Brown Inauguration Today; A 'New Spirit' in California

By Martin Chorich

Edmund Brown, Jr. will be sworn in today as California's 34th Governor during a simple morning ceremony to be held at the state Capitol Building.

Brown begins his four years in office with a prayer breakfast followed by the oath-taking ceremony in Sacramento. After an address to a joint session of the legislature, Brown will begin an inauguration tour of the state, meeting with state and local government officials in both northern and southern regions of California.

Brown has promised a "new spirit" in state government, but has avoided answering specific questions on his new Administration.

Observers feel that Brown's proposed budget, which will be submitted to the legislature this week, will represent a tightening of the state government's belt. The budget surplus accumulated during the Reagan administration has been largely eaten up by inflation and it has been said that Brown will need to liberally wield his budgetary axe to keep his promise of avoiding a tax increase this year.

In keeping with this new austerity in state government, Brown is eschewing the normal pomp of inaugural balls and slipping quietly into office. The new Governor has also refused to live in the million-dollar Governor's mansion under construction and will move into an apartment close to the Capitol building.

LOOSE LIPS

Although Brown has promised an open administration, he couches discussions of his plans in generalities. Aides are reluctant to talk without permission from Brown and already he has begun chiding the press for asking too many questions.

Meanwhile, over the weekend, the Governor-elect made two major appointments. Claire Dedrick, vice-president of the Sierra Club, was named Secretary of the Resources Agency. The

Roden Takes Post As District Attorney

By Cary English and Mark Forster

Stan Roden, the liberal attorney who campaigned for a shift to environmental concerns, will be sworn in as Santa Barbara County District Attorney today at noon.

Roden called for less priority in the prosecution of marijuana charges and other victimless crimes he considers low-grade offenses during last spring's campaign.

He suggested cleaner procedures for handling low-grade offenses, such as increased use of Own Recognizance in place of bail.

Rather than going to trial for a low-grade offense, Roden has suggested an option of intensive six months probation that won't affect a person's criminal record.

Roden, 33, is a graduate of Berkeley and Hastings College of the Law. He served as a Santa Barbara deputy District Attorney

Board of Supervisors To Hear Oil Treatment Plant Proposal

By Roger Keeling

The Santa Barbara County Planning Commission voted 5-4 on Dec. 18 to approve Exxon Oil Co. proposed oil and gas treatment plant, thus sending the issue to the Board of Supervisors. The vote came after four days of commission hearings and only weeks before a new Planning Commission is appointed.

The Supervisors met on Dec. 30, at which time they voted to throw the situation into the lap of the new Board which has now taken office. On a motion by Curtis Tunnell, the matter is to be taken up on Jan. 13 from 2-4 p.m., and then again at 7 p.m.

Local environmentalists are planning to have a large turnout at that meeting, because "it'll be better to stop them at the Board of Supervisors than to have to go into referendum," according to Sierra Club and GOO member Murray Lewis. In order to help prepare for the hearing, the Santa Barbara Coalition Against Oil Pollution will be holding a meeting Jan. 11 at 9:30 at the El Patio Motel, Cabrillo Blvd. and Castillo Street.

The makeup of the Supervisors will be slightly different from last year. The two supervisors who have consistently been identified as environmentalists—Frank Frost and Jim Slater—remain, as does Francis Beattie, who has often voted against local environmentalists. Harrell

Fletcher, a new member, has noted several times that he will probably vote in favor of Exxon, although he has made no firm commitments in either direction. Bob Kallman, the other new board member, stated all through his campaign that he is opposed to further offshore oil development until it is proven safe. He had made no specific commitments on the Las Flores project.

If the supervisors should vote in favor of Exxon, environmentalists are ready with a line of attack that has worked successfully in the past on environmental issues. Under the coordination of the Santa (Cont. on p. 9, col. 1)

By James Minow

How does a nice kid from Santa Barbara end up in a dingy old place like Washington D.C. or in an equally unaccommodating federal penitentiary? Ask Robert C. Mardian, former Assistant Attorney General under the Nixon Administration who was convicted January 1 on one count of conspiracy in the Watergate cover-up trial. He is a UCSB graduate.

The 51-year-old Mardian could receive a maximum of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for his cover-up activities as a chief legal strategist for the Committee to Re-elect the President. He was convicted on the first day of 1975, two and a half years after the Watergate scandal first broke. Three top Nixon administration officials, former Attorney General John Mitchell, and Presidential aides John Ehrlichman and H.R. Haldeman were convicted as well.

SB Grad Mardian: Moving from Frats to Watergate Guilt

Mardian graduated from UCSB in 1943 when it was still a state college located on the Riviera in Santa Barbara. (UCSB did not move to its present site until 1954.) He was a member of the Beta Sigma Chi fraternity and was an active member of the Rally Committee, which was charged with sponsoring pep rallies and half-time events at football games.

STUNNED

As the federal jury read their verdict in Washington Mardian seemed emotionally stunned and close to tears. He was the last defendant to leave the courtroom after spending long tortuous moments holding his head in his hands. It was reported that Mardian's wife, upon hearing the verdict, stuck out her tongue at presiding Judge John J. Sirica and issued a derogatory "Bronx cheer."

Mardian was also the yell leader of the 1943 class at Santa Barbara.

One of Mardian's Beta Sigma Chi fraternity brothers, Santa Barbara resident Charles Dal Pozzo, remembers: "Well, about all I can say," said Dal Pozzo, "is that he (Mardian) was a real fine fellow. He was active in school—he put himself through school." Dal Pozzo also stated that Mardian was active in the fraternity, where he was the corresponding secretary, and that he was too busy working to have time for sports. Mardian was on the baseball team, however.

"I haven't given it much thought," explained Dal Pozzo on his immediate reaction to Mardian's conviction. "I suppose he was probably caught up in the government. If we had a Republican congress none of this would have ever happened."

DOESN'T RECALL

But another member of that fraternity, Cliff Wrightson, doesn't recall Mardian at all. "Gee, you know the name just never rang a bell," he said in a telephone interview. "I can vaguely recall a Bob Mardian in school but I never thought about it when I heard the name in connection to Watergate."

Dr. Maurice Faulkner, Professor of Music, UCSB, was the faculty advisor to Mardian's rally committee. He doesn't remember him either. "That was 30 years ago," Faulkner (Cont. on p. 9, col. 1)

President Ford moved to create a blue ribbon commission to investigate the CIA this weekend. Supposedly modeled after the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination of President Kennedy, this new commission will look into allegations that the CIA has violated its statutory authority by carrying on domestic spying against American civilians. Nelson Rockefeller and Ronald Reagan are members of the new commission.

The Pentagon has announced that it will request a $95 billion appropriation for fiscal year 1976 which begins July 1, 1975. In addition, the Defense department is requesting $8 billion in research and development funds which would send military spending over the $100 billion mark for the first time in history. According to defense planners, this budget does not represent a substantial increase in the spending levels but rather reflects increased costs due to inflation.

Federal officials have dropped an investigation of the Gallo wine company. The government was looking into charges that the company refused to buy grapes from vineyards associated with the Wine Bargaining Association. The Association is a combination of growers who have banded together to help insure higher prices for their crops. Gallo replied that it didn't buy the Association's grapes because they had refused the standard contract that Gallo offers to all grape suppliers.

Admiral Hyman Rickover said that even though the Navy realizes that it cannot depend upon supplies of fossil fuels to run its ships, it has yet to see the advantage of nuclear power for Navy ships. Rickover also said that the Navy should undertake a long range program of construction of nuclear ships which is not alternatively started and stopped as it has been in years past.

President Ford signed a bill which would require a permanent 55 mile an hour speed limit on the nation's highways. The limit imposed during last year's energy "crisis" was due to expire this June 30.

The California birth rate rose slightly in 1974. Divorces also increased but at a lower rate than in years past. The increase in births is directly attributable to the fact that the women born during the baby boom of the 1950's are now entering the child bearing age.

Presidential Press Secretary Ron Nessen said that President Ford agreed with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's views on the possible use of force in the Middle East to seize oil fields. Previously Kissinger said that such action would be considered only in the event of an imminent collapse of the world economic system. Kissinger made his comments in an interview with Business Week Magazine. Kissinger also claimed Friday, that the President agreed with his views, but it wasn't until Saturday that this was confirmed by Nessen.

Bolivia's former Undersecretary of Commerce claimed that Cuba has entered into a conspiracy with Chile and Peru to give landlocked Bolivia an outlet to the Pacific ocean.

Professor dismissed in English tenure dispute

Lacey refused step promotions over five year UCSB career

By Ardis Johnson

Dr. Stephen Lacey, assistant professor of English, is being dismissed as of this academic school year apparently due to lack of publication. He was informed last spring of his termination after a merit increase review was completed.

Lacey has never been promoted or awarded a merit increase during his five years at UCSB, recognition which he feels he is entitled to receive. He has remained at step 1, while moving from acting assistant professor, to lecturer, and finally to assistant professor after completing his doctoral dissertation. (Step level indicates rank and pay in the university.)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Lacey now believes that after he finished his dissertation two years ago, he then should have been advanced to step 2 "to acknowledge his past work". However, English Department Chairman William Frost, said it is "unusual" to be given a step increase and to be made an assistant professor at the same time.

Dr. Robert Erickson, English department lecturer, said there is no question that Lacey should be advanced to step 2. He added, "Lacey should be advanced to tenure consideration within the next two years mainly on the basis of his teaching record."

Frost declared that Lacey is being dismissed now, in his sixth year, because he had not risen quickly enough through the steps to make it likely that he would reach tenure by his eighth year.

Dr. Frank Gardiner, ex-department chairman, initially handled Lacey's case when it first came up for a merit increase review. Dr. Walter Davis, assistant professor of English, said that "Gardiner's presentation of the case was biased".

Gardiner claimed that the case was treated fairly, and that he "wanted the department to look at the issues squarely". He added, "If we didn't raise the lack of publication issue, the Administration would." But he also felt that the department should have arguments supporting Lacey included in the information given to the Vice-Chancellor.

UNJUST ADMINISTRATION

Gardiner added that the Administration is unjust in its treatment of promotion cases. He commented that at the time of the Lacey case there were two other assistant professors with "comparable teaching records and publication, or lack of it". The Administration "advanced one, retained one without advance, and fired the other". When he was asked why this would be, he answered that the whole process is "very mysterious". Gardiner added that he resigned last year because of the "unfairness" he has seen in the Administration.

Vice-Chancellor Alec Alexander and Dean Bruce Rickborn declined to comment on the Lacey case. Rickborn said that he discusses academic personnel cases only with the person involved.

The department recommended Lacey's merit increase by a "narrow margin" according to Davis. Then the Administration decided last spring against the increase and informed Lacey of his termination. Letters were written criticizing this action by students and colleagues.

FROST PROPOSAL

Frost proposed that the case be reopened last spring on the basis of new evidence. Lacey published additional work, and again the Administration decided on termination. Frost has recently asked the tenured staff if they would like to reopen the case. No decision has been reached.

Lacey is being dismissed, Frost

Davis: "Gardiner's presentation of the case was biased."

Carrying the usual course load, Lacey also teaches a private seminar for students interested in Proust. Lacey said he teaches a wider range of classes than do many English professors, which takes "major preparation" on his part. He also spends a great deal of time advising and counseling his students. He said, "These are the things a teacher ought to do."

According to Lacey, there are "other ways to judge academic excellence than by pages in a book". He does not believe "that the best researchers necessarily make the best teachers", as the

UC system seems to imply.

Dr. Jon Ramsey, associate professor of English, said, "The university ought to have a place for an astonishingly talented teacher, especially in days of declining enrollment and decreasing student interest in what the university offers."

Erickson also thinks Lacey should be reappointed. "He's a wonderful lecturer," he said, "though the system makes it mandatory that he have something in print. In the case of an exceptionally fine teacher, with a sparsity of published work, the teaching record should be given more weight than the publishing record. Good teaching and good research are rare in a professor. It's the ideal to which we aspire."

Dr. Robert Potter, former assistant professor of English and now lecturer in the drama department, said "I respect Steve enormously as a teacher and scholar." He suggested in general that teaching is not evaluated strongly in reviews, and in Lacey's case it should be.

Ramsey and Davis implied Lacey's teaching ability was slighted when his case was reviewed. His student evaluations from last spring quarter more than testify to his talent. He received twenty-eight "A's" and nine "B's" from his English 20 and 117A classes. Repeatedly he implied, because of lack of publication. He added, "The system wants both a teacher and researcher."

Lacey has published two book reviews and a translation of a Chinese short story. He is presently working on two essays and a book concerning Renaissance drama. Erickson commented that "Lacey brings a very rich psychoanalytical approach to the study of literature, and his written work so far is very promising." Lacey said he has not published more in the two years since his dissertation was completed, because he has directed most of his energy towards teaching.

The new governor

Edmund G. Brown Jr. begins his first term as Governor of California today, having received one of the slimmest electoral majorities in California history. It cannot be said, then, that he has been given a clean mandate from the voters for his policies.

Part of the reason for this is that Brown has not made clear just what his policies are. He has kept quiet about his priorities as the state's highest elected official. Brown, though, faces a state with a great many concerns, so he will not be able to stay silent for long.

Among the chief concerns of California is the economy. Unemployment continues to rise and inflation will cause the state budget to expand even further. Brown will find himself in the position of having to strike a balance between available revenues and social programs.

Another concern involves the academic community. We look for Brown to change the policies of outgoing Governor Ronald Reagan towards the University of California. These changes include more reasonable allocations of funds, more liberal and representative Regental appointments, and, possibly most important, a public expression of support for the University.

The environment is another area in which we look for Brown to undo some of the damage left by the Reagan administration. His appointments of finance director, who will sit on the State Lands Commission, and the new Energy Commission chair are of critical importance. We hope that he will choose people who are openminded, devoid of vested interests, and concerned about the quality of life in California.

Brown's early advisorial appointments look promising. He has introduced young, active, and well-educated people into the government. He has also begun to fulfill his campaign promise to give more women and minorities positions of responsibility. He has appointed a woman to head his agricultural program, a Chicano to serve as secretary of health and welfare, and a black to oversee corporations. We hope this trend will continue.

Edmund G. Brown represents a breath of fresh air to the capitol and we welcome him.

Energy and ecology: are they compatible?

The environmental gains of the late sixties and early seventies were not come by easily, and those who opposed them would love to yet see them reversed. The advent of the "energy crisis" has offered this group of environmental foes ample opportunity to achieve their ends.

Who are these environmental foes? The oil industry, of course, and what is now virtually the same thing, the nuclear industry. Then, too, there are the auto manufacturers, and nearly all heavy industrial concerns that produce large volumes of air pollution.

The argument this spectrum of polluters typically spews runs something like this: "Sure, we all want a clean environment, and we can have it by working together. We here at Conglomerate Enterprises very much believe in this. However, our nation is presently greatly imperiled by dwindling energy supplies. Our economy is being violently hurt by our need of vast amounts of expensive fuel from overseas."

Then comes the main pitch: "While we must be concerned with the quality of our environment, we must recognize the need to develop new energy sources here at home, without delay, as well as the need to conserve fuel here at home."

INCREASED PRODUCTION

What they generally mean (all depending upon who places the ad) is that, by increased energy production, they want increased offshore oil drilling, greater ease in nuclear power expansion, greater sanctions for strip mining, and more and bigger leases of federal lands (including wilderness areas) for energy exploration and development.

By energy conservation, they mean relaxation or abandonment of air and water pollution standards "because the equipment necessary consumes large quantities of fuel."

They often also ask for related concessions, such as greater profits "to encourage additional exploration and development of fuel," and less government regulation "so we can do our vital job without interference."

It is very annoying that, with the Republican administration in Washington, that we have today, these polluters are getting virtually everything they ask for. For example, Ford has just pocket vetoed a stiff strip mining regulation bill because "it will harm national coal production"; this action may backfire, since the next Congress will be

GOP makes an unlikely choice

Agawan, Montana is not what you would call a big town. It is not the center of any industry, nor is it on any main highway. In fact, it is about 50 miles from nowhere.

This little mountain town located by the Tetor River is so small that you cannot go through it, only by it. It is so isolated that even if you can find it within a couple of days, it will take you a week to get back out to civilization. It's not only not known for anything, it's not even known (the relatives of the 23 people that live there think that their aunts and uncles died years ago).

Agawan would be the last choice for any type of festivity whatsoever, even for the most trivial thing, such as walking your dog. So, if you were to walk up to one of the townfolks and tell them that the Republicans were holding their 1976 convention there, they'd die laughing. Unfortunately in Washington, D.C., no one is laughing.

The announcement last week by Republican National Chairman Walter "Bugs" Thugs that Agawan had been chosen as the site for their '76 Presidential Convention has Washingtonians in a quandary. When contacted over the weekend, one White House official stated, "Where's Agawan, Montana?" He then added, "No, better make that, What's Agawan, Montana?"

Thugs, a grey-haired man in his 60's who has been compiling data on UFO's in recent years for the CIA, was asked about the choice for the 1976 GOP convention.

"Actually, it's a quaint little town," he replied with a large grin on his face. When pressed further, Thugs finally admitted, "Well, to tell you the truth, we wanted to have it in a place where there wouldn't be any talk about Watergate. And frankly, Agawan is about the only place we could find. It was either that or an Eskimo village in Alaska."

Agawan, where the main source of income is tourists trade, has no newspaper, radio, or television, and in the words of Thugs, "is sort of out of touch with the present." Another reason that the Republicans may have chosen Agawan as the site for their convention is the fact that the population is heavily Republican. In fact, half of the townfolk have voted for the Republican ticket for the past five decades in a row. The other half did not even know they could vote.

To illustrate the situation, when the wife of the local barber (also the barkeeper and postmaster) was asked if she thought Nixon should have been impeached, she replied, "They can't impeach a Vice-President, can they?" When queried about Watergate, one of the farmers, looking surprised, said, "What do we need a water gate for, the river's just a quarter mile away?"

"Now if we can only keep the press and the young agitators away, it should be a pretty good convention," stated Thugs. He mentioned that they were sending out secret maps of how to get to Agawan to all the delegates. Thugs, however, did have some reservations. "I don't think the town church is big enough for 3,000 people," he said. "And, of course, there isn't a hotel within 100 miles." His eyes lit up when he added, "But farmer Johnson told me that we could use his wheatfield."

How is the town reacting to the news? Mayor S.A. Mervin described the upcoming even as "one of the biggest this town's ever seen—and that includes Mary Thompson's wedding!" Mervin said that they were already beginning preparations for the convention. "We're gonna hire another operator to work the phones along with Melissa," he said, "and the local farmers have already started building up their supplies of the home brew." He added that the Agawan band (consisting of a banjo, string bass, and spoons) is practicing "America, America," "Welcome Home Boys," and "That Silver Lining."

Mervin said that everyone that he had talked to (in other words, everyone) is excited about the upcoming convention. He mentioned that he expected no trouble ("We're peaceful folks").

When asked if he thought there would be any problems with the convention being held in so small a town, the mayor replied, "Only one." What's that? "I don't know where we're going to put all those elephants."

Energy or environment...

even more inclined to control polluters than the one that just left, but Ford's action is an excellent indication of his general attitude. However, government—simply because of the new Congress—is not what should be the greatest cause of concern. Rather, the worry that the public will ultimately fall for the “energy versus environment” gag should be foremost.

The fact is that the “energy versus environment” issue is an artificial boogey-monster, created by the polluters to encourage public opinion toward their own ends. In reality, to do what's environmental will simultaneously help (if not solve) the “energy crisis.”

Economically, quite aside from the environment issue, there are a number of things that should be done—starting off with the bitter-but-lifesaving measure of declaring a total boycott of Mideast oil. The Ford administration will not do this because it will be stepping on the toes of a small segment of the business community which he very much likes.

However, were Ford to do that, how could America environmentally make up for the loss of seven per cent of our energy supply? There are, in fact, a variety of methods:

• Establish paper recycling programs in every community. According to Priscilla Laws, associate professor of physics at Dickinson College, Pennsylvania, if one additional pound of paper per U.S. resident per day were recycled (not an unreasonable figure), the savings would amount to 111,000 barrels of oil per day (based on the figure of one barrel of oil equalling 5.51 million BTU, and a pound of recycled paper costing 6,000 BTU less than virgin paper).

• Establish a national bottle bill modeled after the Oregon bottle bill. Such a bill would ban one-way, no-deposit, no-return bottles, forcing the use of returnables. In addition to slowing trends of monopolization is the soft drink and beer industry, such a bill would save anywhere from 50,000 to 125,000 barrels of oil per day, depending on how extensive the bill was.

• Immediately revise U.S. Department of Agriculture recommendations for fertilizer application, and establish a large program to teach and implement organic farming methods. It was recently proven that USDA fertilizer recommendations are nearly 50 per cent over what is actually necessary; production of fertilizer is the largest single use of natural gas in the world. Thus, a huge savings of energy could be realized here. Moreover, since organic farming uses natural fertilizers (rather than man-made varieties), it would be very much in the national interest to encourage such farming processes.

• Over the slightly longer haul, provide massive funding for solar, geothermal, and wind energy technologies. We are closer today to having these as major energy suppliers than we were to having nuclear power 15 years ago, and it would be the sanest thing right now to find money for research in these areas. In addition, tax advantages should be extended to families who chose to install these presently exotic energy forms.

• Either ban or heavily tax large cars, based either on auto weight, or engine horsepower.

Following the first suggestion—to boycott Arab oil—might make it necessary to temporarily engage in gas rationing and mandatory conservation steps (something this country may be faced with in any event), but the above suggestions would certainly limit the days gas rationing would have to be suffered.

Is there any chance that Ford will do these things? Definitely don't hold your breath. While he may ultimately be forced into action by the worsening situation, he is presently content to follow his wait-and-see policy. Indeed, he is opposed to government encouragement and massive conservation. Just recently John Sawhill, the Federal Energy Administrator, was fired by Ford. His crime? Suggesting that Americans start conserving fuel by buying smaller cars, switching to organic fertilizers, and recycling more products.

KEEP ON TRUCKIN'

Nationwide hostel boom draws state interest, funds

By Valerie Swanson

Hostels are starting to spring up all over the country and the California government may be slated for participation in a coastal plan. In the not too far future, hitchhikers, bicyclists, equestrians and backpackers should be able to find overnight refuge in hostels from Canada to Mexico while travelling the Pacific shoreline.

The state has $4 million to spend on a hostel system, with about half coming from an abandoned vehicle trust fund. Along with allocations from Statewide Planning, the money was made available through the Colliere-Keen State Hostels Facility Act last May.

"Nothing is really concrete," according to Jack Collins, a member of the Bicycle Touring Club. He has been active in the campaign to get a hostel system established, especially in Santa Barbara. "Right now things are in the planning and studying stages. Eventually, we'd like to have a hostel every 50 miles or so, like in San Diego, Long Beach, Point Mugu, Santa Barbara, Santa Maria and so forth."

Santa Barbara has a "great need for a hostel," stated Vivian Obern, another active campaigner. "We need a hostel because Santa Barbara is a popular destination for bicyclists. Amtrak, which only carries bikes to one or two places, allows bicyclists to travel north to Santa Barbara and ride south with the prevailing winds."

"The Hostel in Santa Barbara would be "an inexpensive, safe overnight stopping place for non-motorized travellers," she continued. "We have a tremendous climate 12 months per year, the community is outdoor-oriented, it's scenic with the mountains and the ocean, and (Santa Barbara) has a lot of history."

LOCAL HOSTEL

The Chamber of Commerce receives many inquiries concerning hostels. Odile Nared of the Goleta branch notes that "We have people coming in all the time asking if Santa Barbara has a hostel; a lot of foreign students come in because they're used to the hostel system in Europe ... There's a definite need for one in the area."

There is a proposal being considered to purchase a house on Ward Memorial Blvd. and Hollister Ave. for that purpose. The asking price is $300,000, although the same house was offered to the county in 1954 for $20,000. The Board of Supervisors turned it down at that time.

Although the house would make an excellent hostel, there are historical reasons for saving the house. Collins stated, "The property has trees from all over the world, it has nine bedrooms, and it's all in its original wood."

Purchasing the house is Collins' dream. "We have to try to save this beautiful, beautiful house and all of those trees," he elaborated. "Anyone else who buys it would just bulldoze it down—all five acres."

The state does not seem inclined to spend the amount of money necessary for the purchase. It would be "ideal if we could get someone to buy it as a historical monument and give it to the state for the hostel system," Collins noted.

Collins suggests campaigning to purchase the house locally. Donations would come from two sources: preservationists intent on the location's historical value and those interested in a hostel system.

Actual construction of the hostel system won't begin for two to three years, according to Collins. "Although the state has the money to spend on the program, the chances are that they'll blow most of it on studies, so at the end there might not be enough money left to do the actual building."

In that event, alternate plans have been discussed. They include a gas tax, membership fees for the system, or an additional one dollar fee on the costs of licenses and renewals for those planning to use the bike trails and hostel accommodations.

ORGANIZING GROUPS

While Santa Barbara does not have a formal group specifically organized to boost the hostel system, many groups are pitching in. They include American Youth Hostel (AYH), the Bicycle Touring Club, Friends for Bikeology, and the Santa Barbara Trails Council.

Parapsychology classes

The Tutorial Program once again is offering three courses in parapsychology during Winter Quarter, all taught by Dr. Robert Morris. Tutorial 131, Introduction to Parapsychology, will meet MWF 1-1:50 in Geology 1100. This course is designed as a general survey of parapsychology and the factors that have made it controversial. Topics covered include the history of psychic investigations; techniques for simulating psychic phenomena; principles of psychology that bear on parapsychology; the problems of labelling an event as psychic; overview of how experimental research into parapsychology has been done; assessment of the value of that research; what are the recent findings of that research; preliminary theories about parapsychology; cross-cultural perspectives; parapsychology and present-day society.

Tutorial 135, Research Methods in Parapsychology, presents an intensive examination of the logic of the techniques presently used to investigate psychic phenomena. Students design projects. Tutorial 136, Internal States and Parapsychology, deals specifically with recent research on psi-conducive internal states of awareness. Students discuss this research and analogous research on other aspects of internal states of awareness in general, and design projects.

UC Student Lobby: input to Regents, legislature

By Becky Morrow

At a time when students are demanding input into the University there exists a viable organization for affecting change—the UC Student Lobby.

The purpose of the Lobby is to forward student views on student issues to the State Legislature and the Regents. Since its inception four years ago the UC Student Lobby has risen to the twelfth most powerful lobbying organization in Sacramento.

Jack Fuller, Director of the UCSB Student Lobby, expressed concern over lack of student awareness about it. "Students need some way to get in the system to accomplish positive action. The Lobby can do this. All we need is more student manpower, input and support to make it most effective."

PLANNING

Future goals of the Student Lobby include the establishment of a Resource Planning and Allocation Committee (RPAC), a Legislator and Regents on-campus program and involvement with the I.V. Tenants' Union. Traditionally, the Lobby has also sponsored internships to Sacramento.

RPAC would consist of students, faculty and staff to determine the campus budget. It would be an advisory group for the overall educational environment and deal with such areas as physical planning, teaching evaluations, curriculum and class size.

According to Fuller, "There is little student input into this campus. We want to initiate something like RPAC which gives students continuous input into important issues on a constant basis.

"By having students, faculty and staff on the committee, various inputs can be combined to identify campus problems and provide for an overall campus

A tentative committee roster would include two members appointed by the Internal and External Presidents of A.S. Leg Council, one Leg Council rep., three members from the faculty and three from staff, a member from Physical Planning and two Vice-Chancellors.

The Student Lobby also hopes to institute two programs to increase Legislators' and Regents' awareness of students' concerns. Next spring the Lobby plans to bring State Senator Omar Rains and Assemblyman Gary Hart to campus to hold meetings with various student special interest groups and students at large.

REGENTS VISIT

A similar program is being planned for bringing two Regents here every one to two months. Fuller explained, "We can't expect the Regents to support us if they don't know the facts. When the Regents met here many had no idea about the EOP blunder of last spring or other areas of student concern.

"They have become totally divorced in the past four years from the system they are running. We must bring the facts to them," Fuller said.

The Student Lobby is also attempting to focus on areas closer to home by working with the I.V. Tenants' Union. Feeling the Union is presently ineffective, Fuller suggested "coercive action" must be taken to alert rental companies that renting an apartment is not a favor but a business transaction.

"These companies take advantage of us because we are students and we can't effectively fight them at present," he stated.

INTERNSHIPS

An internship program has always been at the core of the Lobby's activities and offers a student a chance to go to Sacramento. There his job would entail doing research on an issue of his choice. The possibility of writing a bill on the issue for the Legislature is one action open to the student.

The internship position for next winter quarter is still open.

Fuller concluded, "When this year is over we hope to see the Lobby as a place where students can come, relate to and depend on. All we need is more student input so more issues can be faced." Those interested should contact the Student Lobby office on the 3rd floor of the UCen.

English tenure dispute

was described as "an excellent professor".

Ramsey commented that Lacey's classes are always extremely full. His classes are offered at noon and 2:15, Lacey said, because the department knows he will "fill these unpopular hours".

Ramsey further commented on Lacey's excellent teaching ability. He said that Lacey was teaching lower and upper division classes at the State University of New York at Buffalo, while working on his M.A. Ramsey indicated this is an "unusual" privilege. Lacey was also hired by UCSB at the age of twenty-four which is infrequently done, said several sources.

Lacey suggested that he has been personally discriminated against by some of the English department's senior staff. He added that they resent his closeness to students and his Freudian approach to literature. Several sources in the department said that he is personally "resented", because his "popularity" with students is "misunderstood".

Lacey implied that his dismissal is related to the tenure process, which no longer serves its original purpose and has become "as rigid as the medieval church". He said tenure was intended to provide "job security, to allow intellectual freedom to thrive". Now it is used to "enforce conformity" by awarding tenure to those who fit the right mold.

Former Santa Barbara mayor Gerald Firestone graduated from the college a few years after Mardian, yet he too, as most others, has difficulty remembering him. "I never even knew we went to the same school," Firestone commented.

After leaving Santa Barbara, Mardian joined the navy for three years and then received a law degree, with honors, from the University of Southern California. His career since then has been largely spent as a lawyer in Pasadena, where he

Dean Coleman, board member of CEA, noted that "The people of Santa Barbara County have stated time and time again that they don't want oil development here. If the supervisors pass this rezoning request, the CEA will take the issue to the people, where they will most likely rescind that approval. We hope that the supervisor's vote will reflect what we believe is the will of the people."

Interestingly, three of the five individuals on the county Planning Commission that voted in favor of Exxon have ties with the oil industry. In 1971, Mardian was honored by the Alumni Association when he received their "Distinguished Achievement in Public Service" award. Ironically, Haldeman, who is a UCLA graduate, is a former president of the Alumni Association.

Richard Maullin, a campaign aide to Brown, was named as Chairman of the Energy Resources Conservation and Development Commission, a new state body with far-reaching powers having to do with the energy situation.

So far, of the hundreds of positions to be filled in the new administration, only 15 have been announced.

In other county oil affairs, the lame duck State Lands Commission on Dec. 19 voted unanimously to allow Atlantic Richfield Co. to drill 17 new wells from Platform Holly off Coal Oil Point. However, just minutes before that vote the commission was informed that a San Francisco Superior Court had granted a temporary restraining order against the permits first issued by the State Coastal Commission.

This shoe is different from any shoe you've ever worn. It's the EARTH® negative heel shoe. The shoe designed to work in harmony with your entire body.

The heel of the Earth® shoe is actually lower than the toe. This allows you to walk naturally. Like when you walk barefoot in sand or soft earth and your heel sinks down lower than your toes.

The entire sole of the Earth shoe is molded in a very special way. This allows you to walk in a gentle rolling motion. And to walk easily and comfortably on the hard jarring cement of our cities.

But remember, just because a shoe looks like ours doesn't mean it works like ours.

Basketball doubleheader tonight

second tournament championship. Possibly looking ahead to a return match with USF, the Gauchos struggled by a tough, well-coached Gonzaga squad for a 59-56 victory. Brown and Ford led the way with 14 points apiece to overcome the loss of Service, the Gauchos 6'10" center, who fouled out early, having played less than 15 minutes.

Service came back strong the next night, however, scoring 15 points and gathering ten rebounds against USF. It was not enough, unfortunately, as the Dons came back from a 13 point deficit to register a 76-72 win.

The Gauchos were forced to play without the services of Andy Olivera, who sprained an ankle the night before against Gonzaga. Ford scored 14 points in the game and Brown had 20 points, 13 rebounds and was named to the All-Tournament team.

TURNOVERS THE KEY

Turnovers were again a factor in the loss to USF. To defeat Oklahoma, the Gauchos must cut down on them as well as contain the Sooners' Alvan Adams, Bob Pritchard, and Mike McCurdy. Adams, an All-America candidate, is averaging 27 points and 14 rebounds a game while Pritchard and McCurdy are averaging 14 and 11 points respectively. Oklahoma is coming off a 111-66 thrashing at the hands of UCLA, but their fine 7-4 record includes wins over Furman (whose Clyde Mays is one of the nation's top players), South Carolina, and Jacksonville. Additionally, the loss to the Bruins is no disgrace as UCLA is again proving that they are the team to beat if you're planning to win the national title.

Tonight's game begins at 8:05 with the preliminary game featuring UCSB's women's basketball team against Santa Barbara City College slated to start at 5:45 p.m. Students are advised to arrive at the games early as a sellout can be expected.

ROUGH STUFF—Jeff Lipscomb appears to launch Davidson player on his way out of Robertsom Gym as he muscled in for layup Saturday night in Gauchos' 91-75 win. UCSB returns to action tonight, 8:05 p.m. in Rob Gym against Oklahoma.

charges so there is less of the situation where one person is prosecuted for a crime and another is not prosecuted for the same crime. Roden says he will also try to get more citizen participation in the workings of the DA's office.

The 1974 District Attorney's election was a bitter battle between Roden and incumbent David Minier. Roden hit Minier on his shady financial dealings while Minier placed "truth boxes" in a local newspaper to combat what he called an unfavorable press.

Minier ended his two terms as Santa Barbara District Attorney yesterday and in a farewell statement issued Thursday thanked the public for "eight rewarding years."

He praised his staff as "the finest in the state" and listed his greatest achievements as the prosecution of four major oil companies after the 1969 oil spill and the forming of a consumer fraud unit in the same year.

Minier will enter private law practice with Deputy District Attorney William McCracken. The partnership will have offices in Santa Barbara and Santa Maria.

Minier, 40, was elected District Attorney in 1966 and won re-election in 1970. But his last four years in office had been stormy.

In 1972, Minier's real estate dealings were detailed in Probe, an occasional Isla Vista investigative newspaper. The story linked Minier and former members of the District Attorney's staff to real estate speculators, however.

It was also shown that Minier and a business partner had accepted loans totaling $13,310 from a local couple who had been arrested, convicted and placed on probation for selling LSD to state narcotic agents.

Minier was cleared of any wrong doing by a 1972 Grand Jury investigation. The jury based its findings on an 11 month study conducted by the State Attorney General's office and cited Minier for allowing the "appearance of impropriety."

Last fall, the District Attorney's office began an investigation into local Democratic voter registration practices. The investigation was quietly dropped when no wrongdoing was discovered. Minier is a staunch Republican.

However, the county Planning Commission voted to allow Arco to expand with no EIR required, but this decision was overruled by the Board of Supervisors.
