

Water Board Incumbents Win; A, B Defeated

Wachter, Hoskinson, Wilson On IVCC; Prop D Carries

By Nancy Sullivan

After 45 precincts out of 56 had been counted, Jose Martinez, a Water board incumbent led the hotly contested contest for the three Board positions with 6,950 votes. Another Water Board incumbent, Elana Sherman had a close second with 6,941 votes, and appointed incumbent Al Wyner was placing third with 6,903 votes. Challenger Donald Weaver followed with 6,128. Al Hove, also a challenger, collected 5,785 votes. Al Paul who was running on the Weaver and Hove slate was in sixth position with 5,498 votes.

Incumbents Sherman, Wyner and Martínez support the controlled development of the Goleta Valley and propose to do this by limiting the water supply after creating enough for present Goleta residents. All three incumbents supported Proposition A, calling for additional water wells which was defeated soundly in the election. They stress the importance of letting the residents of Goleta determine the growth of their community and not the developers. The incumbents claim to have no "special interests" at stake in any Water Board decisions as, is claimed their opponents

Weaver, Hove, and Paul have.

PROPOSITIONS

As of midnight last night, Propositions A and B had failed miserably. Proposition A received only 2,703 yes votes and 8,651 against the measure. If passed Proposition A would have minimized the 1972 water hookup moratorium by creating additional water wells. Proposition B was proposing the use of waste water to be used for irrigation purposes. The measure was crushed with 3,197 yes votes and 8,122 against. The Propositions require a two-thirds majority to be passed.

Proposition D received a yes majority with 1,905 votes and 918 votes against, getting the two-thirds majority to pass. This measure would provide the I.V. Park and Recreation District with funds to purchase up to one-third of the vacant land in I.V. for community use.

IVCC REPS

Three of the positions open in IVCC were for representative-at-large. Cindy Wachter, David Hoskinson, and Walt Wilson soundly defeated Richard Zimmerman and Kelly Pritchard with Wachter collecting the most votes at 1,156. Hoskinson was next with 906 votes and Wilson followed with 853 votes. Zimmerman and Pritchard were defeated with 670 and 473 votes respectively.

Martha Britt captured the District 1 position with 186 votes. There was no challenger. Districts 2,3,4, and 6 also had only one candidate running. Mark Fontana got 93 votes for the District 2

Leash Law Enforcement in I.V. Discussed by Council

By Yvonne Behrens

Leash law enforcement in Isla Vista and the state of the Campaign for Cityhood were the major topics covered at Monday night's IVCC meeting.

David Hoskinson, Animal Control officer in I.V. informed the council that enforcement of the county leash law would start Monday, November 17. "It shall be unlawful for any person owning or having custody and control of any animal to fail to keep such animal to fail to keep such animal under restraint," explained Hoskinson.

Hoskinson will hold a forum this Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Planning Office, 966 Embarcadero del Mar, to discuss the pros and cons of the leash law in I.V. Presently, the leash law is being enforced in the R-1 and I.V. school areas.

200 POSTCARDS

Nadja Maril, speaking for the Media Committee of the Campaign for Cityhood said that approximately 200 postcards have been sent to LAFCO (Local Agency Formation Commission) Chairman J. Tim

Terry. The intent of the postcard campaign is to convince LAFCO to hold the hearings on cityhood in I.V. rather than in Santa Barbara. December 4 is the scheduled date for the hearings.

Carmen Lodise announced that a presentation has been prepared by the Cityhood External Committee for the UC Regents meeting at Irvine on November 20 and 21. Lodise also informed the Council that there is a meeting with Goleta residents regarding incorporation of I.V. on November 25.

On November 11 and 12, according to the Cityhood Internal Committee co-ordinator, Associated Students will hold a plebiscite to determine students' views on incorporation. Forums will be held on November 13 and 14, where issues of particular concern to resident owners and local merchants will be presented. The internal committee will also meet with sororities and fraternities this week and next.

Volunteers will be going door-to-door in the R-1 district this weekend with a survey on incorporation.

Another issue brought before Council at Monday night's meeting was Police Commission Representative Gordon Zenk's plan to hold an informational meeting on crime in I.V.

Zenk explained that criminal analyst Richard Fuller will present an analysis of the "crime wave" in I.V. based on a crime statistic system that has been in effect since January 1975.

Fuller's presentation will be followed by a panel discussion between Sheriff Carpenter, Campus Police Chief Bowles and the Foot Patrol. A question and answer period between the panel and the audience will be held.

Devereux Reserve Suffers From Trespassers

By Bob McDonald

One of UCSB's little known assets is Devereux, an area one mile west of I.V. near Coal Oil Point. The point is a popular surfing beach, but the natural beauty of the rest of the area is recognized only by people willing to walk.

Besides a school for the mentally retarded and riding stables, there is also a biological reserve established by the University of California. Due to the number of people that enter the reserve, which is closed to the public, its ecological balance is being upset.

Devereux has a relaxing atmosphere. Firepits on the beach are available for picnics and parties. Farther inland, a stage nestled among a grove of trees can be used for parties with live bands. The area is romantic and quiet, offering solitude to those who want to enjoy the plant and animal life.

This area can be enjoyed without entering the reserve, which contains three hundred yards of coast and extends inland. It is bounded on the coast by the mouth of the slough on the west side of the beach known as "Sands," and the Exxon property. The reserve is the last stable area on the south coast where native plants and animals can be left undisturbed.

This area is essential in determining man's impact on the California coast, according to Peter Ipsworth, Devereux caretaker. Ducks land to rest and feed during their migration. Animals breed in the slough, an area where plant life thrives in the water collected from storms. The area is marked with warning signs, and a cable fence locates the boundary of Exxon property.

Ipsworth is concerned with the area's deterioration, and places the blame on trespassing people and animals. Studies by graduate students have been disrupted by equipment thefts. A fire was started by what Ipsworth believes was a carelessly thrown cigarette butt. Dogs run wild in the reserve, disturbing animals feeding or mating.

Sand dunes on the beach are being flattened by trespassers, causing sand to shift into the reserve. This sand will eventually cover important areas and displace native plants, Ipsworth said.

DUNES

Plants that depend upon the dunes for support are being destroyed. Winter storms tear up the plants and cause the plant community to recede from the shore. Spring allows new plants to grow and recover lost territory, but the fragile seedlings are stepped on during the summer, breaking the cycle of replenishment. Ipsworth says the plants have been pushed back over a thirty-yard area since summer began.

If Ipsworth sees people in the reserve, he will warn them of the damage that occurs, he noted. He is reluctant to call the police, but will do so in order to protect the reserve. Ipsworth regrets that police summoned into the area will be compelled to enforce the anti-nudity ordinance, the beach being a popular place for sunbathing. He suggests that people use the Exxon land, which is open to the public, rather than the area around the reserve, since the two areas are similar.

Ipsworth sees the possibility of nature trails being constructed in the area if it is allowed to return to a more undisturbed state. Funds for this are donated to and allocated by the University

Craft Classes and Tool Rentals Available at I.V. Center

By Cindy Lasher

The Isla Vista Recreation and Crafts Center, 961 Embarcadero Del Mar, offers craft classes and equipment rentals at minimal costs.

Craft classes at the center are below those of the UCSB Recreation Department. For example, pottery classes at the Crafts Center cost between $12 and $15. The Recreation Department charges $23 (They supply clay, unlike the Crafts Center).

Some of the classes being offered this Fall include beer making, carpentry, leather crafts, weaving, and ceramics. The classes are chosen in hopes of reflecting community interest. Assistant Manager of the Isla Vista District of Parks and Recreation Clare LaGuardia suggested that, "If there is anyone in the community who would like to teach a particular craft, the Center is open to promoting the class. If there is enough interest, the class can continue."

The center is open Tuesday-Friday, 9-4 and weekends 10-4. Back in 1970, the building was Danny's Encc Service Station, then stood vacant for three years.

Pre-Professional Recruitment Sponsored by Campus Groups

By Clarence Underwood

Last week the UCen Program Lounge was the setting for a student educational foray. The nature of this event was the new Pre-Professional Recruitment Day sponsored by Letters and Sciences, Student Special Services, the Educational Opportunities Programs and the Student Placement Center.

Pre-Professional Recruitment Day was the first event of its kind at UCSB. The program is geared to give students information about certain grad programs. Linda Coleman, of the Student Placement Center, initiated the program. Coleman, a career counselor at the placement office, indicated that she saw a need for this type of program due to the present economic situation of the country. She stated, "Because of the dwindling job opportunities available to students graduating with, or already in possession of, a Bachelor's degree, many more students will be looking for grad programs to participate in."

LITERATURE, APPLICATIONS

The project was structured on the order of a fair where students could peruse the literature available from the various schools in attendance. Most of the information was on housing, financial aid and admission criteria. Representatives were available to answer questions and disseminate applications to students who showed an interest in applying for their programs.

According to Coleman and a number of the representatives, the program was a success. Most of the students questioned about the program think it's a good way to become acquainted with a particular grad program without the usual spending for mail communications. Coleman stated, "The crucial factor in this type of program isn't necessarily the pennies saved but rather, the time the students were saving in gathering information on prospective graduate schools."

The program will not be held again this academic year. Coleman noted the time needed to coordinate such an effort and the problem of getting a sufficient number of schools to attend at any one time. "We invited forty-five school representatives to participate in this year's program, and about 85 percent of those came this time."

Next year Coleman hopes to invite twice that number with 100 percent attendance.

Craft Center

Recreation manager, "The creation of the Crafts Center was a step in the direction of a more auto-free community. This gas station would have been rented as a gas station. Now it is used to help Isla Vista be a more self-sufficient community by providing tools, equipment, and instruction. It also helps beautify the downtown area."

Ray explained that besides being a place for community members to go for tools, building supplies, sports equipment, crafts, instruction and free advice, the Center is used for storage of all the Park District's supplies and maintenance equipment.

"We're not profit oriented — we're people oriented," Pimentel stressed. Tools can be used at the Center for free, or rented for between 25 and 50 cents a day.

LaGuardia requested that, "any recyclable materials that can be used for crafts, etc., will be gratefully accepted by Crafts Center."

Self-Perpetuated Politics

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I have been attending UCSB for approximately one half a quarter, and in that time I have received my orientation to school politics through the Daily Nexus. It seems amazing to me that such a small group of people in such a small corner of the world can take themselves so very seriously. The administration and student government have been so busy backbiting, name calling, and ego tripping that they have lost all touch with the student body at large.

The Thursday, October 30th edition of the Daily Nexus contained an article dealing with the Ed Mackie case. If you can get through the maze of administrators, counselors, secretaries to chancellors, admirals, and Grand Imperial Wizards; if you can figure out who said what to who; if you can put up with Mackie saying it's all political and never once denying the charges; if you can get through all of this you probably won't find anything left. Mackie says the charges are "laughable," but if I were him I wouldn't give people any ideas because I know who I'm laughing at. And to top this all off, at the end of the article some enlightened soul tells us that this "skimming off the top goes on all the time." Naturally.

Next we have a five month old matter of A.S. election illegalities. If indeed they did exist, something should have been done about them at the time. But to drag a matter of a few dollars out for five months seems to be blowing things somewhat out of proportion. Now that everyone has accused everyone else and referred to them with all the colorful phrases they could possibly learn in the last book they've read, I honestly believe that no one reads these articles anymore.

Then of course the University has terminated its relationship with people who have been quite well received and recommended by their students and peers.

My only comforting thought through all of this is that the administration will be wallowing in its triviality for the rest of its natural days while I drive on down 101 and leave this place behind the black exhaust of my Greyhound. The funny thing about all of this is that what I have said is no news to anyone and it will go on being ignored. I hope the administration and some of our A.S. officials never leave here, for they have created a world for themselves in which they can pretend to be important, relevant, and concerned with others besides themselves.

Pilgrimage
Plagiarism

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I am writing in reference to an article in the October 29, 1975 issue of the Daily Nexus entitled "Butterflies Clustering Here For The Winter," by David Hodges. I further refer to "Hooptedoodle (2), or The Pacific Grove Butterfly Festival" (Chapter 38, paragraph 4, Sweet Thursday, by John Steinbeck, Viking Press, June 1954).

Mr. Hodges writes in paragraph 4 of his article: "Every year the butterflies return to the same place. In Pacific Grove, California they make a majestic pilgrimage to a certain grove of pine trees on the tip of Monterey Bay. In their millions they land on several pine trees—always the same trees."

Mr. Steinbeck wrote: "On a certain day in the shouting springtime great clouds of orange Monarch butterflies...sail high in the air on a majestic pilgrimage across Monterey Bay and land in the outskirts of Pacific Grove in the pine woods...In their millions they land on several pine trees—always the same trees."

Have you noticed the striking similarity between the prose of Hodges and Steinbeck? I personally find it amazing that two people, some twenty-one years apart, could be so inspired by Monarch butterflies that they use identical words and phrases to describe their migratory habits.

Mr. Hodges writes further in paragraph 5: "The butterflies suck the thick sap that oozes from the branches and get cockeyed. After drinking their fill they fall drunken to the ground, where they lie like an orange carpet, waving their inebriate legs in the air and shouting butterfly drinking songs. After a week of degradation they fly away, though not in clouds, as they face Monday morning singly or in pairs."

Continuing in the paragraph cited above, Mr. Steinbeck writes: "There they suck the thick, resinous juice which oozes from the twigs, and they get cockeyed.

The first comers suck their fill and then fall drunken to the ground, where they lie like a golden carpet, waving their inebriate legs in the air and giving off butterfly shouts of celebration...After about a week of binge the butterflies sober up and fly away, but not in clouds: they face their Monday morning singly or in pairs."

To be quite blunt, I am accusing Mr. David Hodges of plagiarism, whether by willful or negligent act.

Mr. Steinbeck, who, incidentally, died in 1969, possibly would not have minded Mr. Hodges using material from Sweet Thursday. In point of fact, had Mr. Hodges given Mr. Steinbeck due credit, this letter would not have been written. Since this was not the case, I feel Mr. Hodges owes the memory of John Steinbeck an apology—an apology which should be extended to readers of Steinbeck's works and to readers of the Daily Nexus.

Editor's note: It was a heinous error to neglect to attribute some material in my butterfly story to the proper source. I apologize to Steinbeck fanciers and will be more careful of plagiarism in the future.

Busing: Moving Toward Equalization

By Ronald Linton and Clarence Underwood

Due to the disparity between the education obtained by white children and that given to minority children, the social-economic development of these groups respectively has been staggered.

Prior to the 1954 Supreme Court decision making it the right of each U.S. born citizen to the finest public education available, Americans were divided by race and ethnicity. Those two factors predetermined the quality of education that millions of Americans have received, and although their facilities were deemed to be separate but equal, the quality of education was shown to be separate and unequal in a court of law.

Since 1954 the opportunities afforded minority youth bused to better equipped educational institutions has been evidenced by increased numbers of minority students in attendance at institutions of higher learning. At a critical time (now) in the social-cultural assimilation of minority peoples into the mainstream of American society, the medium of equalization is being questioned. Is busing really so bad?

With the eminent energy crisis emerging on the horizon, people are being urged to make better use of the local public transportation systems available to them. More and more advertisements are appearing in our papers and on television encouraging people to take the bus. Somehow, with this theme predominating within our society the current conflict concerning busing for integrative purposes seems out of place.

We are constantly exposed to conservative racist public officials who decry the busing concept. These officials express concern for the poor minority children being bused. They seem to have neglected white children for the past thirty years, however. We might be wrong! Aren't most white kids bused to their local schools in the suburbs? And what about all those kids in rural communities; do they fly to school?

Let's face it, the economy is bad and those in power must lay the blame somewhere. Perhaps it's coincidental, but haven't we been hearing a lot about Minority Problems recently? It would seem that whenever someone has to lose something, it's always those who haven't got much to start with. This time it is again the children of racial minority groups across the nation who are being continually forced to accept improperly staffed, under equipped, poverty ridden urban educational facilities when they can very well attend among the finest in the land. Their parents pay the same taxes as do we all.

As we stated earlier, prior to 1954, educational facilities were separate and unequal. Today the same conditions exist across the land. Until we, as a society, are willing to insure that each instructor has obtained an equal level of competency, each school has equally modern facilities, and each student is guaranteed an equal opportunity to achieve his or her goals, then we as parents and potential parents are obligated to use busing as an equalizing factor.

CSO's: A Need
Existed

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Anyone who can expand a debate on CSO's and bicycle safety into a tirade covering administration enrollment policies, police intervention into "social problems," and the architecture of the Learning Resources Building cannot be all bad. So I will respond, but only to that in Scott Wexler's letter (Oct. 30) which is directly applicable to the issue.

I am not a demographer, and I will not debate whether there are "too many" students. The issue is that there are accidents occurring, some serious. Wexler may think he does not need CSO's, but not heeding their advice makes as much sense as not using seat belts that are provided in one's vehicle.

No one is punishing all bike-riders and pedestrians on this campus; rather, the advice concerning safety and the warning of possible citations are directed at the careless or reckless minority. If the shoe doesn't fit you, Mr. Wexler....

No one claims that issuing citations will "halt accidents." What is hoped is that citations (which would be issued by police officers, by the way, not CSO's) will help cut down on the frequency and severity of accidents. Wexler's contention

Cancelled by Darkness

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I wish to draw attention to the sudden and arbitrary cancellation of the evening lap-swimming period (5:00-6:00 p.m.) in the Campus Pool.

For many faculty, staff and student members of the campus community the lap-swimming recreational activity is their preferred activity for physical exercise and therapy. In many cases the lunch-hour period is the only opportunity. For others the provision of an evening period meant that an alternative existed when necessary and unavoidable duties or responsibilities interfered with their regular schedule. In these cases I am referring solely to the regular, serious and prolonged users of this recreational facility-from whichever section of the community they come.

My personal contact with the use of the pool extends back to 1966. In the period I have used the pool, the present regular numbers are the highest I have encountered in comparison to other U.C. campuses. This is particularly true of the period since the recent Summer Session at the noon hour. This the evening period can be regarded as functioning as an alternative, to avoid the uncomfortable density of occupancy that has accumulated. The pool it seems has a fairly well established clientele, for whom a flexibility to minimize overcrowding and maximize individual recreational enjoyment has been suddenly withdrawn.

The note attached to the access gate in the fence stated that evening lap-swimming from Monday October 27 had been cancelled due to 'darkness'. Must this activity be at the mercy of a predictable and inevitable consequence of switching from

by Garry Trudeau

Daylight-Saving to Standard Pacific Coast Time? There are adequate artificial illumination facilities installed at the pool, and presumably the services of a life-guard had been budgeted for prior to the change of time.

We are informed that there is an unexpectedly higher enrollment of students in the present quarter than had been predicted, so presumably there is more in the Recreational Activities kitty than was expected. Are we to assume that no funds can be found from any source at all to pay the electricity bill for one hour per evening, five days a week (when not subject to pre-emption by team activities or other priority demands) for illumination of the Campus Pool?

The irony of my own situation is that I agreed last week to accept a teaching period for Winter Quarter during the noon-hour twice a week, thinking that in order to obtain the classroom facilities I judge necessary to be most effective for students in my courses, I would forego my regular lunch-period lap-swim (and probably some of my students too) in the knowledge that there was an alternative available to us all; the more so as the present use is higher than it has ever been at mid-day.

I would ask you to seriously re-consider this cancellation.

CSO Need...

that the highway patrol's issuing of citations does not stop accidents from happening is totally absurd. How many more accidents would there be without such enforcement? The lower rate of accidents that has accompanied enforcement of the reduced maximum speed limit is a case in point. If I may use an analogy, it may be difficult to prove a link between preventative medicine and subsequent good health, but that is no reason to dismiss the effort.

CSO'S were created because a need existed, and not vice-versa, as Wexler suggests. As I pointed out before, CSO's are involved in many more areas of service than bike safety. As I hinted to Mr. Haggerty, I'm sure the CSO's bicycle safety program would welcome the suggestions of any concerned individuals who have something constructive to say.

Football and UCSB's Sad, Sad Relationship

By Andy Furillo

College Football and the Major American University.

It's a relationship as natural as husband and wife, night and day, or maybe even yin and yang. You just can't have one without the other. Not so, however, with the University of California at Santa Barbara.

As most UCSB students are probably aware of by now, this university does not have a football program, which more than likely explains why there aren't any raccoon coats, pep rallies or goldfish swallows to be found in Isla Vista.

To some people in the allegedly real world, the college atmosphere isn't quite the same without a football team hanging around. Drastic measures have reportedly been taken by a few in order to alleviate the matter.

Surely, most everybody is aware of Prof. Quincy A. Wagstaff's remark in the Marx Bros. classic "Horse Feathers," when he was told by his son that Huxley College would be unable to finance both a football team and the college.

"OK," said Wagstaff (a.k.a. Groucho Marx), "we'll start tearing down the college in the morning."

Only Groucho, however, would be able to get away with such a reconciliation. Others were forced into a reaction diametrically opposed to Wagstaff's when it was learned that things weren't laying right for the football program. Included in this group would be the administrators of UCSB, who were forced to throw football away in December of 1972 due to the football program's financial instability.

Dr. Al Negratti, currently the athletic director of UCSB, wasn't in the neighborhood when football got the axe. Nevertheless, Negratti is still able to offer an explanation or two on why football is non-existent here and what its chances are in the future for reincarnation.

"There was a pure and simple reason on why football was dropped," Negratti related recently. "Student apathy. No interest. It was an economic drain. There was no community support."

Apparently, football just wasn't very popular here. People took to football as if it were the Black Plague.

And it's chances for the future?

"Well, I've been here for three years," said Negratti, "and I haven't had 10 students stop by and ask, 'Hey, when are we going to have a football team?'"

An extremely unofficial, unscientific poll was taken recently in the UCen to see what student attitudes were in relation to football programs, and most of the answers tended to bare Negratti out.

There were, however, those who expressed a desire to see football initiated again at UCSB.

"Only if they'd rank in the top five," said Jim Clendenon, a political science major who is also reported to be a senior. Clendenon, however, did offer further analyses to the beneficial aspects of having a football team. "I miss the frenzied activity which usually follows the outlet of adrenalin after a football game," Clendenon continued,

"which usually culminates in post game festivities involving emotionally-drained, but exhilarated females."

Clendenon's associate, a senior sociology major named Rick Blocker, agreed wholeheartedly, and then offered the following:

"I can only add that cheerleading has been a legitimate way to trim down the pudge factor on university campuses. If those waist lines decrease, I'm in favor of the whole program."

Clendenon and Blocker, however, were in the vast minority when it came to student attitudes and football. Of all the students interviewed, only 37.5 percent were in favor of a reinstatement of blocking, tackling, clipping and holding.

Blake Millikin, a senior psychology major, represented the majority opinion.

"I think it's kind of nice not having a football program," Millikin philosophized. "It kind of adds to the character of the school. When a school is football oriented, such as UCLA or USC, then a lot of things that should otherwise take precedent don't."

Millikin was referring to activities such as volleyball, water polo and the strong intramural activity on campus.

Intramurals, it seems, have taken up the slack for the lack of pigskin.

"I don't think it would be fair to say that the other sports, such as intramural sports, have come

Fresno St. Will Host Gauchos In Cross Country Dual Finale

By Richard Elbaum

UCSB will climax its 1975 dual meet season this Saturday when the Gauchos travel to Fresno to take on powerful Fresno State.

The Gauchos will go into the meet with dual victories over Westmont and the Santa Barbara Athletic Association, plus tournament victories over Cal Berkeley in the All California meet and Nevada (Las Vegas) and Cal Poly Pomona in the USTFF meet held recently in Long Beach.

Coach Brook Thomas feels that the Gauchos will need outstanding performances from all runners if they are to win "one of the biggest" meets of the year.

Thomas' top runners include Scott Schweitzer, Tom Edwards, Dave Boyette and Dan Wojcik.

Schweitzer is the number one man, as he set a school course record in the first meet of the season against Westmont with a time of 24:21.8 for the 4.9 mile track.

Boyette, Wojcik and Edwards follow Schweitzer with respective best times of 25:08, 25:22 and 25:23.

Fresno State is a formidable opponent, however. Leading Fresno's runners will be Richard Aguirre, a freshman who attended Santa Barbara High School last year and defeated the UCSB varsity as a prepster. Aguirre should be especially tough on Fresno's demanding four mile course.

While Coach Thomas is expecting good performances from Schweitzer, Edwards, Boyette and Wojcik, one runner who should have no trouble getting up for the Gauchos is Tom Razzeto. A senior, Razzeto could be running in his last UCSB meet.

Although they have no conference meet to point for, the Gauchos are anticipating an invitation to the USTFF Far West Championship to be held in Fresno on Nov. 22. A good showing this Saturday could give the team the confidence needed to produce some fine results at the USTFF meet.

Nationwide Veteran College Educational Benefits Scandal

A nationwide college scandal has erupted, involving the possible misuse of millions of dollars of veterans' education benefits. Evidence gathered by the College Press Service indicates that numerous veterans attending college, as well as the colleges themselves, may be defrauding the government of money under the GI Bill.

Abuses of the $3.2 billion-a-year program of GI Bill education benefits have led to investigations by state and federal agencies, including the following:

- One hundred veterans at the Community College of Baltimore (MD) have repeatedly collected checks from the Veterans Administration (VA) for tuition and school expenses without bothering to attend classes, according to state officials.

- Ten percent of the veterans enrolled in Oregon's 13 community colleges are cheating the government through the GI Bill, according to several college officials. Estimates of abuses in Oregon run as high as $2.5 million.

- The FBI is investigating a widespread fraud scheme involving four Chicago trade schools that have allegedly bilked the government of more than $1 million over a five-year period. The scandal involves at least 500 GI students and key school administrators, according to the Chicago Daily News.

- After the school ignored two of their warnings, state officials in Oklahoma recently suspended all education benefits to veterans enrolled in Oklahoma City Southwestern College, pending investigation of suspected fraud.

The abuse of veterans' education benefits begins with the minimum $270 VA check GI students receive every month. Students who misuse their benefits, according to college officials, usually enroll in a low-cost public school, start receiving monthly VA checks but then play hooky, illegally keeping the money. A married veteran, after paying minimal tuition at a state school, may be able to pocket as much as $1000 each semester.

"A number of veterans who are already employed professional welders have been enrolling in and dropping out of welding courses for three or four years just to pick up the benefits," said Bill Dobson, veterans coordinator for Portland Community College.

The problem is compounded by VA regulations which may inadvertently encourage abuse. One provision allows veterans to receive benefit checks up to two months before they even register for classes.

Enacted in 1972 for the purpose of preventing late benefits payments, the advance payment provision has "opened up a whole new ballgame for abuses," according to one VA official. "Schools have a hard time following up on overpayments if the students never set foot on campus. And by the time they find them, the money has already been spent."

There is some question, however, whether schools are looking for—or winking at—GI Bill fraud.

"I've seen cases where a veteran will enroll in a course, receive an F grade, and then continue to enroll in that course again and again," said the director of the state agency that recently repealed Oklahoma City Southwestern College's accreditation for receiving veterans funds. "We have no quarrel with the school, but it's beyond me how it could allow these irregularities to slip by."
