Knocking on Heaven's Door

By Spunky Puckett

My grandpa Spunky was a funny guy. The old man was pushing 80, but his hilltop mansion was always flooded with bikini-clad babes and he could still drop an 18-year-old punk with one punch. I remember once when he took me aside and told me the secret of his lifelong happiness.

"Spunky," he said, "there's a place out there called Paradise, a glorious land of mystical sounds, marvelous smells and beautiful women as far as the eye can see. The location of Paradise is a mystery, but maybe, just maybe, if you're spunky enough, you can find it."

Now, I was just five years old at the time, a mere spunklet, so I merely stared up in awe, not really comprehending the size and scope of my grandfather's words. But when I heard from one of my monkey boys that Paradise was located on 702 Anacapa St. downtown, the power and the glory of my venerable ancestor's message flooded back.

I immediately grabbed the two Sueno girls — I call them the Specials — and headed for the car. A lot of people think the Specials are kind of weird, but they're actually pretty cool, and besides, Spunky doesn't go anywhere without a lady on each arm.

The Paradise Cafe was all that I had imagined eternal bliss to be, and more. We traveled up a small set of stairs, away from the noise and bustle of the street, and into a restaurant of class and dignity, complete with hardwood floor and impeccable decorations.

While one waiter saved us from the zealous horde of autograph-seekers (I honestly can't go anywhere anymore), another discovered a backpack left at a neighboring table and selflessly raced to deliver it to its departing owners. Our waiter (we'll call him Harold) materialized with menus, piping hot bread and a welcoming smile.

We decided on a sauteed mushroom appetizer, expecting a mere toadstool snack before the main course. What we got was a monstrous platter, bursting with fungus and drenched in the most excruciatingly delicious butter sauce I had ever experienced.

When we finished, and it took a while to finish the multitude of mushrooms, Harold reappeared to see what toothsome delicacies we desired next. The menu was bottlenecked with pi-quant possibilities, but we managed to limit ourselves to one selection apiece, and before you could say "campus boyfriend," the ambrosia had arrived.

The Specials shared a bountiful chicken salad and a monumental platter of pasta covered in an aromatic pesto sauce. I could only sneak a small taste of each, as they devoured the vittles in short order, but I can testify that both were truly divine.

I, of course, ordered the special of the house, the Paradise Steak, an 18-ounce behemoth of succulent roast. The seasoning, tenderness and subtle power of the steak made me realize once again just how cool it is to be a carnivore.

Harold delivered dessert on the house, a giant chocolate mousse creation which I gladly let the Specials obliterate. For I was satiated with Paradise, I had lived my grandfather's dream and upheld the Puckett legacy. Yes, I found Paradise on this Earth, and maybe, just maybe, if you're spunky enough, you can find it too.

Paradise Cafe is located at 702 Anacapa St. in Santa Barbara.

Well then:

With the coming storm and finals, clubgoers should be wary. Yet if you simply must rave till dawn then check out L.A.'s Hepcat this Friday at the Underground for some soul ska. Otherwise stay at home and revel in the glory of Black Sabbath.
