 Candidates Bring Spring Debates to Conclusion

The two candidates for Associated Students external vice president for statewide affairs (EVPSA) Eneri Rodriguez and Richard "Circus" Varghese would not debate last week. They instead agreed. April 19 was supposed to be the second and final debate between EVPSA hopefuls Varghese and Rodriguez, complete with podiums from which the two candidates could fire questions at each other from across the stage. Instead, the two candidates sat side by side, complimenting each other and focusing on their similarities instead of their differences.

Wile Varghese, a junior global studies major, admitted to a lack of experience, he said passion is more important than legislation. Rodriguez, who has been a rep-at-large for peace," said he was the

Individuals from Diverse Backgrounds Bring Spring Debates to Conclusion

Five Associated Students presidential candidates faced off in the UCen Hub on Friday for a half-hour debate that was cut short because of a fire drill.

The few students in attendance submitted questions for Brian Hampton, Constantine Pastis, William Flores, Patrick "Mad Cow" Sohier-Gallagher and Martin Marquis.

To begin the debate, candidates were asked to name the job of current A.S. President Mahather Tefali.

"Our current A.S. president has done a lot for a certain group of people, but there were also those who were left out," Hampton said.

"If I was to become president, I would be there for everyone's interest," Flores, who helped create the Commission on Disability Access, said he planned to make QUEBEC (AP) — Leaders of 34 Western Hemisphere nations, both rich and poor, gathered Sunday at the Summit of the Americas to discuss free trade, climate change and the 2005 completion date for the world’s largest free-trade zone. There have been multiple clashes between demonstrators and police outside the meeting for nations free trade zone. There have been multiple clashes in response to a meeting of Western leaders in Quebec City, but there were no injuries or arrests, police said. A small group of about 25 people identifying themselves as anarchists caused the confrontation by first taunting San Diego police officers and then throwing rocks and at least one brick and a bottle. Several dozen police officers, some armed with tear gas, approached the protesters, who were taunting San Diego police officers and then throwing rocks and at least one brick and a bottle. There is no question in my mind that we have challenges ahead. Also, there is no question that we can meet the challenges if we try. Bush said after scrawling his name on the agreement to create a Free Trade Area of the Americas, encompassing 800 million people. The duty-free hemispheric spere, stretching from the Arctic to the tip of South America, has been embraced at earlier summits in 1994 and 1998.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A rally against free trade on Sunday at the U.S.-Mexico border resulted in a 20-minute standoff between rock-throwing protesters and police in riot gear, but there were no injuries or arrests, police said.

A small group of about 25 people identifying themselves as anarchists caused the confrontation by first taunting San Diego police officers and then throwing rocks and at least one brick and a bottle. Several dozen police officers, some armed with tear gas, approached the protesters, who were taunting San Diego police officers and then throwing rocks and at least one brick and a bottle.

"For the most part the crowd has been fairly decent," said San Diego Police Capt. Harold Cox.

The rally, which drew about 1,000 people, was in response to a meeting of Western leaders in Quebec City, Quebec, who are discussing the proposed creation of a 34-nation free trade zone. There have been multiple clashes between demonstrators and police outside the meeting for the Americas.

Organizers at the San Diego event said Saturday they chose the rally location at the U.S.-Mexico border to illustrate what they consider environmental and labor rights abuses resulting from free trade in the region, said Maria Benjamin, the director of Global Exchange, a San Francisco-based human rights group.

"We don't have to answer to anyone," said Selby Smith, a 19-year-old college student from New Mexico. "We want to express our opinion, we don't want to create chaos."

Before marching to the border, protesters gathered at Larsen Park, a baseball diamond just north of the steel wall that divides the two countries.

Police officers were on hand to protect stores on the United States side, direct traffic and prevent demonstra­ tors from blocking the highway leading into Mexico.

When they reached the border, about half the protest­ ers walked into Mexico to attend another free trade rally in Tijuana.

"The border wall is a symbol of oppression," said Albert Ponce, 29, of Los Angeles. "The border represents the fence that separates us from Mexico."

In scattered incidents of violence, anti-trade demonstrators lighted bon­ fires and smashed windows in an area along the Mexico-­ United States border.

"The border wall is a symbol of oppression," said Marcus Arana, a 19-year-old college student from New Mexico. "We want to express our opinion, we don't want to create chaos.

"It's a very emotional issue," said Matt Heitner, 29, a San Diego-based human rights activist.

"We don't have to answer to anyone," said Selby Smith, a 19-year-old college student from New Mexico. "We want to express our opinion, we don't want to create chaos."

Life is full of mysteries. Who shot JFK? How do they get that cream filling into a Twinkie? Exactly what does taco Bell’s "mexican" come from? But by far the biggest mystery of them all: Men have nipples. Why?

When men go to a spa with a vagina, nipples have the potential to serve a deliciously heated, foamy beverage at any time. However, nipples (on male nipples, for the laymen), are usually curved. In fact, they appear to exist only as temperature gauges and titi­ twisty targets.

Norwich, nipples on fat guys pose a different and even more wondrous mystery: breast hitch.

Monday’s forecast: A breast of fresh air, and maybe even a treat for you to nipple on if you can help me solve the nipple mysteries.

Kohn's call to religious tolerance, with honesty as a human being. Cohen of I lillel-UCSB, responded by Daily Nexus Monday, April 23, 2001

Kohn opened his lecture by expressing his enthusiasm for science but said, "Science is an insufficient guide through life, leaving many questions unanswered and needs unfulfilled."

His talk focused on "inter-religious tolerance." As a Jewish person and as a scientist, he spoke of his experiences last conference, meeting the Pope and his correspondence with several prominent members of the Catholic Church.

Two panel members responded to Kohn's lecture. The first, Jim Langer of the Physics Dept., said Kohn set a good tone for the series by speaking not as a scientist or an authority on religion, but with honesty as a human being.

The second panelist, Rabbi Stephen Cohen of Hillel-UCSB, responded by echoing Kohn's call to religious tolerance, summarizing the Catholic and Protestant Churches practice tolerance by not thinking of Christianity as an improvement on Judaism. He quoted Danish physicist Niels Bohr: "The opposite of a simple truth is often a falsehood. But the opposite of a very great truth is often another very great truth."

Kohn and the panelists later engaged in a question-and-answer session with the audience.

The program was made possible by a grant from the John Templeton Foundation. Associate geography Professor Jim Proctor, who wrote the grant, introduced the lecture series and dedicated it to the late Professor Emeritus Ninian Smart — a former chair of UCSB's Religious Studies Dept.

The next lecture on "Science, Religion and the Human Experience" will be given Friday by history Professor Emeritus Jeffrey Rawls in 6020 HSSB. More information on "Science, Religion and the Human Experience" programs is available online at www.ucsb.edu.

April Showers Wash Out 4/20 Day Festivities

Plans for last weekend's 4/20 festival failed to go up in smoke due to bad weather conditions.

The Hemp Awareness Day Festival scheduled for Friday evening in Anisq' Oyo' Park was cancelled due to rain. Hempwise owner and festival coordinator Al Espino said he was disappointed by the turn of events.

"We didn't think the rain was going to stop, so we had to cancel the event," Espino said. "The sound guy really couldn't do his thing because of the rain. But we hope to set a date to reschedule the event in the very near future."

The festival was scheduled to feature bands, performers, vendors and speakers dedicated to educating the public about the uses of hemp, Espino said.

"Cannabis will save this planet one day, and we should all pay our respects to it," he said. "Everyday is Earth Day, and everyday is 4/20, so we're going to try again as soon as we can."

Although disappointed by the cancellation, undeclared sophomore Marcel Saeedi said he would attend a rescheduled event.

"It really sucked because I was looking forward to going to this once-a-year event," Saeedi said. "But it doesn't really matter when they have it, because I think people would go anyway."

Junior political science major Jose Gastelum said he would also attend the event if it were rescheduled.

"I didn't even know about it the first time, but I would go if they are still going to have it," he said. "It's a really good way to get the word out that cannabis should be decriminalized."

the president's office more accessible."

"I want to represent a diverse group of students," he said.

The discussion then turned to the relevance of candidate debates, given the low attendance.

"Not many people are interested enough. We need to show them what we do," Schanes-Gallagher said. "There are so many things Associated Students are doing, and I just want students to know our issues and differences."

The candidates also fielded questions about their personal heroes.

"My hero would by my mom," Pastis said. "I was raised in a single-parent home, and I've moved around a lot. My mom has been there for me throughout all these times."

Markovits, who has campaigned on solving housing problems in Isla Vista, said he would work to lower housing costs.

"Down the line, only a rich group of students can come here due to high prices for housing," he said. "Housing is very important for the student's education, and each student should be able to afford it."

Schanes-Gallagher said housing problems extend beyond Santa Barbara.

"All public universities are struggling with housing and overpopulation," Gallagher said. "I want to sit down with Chancellor [Henry] Yang and talk about these issues."

The debate was cut off by the fire drill, leaving several questions unanswered.

The Spring Election will be on April 24 and 25.

"Experience is no grounding for this position," she said. "What you need is progressive position, and we need to keep that tradition going."

Rodriguez is running with the Student Action Coalition, which she defined as "a progressive party dedicated to access to higher education, diversity and community." SAC has been at UCSB since 1992.
Varghese is running with People of Action, whose goal is "to make everyone feel involved and to eliminate apathy." He said all government should be progressive,
not only the office of the EVPSA.
"Why isn't all government progressive?
If they're not progressive, then they're being stagnant," he said. "I came to college to do more."
Rodriguez and Varghese both promoted activism, especially when working with the UC Regents, one of the position's primary job responsibilities.
"The Regents are not necessarily our friends," Varghese said. "They don't necessarily do what is best for us."
Rodriguez said she believes Regents are out of touch with local issues and student concerns.
"The [UC] Regents are this group of 24 people who have probably never even set foot on this campus trying to tell us how to spend our money," she said. "We can't just sit back and let them run our

Both candidates were concerned about the Regents' investment in BP Amoco,

Rodriguez authored the position paper

Though running as a member of SAC, Rodriguez denounced party affiliations as oppressing and confusing to students.
"People have no idea what is going silence students. I admire and respect those people who are running on their own. I'm going to continue to fight against party affiliations whether or not I'm elected."

Varghese said he would also try to eliminate parties, and said he only joined one this election to receive party advan-

"If I'm going to compete, I need to compete effectively," Varghese said. "I don't want to get buried. If elected, I will fight to remove them."

Opinion

A S ENDORSEMENTS

President:
Patrick “Mad Cow” Schanes-Gallagher

Don’t let either his name or appearance fool you; Mad Cow is serious about the A.S. presidency. The Nexus editorial board met Mad Cow last year when he ran for the same position. At that time, he was unprepared to take on the role of A.S. president. However, Mad Cow spent a year researching the requirements for the position and this year has shown himself to be the most charismatic and best suited candidate for the job. Mad Cow offers limited working experience within A.S., but he more than compensates for this with his intelligence, sensitivity and integrity.

Mad Cow has worked on many charitable projects in the community. Most notably, he founded a program benefiting poor and homeless people, which started in Santa Monica and has now spread throughout L.A. County. Mad Cow has a realistic understanding of A.S.’s role at this university. He knows there is little chance of motivating all students to get more politically involved. Instead, he plans to reach out to underrepresented groups on campus and create greater A.S. visibility through concerts and Isla Vista community projects.

If elected, Mad Cow has vowed to use the tuition honorarium — which every executive officer receives — to fund financially needy groups in the community. The Daily Nexus strongly endorses Patrick “Mad Cow” Schanes-Gallagher at your first choice for A.S. President.

Second Choice:
Bill Flores offers significant A.S. experience. Currently, he is an off-campus representative for Legislative Council. He was the co-founder of the Commission on Disability Access and is a strong advocate for creating a lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender minor at UCSB. He is passionate about providing equal access to educational opportunities for every student on this campus. The Daily Nexus strongly endorses Bill Flores as your second choice for A.S. President.

Internal V.P.:
Cameron Ahler

Cameron Ahler has limited experience with A.S. However, this is one of his more attractive qualities. The Nexus does not believe the internal vice president needs to be groomed for the job to serve effectively. Ahler is not a member of the A.S. club. And this is an attribute likely to improve the role of IVP next year. While Ahler is not fully versed in the intricacies of par­liamentary procedure, he will maintain order during unbearably long Leg Council meetings. Perhaps he may even reduce the length of these meetings.

The IVP must be a decisive and authoritative figure. Ahler is unlikely to allow meetings to deteriorate into self-serving dia­logues. He has expressed a desire to avoid excessive use of position papers on issues of little relevance to students. Ahler would like to see greater enforcement of the time limits on Leg Council speakers, while still allowing free and open speech. Ahler also understands and accepts a very important attribute of the IVP position: neutrality.

Ahler has many outside interests — he is an avidlacrosse player. If elected, however, Ahler has vowed to prioritize this position above all other extracurricular pursuits.

The Daily Nexus strongly endorses Cameron Ahler for A.S. Internal Vice President.

External V.P. for Statewide Affairs:
Eneri Rodriguez

The highlight of Eneri Rodriguez’s campaign platform is her devotion to bringing next year’s annual Students of Color Conference to UCSB. Running under the banner of the Student Action Coalition, Rodriguez’s campaign focuses on increasing the amount of diversity within the UC System and “outreaching” to students. Such claims often run unsupported by any tactical agen­cies, yet Rodriguez brings a specific and attainable goal to the table — a highly publicized and successful event that draws students from across the state. In addition to being a quantitative step toward diversity, the occasion will present an opportunity for Rodriguez to establish relationships with other campus rep­resentatives.

The Daily Nexus endorses Eneri Rodriguez for EVPSA.

External V.P. for Local Affairs:
Ana Rizo

As a member of the Student Action Coalition, Ana Rizo’s polit­i­cal focus centers on issues of local diversity and “outreaching” to students and community members. Rizo relies a little heavily on these buzzwords and is weaker on specifics than running mate Eneri Rodriguez, but remains qualified for the position.

Rizo currently sits on A.S. Leg Council and has extensive ex­perience with the local community. She has worked with El Congreso, the Isla Vista Tenants Union and is well connected to the Chicano/Latino community. She has organized food driv­es and tabling, assisted with the Dia de los Muertos celebration and collaborated with a number of student groups in other outreach activities.

Overall, Rizo’s track record is testament to her dedication to the pursuit of local solidarity, affordable housing, safe and convenient parking and environmental conservation within I.V. The task remains to develop a concrete course of action that will support broad goals.

Rizo has touched on lobbying the state and national student organizations — the UCSA and USSA — in order to garner sup­port for agenda items. She has also spoken about working with the Shoreline Preservation Fund on environmental issues, install­ing blue light phones near parking areas to increase safety after dark and instituting rent control to check runaway monthly dues. These ideas must be expanded into specific proposals.

The Daily Nexus endorses Ana Rizo for EVPLA.

All candidates are interviewed by the Daily Nexus Editorial Board prior to debate. Candidates, A.S. funding initiatives, constitutional amendments and mandatory fee measures are debated by the Board until a consensus opinion is formed. If a majority of the editors concur, an endorsement or opposition is issued. If two-thirds of the editors concur, a strong endorsement or opposition is issued. No movement is issued if a majority vote is not obtained, or if the staff feels there is not enough information to make an informed decision. The Nexus endorsements are intended to serve as a guide for the readership. Individuals are strongly encouraged to seek further information and come to decisions on their own.
NO

FEATURED INITIATIVES

The Student Services Activities Fee is an unnecessary expenditure. The organizations that would receive a piece of the funding from this lock-in fee provide excellent services for the campus community. But the A.S. Bike Shop and A.S. Notetaking and Publications make their own money. A.S. Program Board already receives a substantial lock-in fee, and the Community Affairs Board sets aside student funds each quarter. In addition, KCSB gets a piece of an entirely separate long-standing communications lock-in fee.

Money from the SSA fee would go toward "administrative support" for these organizations. The new fee would fund the additional support that the Student Services Activities Fee would have funded. The fee creates an incentive for students to choose the Student Services Activities Fee over the SSA fee.

LEGAL RESOURCE CENTER

The only tangible product the A.S. Legal Resource Center has produced in its two years of existence is the new web-based "grade your landlord" program. An extremely insignificant number of students have used this service over the course of the last year. Most turn to the Community Housing Office, the U.V. Housing Inspector, a public defender or a private lawyer with their legal questions. The idea of a free source of consultation for all of students' skirmishes with law is a noble idea, but there is no reason to keep spending our money on staff and administration if the service is not being used.

The Daily Nexus is strongly opposed to the Legal Resource Center fee initiative.

NO

STUDENT SERVICES ACTIVITIES

The Student Services Activities Fee is an unnecessary expenditure. The organizations that would receive a piece of the funding from this lock-in fee provide excellent services for the campus community. But the A.S. Bike Shop and A.S. ENDORSEMENT

CAMPUS POINT

Campus Point is seeking a 60-cent per-student per-quarter lock-in fee. The publication currently receives all its funding from students. Campus Point wants to use the extra money to cover printing costs, as well as to pay their reporters and staff.

The Daily Nexus has decided not to issue an endorsement on this initiative. We feel that as another campus publication, the Nexus shares similar interests with Campus Point and a recommendation on this initiative may give the appearance of conflict of interest.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT FOR RECALL PROCEDURE

This constitutional amendment would solidify the currently vague language on "Recall Elections." However, solidarity comes at a price — tougher requirements for calling a new election. The proposed amendment would make it almost impossible to challenge an election. It would require at least 10 percent of the constituency signing a petition to recall an election. For executive officers, this means 10 percent of all undergraduates on campus would need to sign to contest an election.

Considering a 20 percent voter turnout is required to legitimize an A.S. election — and therefore more money, it should foot the bill. If the Athletics Dept. and athletes want state-of-the-art athletic facilities, for them such expenses for the student body is a no-brainer. Other issues are equally unquestionable. Intramural and club sports are terrific pastimes, but pay to play and if you can't afford it, there are mechanisms to have the fees waived. Robertson field is in horrible condition but the university should not tax students for something that should already be covered by tuition dues. Hasker and Robertson and the Recreational Sports Dept. could also use some fixing up. Again, these things are the university's responsibility, but the budget is always a first concern and the expenses are steep enough to keep the facilities from being properly maintained.

The Daily Nexus strongly opposes the "Recall Election" constitutional amendment.

The Student Athletics Fee Initiative is insulting. It is a smack to student intelligence that many items have all been lumped together in one initiative. This amendment denies students the opportunity to give their dollars meaningful direction. Worse still, the large quarterly fee would charge all students to pick up the tab for something that is not their responsibility.

The Daily Nexus is strongly opposed to the Constitutional Amendment concerning the reorganization of Leg Council appointments.

NO

STUDENT ATHLETICS FEES INITIATIVE

The Student Athletics Fee initiative would increase fees by $3.33 per student per quarter starting in 2004. It will fund a new recreation building to house student support services, such as Campus Learning Assistance Services, Office of Student Life and the Women's Center. Students will also have access to a computer lab and resource library.

Many of these services are currently housed in the old army barracks buildings across from Storke Tower. While it would be great to have a building that contains all these services, students should not have to foot the bill. If the university would like this resource building on the campus, they should pay for it. If they refuse, there are many other avenues for funding that could be explored before approaching students with an open hand.

The Daily Nexus strongly opposes the Student Athletics Fee Initiative.

O

RECREATIONAL SPORTS FEES INITIATIVE

The Recreational Sports Fee Initiative will increase fees by $2 per student per quarter (including summer) to support intramural, open recreation, club sports and adventure programs. A portion of the fee will go to repair damaged fields.

Students should remember an old adage before voting on this initiative: You play, you pay. These recreational activities are a worthwhile supplement to an academic curriculum, but they are only a supplement. Students who choose to participate in sports should not expect non-participating students to subsidize their recreation.

It is true that some club sports cost participating students a great deal of money and it would be unfair to ask them to pay fees in addition to their dues and expenses. However, this initiative is not designed to merely help low-income athletes; it asks all students to pay extra fees to cover the costs of a few students.

Some of the money from this fee will go to Robertson Field. How many students will students be charged for these repairs?

The Daily Nexus strongly opposes the Recreational Sports Fee initiative.

The Daily Nexus strongly opposes the Constitutional Amendment concerning the reorganization of Leg Council appointments.

EARTH DAY
it's time for us to learn about solutions, not only problems."

The festival's live entertainment included performances by Glen Phillips, the former lead singer of Toto the Wet Spotteck, and local band Area 51. Wright said the live music is a main attraction for attend­ants.

"The music is the obvious draw," she said. "It's back-to-back from 10 to 5:30 on a solar-powered stage. We hope people will come down for the fun and the music and leave having learned something new about the environment." Other festival highlights included the "Walk Through Time" exhibit that consisted of a 90-foot illustration of the Earth's evolution, a hemp pavilion and a family area where children could make art projects and have their faces painted.

"We are very excited about the "Walk Through Time." It's an exhibit that's been all around the world," Wright said. "This is the first time it's been to Santa Barbara. It tells the story of our evolution. The exhibit is about one-half mile long and every foot is a million years."

Naomi Schwartz, 1st District Supervisor, said the festival was a reminder for people to keep working for a healthier environment.

"Thirty-one years ago we celebrated the first Earth Day," Schwartz said. "Let's remember today how important it is to look over our shoulders to inspire further general­izations."

Wright said it was important to use new knowledge and to involve concerned commu­nity members.

"Get Oil Out is known as the first grassroots organization. An environmental movement was born out of the oil spill and so are we," Conn said. "There is a lot of oil developing on going from coast to coast. We want concerned people to get involved."

Conn said she was impressed by the number of organizations represented at the festival.

"It is amazing to see how many organizations there are to take care of the environment," she said. "This is an amazing community and hopefully more people can get the message. We could be a model community for others and I feel very privi­leged to live here."

The festival provided an opportunity to enjoy the good weather and participate in a Santa Barbara celebra­tion, junior business economics major Stephanie Bertoux said.

"I really liked being outside and listening to the bands," she said. "The community has really come together to celebrate Earth Day and it was great to see the leaders in our community contributing. I'm impressed with the work that's being done to better the environment."

The Coalition for a Living Wage is currently mobilizing to pass a living-wage ordina-cnce that would require any employer who receives state money to pay a living wage of $11 an hour. It will come as a result of a '"living-wealth initiative,'" Phillips said. "Once that happens, we can start looking at it on a statewide level."

Shirley Kennedy, a UCSB black studies faculty member, expressed concerns about the standard of living in Santa Barbara.
"I believe very strongly that the ordinance is the right thing to do," she said.
"The people here who can't make ends meet are the people who make Santa Barbara what it is."

Dejahh Posey — a member of Antara and Delilah and one of the evening's performers — said she fears Santa Barbara is becoming too homogenized and supportive of the wealthy.
"If people can't afford to live here we no longer have a diverse community.
I want Santa Barbara, the place that I live, to reflect the diversity that is here," she said. "This is a celebration of the community so that people see that this is what Santa Barbara looks like."
