One Man's Dream

graduation nonfiction by graduating jason sattler

Here's what I was expecting for my graduation: An atmosphere not unlike the end of It's a Wonderful Life.

A snowy early evening in June and I'm broken down. After getting kicked out of three bars, one that only serves juice, I've cursed life and everything that creates it. Desperate and alone, I seek my end. I've even stripped down to my tighty-whities and pasties and run toward the ocean. There I cry:

"This sucks! I'm graduating, I have no future, and the best gift I can hope for is my aunt's annual renewal of my subscription to Boy's Life. Take me home ocean, gentle ocean, she who caresses the rocky shore and turns the glass to sand."

A rumbling in the distance far out in the horizon. A fireball blasts towards the shore. The closer it comes the more it looks like somebody's grandmother bodyboarding. Seconds later she glides smoothly onto the beach. The grandmotherly character pushes herself smoothly off the board into a safe upright position.

"Hello," she says and spits out a tooth, "Are you the ungrateful bastard who beckoned me?"

"Probably. Who are you?"

"Well, I'm a famous writer. I'm sure you've read some of my work."

"Your name?"

"Anonymous." The heavens pound out a vaudevillian drum roll.

"Anyway, I'm here because it sounded like you wished you never went to college at all just because you aren't getting some grandiose gift like a trip to Europe, a new computer or a home security system."

"Hell yeah," I say. "If I didn't go to college, I could've been trained to be a dental hygienist or just look like one by now. Then I'd have some sort of career."

"Typical. I could show you what your life would be like if you didn't go to college, but it's not that interesting. Let's just say the word telemarketing comes to mind." She grabs my hand and falls atop of her bodyboard, pulling me belly-down on to her back. She instructs the board to soar and says, "If you really want to know what an idiot you are, let's take a look at your graduation as if it had happened exactly the way you want it to."

She begins to circle the earth at high speeds. Wobbling and enjoying the cushion of her back fat, I feel as though I am entering another dimension, a dimension where fried food is as healthy as ginseng.

Gradually slowing, she brings us down right outside Corwin Pavilion. "Go in," she says. "They're waiting for you."

I enter the building. Baseball legend Ernie Banks, looking smart in a white tuxedo, is speaking. "Thank you, Chancellor Yang. Your unique comedy stylings have made this an event to remember. But wait, you forgot your saxophone, c'mon and get it." The audience applauds. "Chancellor Henry Yang, ladies and gentlemen." Yang comes back out, grabs his sax, makes a humble bow and walks off.

Ernie Banks, now dressed in a Chicago Cubs uniform, continues, "Well, it looks like the moment we've all been waiting for has arrived. We've been extolling this young man's virtues for three hours now, in between several displays of unlikely talent by authority figures in his life. He's not an ordinary guy, but he still fits into any crowd. He doesn't like to fight but his friends will kick your ass if you mess with him. As the Dalai Lama said about him just minutes ago: He performs all actions with a unique understanding of compassion and selflessness. Ladies and gentlemen, Jason Sattler."

House of Pain's "Jump Around" blasts from the walls. I look down from my chest to my toes, I am wearing a fringed shirt, tight stone-washed blue jeans and boots. Nice boots. I take off my ten-gallon hat and walk down the center aisle toward the stage.

To my left, everyone who I ever loved cheers me, some even have signs. Out the window, I see fireworks bursting over the lagoon. On my right, everyone I've ever hated is crying, they crowd the edges of the rows waiting to shake my hand. As I shake each one, they stop crying and start cheering.

Somebody hands me a full can of whipped cream. I spray it directly into my mouth, downing the whole thing in seconds without getting any on my clothes. The crowd becomes ecstatic.

Whitney Houston's "The Greatest Love of All," replaces "Jump Around," and she looks beautiful as she sings it onstage acappella.

I leap to the podium and give Whitney a hug, whispering in her ear, "Wrap it up." She kisses me and the crowd goes "Woooo!" After a minute, I try to break away, but she won't let me. I lift up my right arm and a topless George "The Animal" Steele appears and drags her away over his shoulder.

I adjust the microphone and say, "Damn, Whitney! This isn't a Big Red commercial, it's my graduation!" The crowd roars.

I continue. "Thanks a lot, really. Thanks a lot for coming — especially to the Wu-Tang Clan and the cast of TV's Fame, who're here fresh off a tour of Israel." The Fame kids dance and do gymnastics before returning to their seats. Chancellor Yang steps toward me and hands me my diploma. "Jump Around" comes back on for a few seconds and stops. Chancellor Yang speaks:

"Congratulations, Jason. Now is the prize round. You will be competing against former President Ronald Reagan in the Baby Boomer edition of Trivial Pursuit for a trip around the world and your own Waverunner."

I look at the back of the auditorium. Anonymous is lying on her bodyboard, gyrating with glee. She winks at me.

Dues and Don'ts

You owe 'em something for making it through four (or five) (or six) years — so make sure it's good!

By Kelly Parkinson
Special Correspondent to Supplements

Gift-giving was a lot easier when they were young. A party with a Transformer piñata and matching invitations, a dish set, My Little Pony and five bucks. They raised their chubby fists and proudly displayed the leftover cupcake in their lunchboxes to the school tetherball champion, and your cheapness was a well-kept secret.

Then came high school graduation, and you could get away with a nice dinner at Cask 'n Cleaver and rely on Grandma to mail in cash and express packages.

But now they're graduating from college, seasoned veterans who have become calloused to those obligatory acts of generosity. They see through the McDonald's gift certificate ploys and the not-so-subtle day planners. No, you gave them a day planner last year, and it didn't go over well then either. And a book? Well, what book, and didn't they just endure almost half a decade of diligent book reading? A book is the last thing they want right now, and the last, LAST thing they would want would be one of those Chicken Soup for the Soul books or anthologies of inspirational famous quotations. Remember: cynicism.

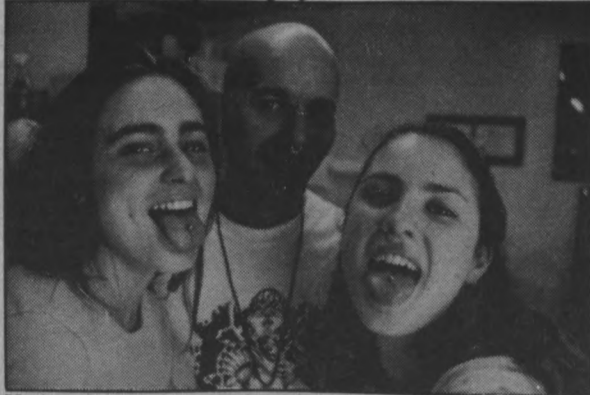

What then? Ungrateful nipple-pierced punk who bought trips to TJ while you paid his tuition; little princess crashing the family station wagon and racking up bills on her Discover card. Quickly the temptation not to give them anything burbles up and spills over. That's right, nothing, ah ha ha ha! Oh, but the magnetic current of its calling is strong. Very strong.

But you must resist! Here is an abbreviated list of suggestions amended from my own personal list of suggestions that I personally plan to distribute to my parents and extended family when I graduate next year, and let me just say here that this in no way diminishes my desire for the other gifts on my list not included here. Let me also just say that I have gotten good grades this quarter, and I failed Spanish only because my schedule conflicted with the tutor's. Also, next year I will get a 4.0 and participate in the Debate Club in preparation for my entrance to law school, which will directly precede my campaign for the U.S. Senate.

So on to the list:

First, what every college graduate needs is a fruit basket. They are too busy to buy healthy food at the grocery store, and contrary to popular belief they really do like them, especially the ones that come with jellies and little crackers. Those are great because usually students skip over the jellies and crackers at the supermarket, even though later on when they're eating their meal they're thinking, "Gee, did I go by the jellies and cracker section again? Shoot!" Also, they can reuse the baskets to store more fruit and more jellies, and even soap products, and cheese.

You're actually gonna buy these punks something for graduation?

Second on the list, not necessarily in order of descending importance, is a bumper-sticker-making kit, which you can purchase at any upstanding office supply store. College grads need these because they are anxious to apply their newly learned philosophies to the real world, and what better way than to proclaim their politics or favorite sandwich on the back of a brand-new Ford, which you will also buy them, as stated on the following memorandum.

A Ford, or a Jeep, or even a clean used Oldsmobile will do. Trite but true, a car would be nice. Think of the chiropractic bills your ex-student will avoid by not getting critically injured on his or her bicycle.

Lastly, college graduates would genuinely appreciate a small shrub. At this stage, he or she probably won't be having a real front yard for 10 more years. Apartment life is ruthlessly devoid of shrubbery except in the front lawn and foyer. I recommend herbal shrubbery, but any shrubbery will do. They could plant it inside so that the front and backyard is integrated into the general idiom of apartment living. Nothing with fruit though, because once it ripens it falls onto the carpet and attracts roaches and gets stinky. A really good grad gift pack would be the fruit basket AND the shrubbery. Ask the shrubber to wrap it, otherwise it gets messy and ruins the surprise.

So that's it, my amended list of graduation gifts. Feel free to develop your own ideas, but remember: Thrift is key! Don't give into the urge to ladle out your bank account. And if they protest, tell them the story about when you walked in your socks in the snow five miles to your graduation and all your parents gave you was dad's stuffed swordfish. That might work. OK. Go now, go and buy something.

Something and Then Really Nothing at All

Noah Blumberg tackles the angst of two graduating boys in this triumphant return to the printed page.

Chuck and Matt were friends from high school in Orange County who were closing out a fourth year together in the university dorms. Matt's business economics major kept him focused squarely on his schoolwork, from which he rarely strayed. The main distraction he allowed himself was acquiring the entire Godzilla film series on video and neatly displaying the collection in his dorm room. Also, he always had time to shop for gifts with his good buddy Chuck.

Chuck was a Japanese major and loved all things Japanese. He had joined or at least tried to join every Japanese club on campus. His Japanese major was a large part of his life. He simply referred to himself as a "Major" and talked about all the general traits that "Majors" possessed.

The two good friends were enjoying some gift shopping, as they usually did on Wednesdays, in the university's student union. This Wednesday was special though, as it was the last Wednesday before graduation. They were shopping for graduation gifts for their friends.

"Hey Matt."

"Yup."

"The Campus Shop is pretty fun with their signs, huh? I mean they introduced that sweatshirt style, and next to it they wrote 'New Style' with the 'New' in quotes. Like, 'This may or may not actually be a new style, all we're saying is that someone was quoted on record as saying that it was.'"

"Oh, I know! And what about the sign that says '.99 cents for a key chain?' I was gonna say, 'Oh here's a good price: 99 one-hundredths of a cent for a key chain,' but I didn't."

After a few minutes, they got up from the bench that they were resting on to look at the new mural on the east wall of the student union. By the time they had returned, a maintenance man had begun wiping bits of nachos and spilled beer from a nearby table into Chuck and Matt's gift bag.

Matt looked at the maintenance man and said, "Um, please stop that."

"Oh, OK," said the man and he set the gift bag back down, grabbed his wet wiping cloth, and left.

"Great. Our graduation gifts are soiled," Chuck said. "Well, at least we still have each other."

They sat a while longer. Chuck looked over to the student union entrance and saw the most fabulously dressed man he had ever seen. The shining blue blazer, yellow slacks and sunset-print shirt caught his attention immediately. In an uneasy voice, he shouted, "That's Doc Severinson!"

"My God, it is!" Matt said excitedly in a hushed voice. "and that's the most audacious outfit ever!"

Doc Severinson looked directly at the two good friends when he heard Chuck's shouting, then promptly looked away and began to whistle as if he was minding his own business and had never even seen Chuck or Matt.

"He heard you yell!" said Matt.

"So what?"

"So, I'm just saying."

"Why would he come in here dressed like that and then make like he didn't want to be bothered? And who dresses like that anymore? I'm a Major and I don't dress like that."

"I don't know, maybe it's part of the way you gotta be when you perform. It's all flash and dazzle."

"Yeah, I bet he doesn't know any better. He just dresses like a star because that's who he is, he can't help it and why should he?"

"Did you hear that he was heavily into cocaine?"

"No, did you?"

"Yeah, I think so."

"I'm gonna go talk to him."

"Please don't."

"All right."

The two good friends sat at their table for a few more minutes before getting up to resume their graduation gift shopping. They had forgotten what they were talking about. Matt said, "Yuck, I hate those maintenance men."

"Me too," Chuck said, "Me too."

All I Want Is a Car!

Is that too much to ask?

When I graduated from high school, all I wanted was a car. It didn't have to be new, or even nice. All it needed was four wheels and an engine. As the day of graduation approached I tried not to expect one, but I still couldn't help but practice my surprised face in the mirror.

Then it was time. I woke up in the morning and rushed to the driveway to see my shiny vehicle with a big red bow fluttering in the wind. But it wasn't there. Check again later, I thought.

After the ceremony was my party. The shreds of brightly colored wrapping paper made my living room look like the day after Mardi Gras. I opened the last gift. It was from my parents. It was small and light. I was sure that inside I would find the key to my future.

Placed ever so lovingly inside the package was a gift certificate for a year's supply of Avon. My first lesson in disappointment.

Now I am about to graduate from college. For the past year I have been hounding my parents about a car. Anything that moves, a Pinto, a Tempo, a Jetta, anything that's faster than my bike.

So you can imagine my surprise when I got the news that for graduation my 17-year-old brother got a car.

And so I asked mom and dad why he got a car and I didn't. Their answer: He works and has to go to college in the summer.

Hmmm. Sounds familiar, especially since I have worked my way through college while he just put in a few hours at a burger joint before quitting because it was just "too stressful."

And as for school, where do they think I've been for the past four years? Snorkeling? But then again, he is going to a school that's soooo far away. Yeah, the car will really help him drive that whole mile and a half to school. So, I thought, I must be getting one too.

I thought wrong. It seems that there just wasn't enough money for two cars.

So yeah, I'm a little bitter. He got a car, the car that should have been mine, and what did I get? Why, another year's supply of Avon, of course.
