Protesters Rally for New Dept. at UCLA

By Joanna Frazier and Ivy Weston Staff Writers

LOS ANGELES -Students, faculty and state legislators united Friday afternoon in front of UCLA's Royce Hall to demand that campus administrators create a Chicano studies depart-ment and drop charges against 99 students arrested in protests last week.

More than 3,000 impassioned ralliers from a multitude of backday to express their dismay over the perceived racism and wafCharles Young and the UCLA administration's creation of a Chicano studies department.

Speaker after speaker ap-plauded the crowd's diversity, which included representatives from the Asian-American and African-American spectrum.

"If we don't stay united, we don't deserve anything we want," said Mario Valenzuela of UCLA's Conscious Students of Color. "That's what scares them at Murphy Hall, is all of us sitting here together."

Students sat peacefully in the grounds gathered for several hours and into the evening Friquad during the rally, and held up signs with sayings such as "Down With Chuck," "You Conquered Our Lands but You fling on the part of Chancellor Can't Conquer Our Minds.

"Students Unite" and "Cultural and Academic Equality is a Right, Not a Privilege." Valenzuela was one of the students arrested and jailed for taking part in last week's occupa-tion of the Faculty Center. He said police were brought in not for crowd control, but to dis-courage student action.

"We need to fight oppression on all fronts. Ninety-nine of us got arrested. ... The next step is kicking Young out of here," Valenzuela energetically told the crowd.

Peltason: UC Needs to Re-evaluate Its Future

Union Protestors Arrested at Regents Meeting

From Daily Bruin staff reports

University of California Presi-dent Jack W. Peltason asked the Board of Regents to re-evaluate the UC's future direction in light of crippling state budget cuts during their San Francisco meeting Friday.

See Related Story p. 4

"We need to consider the likelihood that we will not be able to enroll all qualified Cali-fornia students who wish to come," Peltason said.

Four years ago, the University adopted a long-range plan to ac-commodate an expected 63,000 additional students by the year 2005 through expansion of exist-ing campuses and the building of a 10th campus. But not once in the four years, Peltason said, "have we been given the budget [from the state] to implement that plan. We are now operating the University of California with 1 billion fewer dollars than projected."

To respond to the unexpected budget cuts, the UC dealt out a series of emergency measures, including offering early retirements to senior faculty and staff, pay freezes and cuts, and hikes in student fees.

"It is now apparent that the time for ad hoc measures is past. The state funds we have lost are not likely to be restored. This means that the 1988 plan, though it remains our ultimate goal, is no longer a realistic guide through this decade," Peltason said.

A review, led by UC Provost and Vice President for Academic follow the principle of "one University," not nine separate cam-puses, and priorities will be set to preserve and extend academic strengths, Peltason said.

"Each campus can and should develop its own centers of excellence, and we must move to avoid costly duplication. But each campus must retain the teaching, research and public service missions of this University," he said.

Peltason discussed five areas that will be comprehensively reevaluated:

•Consolidate educational programs and prioritize resources across the system.

•Consolidate, eliminate or find new sources of funding for pro-fessional schools and graduate programs.

•Explore the option of tuition. •Shorten the time it takes to obtain degrees and use summer ses-sions to their full potential.

•Restrict enrollment rates, but continue to promote diversity to reflect the makeup of California.

At Thursday's Board of Regents session, six union workers were arrested when they protested the 5% pay cut for all UC employees for one year. The cut was approved in March as a measure to offset the crumbling UC budget.

The union representatives shouted their demands over the pounding of the regents' gavel.

After sitting impassively while the protesters took turns reciting their requests, the regents left through a back exit.

The protesters linked arms and sat on the ground, chanting. "Chop from the top!" before they were taken away and cited

Inside the parking lot of the Biltmore Hotel, Mercedes were valet double-parked behind BMWs and Saabs, all with car phones. Outside on the street, protesters were parked in campers, Oldsmobiles and, in a few cases, wheelchairs.

They had come out early Friday morning to see Gov. Pete Wilson. The protest was peaceful, albeit ultimately futile, as the governor was not to be seen following his address.

The owners of the cars on the Biltmore's Montecito grounds were Fortune 500 executives invited to hear Wilson speak; the protesters were students and others there to call the gover-nor's attention to the hardships budget cuts were placing on

One enthusiastic demonstrator circulated through a small crowd of Wilson supporters and shouted back proudly to his co-horts, "I found some Republicans, I found some Republicans."

The pro-Wilson demonstra-tors stood steadfast in the face of this bizarre confrontation, holding their cardboard welcoming signs as stiffly as they carried themselves, and occasionally calling on the students across the street to "get a job."

Student protesters, numbering slightly more than 30, displayed signs reading "Dear Governor Wilson, Thank You for Presiding over the Death of Our

Travel Department Takeover Was Proposed Months Ago

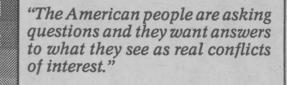

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Clinton's 25-year-old cousin proposed taking over the White House travel office three months before the firing of its staff and her appointment to help oversee the operation, it was disclosed Friday.

The White House also released a Justice Dept. statement saying that the FBI had been in touch with auditors who reviewed the travel office records and that "additional criminal investigation is warranted."

The seven-member staff was dismissed Wednesday, accused of financial mismanagement. White House officials had said the charges were based on an audit performed late last week as part of Clinton's effort to improve efficiency in government. A memo written Feb. 15 by Clinton's cousin, Cather-ine Cornelius, and another White House staffer, Clarissa Cerda, outlined changes similar to those instituted this week.

The memo was released by the White House after it was leaked to reporters, triggering a new uproar about

White House officials emphatically denied any con-nection between the memo and the firings. Press Sec-retary Dee Dee Myers quoted David Watkins, the White House management chief, as saying he didn't read the memo and it didn't affect his decision.

"The bottom line has not changed: We reviewed the travel operation because we had reason to believe it

Bosnian Government Turns Down New Peace Initiative

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) -Bosnia's president slammed Washington's peace formula Sunday, calling it "absolutely unacceptable" and predicting it would leave Muslims segregated in ethnic ghettos.

The rejection by President Alija Izetbegovic was sure to scuttle the plan announced in Washington on Saturday by Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher and the foreign ministers of Russia, Britain, France and Spain.

The formula called for safe havens to be set up to protect Bosnian Muslims and for monitors to be deployed along Bosnia's border with Serbia.

Izetbegovic said it was an attempt to put his people into "reservations."

"This new plan is absolutely unacceptable for us," said Izetbegovic.

The Muslim-led government prefers an international peace plan drafted by mediators Cyrus R. Vance and Lord David Owen to divide Bosnia among the three warring factions. Christopher said the plan was a blueprint to be used later.

The Bosnian Serbs have rejected the Vance-Owen plan but their leader, Radovan Karadzic, called the latest move by the United States and their allies "a more realistic approach."

Cambodians Vote in Large Numbers Despite Dangers

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) -Voters ignored Khmer Rouge threats and went in droves to U.N.-guarded stations Sunday in the nation's first multiparty election in 21 years.

"This is how much they want democracy," said Elaine Douglas-Noel, a U.N. elections monitor from Jamaica, who tried to calm throngs who gathered to vote in Kompong Cham, northeast of Phnom Penh.

Man Acquitted in Shooting Death of Japanese Student

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) —A jury on Sunday acquitted a man who fatally shot a Japanese exchange student who knocked on his door looking for a Halloween party.

The manslaughter trial of Rodney Peairs, 31, in the shooting of 16-yearold Yoshi Hattori had drawn widespread interest in Japan, where guns are rare and most shootings are gangrelated.

Defense attorney Lewis Unglesby said in closing arguments Sunday that the way the student was acting made it reasonable for Peairs to think his life was in danger.

District Attorney Doug Moreau said he recognized that Peairs wished the shooting never happened, "but that's not the point of what we're doing here. Because Yoshi doesn't get to do it again. That's the tragedy." Jury deliberations began shortly before 2 p.m. and lasted just over three hours.

Hattori, of Nagoya, Japan, and his American host were invited to a party, but got lost and went to Peairs' door because the address was similar and the house was already decorated for Halloween, which was two weeks away.

The defense said it was reasonable for Peairs to think he was in danger. Hattori was running at the door, waving something above his head, which turned out to be a camera.

Congressman's Family Gets Free Rent From Taxpayers

CHICAGO (AP) - Taxpayers have paid thousands of dollars in rent to Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's family for two buildings housing his offices and a local Democratic Party organization, a newspaper reported Sunday.

"The American people are asking questions and they want answers to what they see as real conflicts of interest, real perception problems, real appearances of im-propriety and possibly some real sleaze," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole (R-Kan.) said. In their memo, Cornelius and Cerda said the travel office "costs more money to run than it should cost."

They complained that the office was "complacent in its inefficiency and overly pro-press."

A day earlier, the White House acknowledged that a Hollywood friend of Clinton's, producer Harry Tho-mason, had contacted the administration on behalf of friends in the airline business who complained of being shut out of White House charter business.

More Police Hinder Venice Boardwalk Gang Fighting

LOS ANGELES (AP) -A fortified police force along Venice Beach thwarted a sequel to last weekend's gang brawls, and cooler weather Sunday thinned crowds along the famous boardwalk.

"It's pretty slow. They're all kind of scared," said Ed Zaldana, whose parking lot just off the beach had plenty of empty spaces. "The people that are here are asking if it is safe, if there are enough cops around."

Tourist Regina Gordon carried her bonneted baby and expressed concern.

"It's a little scary to think that something could hap-pen while we're walking with the kids," the New Yorker said. "We've seen several policemen as we were walking so that makes us more confident everything will be OK."

Last Sunday, 90 officers in riot gear were called to clear a two-mile stretch of the boardwalk after fights broke out between warring South Central gangs. The beach has become a new haven for inner-city gangs.

Ten officers on horseback and 40 anti-gang and Metro Division officers were added to the weekend mix because of fears of renewed violence. Up to 500,000 people stroll the boardwalk on a busy weekend. The boardwalk crowd was lower Sunday due to overcast

Entrance Gates Closed Off At Yosemite National Park

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (AP) -An overflow of weekend tourists forced temporary closure of the three main entrances to Yosemite National Park, officials said.

Visitors without reservations were turned away for three hours on Saturday and Sunday, National Park Service officials said. The closures were due to heavy winter snowfall which has blocked access to two major roads within Yosemite, forcing tourists to roam a smaller portion of the park's wilderness, officials said. "Some people were disappointed, but they are beginning to understand that we just don't have too many choices," park spokeswoman Marla LaCass said. "Our first priority is protecting the park's resources and visitors' safety." On Saturday, traffic was backed up for two miles on Highway 41 leading into the park, LaCass said. By 11 a.m. all parking areas were full and the three entrances, all on the park's western edge in the San Joaquin Valley, were closed.

'It doesn't ease up. They keep pushing the door. We had to post a police officer to hold them back."

The Khmer Rouge guerrillas boycotted the elections and threatened to kill voters because they say the Vietnam-backed government retains more power than a 1991 peace agreement allows. The group also claims Vietnamese troops are still in Cambodia, despite their official withdrawal in 1989.

At least a dozen U.N. peacekeepers were killed in Khmer Rouge attacks in the past several weeks.

Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has denied any wrongdoing and has called the investigation a fishing expedition.

Rostenkowski's father, Joseph, bought one of the two buildings in 1967 for $14,000, public records show. The congressman moved his district office into the building and used his federal expense account to pay rent, the Sun-Times reported.

After Joseph Rostenkowski's death, the congressman's two sisters took ownership of the building.

I.V. Lifestyle Frozen on Film

By Connie Stevens Staff Writer

Curious residents have the chance to grab a friend and revisit "A Day In the Life of Isla Vista, May 3, 1993," — a photography exhibit sponsored by the UCSB Art Studio Dept. The display of student

The display of student works, which captures in still life the various aspects of living in I.V., will run until June 30.

Those interested in seeing how others view the seaside community can visit the exhibit Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Isla Vista/ UCSB Community Services Center at 970 Embarcadero del Mar, Suite C.

The idea was the brainchild of Professor Richard Ross, who said he had previously shot his own Day in the Life of Hollywood. He introduced the idea to his students in an attempt "to help them out of their creative doldrums," he said.

Ross said that although he is there to lead his students, he encourages them to work independently on photography assignments.

"They do their own work and I don't interfere with them," he said. "I only entice them to try something new."

was exactly what the young artists did when they took to the streets of I.V., outfitted with cameras and loads of film, to find the basic reasons why living in Isla Vista is so unique.

"I just loaded up my camera with two different kinds of film and started walking," said film studies student Brent Boyd. "I don't know if I captured the total essence of I.V., but I was able to express what my perception of living in I.V. is," Boyd said. Boyd calls his portrayal of the crowded I.V. com-

Boyd calls his portrayal of the crowded I.V. community "Limits & Boundaries," and in one photo he shows the cramped street conditions with two cars tightly parked inches apart.

"It definitely paints an accurate picture of I.V. They're all different but all accurate," said junior Marianne Simon, who said she particularly appreciated Boyd's exhibit.

Another artist, Kerry Olin, chose to display the crowded and unsanitary I.V. in her five photos entitled, "I just want a clean place to sit." The photos feature items such as a bench, couch and stairway.

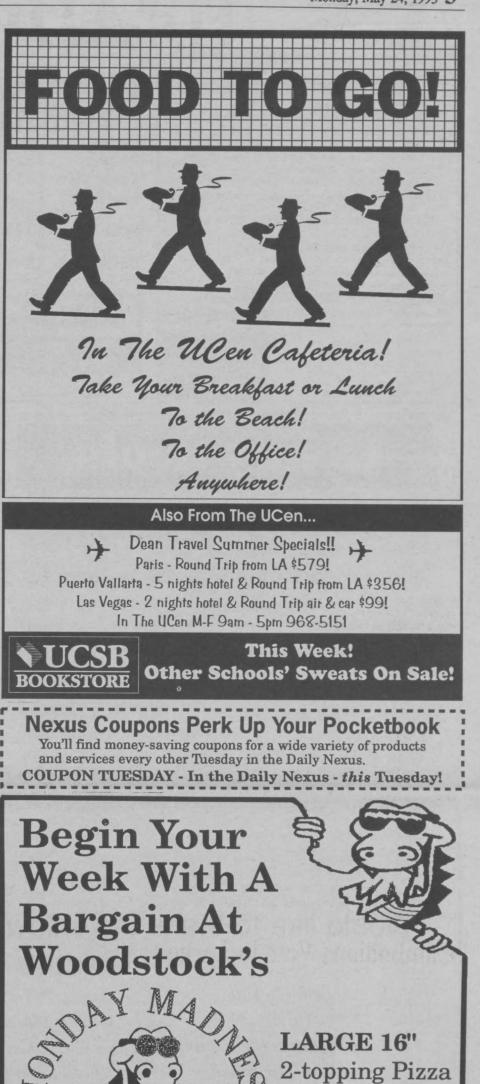

"I like Kerry Olin's text and it's true. ... I always want a clean place to sit," said senior Beth Glavas.

Ross said he was very pleased with the viewpoint of his students and the bulk of their material.

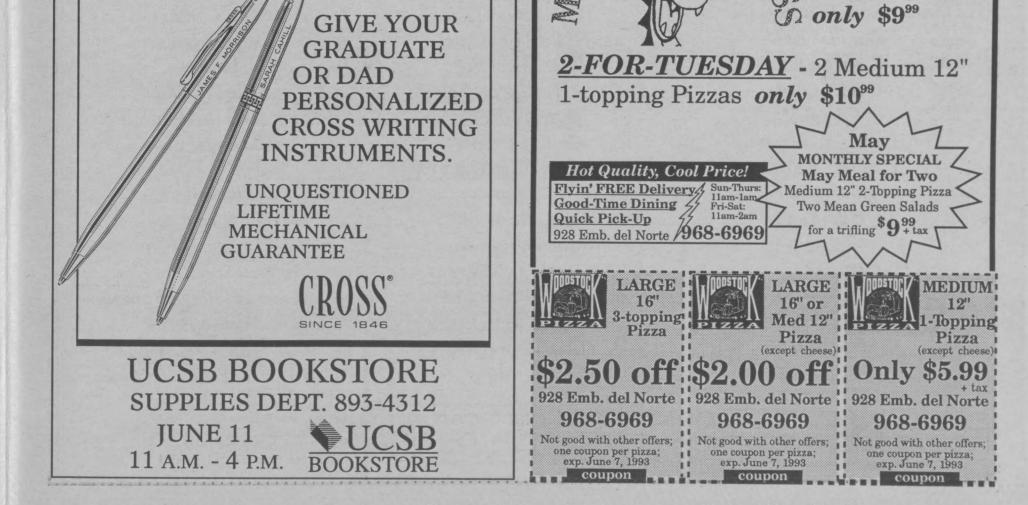

"I got a little bit more than I expected in some cases," he said. "It was more about being outside than inside. That was surprising."

I.V./UCSB Community Liaison Catherine Boyer said that the exhibit is worthwhile and beneficial to the community. "We provide the space for artistic display to bring people together and encourage discussion of ideas," she said.

The center serves to provide a place to work at affecting the quality of life in Isla Vista, according to Boyer. Center coordinators volunteered to house the exhibit "because this is a way to bring people to the center and exhibit ideas," she added.

Tenth Campus Wiped off the Map

"To admit the students without adequate faculty, staff or resources to provide them with a quality education would cheapen the degrees of all students," he said.

According to Vice President for Budget and University Relations William Baker, the price for a new campus with a 5,000 student capacity could reach $600 million, half of which would be provided through state funds, the other through private resources. Probable sites for the 10th campus

Probable sites for the 10th campus were reduced to three locations: one near Merced and two near Fresno. However, Peltason's announcement postpones a final decision indefinitely.

"The one thing I have to say to the people of the San Joaquin Valley is, 'Please don't spend any more money on this process until we can determine where the University is going," Baker said.

The University's current direction is being dictated by the $138 million budget cut proposed by Governor Pete Wilson in January and additional budget cuts being proposed by the state Assembly.

Assembly. "The Assembly is proposing to cut us by an additional amount of either $68 million or $225 million, depending on whether the temporary sales tax is extended," UC Provost and Senior Vice President Walter Massey said.

A $68 million cut would cause a further fee increase, a larger salary cut and more layoffs, Massey said. "To give you a sense of what $68 million means, if we took the entire cut in fees, we'd need about another $700 fee increase," he said.

Some University officials have expressed surprise that the UC would even consider another campus in a time when it does not have enough money to support programs at the existing campuses.

According to Baker, however, expenses for the site selection process have already reached $3.8 million in consulting fees, travel expenses for staff to the prospective sites and surveys done of those lands.

"Some have said that we should have stopped earlier," Peltason said. "In this regard, I must admit some responsibility."

Head in the Sand

Southwest Diversified, with the Help of Some Fijis, Has Shown Its Environmental Stupidity

Editorial

Beachcombers might believe that frolicking in the sand restores one's lost sense of innocence, but for members of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, the effect may be quite the opposite.

The fraternity, known as the Fijis, faces allegations from Associated Students Environmental Affairs Board that they participated in a deal with Southwest Diversified, a corporation owning the Ellwood Shores blufftop property west of Isla Vista. The deal was to give their support to the company's plans to build up to 161 homes on the environmentally sensitive land in exchange for five truckloads of sand for their backyard.

The Fijis did, in fact, receive five truckloads, 300 cubic feet, of beach sand from the Ellwood property. Eight members of the house testified before the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors in favor of the development proposal. Southwest Diversified Vice President Randy Fox acknowledged that he gave the frat the sand. "It's my sand, and I gave it to them," he said. The Fijis promised to give it back.

It doesn't take a conspiracy theorist of Oliver Stone's caliber to succumb to the urge to connect these dots together and come up with what looks like a cheap political payoff. Perhaps it's part of a Southwest Diversified project to make bits of the popular open-space property more accessible to the Isla Vista community, a kind of Ellwood for Everybody campaign. Maybe A.S. could similarly lobby for the housing project and get some eucalyptus trees for the new UCen, or another greek house could arrange to have a vernal pool T.G. next weekend and dress up like the monarch butterflies that use the land to gather and reproduce en masse. Actually, that sounds appropriate.

Diversified and the handful of Fijis who spoke on its behalf say there was, as President-turnedhonorary-Kuwaiti George Bush might say, "No quid pro quo. No [sand] for [testimony]." EAB doesn't seem to believe it, but the students said they spoke in support of the project because they really did think it was a good idea to build more than 100 new beachfront homes on undeveloped coastal land during a statewide recession that has sent the real estate market into free fall.

And even if the Fijis who spoke in favor of the development were sincere in their support for beachfront condos, they pissed their credibility away with the seeming sand-for-support swap. County supervisors who hear their pleas may be left thinking to themselves, "Do they mean it, or is that just the sand talking?"

Then again, maybe they won't. Third District Supervisor Willy Chamberlin has said that, despite the arguments of environmentalists who say that development would destroy a unique natural habitat, the owners of the land should be allowed to use it as they see fit. Why? Because regulation is bad. Baaaad. Bad.

This kind of reasoning doesn't wash in this case. Whether the company and the fraternity conspired is irrelevant to the total ignorance of environmental sensitivity both parties showed when they carted the sand away. The amount taken may not seem like much, but until an environmental impact report is done, any change in the ecosystem is made in rude ignorance of the consequences.

A sign above the desk in my office reads as follows: "Crises place a premium on quick, bold and decisive actions; the side that can act quickly and boldly has a huge comparative advantage in crisis management." This sign is a reminder for me not to procrastinate; my life experience has been such that if I make the wrong decision — but it is made early enough — I might have time to reverse it and, ultimately, the outcome of the crisis. And more importantly, if I don't make any decision at all, it will be made for me by others or by circumstances beyond my control.

So quickly now and boldly to the point: Who the hell decided faculty and staff should have to take a 5% across-the-board pay cut, and who decided students should have to take increases in their fees? And, more importantly, why? I certainly don't remember voting on this issue!

I have worked on this campus for more than 10 years and represented staff groups and unions in collective bargaining. Now I am a manager, but I was once a student and finally a graduate of UCSB. I have many friends among the faculty, and because I was an undergraduate here, I can't help admiring them greatly.

It's pretty safe to say that all of my friends in these different groups are pissed off about the across-the-board pay cuts and student fee increases. So much so, in fact, I'm not hearing much informative discussion of what the alternatives would be: huge layoffs of staff, loss of entire departments and faculty, and it might then take students 10 years (instead of the current five) to finally get enough units to get out of this place and get a life.

Yes, my fellow staff members (and I don't care how mean and tough your particular un-ion and union negotiators are), you will take a 5% pay cut. You will take it because the faculty agreed to take it and they have much more power than you do. And if you are as smart as I think you are, you will take it

Editor, Daily Nexus: OK guys, time to get a grip: We're in what's o "budget crisis." This means that there's not enough to keep everything around here as nice and cushy as to be. The budget ax has to fall somewhere, and its me that the Physical Activities Dept. is the least l place to let it drop.

Let's say you're the budget administrator and you a shortfall. Logically, you're going to have to mak spending cuts. You try to decrease funding to the not-so-well-off Environmental Studies Progra everyone complains. OK, you can't do that. Try t professor out of the Black Studies Dept. and ev complains. OK, you can't do that either. It's con reasonable that no one wants cuts to their major, think, "Well, how about trimming the leisure sta maybe ... Physical Activities."

quickly and get the 5% placed in your retire-ment accounts to collect interest.

Students, please take this to the bank — your fees will continue to increase until you take this lesson finally to heart and change a broader society that places too little value on higher education, or any education for that matter. And until you change those that would, for the difference of a few pennies in sales tax, send you off to work at McDonald's.

In the old days, they used to say that the sins of the fathers were visited upon the sons. But now fathers and mothers live a long time and they will live long enough in this state to see the stupidity of their failure to continue to invest in the commonwealth, invest in the future.

Faculty, yes, you deserve the power for the same reasons that Louis B. Mayer once spoke so highly of his star-studded movie studio — "The inventory is what goes home at night." You are the wealth of the university and the nation. And if they don't pay you enough money to make you happy, other universities (some of them in foreign countries) will snatch you away as quickly as the Americans and the Russians snatched up German scien-tists at the end of the World War II (and wealth and power thereby). The French, ap-parently, were too worried about what hap-pened to all of the paintings. Intellectual capital — then, now and al-ways, is the true wealth of nations. Only now it will be much harder to keep it from moving quickly from one country to the next and to the highest bidder.

The time that was bought with faculty and staff pay cuts, student fee increases and the careers of a few bold and decisive administra-tors will only hold the university together for a few more hours, will keep us together in this community only briefly. What are we going to do when this time runs out? Fall back into our various constituencies and power groups? Students, faculty, administrative staff, we catch our collective breaths, and then go again at each others throats in end-less internecine warfare? Until we discover that we all need each other to succeed, yes.

Painful choices — downsizing, specializa-tion, elimination of entire departments, contracting out staff services, flagship universi-ties, loss of commitment to the dream of affordable higher education for all — big broad, generalizations until all of us students, faculty and staff are flipping hamburgers at McDonalds, until we have become a paradigm for an American society. In the Purchasing Dept. here on campus, as I was told the story, a decision had to be made in the last budget crisis on how to handle a 10% budget reduction. There were 10 employees (for purposes of illustration) and nowhere else to cut so one of the 10 em-ployees had to lose their job. The problem was that all of them had worked together for a long time — they knew each other's child-ren and grandchildren. There was already much more work than the group could com-plete and everyone was needed. In a group discussion, it was decided that each should take some time off without pay so that the 10th person would not have to lose employment. When I first heard this story, I thought how noble it was of this group for each to give a little from his own pocket to save another person's job. Somebody, somewhere in this UC system

just made this same decision for all of us with 5% across-the-board faculty and staff pay cuts and student fee increases. Because if we all had to vote, we would probably have voted each other right out the door. While we are all looking around, pissed off and won-dering who to blame this on, we might recall a few words spoken during a similar moment of crisis in another great institution - Hang together or hang separately. Then, once again, as special interest groups we are a paradigm for American society.

Finally, one last story, a friend of mine -a physicist who owns a local electronics firm was confronted with some painful choices when he lost half of his business volume as the computer industry collapsed a few years back. He decided that since he made the most money and was the most able, he would take a large pay cut. As the financial picture worsened he took a much smaller pay cut from his engineering staff, then a cut smaller still from the line workers and, lastly, the smallest cut from those least able to afford it — office staff and custodians.

When things got worse still, reductions in time were taken across the board, but layoffs were completely avoided. Many employees came to work even when they were not being paid. Machinery was repaired that was neglected when everyone was busy. The office was reorganized and made more efficient, and additional research and development was completed. In short, everyone kept busy and morale stayed high because there were no layoffs. When the computer industry finally recovered, much of the competition had gone out of business, but my friend's firm was left completely intact and a number of improvements were made during slow times to increase productivity. They now dominate their market niche with a five-year backlog of work.

First to be restored to full pay were office staff and custodians, and then the line workers, next the engineering staff and finally the CEO, who also profited from owning a financially sound business.

Perhaps there is a lesson for us all in across-the-board pay cuts and student fee in-creases: Team UC, publicly owned and oper-ated, open and accessible to all. The greatest university in the world by any set of standards and a final paradigm for American society? We all need each other to succeed! You're Graduating?

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am a graduating senior who is concerned with the welfare of my fellow greeks and, to a greater extent, Rayne Galbraith's so-called questions (Daily Nexus, "Those Ter-rible TGs," May 18) that greeks and nongreeks alike should be asking. First I would like to address the lack of validity and basis of your opinions. Your enure reotypes, homosexuality, financial responsibility and racism. You also claim that these aspects are "problematic" within our T.G.s, when in fact you are not raising questions but pointing fingers, making accusations and stereotyping our greek system. I quote you: "However, in addition to wasting time and money on these decadent, elitist parties, there are other aspects of the T.G. that are problematic." The four points you make here are clearly biased and unresearched. For example, do you even realize the benefits of group cooperation and the euphoric feeling of experiencing a decadent activity? Nevertheless, who made you a financial consultant by claiming these parties are a waste of money? Consequently, labeling T.G.s as an elitist activity is stereotyp-ing greek letter societies as a whole. In all actuality, our society is open to all members of different temperaments, talents, convictions and most of all, colors. One problem you state is that, and I quote, "T.G.s are theme-based on homophobism, sexism or racism." These statements are ill-based and rash on the notion of some article you read that reflected a greek system one thousand miles away. Your idea that the "Jungle Theme' automati-cally equates jungles with Africans" is ridiculous. Furthermore, associating homosexuals with a cross-dressing theme undermines and misconstrues their identity as homosexuals. You're not only stereotyping groups but adopting ill-founded racial statements to your point of view In all respect to the First Amendment, everyone has a right to free speech. However, I quote you, "This is harmful in that stereotypes are obviously reinforced and new ones are created." You ask, what does a T.G. represent? You ask, what does it mean to participate in a T.G.? Thus, "Doing major construction weeks ahead of time seems ridiculous." Listen up! Our greek system doesn't need to be examined by assuming a narrow, stereotypical, unthoroughly researched opinion.

P.A. Breakdown

Editor, Daily Nexus: I am writing in response to the (indecent) proposal to eliminate the Physical Activities Dept. As is usually the case in dealing with the administration, the facts are un-clear, skewed and biased at best. I will attempt to find the facts and the logic on which this proposal was built.

To the best of my understanding, the state allots the P.A. Dept. $1.25 million based on the number of classes taught and the facilities maintained. However, the P.A. Dept. is one of the few efficient departments remaining on campus. It utilizes only $600,000, funnelling the remaining $625,000 back into the Letters and Science budget to be reallocated for use in other departments. The proposal is to eliminate this department — which averages 13,343 students a year and close to 350 classes — in order to spend this additional $600,000 on "more essential classes."

Llad Phillips, provost of Letters and Science and the man who proposed this brilliant plan, failed to mention that in order to maintain funding from the state, there must be classes taught in the facilities. In the absence of P.A., it is difficult to imagine the 350 classes that would be taught in the drained campus pool. Also, would chemistry lab be moved to Rob Gym, and who could fill the T-Dome besides the Gauchos (who would also be affected by these cuts)

Phillips has also failed to discuss the full ramifications of these cuts: the P.A. Dept. maintains all the athletic facilities on campus. Eliminating the department would not only limit our option to take P.A. classes, it would severely limit our access to facilities such as the weight room, play-ing fields and gyms. Furthermore, most of the intercollegiate coaches receive half their salary from teaching P.A. classes. Some of UCSB's best coaches would be forced to leave UCSB in search of a reasonable salary. Thus, this is an indecent proposal because: 1) it limits our options in recreation; 2) it is based on faulty logic (teaching O-Chem in Rob Gym); 3) it's simply unfair to make a unilateral decision without considering what the students want.

In the end, this is a university for the students; it should be the job of the administration to listen to the students. If the administration does not listen, it's the job of the students to make themselves heard.

Continued from p.1 in 1969. A program was established at UCLA in 1973 and flourished until 1987. But by 1990, the program's budget faltered and administrators opted to suspend admissions to the major after a faculty legislative body recommended disestablishing the program.

Another department proposal was released in 1992, and Chancellor Young opted not to reestablish the program in late April this year.

The memory of the late human rights advocate Cesar Chavez was on the minds of many, with signs displaying the United Farm Workers' black eagle logo and speakers remind-ing the audience of his contributions.

State Senator Art Torres (D-Los Angeles) mentioned the path paved by Chavez and was choked with emotion while audience members held up fists to commemorate the Chicano movement.

Torres told the crowd he is taking action to show UC administrators that student demands must be met.

"Yesterday I went to the Board of Regents in San Francisco to tell them that UCLA students are not alone," Torres said. "And

State Assemblyman Tom Hayden (D-Santa Monica), longtime chair of California's Assembly higher education committee, also voiced his support for student activism. I particularly want to thank those of you who are willing to be arrested for your beliefs," he said. "There will be some who say that you are trying to take something. I'm here to say that you have something to give. What you are doing is trying to uncover an identity of California," Hayden said. Several faculty mem-bers were on hand to show their support. They did not take the stage, however, until later in the rally, after many students had complained of faculty absence.

"We are here today to support the establishment of a Chicana and Chicano studies department, now!" said one faculty member who was sandwiched between 10 other professors on the stage. History Professor War-ren Gomez Quinones said a Chicano studies department is crucial.

"A department provides for permanent funding, for continuous classes, so that students can make progress toward a degree," he

Jorge Mancillas, a professor at UCLA's school of medicine, commended the students on the rally. "This rally is a sign that there's a movement on the rise and the number participating is getting higher. There are students of all colors and backgrounds here," he said.

Mancillas, who was a member of several ad hoc committees set up to examine the best structure of a Chicano studies department, said the administration had turned down an academic proposal for the program drafted by one advisory committee.

"The students have a right to get an education that's relevant and for students and faculty to determine what classes they want to take," he said. "I

racism." "[Chicano Studies] isn't given the same recognition as a regular department," said UCSB senior anthropology major Marco Polo, who traveled to UCLA to attend the rally.

The lack of a department means that Chicano studies classes are currently interdepartmental. and that causes problems, one student said.
