YOU CAN'T PAY FOR FIRE

If you're wise, you protect your property with fire insurance. But don't let this hull you into a feeling of false security. For nothing can completely pay for fire.

It is impossible to adequately compensate for loss of time, of business, of opportunity, of employment—no matter how we pay insurance on things we live with dollars. In brief, fire insurance, invaluable as it is, can only cover the tangible losses of fire. It cannot cover the intangible losses which constitute by far fire's greatest toll. Replacing burned furniture will not make up for the direct loss. If your place of business burns, your loss of time, of business, of opportunity, of employment becomes an inexcusable financial uncertainty of the last eight years.

No one can countuce the obvious and honored. It should, and must, accomplish the immediate—beginning—the start of a new life for youth in a world of uncertainty. And along that broad highway youth's legions, anxious waged.

Commencement month again flings wide the great gates leading from the campuses of America's high schools and colleges. And along that broad highway youth's legions, hundreds of thousands strong, march forth this June into the stern and earnest world where men must work for their daily bread, their security, and their happiness.

The valedictorians may have skeptical things to say of the world they and their classmates are entering. The goal and cherished hope of nearly every youth, the hallmark and gauge of his success, is work. But seldom has the competition for that precious prize, a job, been more grueling or more anxiously waged.

A little over a generation ago, there were 100,000 youngsters in our country's high schools. Today there are 6,000,000. In the last fifty years, our population has multiplied approximately 69 times! The economic uncertainties of the last eight years have contributed their difficulties.

But the courage and confidence of youth in the face of these obstacles is more than to be praised and honored. It should, and must, inspire us. For nothing can completely pay for fire.

SILLY SYMPHONY

Numerically strong and with an unassailable prestige, the Native Sons of the Golden West more than once have sounded the tocsins when ill-founded philosophies of government threatened their native California.

Living up to its traditions, the organization has tossed a monster wrench into the complicated machinery of the 1938 aggregation of tax theorists, political opportunists and economic experimenters—a monkey wrench that many local citizens, around tax-paying time, often enough have wished they might find in the pockets of none other but themselves.

"Be it resolved," the Native Sons unambiguously declare, "that we urge defeat and rejection of any and all measures or proposals purposely designed to alter, amend or abridge lives with dollars."

In brief, fire insurance, invaluable as it is, can only cover the tangible losses of fire. It cannot cover the intangible losses which constitute by far fire's greatest toll. Replacing burned furniture will not make up for the intangible losses which constitute by far fire's greatest toll.

Subventions and grants of money from the State of California to the various counties in 1937 formed 40 per cent of county receipts for the year, according to the Annual Report of Financial Transactions of Municipalities and Counties of California issued this week by State Controller Harry B. Riley. The above figure is a considerable increase over ten years ago, when state grants made up only 16 per cent of the counties' income.

In 1927 85 per cent of the county revenue was paid out in taxation and fees. The 1937 figure reveals that now only 60 per cent is raised from these sources. Expenditures by counties, with several exceptions, has shown very little over the ten-year period, according to Mr. Riley. The cost of general government services remains at only 7 per cent of the total revenue, which is a noticeable change in expenditures are those for charity and education.

In 1927, 8 per cent of county property is paid out for charity and education purposes. The increased educational and federal and state grants. In 1927 there were no old-age pensions.

Educational costs in counties have dropped from 12% out of each dollar spent to 7% out of each dollar spent in 1935. The cost of recreation, health and sanitation has dropped from 3 per cent to 2 per cent.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—One out of every four families in California in this country is ten years old or older. Approximately 12,000,000,000 cigarettes a year are distributed by Sears Roebuck; each catalogue cost about $1.00 to print and mail. There are 14 to 18 potatoes in the average bale of this year's cotton. 13,000,000 acres were set aside for a student loan fund to be made available to future Farmers of America and boys and girls at Carpenteria.
