Feinstein Tells Locals U.S. Must 'Prime the Pump' to Stay Strong

By Sal Pizarro
Staff Writer

America has to "prime the pump" and build up the infrastructure and schools necessary to make the nation competitive for the 21st century, U.S. senatorial candidate Dianne Feinstein told a Santa Barbara crowd Saturday.

Speaking at a De La Guerra Plaza rally, Feinstein pushed for the election of both the Democratic presidential ticket as well as local Democrats, including congressional candidate Gloria Ochoa running against millionaire Republican Michael Huffington for the 22nd District seat.

"Nothing would give me more pleasure than to work with Gloria Ochoa in the House," Feinstein said.

The rally, which was the third of its kind to be held in the Santa Barbara area by the Democratic Party since Wednesday, was part of a final-weekend rush to get more voters registered before today's deadline.

"You won't find the Republicans out holding rallies to get voters registered this weekend. They don't want more voters out there," said Phil Angelides, leader of the state Democratic Party.

The downtown rally drew an audience of only about 350 at its height, with women and young people accounting for most of that number. Geoff Sievert, head of UCSB's Campus Democrats, was in attendance and admitted that turnout was tepid compared to crowds at similar UCSB rallies.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson delivered an emotional oratory to a crowd of 5,000 in Storke Plaza Friday. His speech called for compassion on the part of government and attacked Republican policies, but stopped short of directly endorsing the Clinton/Gore ticket.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson thundered into UCSB on Friday and told a crowd of over 5,000 that "you have the destiny of the whole nation in your hands."

The civil rights leader and two-time presidential candidate implored UCSB students to register and vote in Isla Vista where they could have the most impact. "You live wherever you slept the last two or three nights," Jackson said.

Jackson stressed the importance of the student vote in Santa Barbara, especially in Bill Wallace's bid to remain Santa Barbara County's 3rd District supervisor and Gloria Ochoa's race for the 22nd Congressional District. Both Wallace and Ochoa are considered underdogs and need a strong turnout in traditionally liberal and Democratic I.V. if they hope to win.

In his speech, Jackson spoke of an America in decline and beset by a host of problems. "We feel all around us the pain of 40 million Americans in poverty ... and one in 10 on food stamps," Jackson said.

He said that the American people suffer from a growing sense of disillusionment and malaise that the Bush administration has not been able to address. "We suffer from a loss of home and, more than that, a loss

Number of Women Earning Chemistry Ph.D.s on a Rise

By Rebecca Eggeman
Staff Writer

Female chemistry professors and graduate students at UCSB are finding that, while their numbers are increasing, there is still some progress to be made in a field largely dominated by men.

A 1991 American Chemical Society nationwide survey reported a rise over two decades in the proportion of chemistry degrees being earned by women. In 1970, 18% of bachelor's degrees went to women, in 1989, the figure had jumped to 39%. Women earning their doctorates in chemistry in 1970 comprised 8% of all chemistry Ph.D.s, whereas in 1989 they made up 25%.

The UCSB Chemistry Dept. has 109 graduate students, and 39 of those are female, according to Christine Simms, the department's graduate student record-keeper.

Despite the growth in numbers, however, the ACS survey said women in chemistry continue to fall behind their male counterparts in the higher ranks of academia and in management. Explanations for this gap include factors such as marital status, presence of children, sexual discrimination and harassment, and gender differences in career commitment.

However, Alison Butler, one of two female UCSB chemistry professors, said it does not matter if a chemist is a man or a woman because a person's dedication to their work determines

Homes Spared by Two-Acre Blaze

It was a close call for Santa Barbara County firefighters, who spent Sunday afternoon battling to keep a Goleta brush fire from spreading to neighboring homes.

The fire department was called in at approximately 4:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon to control a natural fire that blazed out of control for almost an hour two miles east of UCSB along Glenn Annie Rd.

"A report went out ... of a fire in the area of Dos Pueblos High School," said SB County Police Deputy Charles Gerhart.

Approximately two acres of brush at the Goleta foothills burned by the time firefighters could stop the fire, Gerhart said. Neighboring homes west of the fire were untouched by the flames and the school re-

"The fire headed east. We were concerned that if the winds shifted, it would be a residential fire," Gerhart said.

President Takes Political Risk on Cable Regulation Veto

WASHINGTON —Of three dozen bills President Bush has vetoed, none is more loaded with political peril than his weekend rejection of re-regulation of cable TV rates.

Behind in the polls and accused by democrats of callousness to the hardship caused by a poor economy, Bush is gambling that he can prevail in Congress and persuade the voters that the bill was a misguided effort to curb cable rates.

But if the elections are decided on pocketbook issues, this one carries clout. The bill was drafted in part to respond to consumer complaints about spiraling prices, and its sponsors proclaim it loudly as an effective remedy.

Nor is it the only measure aimed at middle-class voters that democrats have served up for vetoes in the waning days of the 102nd Congress. Bush rejected a bill to give many workers time off to deal with family emergencies, and another to liberalize abortion counseling available at federally funded family planning clinics.

At the same time, democrats have ducked confrontations where Bush might have held high ground politically. When the president vowed at the Republican National Convention to veto spending bills that exceeded his request, Democrats quietly trimmed them to avoid being labeled big spenders.

The latest bill Bush vetoed would cap rates for basic cable service, open the door for competition from emerging programmers like home satellite services and let broadcasters seek compensation for cable's use of their signals.

In his veto message, the president called it "good intentions gone wrong," and said Congress had "fallen prey to special interests."

"The simple truth is that under this legislation cable rates will go up, not down," the president said.

"Competition will not increase, it will stagnate. In addition, this legislation will cost Americans jobs and discourage investment in telecommunications."

Bush said the bill would require cable companies to bear the costs of new regulations and higher cable rates would result.

Predictably the Democrats said otherwise. "His claim that [it] has fallen prey to special interests is a good measure of the distance between him and the American people," said Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.). "What interest could be more special than that of unregulated cable monopoly?"

Bad Weather Hampers Air Lift, Shortages Increasing

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina

(AP) —More humanitarian flights arrived in Sarajevo on Sunday, but rainy weather hampered the aid effort to help people in the shattered capital survive the coming harsh winter.

Relief officials fear the Bosnian winter could claim hundreds of thousands of lives unless there are adequate supplies of food and fuel to feed the residents of the besieged city.

Power cuts have frequently left about 80% of Sarajevo without electricity. People line up at water trucks, and on Sunday, many put out pails to catch rainwater running off the roofs.

The U.N. High Commission for Refugees estimates that about 16 relief flights a day are needed to meet Sarajevo's minimum daily needs of 200 tons of food.

On Saturday, a U.S. plane flew in 10 tons of food. It was the first relief flight to the capital in a month. The airlift was suspended on Sept. 3, after an Italian relief plane was shot down, killing all four crewmen.

Only four of at least seven planned flights arrived in Sarajevo on Sunday, two American and two Canadian. Two French planes and return flights by the U.S. were canceled because of the rainy, cloudy weather.

Election Provides Chance for Democracy in Kuwait

KUWAIT (AP) —Grandiose war memorials dot the landscape and gruesome picture histories cram bookstore shelves, but many Kuwaitis believe the true legacy of Saddam Hussein's invasion will emerge from the elections Monday for the first parliament in six years.

At stake are not just the 50 seats from the 25 districts, but whether the ruling al-Sabah family and the parliament reach a working understanding on what form democracy will take here.

"The election itself is not democracy. Democracy is A to Z. The election is A of the alphabet," said candidate Hamad al-Jugan, a lawyer campaigning from a wheelchair after an unknown assailant shot him the day after Kuwait was liberated in Feb. 1991.

That was a time when some resistance leaders thought they might bar the al-Sabahs from returning until they guaranteed a total democracy.

But the Gulf War did change the tone of the election. "The invasion made people wake up. They felt they had to get involved in decision-making," said candidate Khalid al-Adwa, a prayer leader trained at Egypt's prestigious al-Azhar University.

No Warning for Tornado Victims: Call for Inquiry

PINELLAS PARK, Fla.

—Tampa Bay area mobile home residents received no warning before tornadoes ripped through their lightweight trailers, killing three. The National Weather Service said it would convene an inquiry.

Gov. Lawton Chiles scheduled a tour of the damaged areas where more than 100 homes were destroyed in the storms Saturday. Fifty-three people were injured and six were hospitalized.

Senior meteorologists in Miami determined on Friday that the huge mass of stormy weather bearing down on the Gulf of Mexico was likely to generate tornadoes, said Paul Hebert, the state's top weather official.

But tight rules restrict tornado warnings to confirmed touchdowns and lesser tornado watches to conditions that precede Midwest tornadoes, Hebert said. Criteria include cold, dry air mixing rapidly with warm moist air.

"But when's the last time you had cold, dry air in Florida in the middle of the summer?" said Hebert. "There isn't any, but we still have tornadoes here."

No date was set for the inquiry planned to determine why no warning was issued from the local weather office in Ruskin, located across Tampa Bay from two communities north of St. Petersburg where the tornadoes did their worst damage.

Polls Show Clinton Ahead Despite Loss of Support

WASHINGTON (AP) —The latest national polls released over the weekend showed Ross Perot's renewed campaign attracting the support of one in 10 voters, Bill Clinton slipping slightly and President Bush's percentage frozen in the 30s.

The candidate's average standing in over the weekend in the CNN-USA Today Gallup poll was 47% for Clinton, 35% for Bush and 10% for Perot.

The rolling poll of registered voters, which continues daily through the election, has a three point margin of error.

A Newsweek poll Thursday and Friday of 752 registered voters put Clinton ahead of Bush 44% to 36%, with Perot at 14%. That eight-point Clinton lead over Bush compared with a nine-point spread registered in the previous week's Newsweek poll is not significant since the poll has a margin of error of four points.

Clinton also had comfortable leads in new polls in the battleground states of Michigan and Illinois, which together have 40 electoral votes.

Most on List of 'Problem Officers' Remain on Duty

LOS ANGELES (AP)

—Thirty-seven of the 44 "problem officers" singled out by the Christopher Commission remain on the police force despite alleged misconduct, a newspaper said Sunday.

A few have been transferred to desk jobs, but the vast majority continue to work with the public, the Los Angeles Times reported.

"At least half" do not belong there and "it was not fair to give them the title of problem officer," said Commander Rick Dinse.

The list was compiled by the independent commission which investigated the police department after the police beating of Rodney King.

Commission members, looking at confidential personnel files, listed officers with six or more complaints of excessive force or improper tactics from 1986 to 1990.

Some of the complaints were sustained, others were not.

Several officers said being on the list has become something of a status symbol.

"You're totally infamous," said Henry J. Cousine, who has received 170 days of suspension during his career. The longest, 44 days, came after he fought with youths after a traffic squabble.

Dinse said the department has worked hard to counsel and re-train some officers, but he said others needed no special attention.

Three Dead, Two Injured During Week of Violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) —An 8-year-old boy standing in the parking lot of a fast-food restaurant was shot to death by gunfire from a passing car, authorities said.

Arnulfo Contreras, who was not believed to have been the intended victim of the attack Saturday, became the second area youth to be killed by a stray bullet in the last week.

Sheila Lorta, 16, a cheerleader at Paramount High School, was fatally wounded Tuesday when she was caught in a gang-related attack while returning to school from a lunch break.

Investigators could not confirm whether the attack that killed Arnulfo was gang-related. The boy was standing near an eastside restaurant when shots were fired from a passing car approximately 5:30 p.m. and died at a hospital about 30 minutes later.

Street violence also killed one teen-ager and wounded his companion in a gang-related drive-by in suburban El Monte Saturday night.

I.V. a Step Closer to Cityhood

Committee Releases Proposals to Make Town Autonomous

By Edward Acevedo
Staff Writer

In the hopes of creating a community free to govern itself, the Isla Vista Enhancement Committee disclosed last week the first draft of a report on the possibility of I.V. cityhood.

The preliminary Government Options Report, which outlines the conditions for cityhood economic feasibility, was released by the IVEC Wednesday. The report includes recommendations and requirements as to what is necessary for autonomy in I.V.

Committee members believe the characteristics of I.V. have been controlled by outside agencies that have little or no commitment to improving the quality of life in the community.

"The bulk of Isla Vista's problems are traceable directly to the absence of a responsive municipal-level government through which residents can collectively obtain resources and establish policies required for healthy community development," the report stated.

According to committee member Yonie Harris, director of UCSB Orientation Programs, self-governance is the key to solving the town's woes. "We feel that many of the problems plaguing Isla Vista must be solved by Isla Vistans," she said.

"We would like to see a mechanism to have [I.V. residents] participating and practicing being good citizens," Harris said. "Outside agencies cannot manufacture a commitment to the community."

In preparation for cityhood, the I.V. Recreation and Park district allotted $7,500 of its funds to a study that will evaluate the economic feasibility of incorporating I.V. into an autonomous city.

The issue of incorporation has spurred controversy over the past 20 years because many fear the town cannot generate enough tax revenue to operate on its own, according to IVEC member and UCSB sociology Professor Dick Flacks. "The committee wants a study before it takes a position," he said. "In an ideal world, the report says that self-government is the best option, but is that feasible from an economic point of view?"

Programs that already exist within I.V. include the IVRPD, Youth Projects and the open-door Medical Clinic. However, the IVEC calls for more local agencies for the town to be a functioning city. Among the programs recommended by the report are a Public Safety Commission, a Community Center Project Board, a Transportation Committee, a Landlord/Tenant Advisory Committee, a Tenants' Union and a Community Center Governing Board, which could evolve into a city council.

Although the report expressed neutrality on any specific governmental option, its main focus is offering recommendations that would assist those who believe cityhood is the best option for the needs of the community.

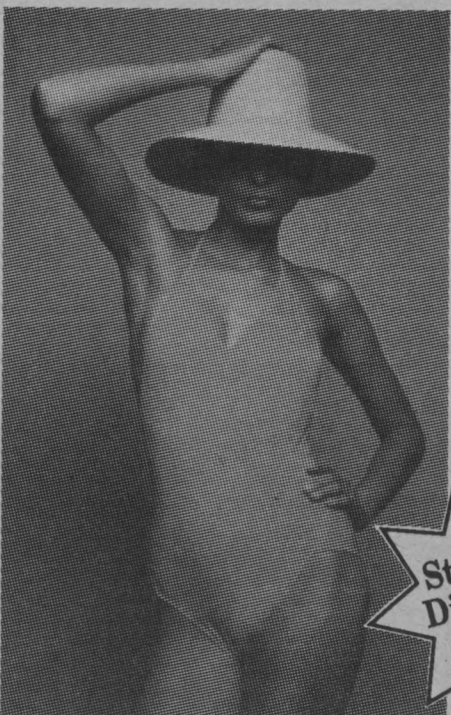

"Whatever form of municipal or sub-municipal government that is eventually adopted must address the problem of ensuring authentic democracy in a situation in which most members of the electorate are relatively transient," the report stated. "But where a minority of the members must live more permanently with the decisions of the whole."

The committee is waiting for the results of the IVRPD study before any decisions are made. A final public hearing will be held Oct. 26 to make any alterations to the study before passing it to Chancellor Barbara Uehling and the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors, Harris said.

"The chancellor will have 30 days to respond, and any [further action] depends a lot on the chancellor and the board of supervisors," Harris said.

Writer Addresses Scholars at Reception

By Rebecca Eggeman

Attendees of the Faculty Women's Club luncheon last Saturday were treated to a lecture by a best-selling local author as they met to honor a group of scholarship winners.

"The greatest part of writing is being able to touch people, and remind them of what they want in their own life," said author Ariana Huffington, who spoke at the annual fall luncheon, held in the Faculty Club's Joyce Hall.

FWC President Diane Morgan said Huffington was chosen as speaker for her life achievements. "We asked Ariana to come speak to us because she's an outstanding woman in her own right," she said.

Huffington, wife of 22nd Congressional District candidate Michael Huffington, has written five books, covering diverse topics such as feminism, Greek mythology, art, politics and culture. Two of her books became national best sellers. She has appeared on talk shows and has lectured across the country. Her latest book, Picasso: Creator and Destroyer, took five years of research and interviewing to complete.

During her appearance, Huffington discussed the material of her completed books, describing her inspiration and motives for writing them. She then turned the attention to the book she is currently working on, The Fourth Instinct. The title refers to Huffington's expansion of the psychological "three instincts"— survival, sex and power.

"The three instincts don't really explain what life is about — fulfilling our dreams. The fourth instinct drives us on to wholeness and goes beyond the other three," Huffington said.

Huffington explained the fourth instinct included the components of trust, service to others and the community, and the quest to connect with the spirit in us.

In order to fulfill one of her own dreams, Huffington says she plans to work with Santa Barbara agencies to care for children in need. "I want to inspire people to give of themselves. They will get back more than they can imagine," she said.

Members of the audience said they were impressed with Huffington's accomplishments. "She was very inspirational, a wonderful speaker. I really admire someone with such vision and the drive to see it through," said Sharon Crawford, wife of Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs Donald Crawford.

At the end of the luncheon, four students received recognition for winning the FWC Scholarship. Gregory King, Brett Ohlfs, Anita Venkataraman and Dawn Zilinger were awarded for their academic achievement, the breadth and depth of their classes and outside activities, according to Donna Coldren, chair of the scholarship committee.

Regents to Discuss Critique of Spending

After quietly weathering months of harsh criticism, the UC Board of Regents will convene in a special meeting today at UCLA to discuss the university's controversial compensation policies for its top-ranking executives.

Over the past two months, two scathing reports have put fuel to the fire of those seeking to reform the UC's spending habits. Both reports found expenditures by and for top officials to be beyond the pale of acceptable action, and recommended changes to current policies.

Although the regents are not scheduled to take any action today, they will examine the following:

- How salaries are set for chancellors;
- The University's deferred income plan, enacted in 1987, which provides additional compensation — aside from base salary — to top executives every five years;
- How salaries are set for executives at the UC level;
- Benefit programs — such as life insurance, supplemental retirement payments, auto and housing allowances, entertainment funds and club dues — that are currently available to senior executives.

"If you put your whole self into it and really love what you are doing, then the obstacles that you face are easier to get around. I've seen that in my own graduate students," Butler said.

Chemistry Professor John Kennedy believes there are cultural barriers that sometimes prevent women chemists from having the same opportunities as men.

"For example, a male faculty member can go to lunch with a younger male graduate student and give him advice to help his advancement. But, because of perceived sexual connotations, the male can't invite a woman out to lunch," Kennedy said.

UC Davis chemistry Lecturer Joice Takahashi agrees that the only disadvantage a woman chemist might have is not being able to be "one of the guys" with her male colleagues. "I think gender does govern who your best friends are going to be. There is sometimes a tendency for a woman to isolate herself in a department full of men," she said.

The ACS study found that sexual discrimination and harassment affects a significant number of women chemists. Forty-three percent of female respondents reported an experience with gender bias, and 33% said that they had

Carri Lyda, a chemistry student working toward her doctorate, said sexual discrimination is more quietly expressed now, but still exists.

"Most of the men who don't think women are smart know enough to hide it, but it comes out in subtle ways," Lyda said. "They don't look you in the eye when they talk to you, or they ask you easier questions. In general, this department is pretty good about being un-discriminatory."

The coordinator of the sexual harassment prevention program, Farfalla Borah, said most teaching assistant training programs include a segment on

Violence, Education and Leadership:
A Conversation With Jesse Jackson

By Jay Bennert
Staff Writer

Editor's note: Following his speech in Storke Plaza, Reverend Jackson met with a small group of reporters, including a Daily Nexus staffer, for a face-to-face interview. The following is an edited transcript of that interview.

Daily Nexus: Today would be Mohandas Gandhi's 123rd birthday. Do you think that Gandhi's ideas, and those of his philosophical disciple, Dr. King, are still relevant in an age of Rodney King beatings and drive-by shootings?

Jesse Jackson: Those beatings are an indication of why he's more relevant than ever before in a society that's increasingly violent and resolves its conflicts through violence, that is increasingly self-destructive. We must choose, as Dr. King said, nonviolence over nonexistence.

The will of our political leaders to blatantly attack each other's integrity with paid political announcements as standard operating procedure, even when they know it distorts the truth, is violence. And so today — more than ever before — with so many youths using drugs, or selling drugs, which is an act of violence upon one another ... we need to begin to teach nonviolence as a lifestyle.

DN: What can the federal government do to make higher education more accessible to the middle and working class?

JJ: Clinton has proposed to guarantee every student a college education on the condition that once they graduate they give community service, that's a sound proposition ...

DN: Do you think that's politically feasible?

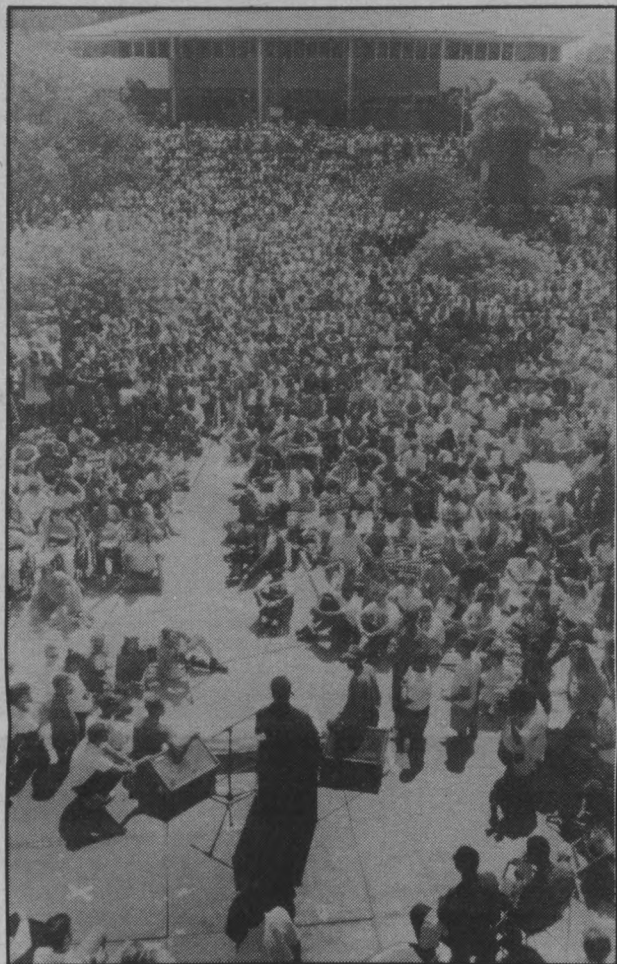

GERRY MELENDEZ/Daily Nexus

The Reverend gives 3rd District Supervisor Bill Wallace his support in the upcoming election with an encouraging handshake.

JJ: It is. If you play football, you get a scholarship to go to school contingent on whether you play ... you earn it. I would think that we should see the advantage more and more — of more scholarships, not fewer; less tuition, not more, as a way of indicating that our youth are prepared to compete in the New World Order.

DN: What's next for Jesse Jackson?

JJ: San Diego. [Laughter] My emphasis right now, frankly, is helping to bring in this new generation of leaders. That would be a really great part of my life's work to see that happen — to see one-tenth of the U.S. Congress African-American, one-twentieth Latino — that's changing the landscape of our country. ... I've been blessed to live long enough to see that change.

Thousands in and around Storke Plaza were mesmerized by Jackson's hour-long speech on Friday.

SPEECH

Continued from p.1 of hope," he said. "Our own rope is being used to hang us by the leaders we trusted."

Jackson ridiculed President George Bush's attacks on the Democrats as the party of welfare and low family values. "Bush and Quayle do not have the moral authority to speak of family values," he said. "If you put America back to work that's how you end welfare."

Jackson's speech was enthusiastically received by the crowd, and was given a standing ovation at its conclusion. "He's getting people to vote, getting people to register, getting people to stretch their minds and have a more worldly view," said UCSB senior Lisa Nielsen.

But Jackson went beyond the usual election year bashing of the opposition in his speech. He broadened it to include an attack on the entire idea of a unipolar world with the United States as the sole superpower, stressing instead global cooperation. "When the United States president and the Russian president meet, they represent only one-eighth of the human race. It is a minority meeting," he said.

One notable absence from his speech was Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton. Clinton's name received only a single mention by Jackson during the hour-long speech.

With Jackson's Entourage: A Reporter's Notes

By Jay Bennert
Staff Writer

Jesse Jackson's flying circus came into Santa Barbara on Friday and did not disappoint.

In the main ring we had one of the few recognized political celebrities of our time giving yet another great speech. Whether you agree with Jackson's ideas or not, it is impossible to discount his skills as an orator or deny his innate charisma. Jackson is one of those rare individuals who stops all conversation when he walks into a room.

Unfortunately Jackson could not be left alone last week to do what he does best — plead the case of those citizens America has forgotten: the poor, the dispossessed, the disenfranchised and the damned. Instead he became the focal point for an ever growing array of flunkies, weirdos, media hacks (present company included) and assorted hangers-on for the afternoon.

The ironies began when Jackson arrived in Santa Barbara. He was picked up at the airport by religious studies Professor Walter Capps, the man more than any other responsible for getting Jackson (and, come to think of it, any other important figure you care to name in the past five years or so) to come to UCSB.

Capps was not joined by Campus Democrats President Geoff Sievert, nor by Associated Students President Aaron Jones, the most prominent Black student on campus. Instead Jesse Jackson, arguably the most prominent Black man in America today, was met at the airport by UCSB's most distinguished professor, and the political chair of 100 Black Men, a white Belgian named Peter Bouckaert.

When he finally got on stage, Jackson had his musical finale ruined by 4,000 white kids from the Valley who couldn't dance. And then he had to embrace anybody, we're talking absolutely anybody, running for absolutely anything in this county. It didn't matter if they thought the sun was powering them or the Maharishi or what, there they were for their photo op. And then there was the pack nipping at his heels. Those rude, yipping, drooling, overgrown adolescents who never seem to quote anyone accurately and are fundamentally incapable of spelling even a simple name like Smyth correctly.

Journalists were out in force for Reverend Jesse. The men from the Daily Nexus and the Santa Barbara News-Press even followed him out to his car as he was leaving UCSB after the rally. (When asked about this by an onlooker they replied, almost in unison, "In case he gets shot.")

Jackson's son, Yusef, said it best, "Sometimes, it takes a lot of hope to keep alive."

According to Campus Democrats Vice President Scott Fleming, 520 new voters were registered during the Jackson rally.

"Part of it is the circumstances. We're here on a nice day on a Saturday afternoon. Still, there are a lot of people out here interested in change," Sievert said.

Third District Supervisor Bill Wallace, State Sen.

Gary K. Hart and 35th District State Assemblyman Jack O'Connell were also in attendance supporting Feinstein and fellow Democrat Barbara Boxer's attempt to double the number of women in the Senate.

Both the political guests and the handful of celebrities at the rally often spoke of the pro-choice movement, indicating it may be a very vital issue for the Nov. 3 election. "This choice issue does not stop with the women," said Grant Show, an actor on Fox's "Melrose Place." "We men have got to get behind the women on this issue."

Bands Rock the Vote in I.V.

By Brooke Nelson

In a last-minute attempt to swell the ranks of young voters before today's registration deadline, rock musicians and political activists joined forces at this weekend's Rock the Vote concert in Anisq' Oyo' Park.

Approximately 200 voters were registered at Saturday's event, which was sponsored by KTYD, the Santa Barbara Independent and Rock the Vote, a nationwide organization founded to encourage voting among 18- to 24-year-olds.

Throughout the day, members of the audience were exhorted to visit a nearby booth and register to vote for the Nov. 3 election.

"If you don't vote, you don't have any right to complain," KTYD DJ Fear Heiple told the crowd.

The concert featured performances by local bands Brickwater, Primal Tribe, Redrum, Creature Feature and Indica, and sentiment against George Bush weighed as heavily in the air as the tunes thrashed out by the musicians.

"You should register to vote, because wouldn't you rather have anybody than Bush?" Brickwater lead singer Harrison Dale asked the crowd.

ants turned out so they could have an impact on the democratic process, according to Indica's Chris Ferrante.

"We're trying to support Rock the Vote and get people registered," he said. "There are even people here under 18. Maybe we can influence them in some way."

According to Courtney Noel, at least, they were successful. "It's pretty cool," the sophomore sociology major said. Although she was already registered, Noel said the Rock the Vote event might help efforts to involve more students in the political process.

As spectators grooved to the sounds of rock and roll, many visited tables set up by supporters of local and state political campaigns. Representatives of 3rd District Supervisor Bill Wallace, congressional candidates Mindy Lorenz, Gloria Ochoa, Anita Perez-Ferguson and Barbara Boxer attempted to register voters at the afternoon event.

Wallace was scheduled to appear at the concert, but was held up at a fund raiser elsewhere, campaign spokesman Greg Helms said.

The Rock the Vote concert was notable for an absence of Republican campaign booths, and the event was dominated by Democratic and liberal causes. Although the concert was planned as a non-partisan effort, Republican groups and campaigns ignored invitations to participate, according to Susan Matthews, events coordinator for the Independent.

Matthews said many young people take rock musicians more seriously than politicians, and are more inclined to vote if encouraged by their favorite performers.

"These musicians are all smart guys. A lot of them are UCSB graduates," she said. "They can be better role models than some politician just getting up and giving a speech."

But freshman microbiology major Mike Wyrsta said the concert would not change his refusal to vote next month.

"I'm not really political. I'm pretty disgusted with everybody," he said. Asked what would convince him to register, Wyrsta replied, "Somebody worth voting for."

With Gluttonous Top Salaries Unveiled, Regents Should Resist Pleas of Gardner, Peltason

Editorial

The UC Board of Regents meets today in L.A. to discuss their Executive Compensation policies, which have drawn a torrent of public, faculty and student criticism. Framing their discussion will be two recent developments: a scathing report on the UC by Former State Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, and a defensive reply from recently retired President David Gardner.

In attendance will be freshly hatched UC President J.W. Peltason, whose cash flow will hinge on whatever actions the regents take.

The regents are finally facing up to the political fallout that came from using taxpayer money to overfeed administrative fat cats. But the tenor of both Gardner's and Peltason's replies to the numerous outcries make it clear that the pressure must be kept up if gross top-level salaries are to be reined in.

In his report, Post lambastes the university for providing outrageous perks, and then forming schemes he says are designed to obscure the freehanding.

The cover, it seems, has been blown. A document released for this board meeting details base salaries and associated benefits of executives. Though there are a few ifs, ands or buts floating in the information, it is clear that Peltason stands to earn upwards of $400,000 per year. Four hundred thousand dollars.

That number includes perquisites like a free car and driver, home maintenance, an entertainment fund, etc. Oh, and he gets a free house. Oh yeah, he can write off almost anything as an expense, too.

Part of this money comes from a particularly devious pay out program devised in secret five years ago by the regents' Committee on Finance. The Nonqualified Deferred Income Plan pays out bonuses every few years on a timetable, so that actual earnings are difficult to tally. This was the program that netted Chancellor Barbara Uehling a cool $28,000 this summer amid crashing budgets.

That's business as usual, which Post says must stop. "The use of deferred income understates the actual salary of the executives, and the manner in which the compensation was considered and disclosed, at least in part, was intended to mask and blunt adverse reaction to the full amounts approved."

In a letter to the regents, Gardner — who just sailed into Hewlett-Packard on a regent-approved $2.3 million golden parachute — responds that the pay is necessary to bring in the world-class executives that make the UC so great. Gardner neglects the fact that these outrageous salaries are alienating a world-class faculty; a faculty just told that for the first time since the depression that there will be no professors' merit pay increases. This sad irony points to a derailed set of priorities at the top.

And yet Gardner writes in defense of administrators' pay, calling Post's criticism "indifferent to its effect on our ability both to recruit as well as to retain university officers."

Translation: "I'm a big shot, and you'd better pay me like it."

Peltason chimed in with a letter too, calling Gardner's letter "a response with which I fully concur."

Translation: "Yeah, me too."

What the regents need to acknowledge today is that both of these gentlemen have worked in academia most of their lives, and likely would have done so at reasonable rates. The UC is a public institution, and it should act the part.

As Regent Jeremiah Hallisley said, "If President Gardner wants to make that kind of money, he should be selling potato chips or diet soda."

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This is in response to comments in the "weather" section of Sept. 25, 1992. Normally, I ignore remarks and consider the source. The problem is that this is a campus newspaper and I respect students.

First, it is fair to ask why I am taking on the University of California system. It is fair to ask whether it is for Quixotic or ego motives. This last summer I went on a retreat and asked myself these same questions. Indeed, the controversy has put a lot of emotional and financial stress on my family. It has also cut into very important community and scholarly projects. Moreover, it is quite a commitment to have to raise some $50,000 for expenses. The truth be told, I don't need this aggravation to feed my ego. Life has been good to me and my world is not limited to academia.

Second, I do not believe that it is fair to say or infer that I am doing it for the money. I offered to walk away from the case for equity considerations for Chicano and Latino students which would only commit UCSB to do what it should already be doing. If your weatherperson would know anything about civil rights cases, he or she would know that it is essential to ask for money damages. Perhaps the weatherperson should grow up.

Third, I resent the implication that my winning would stick the students with more fees. It's as stupid as blaming undocumented residents for the depression. Anyone who is remotely knowledgeable of the Northridge campus knows my record on raising fees. With that said, I would like to point out that browns and Blacks are also students, and that the recruitment of their numbers at UCSB has fallen for the third straight year. I humbly recommend that the weatherperson pay attention to the rights of students of color to attend UCSB.

Fourth, I have requested that the UC system give me an accounting of how much UC has squandered on lawyers since 1980 defending against cases like against the opponent. Most recently, I was puzzled and many of John Hardin's assertions and conclusions in (Daily Nexus, "The Donkey Is Alive and Kicking Back") would like to see a few of these issues clarified.

First of all, Hardin is probably correct in arguing that presidency would not be simply a renewal of the Carter though President Carter's policies may have contributed to hyper-inflation of the late 1970s, it was largely driven by the side of U.S. Government control. However, Hardin commits the same fallacy by blaming the current unemployment purely on President Bush's "lack of an economic plan." Aside from dangerously oversimplifying the current recession, such analysis greatly exaggerates the potential impact of such plans. Ours is not a command economy where "plans" determine resource allocations and production goals. Rather, the U.S. economy is driven by complex market interactions. The government can attempt to stabilize business cycles by adjusting its spending levels and federal interest rates, but in a larger context, economic plans are not that important.

I am not trying to absolve the Reagan-Bush legacy of all blame; the accumulation of government debt is probably dampening business confidence and contributing to the current recession. Similarly, many of Governor Clinton's proposed reforms will increase labor costs and delay recovery. I am simply arguing that recessions and recoveries happen largely outside of the context provided by federal policies. I found Hardin's generalizations to be misleading and inconsistent.

Hardin also claims that the only results of Operation Desert Storm were to "spend $2 billion" and to "change nothing in the Middle East." It is astounding to even compare today's Middle East with the alternate scenario in which a hostile dictator, intent on unifying the Arab world by force and reliving the Crusades, would control 58% of the world's oil resources and command a destabilizing regional superpower. If Bush Wins, Abortion Rights May Vanish

Holly Marsh

The clock is running out — we have 30 days to save choice. To vote in November, you must register by today. If you are thinking of not voting, think twice and think about this:

The Reagan-Bush legacy has stripped us of power; they have appointed a Supreme Court that has raped the spirit of Roe v. Wade, which in 1973 gave women the right to abortion. We are at the brink of losing this right. The Supreme Court under Reagan and Bush has chipped away at the legislation by limiting who can choose and restricting how we can choose, even though over 80% of the United States is pro-choice. The next president will appoint at least one justice to the Supreme Court, which is currently only one vote away from overturning Roe v. Wade entirely. Four justices have explicitly stated their desire to make abortion completely illegal, while three others support limiting it.

Last June, the decision on Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey upheld such limitations, thereby discriminating against poor women, young women and the doctors who perform the procedure.

In 1988 Becky Bell was forced to a back alley butcher in Indiana to have her abortion because the laws in her state required parental consent. At the age of 17, she died of infection caused by the dangerous and unsanitary conditions of the illegal abortion.

The Casey decision upheld a law which calls for a 24-hour waiting period between the initial consultation and the procedure. This forces any woman who must travel for an abortion to spend more money on food and lodging, money that many women just don't have.

The law also forces minors to obtain parental consent. In 1988 Becky Bell was forced to a back-alley butcher in Indiana to have her abortion because the laws in her state required parental consent. At the age of 17, she died of infection caused by the dangerous and unsanitary conditions of the illegal abortion. Her parents now work for the abolition of such laws all over the country.

Under the Pennsylvania law, doctors are required by the state to go through a rigorous process called "informed consent." This process is basically a series of intimidation sessions that try to scare women out of having an abortion. Among other things, the state requires that before he or she can perform the procedure, a doctor must show the woman and her parents, if she is a minor, graphic photos of aborted tissues.

The presidency is the prize. Along with appointing the next justices, our next president will make pivotal decisions about choice. It was Reagan's executive order that created the "gag rule" forbidding federally funded health clinics from even mentioning abortion as the legal option that it still is. Bush and their conservative court have upheld this order, and as of last week it is being enforced. Our next president will have the Freedom of Choice Act cross his desk. Bush has promised to veto this bill; incidentally, Congress has never overturned one of the 40-plus bills which Bush has vetoed in his term. Obviously, we must also elect a Congress that is dedicated to making the Freedom of Choice Act the law.

Although Bush says that he believes some exceptions should be made for victims of rape and incest, his party's platform rejects all abortion. Do not accept the rhetoric. What exceptions does Bush propose for the survivors of rape and incest? Does Bush expect them to have to prove that they are victims? According to the FBI, for every woman who reports a rape there are 10 to 15 victims who do not report. Where will they go for their abortions?

To the back alleys, where oppressed women have gone and always will go when their fundamental right is taken away.

Tonight across the nation there will be candle light vigils to kick off our last month to save choice. Come to Storke Plaza tonight at 7 to show your support for choice. Bring a friend. Justice Harry Blackmun is one of two justices left who supports the spirit of access expressed in Roe v. Wade. In his writings in the Casey decision, Justice Blackmun shared our fears and warned of our possible future:

"I fear for the darkness as four justices anxiously await the single vote necessary to extinguish the light."

On Nov. 3, send the message to Washington, send a president and a Congress that will fight to preserve and strengthen a woman's right to choose what she does with her own flesh.

On two occasions my path has been blocked by homeless persons reaching out to grab me and making comments such as "Let me feel your. ..." Once I was literally chased by a drunken homeless man who screamed "Stop looking at me, bitch" after my eyes met his for a fraction of a second. I had to duck into a store for refuge. While you may consider comments such as these "unique and interesting," I classify them as humiliating, degrading, harassing, and frightening. They certainly do not "cheer me up."

As for the mooching issue, I must point out that I have been asked for money by the homeless on several occasions. In one particular instance, I was asked for money by a man who claimed he was hungry. Since his situation struck a sympathetic chord within me, I offered to buy the man some food. However, he then lost interest in my charity and said he just needed cash. Obviously, buying food with my money was not his intention.

I am willing to believe that there are some homeless people who do help clean up our community and bother no one. I don't claim that all the homeless in I.V. are "moochers" or "mentally ill." However, I am very unwilling to believe that all of the homeless are "probably more sane and aware of the real world" than a person like Meredith Munger who most definitely is more aware of the realities here than you are. I, as a part of society, owe nothing to the homeless. I do not chase homeless people. I do not call them names or try to grab their body parts. I simply expect the same courtesy in return.

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This letter is in response to the letter written by Manan Jemerjian (Daily Nexus, Reader's Voice, Sept. 28).

Manan Jemerjian,

You, too, are high on a horse, or some substance, to have hastily heeded such hypocrisy in your "Off the Horse" letter to the editor. While Meredith Munger may have stereotyped the homeless people in Isla Vista, you counter her with equally unfair generalizations.

If you have found compassionate, caring confidantes in the people who live in the park, I congratulate you. However, you are among a very small minority. The majority of the taxpayers in this community would agree that harassment by the homeless is indeed the case here in I.V., which YOU fail to see. You claim that Meredith Munger sees "only what she wants to see." I believe Miss Munger is simply in touch with reality while you see only that which is ideal. Personally, I have seen too many things I have no desire to see in the parks of I.V.

I live less than 100 meters from the local markets, yet I must walk 400 meters to access them. I have had the misfortune, as have many I.V. residents, of discovering the hard way that the parks in I.V. are neither safe nor pleasant places through which to walk, run, bike or skate at any hour. In fact, I have never successfully traversed the park grounds without hearing completely unprovoked degradations.

in Heated Election Debates gulf states are free to export, Iraq no longer poses a military threat, Saddam Hussein's nuclear and chemical weapon programs are stalled and on the defensive, and Israel is engaged in negotiations with some of its Arab adversaries for the first time in its history. These negotiations were prompted at least in part by the Bush-Baker team's refusal to unconditionally guarantee loans to Israel, a move that Clinton has criticized in a rather cheap attempt to entice Jewish voting blocs. Additionally, I'm surprised that Hardin, apparently an opponent of the Gulf War, did not qualify his endorsement of Clinton, a declared supporter of Operation Desert Storm and the no-fly zones established afterwards.

Hardin unconditionally champions Clinton's "government for the people" — a theme about as nebulous and irrelevant as Bush's family values motif — and expects us to compare the candidates based on some superficial slurs against Bush and some vague statements of Clinton's intentions. For instance, he dismisses current AIDS research funding, a large and lucrative segment of government grants in the bio sciences, as defunct on the basis of Magic Johnson's stance alone. A more honest approach would have been to argue that the democrats have historically been more supportive of basic research in all areas of science, that they would allocate more money to AIDS research and that this added funding would hasten the development of drugs to combat the virus. Instead Hardin portrays Bush as a complete failure and suggests that Clinton's priorities would be a revolutionary change. Such statements seem unsubstantiated, rhetorical and misleading.

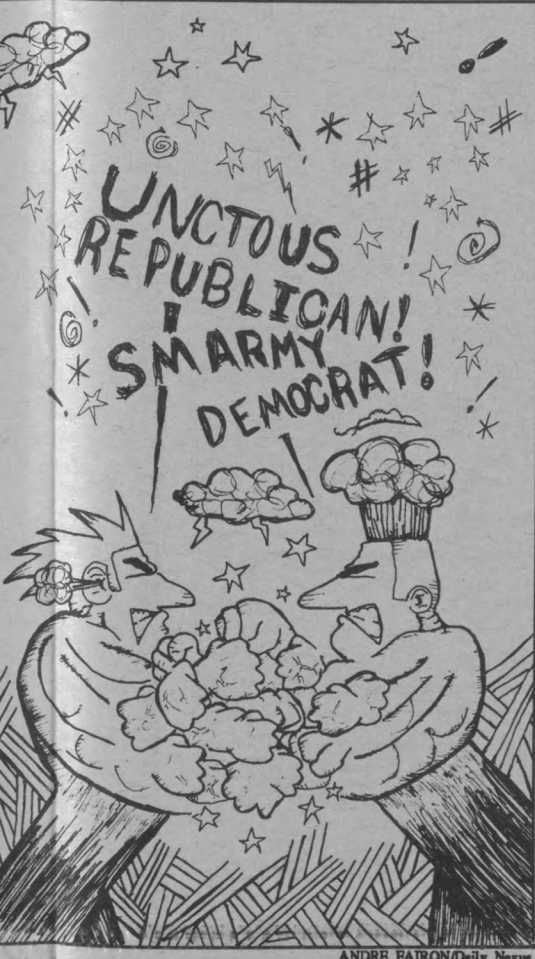

Don't misunderstand my intentions: I agree with many of both candidates' positions, and I believe that this year's Republican National Convention — perhaps one of the greatest examples of intolerance since the holocaust — is reason enough to vote against President Bush.

Hardin's column, however, was dangerously misleading and ended with the closed-minded declaration that "it's hard to be a Republican at UCSB! Thank God," in reference to a recent column by Todd Witteles (Daily Nexus, "It's Hard to Be a Republican at UCSB," Sept. 30). While my initial reaction to Wittles' column was skeptical, I think his essential point was that conservatives, being the minority on campus, must face an environment of intolerance. Apparently, Wittelles was right.

Park Board Gives Raises, Debates '092'

By Edward Acevedo
Staff Writer

The directors of the Isla Vista Recreation and Park District had their hands full Thursday night as debate brewed over employee wages and yet another tax measure slated for the November ballot.

A pay increase for IVRPD workers, recommended by the district's personnel committee, was approved in a 4-1 vote, with Director Hal Kopeikin dissenting.

Although the rest of the board found the increase acceptable, Kopeikin felt it was unjustified. "Their solution to every problem is to take taxpayers' money and give it to others. ... They have got to get out of the habit of raising money 25% a year and throwing it around," Kopeikin said.

Director Mike Boyd countered that the funds had already been allocated for 1992-93. "It's already in the budget," he said.

The board also wrangled over Measure 092, a tax increase that would assess property owners $30 per bedroom and raise up to $2 million over the next 20 years. The money would be used to either purchase or construct a recreational center for Isla Vista.

"If the voters approve it, we're going to have extensive public hearings on the issue of how to spend the money," Boyd said. The Santa Barbara County Re-development Agency has already earmarked approximately $1 million for a center.

The IVRPD agreed to place the measure on the ballot last spring, and will be voted on in November.

Even if voters approve Measure 092, however, new legislation signed by Governor Pete Wilson poses additional obstacles to funding the center. Effective Jan. 1, 1993, the Landscape and Lighting Act, which allows districts to issue bonds to pay for such projects, will no longer be in effect.

The board now hopes to get the project underway before the end of the year to prevent any challenges to the plan's legality.

Kopeikin, again the sole dissenting voice, believes the board is undermining the new law. "We are clearly evading the intent of the law," Kopeikin said.

Boyd disagreed. "The law doesn't take effect until Jan. 1, and now the law doesn't apply," he said. "I would not support assessment financing after Jan. 1."

Robert Kooyman, a member of Isla Vistans for Better Government, also opposed the board's actions. "I would like to see a little more exploration of options before anything is passed," Kooyman said.

Some opponents to the measure, like the members of IVBG, believe the taxes will ultimately impact students in rent increases and unfairly dip into landlords' profits.

Boyd responded, "I'm not looking out to protect their pocket books, I'm looking out for the quality of life in I.V."

WOMEN

Continued from p.5 sexual harassment, but faculty programs are optional. "There is no campuswide mandatory sexual harassment education program, and very few faculty take advantage of training seminars," she said.

Chemistry Chair Bernard Kirtman said if the department held a sexual harassment program, there might be a lack of interest. "My feeling is that if we gave a seminar, it would be like throwing a party that no one would come to," he said.

The most effective way to deal with a sexual harassment problem is directly through the department, Kirtman said. A person who is experiencing harassment or discrimination can speak to the chair or certain designated people. "The incidents that we have had were dealt with rapidly and efficiently," Kirtman said.

One graduate student in the department said she chose not to report a sexual harassment incident because she did not think it would help. "What would be the point? The comments were not concrete enough to be proven as sexual harassment, and I would probably end up alienating him. I depend on that person for advice, so I try not to let it get to me," she said.

Another barrier is that a woman in chemistry who wants children must examine her priorities and make sacrifices, according to chemistry graduate student Pamela Holt. "I would look for a less demanding type of job than, say, a tenured professor who sometimes works 80 hours a week. I would choose an occupation with more flexible hours," she said. However, Takahashi said that although chemistry is an intellectually demanding field, women chemists do not have to sacrifice raising a family for a successful career. "It's possible for a woman to have both. She needs to be efficient so she can keep up with demands, and have an understanding family," she said.

According to chemistry graduate student Tina Nenoff, there are weekly Women in Science lunches and monthly Women in Chemistry meetings to help women discuss the issues and problems they experience.

"We don't sit around and complain about our problems at these meetings. Instead, it's more productive to talk in a positive way about things we'd like to see changed and offer support to each other," Nenoff said.

Get Results!

After having my baby, I "suddenly" had 30 pounds to shed. I tried the conventional way of losing it by joining a gym and exercising the "hard way." Finally, I joined BHC, and by combining Body Wraps with their fitness program, I lost more inches and saw more improvements in 3 months than in the entire 9 months I had spent stressing and straining away. If you want to lose inches and slim down the easy way, join me at BHC!
