednesday afternoon in Storke Plaza.

"By going to the chancellor's office we sought to achieve administration cooperation in our endeavors. If the administration feels it cannot cooperate with us, I hope that they will not become a barrier to our cause," Ricci said.

"Divestment is on the minds of the students and we'll bring it back to the regents one more time," Greenstein said.

According to the A.S. president, Huttenback "talked openly while at the same time was somewhat evasive. He is not offering us any viable solutions, he's just saying divestment won't work."

Greenstein said he sees a time when he will face the police and go to jail over the apartheid issue. "I am going to get arrested before the year is over, it's just that the time has to be right."

"Despite a little bit of misdirected anger, students acted in a responsible manner," Smith said. "I think the administration can do more to open up communication on issues such as racism and support educational forums, such as the critical issues program."

Smith said Huttenback acted in "good faith in speaking to students, but I think he could take more initiative in conveying the wishes of the people on this campus."

After the students left, Huttenback said he would put the flowers in a vase. "I'm not going to throw them away in a fit pique."

Council to Pull Funds from Credit Union

By Gene Sollows
 Staff Writer

Associated Students Legislative Council voted to remove, on July 14, about $19,777 invested in the Isla Vista Credit Union, at its meeting Wednesday night.

Once holding an A.S. investment of $40,000, the credit union was judged by last year's council to be rendering "inadequate service." Council then voted to remove the funds in four three-month installments.

The money, now in a year-long account, will be withdrawn with the stipulation that Leg Council must review the investment to assess student use again in March.

Although no statistics were available for the total number of student credit union investors, 45 student accounts have been opened since September 1984, council member Susan Potter said.

"You've got to look beyond the students (the A.S. investment is helping). It's helping the whole community, it's giving money to the community for the community," Potter said.

"It's making Isla Vista a better place to live. I wish you'd look past these 45 students," she added.

Investment Advisory Committee Chair Sean Ryan reported earlier in the meeting on his visit to IVCU this week. Ryan spoke of IVCU President Wanda Michalenko's "hostility" in A.S. dealings, and said she "was very vague on many issues."

"Financially, a better rate of interest can be had in the general market," Ryan said. "We could get 7.8 to 8 percent (at other institutions) — they (IVCU) give us 6.5 percent."

"If we could get figures on (the amount of student loans) we could ... determine the extent that the students benefit from the institution," he added.

"We already do a sufficient amount of contributing to the community," council member Kim Alexander said, explaining that A.S. donates to many I.V. organizations, including Let Isla Vista Eat and the I.V. Youth Project.

Alexander felt the IVCU money differed from other A.S. funds as it is an investment for students. "We must be fiscally responsible," she said.

Some council members expressed concern over the credit union not sending interest payments to A.S. Potter explained that dividends were kept because IVCU officials were uncertain if the account would be closed early, in which case A.S. would be forced to forfeit all interest.

The lack of IVCU presence during Leg Council meetings was also a source of problems. "I'm a little dismayed that the IVCU has not seen fit to appear at any of your meetings," Dean of Students Leslie Lawson said. "It seems to me that with a board of directors of seven to eight people that at least one could show up."

Potter explained that credit union hours conflicted with council meetings. "I can't believe how the philosophy has changed. You feel you owe nothing to the community. It's not the credit union's responsibility to come begging to us to keep the money in," she said.

Council member Sharlene Weed and Potter said that a membership drive for IVCU will be started, to show greater student use of the money by the March review deadline.

Despite statements made by A.S. Internal Vice President Todd Smith Tuesday night, A.S. executives did not present Leg Council with a proposal condemning Chancellor Robert Huttenback's reformation of the Student Advisory Committee.

The committee, a controversial body formed two years ago, was designed to acquire a "broader spectrum of opinions of more philosophical issues," Huttenback said.

A.S. External Vice President Rich Laine presented council with a letter from the Executive Committee of the Faculty Legislature. The letter, addressed to Academic Senate Chair A.E. Keir Nash, expressed the "dismay" many faculty members have towards the committee, called CSAC.

"The proposed 'CSAC' ... is objectionable because it establishes a formalized structure of consultation and process of representation alternative to Associated Students," the letter states.

"For the chancellor to give the appearance of trying to create an alternative framework for student expression seems to us to violate principles of democratic self-government — principles which constitute essential ingredients of the university's educational mission.

"From a practical point of view, the 'CSAC' concept ... serves to undermine relations of trust between students and the administration — without any benefit to the institution that we can discern," the letter explains.

Smith and Laine urged council members to attend an ad hoc committee meeting to determine possible actions against the CSAC. "It's a decision council will make," Laine said.

In Other Business...

Honoraria adjustment bill — council tabled a bill that would raise elected A.S. officials' honoraria, but lower those of appointed members, due to lack of research on relative work-intensity of various A.S. positions.

Bike safety report — council member Robert Skripko outlined in his weekly report possible Bike Safety Committee plans to close the Arbor bike crossing, allowing for a more peripheral bike system.

New council members — new Off-Campus Representative Brian Deeley was sworn into office.

Audit report — a report concerning the yearly audit of A.S. funds was tabled as audit representatives were not present at the meeting.

Guardian Angels to Begin Santa Barbara Patrols Soon

By Pete Gontier
 Reporter

The newly-formed Santa Barbara chapter of the Guardian Angels will begin active patrols by mid-February, but members do not consider Isla Vista a high priority area.

According to a survey conducted by the organization last October in downtown Santa Barbara, 76 percent of those polled agreed there is a need for the Angels in the city.

The Angels will make regular patrols in the lower east and west sides of Santa Barbara, and will respond only to phone calls in other areas, said Danny Lewis, director of the Los Angeles Guardian Angels.

Lack of immediate demand is the reason no regular patrols are planned for I.V., said George Salazar, director of the Santa Barbara Guardian Angels. "According to the Foot Patrol, there isn't much violent crime in Isla Vista."

Requests from local residents can, however, change the patrol situation, Salazar said. "If they (residents) feel that we're needed and they call us, we'll establish regular patrol," he explained.

Although I.V. is not a targeted patrol area, Angels will patrol the college community during times such as Halloween, when the crime rate is known to rise, Lewis said.

Public relations and information are already provided by "P.R. patrols," Lewis said. Angels currently walk Santa Barbara streets to raise awareness of future patrols, he added.

The group will also conduct an escort program at Santa Barbara City College, a similar service for battered women travelling to and from court and a program to deter evicted renters from harrassing their former landlords, he said.

Local law enforcement has taken a "wait and see" attitude with the Angels, he explained. Local agencies told Lewis they prefer to see results before offering any opinion.

"I share that position, though I question ... the need (for the Angels' patrols)," Santa Barbara County Sheriff John Carpenter said.

The Sheriff's Department supports any involvement in crime prevention, but is ready to intervene if a situation is "out of control," Carpenter said.

Lewis said in November that the Angels will establish a Santa Barbara chapter with or without the cooperation of local authorities.

The group's first patrol, coincidentally in I.V., encountered "a little bit of friction" with the Foot Patrol last Saturday night, Salazar said. "They thought we were going to stay inside the Santa Barbara City limits," he said.

Salazar said he has since informed the Foot Patrol of the Angels' intent to respond to calls from the entire county.

UCSB students hold mixed feelings about the Angels' Santa Barbara chapter. "On campus we probably don't need them because of CSOs (Community Service Officers) and campus police, but I.V. can get pretty rowdy sometimes," sophomore Jeffrey Hue said.

The Isla Vista Foot Patrol appears to have crime under control, but the Angels might be a reassuring presence in I.V., Hue said.

"If people (in I.V.) want them, I don't really mind," junior Gabriel Sweetman said. "But I'm not afraid to live in I.V. It (Angel patrols) might be a waste of time."

The Guardian Angels are not a vigilante group, Lewis asserted, explaining that they will not initiate violence and will use only their "visual presence" to deter crime. If necessary, the Angels will perform a citizen's arrest, he said.

New Legislation to Create More Jobs for Work-study

By Mariko Takayasu
Capital Correspondent

SACRAMENTO — The Senate passed a bill by Santa Barbara Senator Gary Hart on Thursday that would create more than 1,500 new jobs for college and university students through a state-sponsored work-study program.

The bill, passed by a 31-1 margin, would set up a pilot program to provide employment to students at public, private or non-profit organizations.

"I think part of our strategy here is to try and hold down the costs of higher education by getting students more involved in paying for their education," Hart said.

Under the bill, students will receive the majority of their salaries from state funds and the remainder will come from the employers.

"We hope that eventually both the private and public sectors will contribute matching funds," said Student Aid Commission spokesman Greg Golluhur.

Public and private colleges and universities currently eligible to participate in state and federal financial aid programs would be eligible to award work-study grants to qualified students.

"Private schools could participate in the program but the work could not occur on that particular college campus ... because under state law it is unconstitutional," Hart said.

If the bill becomes law, California would be the 16th state in the nation participating in similar work-study programs. The bill is now on its way to an Assembly committee for further action.

Legislation May Help Reduce Shortage of University Professors

By Mariko Takayasu
Capital Correspondent

SACRAMENTO — A bill that would help reduce the recent shortage of professors in high-technology fields within the state's universities passed through the Assembly Ways and Means Committee Wednesday.

The Assembly Economic Development and New Technologies Chair Sam Farr, D-Santa Cruz, authored the legislation that would provide matching donations from both public and private sectors to doctoral candidates in high-technology fields. The measure stipulates that the recipients make a commitment to teach in California universities for three years.

"We have a serious shortage of professors in these areas, especially in the engineering and computer science fields," Farr said.

Vacancies in engineering faculty topped 20 percent in 1985 with over 300 openings in Cal State University alone, he added.

The bill limits eligibility to California residents. Currently there is a 22 percent faculty vacancy rate in the state. By 1990, 10 percent or 692 of the present faculty are going to retire.

"Our intent here is to entice people into teaching. We want people who are fully committed to teaching and if they drop the program then they'll have to repay," Farr said.

Half of the stipend would be awarded as a grant and the other half would be a loan. The loan portion would be forgiven as the graduate completes the three-year teaching requirement. Those who break the commitment will have five years to pay back the no-interest loan.

Supporters of the bill, including Hewlett-Packard, the California Teachers Association and Intel, explain that severe shortages of Ph.D. instructors in engineering, computer science, mathematics and physics endangers

"Last year you flushed our petition (demanding divestment) down the toilet. Why did you introduce Bishop Tutu? What did you have to do with it?"

"If there's one thing I hate, it's insincerity.... Get off your ass.... Come on down here and say you're sorry," he shouted.

Robinson suggested that protesters analyze UC and state officials to understand "where we can push the buttons."

"One thing you can do now is talk to the people who generate that income (UC's portfolio) and tell them of your feelings ... those people I'm talking about are your parents," Robinson said. "We can change some individual mother's and father's impressions of themselves."

Robinson discussed the alleged assistance UC gave the racist regime in November of last year. "University of California, through one of its professors (at UCLA) became involved in another level in the maintenance of apartheid in South Africa," he said.

That professor went to South Africa, where he told government officials they must stop media coverage of the country's activities,

Robinson said.

Members of the white-minority government were told "to get off the T.V. screens. The worst publicity, the worst images you can have is what is now occurring on the T.V. screens in the United States," Robinson explained.

Robinson and others expressed their dissatisfaction with the Sullivan Principles, on which UC bases its definition of good corporate citizenship. "They are cosmetic and do not indeed address the issues themselves," he said.

Cody described an example of this cosmetic nature. When General Motors was told to integrate its restrooms, employees removed the signs that said "blacks" and "whites."

However, these were replaced with color-coded signs that served the same purpose, blue for the whites and orange for the blacks, she said.

Many speakers related Martin Luther King Jr.'s struggle to the protest against apartheid. "It's up to you and me to make Martin Luther King Jr.'s work a reality," said Theresa Fox, a Coalition Against Apartheid member.

Santa Barbara City Councilman Gerry DeWitt, who also discussed apartheid, resented the comparison that has been made between Tutu and Dr. King. "What a cheap way to draw a comparison," he said, explaining a real link between the two men exists, but only as a matter of inspiration.

"They were both inspirational, but it wasn't Martin Luther King who changed history, it was the hundreds of thousands of people who backed him," DeWitt said.

The first priority is "getting our money out of there," he said.

"I think what we really need is a lot of shock value," sophomore Trale Broudy said.

Spectators at the rally expressed their sincerity in joining the cause.

"I think that for some students, it was a genuine interest and some just jumped on the bandwagon," sophomore Kim Berly said.

"I think even though students are involved in other things they should bring their opinions to meetings," freshman Brent Hill said. "If everyone gets involved a lot can be done."

"To a certain extent, there are people who are just here to see things and to be seen.... We need to find people who will be active," Hill said.

Following the rally, about 200 students joined in a protest march to the chancellor's office in Cheadle Hall where more than 60 students eventually took over the chancellor's outer office for over an hour.

Vietnam Veteran Addresses Issue of 'Healing' the Future

By Doug Satre
Reporter

Americans must come to understand the war in Vietnam to accept its impact on their futures, the chairman of the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial Fund told more than 800 students Thursday in Campbell Hall.

"The only way that Americans can come to grips with their future is to come to grips with their Vietnam experience," John Wheeler said Jan. 16 in Walter Capps' Religious Studies 155 class on religion and the impact of Vietnam.

"Vietnam can only be understood if we come to grips with its spiritual and faith aspects. The war raised vital questions: What is worth dying for? Is dying the worst that can happen?" said Wheeler, who is also secretary of the Securities Exchange Commission.

A graduate of West Point and a Vietnam veteran, Wheeler led the effort to raise the $9 million needed to erect the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C. in 1982. Since then it has been visited by over 20 million people.

"I was impressed by the fact that he went to West Point, Harvard and Yale ... I'm very impressed by his sacrifice and his effort," said Andy Zink, a business economics major.

Wheeler spoke about the problems faced by the Vietnam generation and cited the need for a new scholarly discipline called "generational studies" involving the study of groups of people moving through time. "My generation needs healing," he said. "The Vietnam generation has immense potential, but we have become selfish and laid back."

"Vietnam veterans are emerging as leaders in our society. That is a sign of healing. The Vietnam Veterans Memorial is a sign that healing is on the way for my generation," Wheeler explained.

To emphasize the Vietnam War's relevance to America's present and future, he asked students to raise their hands in response to some questions. "Who in the audience was born in 1963? 1964? 1965? 1966? Who in the audience has had a father or relative killed in Vietnam? Who in the audience is 19 years old?"

"The average age of the name on the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial in Washington D.C. is 19," he said.

Wheeler also addressed the conflict that arose over the memorial's design, which consists of a highly polished wall of black granite covered with roughly 58,000 names of soldiers who died in Vietnam.

"The conflict over the design of the memorial is a prism for looking at the tensions in our culture over Vietnam. We were called communists and crooks. I think that the people who didn't like the design wanted justification."

"They wanted a white, clean memorial. But Vietnam was not a clean war. They wanted justification, we offered healing. I think that the memorial is very fitting," he said.

"Wars shape generations," he stated. "The Vietnam War shaped my generation just as World War I and World War II shaped generations. If the war in Vietnam had not happened, the feminist movement would never have taken off in the particular way that it did. We need to study what the forces that shape generations are."

John Simmons, the head teaching assistant for the course, compared the lecture to Wheeler's appearance last year in Capps' class. "Last year he concentrated mainly on the wall, he's now expanding to talk about the generations involved — the upheaval of the times, protests, the womens movement," Simmons said.

"The new generation, UCSB students now, — it's a two-way street, veterans need to teach students and the students need to learn from the veterans' generation's mistakes," he added.

"I would like to see generational studies become a part of UCSB's curriculum in the next few years," Zink said.

Sandy Foriole, executive director of a project on the Vietnam generation, also addressed Capps' class Thursday, reading a number of letters that were sent to the Veterans Memorial Fund. These letters expressed the gratitude that many Americans felt when they learned that Vietnam veterans would finally have a monument in Washington, D.C.

Students also saw slides of the Memorial site and groundbreaking ceremonies. In addition, a former student of Capps' discussed how important learning about Vietnam had been to her in understanding veterans that she has become friends with.

Religious Studies 155 is offered only during the winter quarter at UCSB.

"They wanted a white, clean memorial. But Vietnam was not a clean war. They wanted justification, we offered healing."

— John Wheeler

Native American Poet to Speak Monday

Paula Gunn Allen will lecture at UCSB Monday, Jan. 27 at noon in UCen room 2. The Sacred Hoop, the title of her forthcoming book, concerns recovering the feminine American Indian traditions. Her lecture includes a discussion of the Sacred Hoop and the ceremonial images of the Great Mother and the centrality of female strength and intelligence in American Indian culture.

Allen, who teaches Native American Studies at UC Berkeley, writes of a spiritual and psychic geography embedded in the New Mexico skies and the deserts of Cubero and Albuquerque. Her past credits include Shadow Country, a book of poetry, The Woman Who Owned the Shadows which is a novel and her forthcoming book The Sacred Hoop.

For Allen, poetry is both a sanctuary and a spawning ground, a place where ideas and action meet. Her poems suggest a sense timelessness, of belonging to an ancient tribal past, of being what all poets once were: shamen, healers, prophets, translators and transformers of consciousness.

Her poems are sinewy and delicate, a poetry of the lacunai and mergings of double consciousness.

Her lecture Jan. 27 promises to be intriguing and enlightening. It is co-sponsored by Arts and Lectures, American Indian EOP, American Indian Student Association, the Department of Religious Studies, A.S. Program Board, the Women's Center and is supported by the office of Affirmative Action.

The Reader's Voice

The Big Flush

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I have had the unique pleasure of serving on Chancellor Huttenback's Student Advisory Council in the recent past. There is no need to worry, Mr. Smith, the CSAC is not taking away any role from the Associated Students Legislative Council, nor is it usurping any of its powers. As the chancellor himself said, "It doesn't do anything." We met a total of two times for about an hour. The food was excellent, and I was glad that before leaving UCSB that I got to see the interior of the University House. Topics of discussion included offshore drilling, divestment, and even the benefits and drawbacks of various airlines.

The chancellor did most of the talking (possibly the fault of the council members), and he reminded me more of a reasonable and shrewd salesman, rather than a university chancellor. If I had to characterize the meetings, I would say they were like having lunch with one's grandfather at a nice restaurant. These meetings were ultimately futile.

We were never "yes men" for the chancellor; we didn't have even that prerogative. I don't agree with him any more now than I did before I served on the CSAC. Last spring, I wrote him a letter suggesting that the council meet to discuss the Hickman/Neal incident. I hand-delivered it to his office, told the secretary who I was, and what the letter concerned. I never got a reply, save a note thanking me for serving on the committee.

So you see, Mr. Smith, he took the council and its members about as seriously as he took the divestment proponents. I guess we both got the flush. Frankly, I can't understand why you are so concerned with the council's existence, Mr. Smith. One gets the feeling that you are

Dedicated People

Greg Brubaker

Almost every day this quarter in the Daily Nexus, some mention has been given to one of Isla Vista's community organizations and some problem it is having. This constant barrage of horror stories can probably scare off the most determined volunteer, activist, or co-op from getting involved in these groups. People who would normally join and spend time working here either look elsewhere for commitment, or do nothing at all in the community except party and go to school. This situation heightens the frustrations we feel when we do not hear from the community members, promotes a sense of apathy and helplessness (the disposable city ethic), and threatens I.V.'s identity. The problems listed below seem debilitating and lethal at times, but the short history of I.V. groups demonstrates three important facts: first, these organizations have all weathered crisis before and have all comeback much stronger; second, the old adage, that one person can make a difference within the institutions, is

Without You

Craig Duncan

This week has been very moving. With all of the celebrations commemorating Martin Luther King Jr.'s achievements, then Desmond Tutu's speech on Tuesday, there has been a lot of energy in the air: a very special human energy which these two men inspire in people. This spirit is what has truly impressed me. I am always inspired by the powerful, positive spirit of people, and the wonderful things which can be accomplished within this spirit.

Often people are criticized as apathetic. When people are apathetic it means that they don't care. I don't care. I don't believe people are apathetic at all. People care. People care a great deal. They care a great deal about things that effect them, the lives of others, the state of the world, and the future. The problem is that people believe they can't make a difference, that they don't matter. They don't believe they have the power to really change anything. They don't know what they can do to change anything. This sense of helplessness is personally summed up in a most common thought: "But what can I do? I am

Defense of Owners

Editor, Daily Nexus:

In a recent Nexus an article appeared containing a statement which characterized I.V. business owners as "sucking money out of the community and then driving to their homes in Goleta." I've heard that accusation before and wanted to address it, for I.V.'s business owners are not "carpetbaggers." They are just working people that happen to own stores in I.V. Anyone who would characterize them in any other way must not know any of them personally.

I come to the defense of I.V.'s business owners because I know many of them personally. I have lived here for 7 years. They are good people and we are lucky to have them. I have seen the owners of some of I.V.'s major businesses take part in I.V. clean up days in the residential community. That impresses me, and I for one do not want to discourage them. Imagine, they don't even live in I.V., and they're helping to clean up where you and I live.

I.V. Market, Pruitt's Market, and Kinko's Copies, as good examples, have pumped lots of money back into the community by remodeling and expanding their stores. This has truly been a benefit to us, the residents of I.V. Also, between them, those three stores alone employ close to 200 people.

I.V. is a unique community and so are its business owners. Instead of looking for ways to criticize them, we should consider how well they serve the community. I like the convenience of having two sizable markets, a large copy store, and all the other stores and restaurants right here in I.V. And, you know, someone has to own them.

ROBERT J. MEESE

S. Apartheid

Daily Nexus:

It is that by now there are very few who are not aware of the situation in South Africa. No one would deny that apartheid is a reprehensible institution that must be abolished. Those who listened to Bishop Desmond Tutu's speech this past week heard him speak of the forced relocation of native, black South Africans from their homelands by the ruling, white government. But I wonder how many are aware of a similar situation is occurring in our own backyards? I'm not talking about the purported slaughter of Native Americans at the hands of the Spaniards, which the Reagan administration has portrayed as "evidence" of the brutality of the Reagan government. No, I am talking about the forced removal of native Americans (Navajo, Hopi) from their homelands in Arizona by the U.S. government. In 1974, Congress passed into law a bill authorizing the relocation of some 15,000 American Indians from the Black Mesa area in northeastern Arizona which produces oil and coal and mining companies to undisturbed and reap (rape) profits from this sacred land with impunity.

Under Public Law 93-531, the Big Mountain Relocation Act, will be implemented on January 1, 1986 unless people speak out (and I hope they do) on this atrocity. On Monday, Jan. 20, 10 p.m. in the Parish Hall of the Holy Family Church (1535 Santa Barbara St.) a presentation will be given describing the situation at Big Mountain and the proposed relocation being staged by the government and their supporters. I urge you to attend this presentation to find out

On Tutu and South Africa

James Gorrie

Quite impressive. To see and hear the honorable Bishop Desmond Tutu in person is to understand why he is the leader of the black freedom movement against the apartheid system in South Africa. His oratory prowess and fervent sincerity in his cause is beyond reproach. It would be less than honest of this author to say that he was not emotionally moved by the event. One could not help but be aware of and feel the collective pulse quicken as Tutu's conveyance of the black freedom message grew and heightened in moral intensity and righteousness. And Tutu's movement is absolutely righteous. But enough of stating the obvious.

Here, issue is not taken with the bishop's call to make the moral decision to oppose the apartheid system, but rather with his categorical assertion that complete divestment is the only moral and effective action that will bring about social justice in his country. And in addition, issue is also taken with his inference that to be of a differing opinion concerning the best means in which to achieve equality in South Africa is to be immoral and on the side of injustice. This simply is not so.

His contention that a violent civil war in the effort to overthrow the South African government is the only remaining alternative (of which he is opposed) for the black freedom cause is not altogether true. Just as the theory that via complete economic ruin of the South African economy, racial equality will somehow be established, is not of irrefutable content. Can Desmond Tutu guarantee that after divestment of American capital in South Africa, that that regime will automatically see the error of its ways and say to the entire black population "Gee whiz, we're sorry, you are right and we are wrong, here's all your human rights and civil liberties that everyone deserves, please forgive us. No hard feelings?" Can he guarantee that a bloody civil war will not erupt after the economic hardship of divestment has been felt by all the people, whites included? Where is the guarantee that the government of South Africa will not decide to respond in full force with its powerful, highly-trained, and well-equipped military force against the black population in angry retribution? Good intentions do not always beget good results, and too frequently the opposite.

American presence in South Africa is held to be immoral because of American business ties with that government. Since American economic presence has so much clout in South Africa, however we use it will have great impact upon that country; this has been acknowledged. Therefore, rather than removing our presence, why don't we utilize it in a moral context. If the president of the United States has the authority to determine where American companies do business, then surely he can also determine how they do business. Why not implement a hiring and promotional policy among the American companies in South Africa that is based on equality and merit rather than on racial background, and enforce this policy with the penalty of suspended operations for those which do not comply? We have the capacity to change the social climate of the country from the inside out, in a steady, calculated manner. Granted, such a policy lacks the dramatic flair of a divestiture movement, but the results would be positive ones, and much more predictable. The intent is to change the country for the better, not to economically destroy it.

Finally, it is wrong to assume that the apartheid regime is a government strictly for the benefit of the white people, personal contact with white South Africans has indicated otherwise. They tell me that it is essentially a government for itself. It is oppressive to the whites in many ways as well. For in its effort to quell the black movement, it suppresses the rights of all, not just the rights of blacks. Movies, television, and the news media are all censored heavily in the interest of preserving the state viewpoint. Essentially then, if the situation is handled carefully and responsibly, all the people of South Africa, and especially the black people, stand to gain much, in the form of expanded freedom and fraternal consciousness. If the situation is handled incorrectly however, they all stand much to lose. The truth is, as Tutu said the other day, "Until all of us are free, none is free."

James Gorrie is a senior majoring in economics.

People In Isla Vista Strive To Keep Tradition

really true; and third, fact number one has held true because of fact number two.

Right now three of the progressive organizations under fire include:

1. The University Students Rochdale Housing Cooperative which has been threatened with losing the leases to eight of the ten buildings it administers. Then, a fierce battle erupted over the status of the Executive Director and whether he should have been retained to work for the co-op. Losing eight of its buildings would set the co-op back five years and seriously danger its ability to provide low cost housing to students in the area.

2. The Isla Vista Municipal Advisory Council/Isla Vista Community Council which recently lost its contract with the United States Postal Service. This has deprived the Council of its primary funding source and has seriously harmed the credibility of the council.

3. The Isla Vista Recreation and Park district continually gets harassed for its policy of holding on to open space in the community and using organic and less efficient maintenance techniques.

Despite the problems the co-op has experienced lately, at a recent meeting, over 75 members came to voice their concerns about the co-op and its future. Two members have recently been appointed to the board of directors and many others expressed interest in running for positions within Rochdale. Negotiations with Hal Rosen, the owner who threatened to pull the leases, are under way and the co-op seems headed towards its second decade of service on secure, if not solid, ground.

News on the other I.V. community organizations is promising, as well. The newly established Isla Vista Municipal Advisory Council is already starting to put together a new bid for a postal contract station in I.V. The IVCC is also very busy putting together recommendations for the zoning changes that will take place in the next year, asserting itself into the Goleta Valley Cityhood process, and preparing for the unprecedented university expansion that will be occurring over the next fifteen years. New Council members are making contacts throughout Isla Vista and UCSB, and reaction to council members has been favorable. The IVCC is nearing its sixteenth birthday and planning to move and shake in I.V., the University, and Goleta well into the future. The recreation and park district has recently hired a new volunteer coordinator for park maintenance, and the parklands seem to be improving already.

The history of Isla Vista service groups has definitely been a roller coaster ride between the extremes of strength, community respect, and growth, versus scandal, internal fighting, and poor reputation. But the three key organizations mentioned, plus the many others, have always been driven by human energy and have always managed to continue on. The service groups have never attempted to do what is currently vogue and fashionable, but rather, what the members feel will ultimately be accepted and appreciated by the community members they represent. Many people may criticize the members of the co-ops, service districts, and agencies for their work in I.V. And many may find us guilty of practicing youthful idealism. But this idealism is I.V.'s traditional identity, and it leads the way to a bright future.

You There Is A Little Less Energy

only one person."

For those who have ever thought as such, and I am one who has, there lies a truth to be realized. This truth is the first step in making and change. The truth is that there is enormous energy, great power inside you. There is great power all around you; power to change others, power to change a generation, power to change the world and it all begins with the most important power, the power to change yourself. The challenge is to discover your power.

The determining factor to realizing any personal power is belief. It is the key. Belief is where the power is: belief in yourself, belief in the human spirit, belief in a cause, belief in a dream, belief that you can make a difference at whatever you think, whatever you do. If you believe that you don't matter, that you cannot make a difference in your life, in the world, then so shall you be confined to ineffectiveness and helplessness. The belief will sow the product. You are as powerful as you believe yourself to be.

Can you feel the power of 5,000 excited people clapping and cheering in a five minute standing ovation? Can you feel the energy of a quarter of a million people marching to the nation's capital in the spirit of togetherness? Where does this powerful spirit come from? When a speaker like Martin Luther King moves people, inspires people, is he giving them, transferring to them, power? Not really. He is masterfully tapping the magnificent powers which exist in each one of us, and by bringing us together, focusing our power on a certain objective.

What is important to realize is that as you are in a crowd of thousands who are clapping and cheering, you are contributing to the crowd's collective energy. With your voice the crowd is a little bit louder. Without you the crowd is quieter. Without you there is a bit less energy.

As an individual, what you think and feel does matter. What you do especially matters, because without action, any action, you are not heard. What would have been the result if Martin Luther King had thought that he didn't matter, that he couldn't make a difference? What would have happened if he had said like so many people in that time: "Racism and discrimination are such big problems. I am only one. I can't change anything." This belief would have enforced the status quo and no change in civil rights would have occurred.

Yes you may be only one, but always remember that

Martin Luther King was one, Gandhi was one, Susan B. Anthony was one, Bob Geldof is one, Bishop Desmond Tutu is one. And while we may not all become leaders of great movements, we as individuals play a crucial part, an indispensable role in the process of change. Many times we will be the droplets of water which fill the bucket: important droplets, for no bucket is ever filled without such contributions. And for all you know your contribution may be the one that will cause the bucket to finally spill over.

On a personal level, the belief that you can make a difference is crucial to realizing any dreams and desires you have. You may not have big aspirations, but any vision, any desire, is a passion to be pursued. What is life about if not to strive for, to protect these things which you believe in, whether they be dreams, beliefs, or values.

Many times we will sense helplessness in the face of enormous problems. There is no better time to examine the infinite power of the human spirit, and the great things which have, and can be, accomplished within this spirit.

Last Minute Negotiations about Bottle Bill

By Dana Anderson
Staff Writer

The deadline for a vote on controversial legislation dubbed the "bottle bill" grows closer as last minute negotiations on key amendments continue.

The bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Burt Marglin (D-Los Angeles), requires a five-cent deposit included in the price of beverages in glass containers. Merchants will refund the deposit to customers who return the empty bottles.

However, amendments to this legislation may be made in an attempt to reach a compromise between the bottling industry, recyclers, and the original proposal.

The five-cent deposit may be reduced to two cents, and a glass-only provision could be expanded to include plastic and aluminum containers.

According to Assembly rules, the bill must go to a vote before Jan. 31 or be removed from consideration. If Assembly Bill 2020 does not reach a vote, it must be reintroduced in the state Senate or Assembly.

The California Public Interest Research Group (CalPIRG), one of the major supporters of "bottle bill" legislation, has been active at UCSB and other campuses in a last minute petition drive, said Amy Gibans, UCSB CalPIRG coordinator.

CalPIRG hopes to show the legislature strong student support for the bottle bill, Gibans said. The signatures will be used in future campaigns if the measure does not pass, she added.

Proponents of the bill, argue that it will create jobs, reduce litter by 40 percent, save natural resources, and reduce costs to consumers, CalPIRG member Mike Gable said.

The jobs created by the bottle bill are unskilled jobs, which will replace skilled labor in the bottling and distributing industries, said Bill Horstman, manager for Pacific Beverage Company.

The bottling industry, grocers and other opponents feel that a raise in beverage prices will reduce demand, which will lower state and federal sales tax revenue, Gable said.

Opponents also feel the bill will cripple voluntary recycling efforts, often used as fund-raisers. More than 100 California recycling organizations are against the bill, Horstman added.

According to Sheri Eiker, executive assistant at the Community Environmental Council, the bill "would not seriously affect our recycling operations."

However, a bill containing provisions for plastic and aluminum-can recycling might lessen revenues that centers receive from aluminum, and therefore economically hamper their ability to recycle paper, Eiker added.

"If a solution could be worked out which would satisfy all parties, that would be the best option," she said.

Problems in passing the current legislation include a fight against the "throwaway ethic" and the "litter lobby," campaigns used to defeat Prop. 11, a similar effort made in 1982, Gable said.

Nine states, Oregon, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Vermont, Michigan, Iowa, Connecticut, and Delaware have similar legislation.

This Week In UCSB History

Jan. 25, 1985:

What began as a "Die-in" and rally for peace in Storke Plaza turned into a demonstration at the chancellor's University House yesterday afternoon, when over 200 students voiced their feelings against nuclear war in a call for peace.

Attracting over 100 participants and several spectators, the die-in escalated into a spontaneous but peaceful march to the University House where the chancellor, several UCSB vice chancellors and a number of systemwide administrators were discussing academic affairs.

"All we wanted was to get a representative of the university to hear our message," the event's organizer said.

Students wanted to draw attention to the "bill of nuclear rights" passed unanimously by Leg Council Wednesday night. The paper asks UC administration "to provide all students with information on the dangers of nuclear weapons and nuclear wars." It also requests evacuation plans for Isla Vista in case of an accident at the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power plant and urges the University of California to consider converting the Los Alamos and Lawrence Livermore laboratories into socially beneficial research institutions.

The students were not received. The chancellor later said he had no idea what the students wanted, but said "it was bad planning on the part of the organizers.... Somebody is under a massive delusion.... Whatever they (the students) were doing, it was the wrong group to do it with."

Jan. 20, 1981:

A new Isla Vista contract branch of the Goleta Valley Postal Service opened Friday.

Unlike the old branch office in the I.V. General Store, this is a full service post office, where stamps may be bought and letters and packages mailed. The Goleta post office, however, will be used for some parcel pick-up until later this year, when all package pick-up services will be available at the I.V. branch.

The new post office will be located in the old Municipal Advisory Council office in the Community Service Center Square, 966 No. C Embarcadero Del Norte, at Seville Street. Office hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, closed for lunch 1:30-2:30 p.m.

Jan. 22, 1971:

The somewhat quieted debate in recent months about the war may become a big issue again at UCSB in the near future.

Wednesday night, Leg Council unanimously passed a resolution to put on referendum the peace treaty negotiated by students of the National Student Association who met with students of North and South Vietnam.

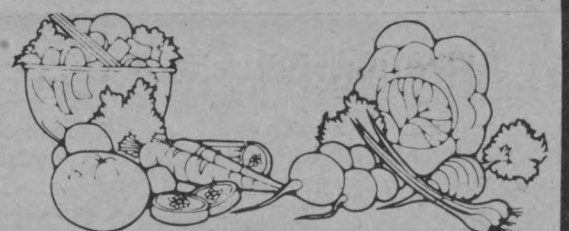

The resolution reads, "Whereas it has become obvious that Nixon's policy to 'end the war' is nothing but an exercise in pure deception, and ... (as) the bombing, Thieu-Ky oppression, killing and maiming go on and on it has become incumbent on the peoples ... to bring an end to all such conduct and human suffering."

No information was available for the week of Jan. 19-25, 1961.

office, particularly the executive director (Joan Nordberg).

"She never set policy governing the use of the credit cards," the letter said. "(Nordberg) ran the office with little regard for the procedures of accountability in place."

(Nordberg's accounting errors resulted in an estimated debt of $60,000 for the student government. She resigned May 29.)

"These factors contributed to an environment easily conducive to lax standards and mitigated against the finding of conversion (of university resources) and also against the charge of unauthorized use of funds," according to the letter.

Nevertheless, "... Darryl should be held responsible for his admittedly careless disregard for the fiscal responsibilities" entrusted to him as A.S. president, Gold said in the letter.

Neal was charged with providing auditors with false information on four separate occasions, according to the letter.

"Three witnesses corroborated his accounts of three alleged violations, and the fourth was attributed to reasonable human error," the letter said.

According to campus regulations, the conduct committee could have either warned, censured, suspended or dismissed Neal for his violation.

The date of the letter was unavailable, but campus regulations state that the committee recommendations must be forwarded to the administrator responsible for their review (in this case, Sawyer) within three working days of a hearing's completion.

Neal's case was heard Dec. 5-6, Gold said.

The conduct committee chair said the group has met twice but not yet judged the case of Jim Hickman, Neal's successor who resigned Oct. 9 in the wake of the ad hoc committee's recommendations.

Gold said the conduct committee will meet Monday to continue hearings on Hickman's case, but he is unsure if the group will reach a decision at that time.

Auditors revealed that Hickman charged $7,694 on his A.S. credit card while serving as the student government's external vice president.

The ad hoc committee recommended that Hickman be asked to resign, and that he reimburse A.S. more than $550 for questionable expenditures.

Leg Council approved the ad hoc committee's recommendation to refer Hickman to the conduct committee, where he faces charges similar to those brought against Neal.

California's leadership in high-technology because schools cannot educate enough students to meet industry demands.

According to projections, an additional 22,000 electrical engineers will be needed nationally each year through 1987 while only 15,000 new graduates are available annually.

Opponents of the measure, including the Deukmejian administration, say that through the budget process the governor has provided premium pay for faculty in both the computer science and engineering fields.

"We feel that this particular program is not essential," administration representative Dick Ray said.

But Assembly Ways and Means Chair John Vasconcellos, D-Santa Clara, disagreed. "The bill is essential in order for the state to maintain its leadership position in technology," he said.

"My sense is the problem is a long way unsolved and you're (Ray is) saying the governor doesn't care about solving it. I don't think we can afford not to deal with this problem," Vasconcellos said.

The federal government currently conducts a similar program on a nationwide basis. The three-year federal program has 134 students participating in it. So far, there have been two graduates, both teaching at California universities, Farr said.

The American Electronics Association Education Foundation has given more than $2.5 million to California schools to help promote education in high-technology areas.

"This bill will create incentives for private industry to increase their donations," Farr said.

Assemblyman Holds Office Hours

Assemblyman Jack O'Connell, D-Santa Barbara, will be holding card table office hours at UCSB this Friday, Jan. 24 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

"Now that the second half of this 1985-86 Legislative Session has resumed, I want to take this opportunity to meet with students at UCSB," stated Assemblyman O'Connell.

O'Connell's card table office will be located in front of the UCen. "I encourage anyone on campus with a question about state government to drop by on Friday to talk to me," concluded O'Connell.

Defense Shines, Gauchos Win at the Line, 52-39

Bruce Hannan, who had a game-high 13 rebounds, slams down two points after a missed shot early in the first half Thursday night.

2 Second-Half Field Goals Enough to Hold off Titans

By Scott Channon
Sports Editor

The Titans fouled 'em, and the Gauchos made 'em.

That just about tells the whole story of this one, which didn't have much of a plot. When was the last time a team went scoreless from the field in the last 14 minutes of a basketball game to win by 13 points?

Maybe the Runnin' Gauchos (8-9, 3-5 in the PCAA) — who were doing anything but running — accomplished a record Thursday night in their 52-39 victory over Cal State Fullerton at the Campus Events Center.

The Titans (10-10, 3-5), who had three players foul out, fouled 14 times in the last 14 minutes while UCSB's last 16 points came from the charity stripe. Most of the fouls were the result of a patient Gaucho offense, which brought the ball inside for high-percentage attempts against a swarming Titan defense.

"We took (the ball) into areas where they had to foul us," Gaucho Head Coach Jerry Pimm said. "They wouldn't let us get the layups, so we had to hit the free throws."

The Gauchos hit only one free-throw in the first half, but hit 24 of 31, for a 77 percent, in the second half. The Gauchos outrebounded the Titans by a two-to-one margin, 32-16, as the Titans had only one offensive rebound in the second half.

"Those two things (rebounds and free-throws) maintained our offense," Pimm said.

6-8 forward Bruce Hannan (seven points) had a game-high 13 rebounds, and his inspired play throughout kept the Gauchos from falling asleep, which has happened in past Gaucho second halves.

"That's our main problem," Hannan said. "We don't play with any enthusiasm. We need to play intense the whole game."

"It's just a matter of trying to keep our mind in it," Scott Fisher (16 points, seven rebounds) said. "This is a tough academic institution — no doubt about it — but I think we leave our brains in the classroom. Tonight in the second half, (however), we played a lot smarter. I think we were a lot more confident. The outcome will boost our confidence."

After a lackadaisical first half by both teams, the Gauchos led 24-19. Fullerton cut the margin to 26-25 on a Herman Webster bank with 17:56 remaining. A three-point shot by Conner Henry (20 points) gave the Gauchos a 33-27 lead, marking their last field goal of the game with 14:15 left.

From there, a Gaucho 2-3 zone stifled the Titans. The Titans, who have seen the zone often this year with their relatively slow offense, got the ball inside for buckets only twice in the second half, while shooting one brick after another from long range.

"We knew going into the game that we were going to play some (See HOOP, p.13)

The Big Blue Debut

The UCSB Athletic Department has taken out all the stops in order to counteract Fresno State's Red Wave, which invades the Events Center to cheer on their Bulldogs Monday night against UCSB. The Red Wave, a group of Fresno followers who always come dressed in red, will finally meet their match.

Tabbed "Blue Night," the athletic department is asking all Gaucho rooters to show up in their best blue attire to hopefully make a Big Blue Debut. On top of that, blue and gold pom-poms will be passed out to the first 1,000 Gaucho fans.

But that's not all. It will be an extra festival since it will also be "Pizza Bob's Party and Cheer Night." The group with the loudest cheering section will be awarded a pizza party at Pizza Bob's. Don't miss this extra-exciting evening of Gaucho basketball!

Gaucha Golfers Fourth at UCLA Tournament

By David James
Sports Writer

Paced by a record-tying 69 on the final day from sophomore Scott Cuppett, the UCSB golf team placed fourth in the prestigious UCLA Bill Bryant Invitational Tournament at Industry Hills on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Gauchos finished with a solid 923, six shots back of third-place UC Irvine, seven back of Long Beach State, and eight back of champion Texas-El Paso.

"There were good and bad things about the tournament," Gaucho Head Coach Dave Atchison said. "It was very encouraging to see us finish as high as fourth. That is the highest finish we've ever had since I came here. On the other hand, we really had a legitimate shot to win the thing. Still, it was very encouraging for us."

Of all the encouraging things about the tourney, at the top of the list had to be the play of Cuppett and freshman Paul Holtby. Cuppett finished sixth with a total score of 225, shooting a 76 and an 80 in addition to his record-tying 69. Holtby, who stood second after the first 54 holes, wound up with a 227, good enough for eighth place. It was the first time since Atchison took over the team four years ago that the Gauchos had two golfers finish in a tournament's top ten.

"Holtby played very well the first day," Atchison admitted. "He was doing extremely well over the last 18, too. He was two under with three holes left and tied for the lead but he bogeyed the last three holes. Paul is a freshman and you can practice pitching, putting and driving, but you can't practice playing in contention."

The fourth place finish as a team was good enough to defeat UCLA's "A" and "B" teams. The Bruins finished fifth at 927 and ninth at 932. The Gauchos also finished ahead of Washington, San Diego State, San Francisco, Pepperdine, Cal State Fullerton and several others.

The Gaucho cause was also helped out by Bob Schaeffer who shot a 236. Last year, Schaeffer played as either number-one or two all year. This year

(See GOLF, p.14)

Kristen Nicholson managed only six points in the Lady Gauchos' latest loss.

Lady Gauchos' Poor Shooting is Culprit in Loss

The Cal State Fullerton Lady Titans rolled over the UCSB Lady Gauchos, 67-41, Thursday night in Titan Gym.

UCSB took its lone lead at 2-0, on a Rebecca Rehder hoop with 19:32 to go in the first half. From there things went downhill for the Lady Gauchos.

Cal State Fullerton put it into high gear, racing to a 20 point lead before settling for a 40-24 halftime advantage. The Lady Titans kept it up in the second half, aided by the poor shooting of the Lady Gauchos.

UCSB suffered through yet another poor shooting night, canning only 35 percent from the field for the game. In the second half, the Lady Gauchos were even worse, struggling to a dismal 22 percent. The Lady Titans were much more accurate, converting 30 of 65 shots for 46 percent.

UCSB was again led by sophomore center Kira Anthoner who had 16 points to go along with 10 rebounds.

Robin Holmes scored 19 points to lead the Titans, while Lora Satorius' 10 points and 18 rebounds aided Fullerton's offensive attack.

With the loss the Lady Gauchos fall to 5-12, 0-4 in PCAA, while the Lady Titans improved to 6-10, 4-1 in PCAA.

The Lady Gauchos' next game will be a PCAA contest at San Diego State, Saturday night in San Diego. Tip-off will be at 7:30 p.m.

Tankers Face the Best at Full Rebel Classic

The UCSB swimming and diving teams are currently in Las Vegas, participating in the Rebel Classic. The three-day meet, which runs from Thursday through Saturday, traditionally draws several of the top teams in the nation, and this year is no exception. A grand total of 39 teams are scheduled to compete, and three of the top 10 women's teams will do battle.

Last season, the men's team finished in second place with 540 points. The women's squad totalled 380 points to finish fourth.

This year the Gauchos are without much of the strength and depth that carried them so far in 1985, but so far they have met nearly all of UCSB Aquatics Director Gregg Wilson's expectations. Last weekend they crushed PCAA foe UNLV, 72-33.

The women remain strong, but will be without two-time PCAA Swimmer-of-the-Year Ann Ardell, who is sideline with mononucleosis. In their meet versus UNLV last weekend, they narrowly lost to the Lady Rebels, 60-53.

Leading the Gauchos into the Rebel Classic will be junior Mike Shaffer, the team's top swimmer. He recorded season bests in the 200 fly (1:51.17) and in the 200 free (1:41.19) last weekend. Diver Bill Barber, who qualified for the NCAA three-meter springboard last weekend, and teammate Bob Lang will both be tough on both boards.

Junior Anne Patterson, who won the 200 fly last weekend, Kate Hatcher, and Kelly Siron will be important to the Lady Gauchos' chances in the meet.

Following this meet, both teams will host on Jan. 31. Then men will meet Fresno State, the women will face Pepperdine.

Lady Netters Take on Top-Ranked Trojans

The women's tennis team has a busy weekend ahead, which begins today with Cal Poly San Luis Obispo at 2 p.m. on the West Courts, and USC on Saturday at 1 p.m.

"Cal Poly is tough enough for us to polish our skills against," Coach Angie Minissian said. "Our girls are playing well. I expect them to do well (today)."

Highly-touted USC enters Saturday's contest as the top-ranked team in the country. During the off-season, some of the Lady Trojans play in pro-tournaments while maintaining amateur status.

"We have to be mentally tough when we play USC," Minissian said. "We are ready for a showdown."

"They (USC) are tough, but beatable, as long as we don't get psyched out by them," senior Lori Jonas said. "To win, we must have confidence in our own ability."

The USC contest will mark the team's fourth match in five days. "Playing four matches in one week will help the girls get into a ritual," Minissian said. She defined ritual as "the preparation each girl makes for every match. They need to get accustomed to a routine of warming up mentally and physically as well as setting the pace and picking the style of shots they want to hit during a game."

Immediately following Saturday's match there will be a social hour held in the founder's room of the ECen. Both teams and their coaches will be present. Boosters and fans are invited.

zone," Pimm said. "They really only have one outside shooter, and that's (Kerry) Boagni," who was the only consistent threat from the outside hitting six jumpers on the night.

"I thought our defense did a good job of stopping them from driving the baseline," Pimm added. "I was really pleased with our zone tonight."

The Gauchos committed eight turnovers in the second half, but had only three in the second.

"This might have been as consistent as we've played all year," Pimm said.

Host Three Tough Teams Tonight

Men Gymnasts Going for Record

By Mark van de Kamp
Assistant Sports Editor

No, it's not a film fest, but the following titles may be familiar to many. The Lord of The Rings, A Man and His Horse, and Put It To The Floor. Yes, it's time for the men's gymnastics team to display their abilities on the rings, the pommel horse, and the floor exercise, among other events.

The Gaucho gymnasts host three strong teams tonight in Robertson Gymnasium at 7:00 p.m. Cal State Fullerton, San Jose State, and UC Davis will provide plenty of competition for UCSB in the three-hour duel.

"We are going for the school record," UCSB Head Coach Mircea Badulescu said. "We are very optimistic about doing it."

The school record Badulescu speaks of is 235.75 points, set last season. This meet begins the team's 1986 campaign, but on Dec. 6 the Gauchos competed at the Spartan Gymfest, held in San Jose, coming within 1.5 points of the record.

"Everybody has improved (since the Gymfest)," Badulescu said. "Although we have some sickness on the team, I think we will probably break the record."

Another barrier the second-year coach would like to see broken is the Gauchos' winless mark against both the Cal State Fullerton Titans and the San Jose State Spartans. At the Spartan Gymfest, the Gauchos beat UC Davis, but Badulescu admitted the Aggies were not at full strength.

"We'll probably be very close to San Jose," he said. "We've never beaten them. I don't know what will happen with Davis."

Leading the Gauchos will be 1985 team MVP Troy Ankerson, who last year set school records in the all-around exercises (54.10 points) and in the floor exercise (9.45).

Joining Ankerson will be returnees Karl Tso, Stuart Miller, and Geordie Stephens. Three transfers from Long Beach City College, Terry Houlton (horse and parallel bars), Kevin Collins, and John Griffin will help, in addition to freshman Todd Stewart (high bars and horse).

"We are strong in all events," Badulescu explained.

Gauche Notes: The men's team is looking for a sponsor for this season and for the future, Badulescu said.

WOMEN AT LONG BEACH

The women are at Long Beach State tonight in a quadrangular meet with Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and UC Davis.

In a home meet last Sunday, the Lady Gauchos finished third (162.10 points), only 4.60 points out of first behind Cornell (166.70) and Long Beach (166.25). Amy Werbelow took second in the vault (8.9), the floor exercises (8.85), the uneven parallel bars (8.55), and in the all-around (34.15). The Nexus regrets the delay in reporting this event.

Volleyball, Baseball Teams Play Alumni

Gaucha fans will get to see a preview of both the men's volleyball and baseball teams Saturday, as they host their annual alumni contests.

Head baseball Coach Al Ferrer will welcome back his graduated players at noon in Campus Diamond, while volleyball mentor

Ken Preston will do the same at 7:30 p.m. in the Events Center. In that match, current graduate assistant Randy Ittner is expected to play, as well as Casey and Mike Gorman, both all CIVA and All-American performers.

Notes: The volleyball match will be carried live by KCSB, 91.9 FM.

GREG WONG/Nexus

The baseball team welcomes back alumni in the annual contest to be held Saturday at noon.

Golf: UCLA

he expects to do the same.

The Gauchos will resume tournament play on Monday, Jan. 27 and Tuesday, Jan. 28 when they host the Hammond-Bell Pacific Coast Intercollegiate Tournament at nearby Sandpiper Golf Course.

"This tournament has really turned into one of the best on the West Coast," Coach Atchison said. "This year our guys will be really fired up for it because of how well we finished at UCLA."

The tournament field includes USC and local product Sam Randolph Jr., the U.S. National Amateur Champion, Stanford, Oregon State, Cal Berkeley, Hawaii and defending PCAA Champion and 1986 PCAA favorite, Fresno State. A total of 18 teams will partake in the two day event.

In the past, several top future professionals have won the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate.

Lecturer to Discuss King and Malcolm X

Professor James Cone will present a free lecture, "Martin Luther King, Jr. and Malcolm X: The Social Origins of Their Thinking and Practice," on Wednesday, Jan. 29 at 4 p.m. in the UCSB University Center Pavilion. This event is co-sponsored by UCSB Arts & Lectures, the Department of Black Studies, the College of Letters and Science, the Department of Religious Studies, the Center for Black Studies, and the Black Students Alliance.

A professor of Systematic Theology at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, Cone has studied the social thought of Martin Luther King, Jr. and Malcolm X and is an active scholar and lecturer, with particular interest in the black church in America and how it interprets the Christian gospel.

"From the beginning, black theology was understood by its creators as Christian theological reflection upon the black struggle for justice and liberation, strongly influenced by the life and thought of Martin Luther King, Jr.," Cone wrote in For My People, a book about black theology and the black church. "When King and other black church persons began to relate the Christian gospel to the struggle for racial justice in American society, the great majority of white churches and their theologians denied that such a relationship existed.... Contrary to popular opinion now, King was not well received by the white American church establishment when he inaugurated the civil rights movement with the Montgomery bus boycott in 1955."

Cone is the author of Black Theology and Black Power, God of the Oppressed, and many other publications. He is a contributing editor for Christianity and Crisis.

Professor Cone holds three doctoral degrees, including a Ph.D. from Northwestern University and a law degree from Edward Waters College.

For more information, call UCSB Arts and Lectures at 961-3535.

Burglary Suspect Sought

University Police are looking for a man in connection with a burglary at San Nicolas Hall on Jan. 15, at 9:40 p.m.

The suspect is described as a black man of medium build, 18-19 years old, approximately six feet tall, weighing 170 pounds, with black hair and a faint moustache.

The suspect was last seen wearing a grey and red striped long-sleeved shirt and dark pants.

Anyone with information regarding this crime should contact the UCSB Police Department at 961-3446.

Hey! Campus Writers They're Heeerrreee!

The story assignments of your journalistic dreams are here and ready to be assigned. Please come in as soon as possible and pick up yours.... Who knows, maybe your story will make it to, "the front page."

All writers must attend a mandatory campus desk meeting this Sunday at 11 a.m. I promise, no one will miss the Super Bowl. If you are a New England fan, don't show up and don't write for this desk.... (a joke). If you have not yet experienced the masochism of working for the Nexus, please stop by on Sunday and ask for Steve Elzer....

As always, I promise, "It will be a festival."
