Fix Rover This Month and Get a Discount

By Ari Novick

With spring at hand, county animal control officials are hoping to stem the surging stray animal population by offering discounts to pet owners who spay or neuter their pets this month.

Owners who take their pets to one of 34 participating veterinary clinics in April will receive a 10 percent discount on the operation. By taking the receipt to a county animal control shelter, they can pocket another 10 percent rebate.

The cost for a sterilization operation could run as low as $6, and probably no more than $20, animal shelter officials said.

"Twelve to 15 million dogs and cats are killed every year due to overpopulation" nationwide, Santa Barbara Humane Society head Donald Cole said. "The sad thing is only one out of 10 will be adopted."

The three animal agencies in Santa Barbara County destroyed 1,838 dogs and 3,192 cats last year alone, said Joyce Verron, a health educator for the Animal Health and Regulations Department.

In response to statistics like these, State Assemblyman Jack O'Connell (D-Santa Barbara) has introduced a bill to encourage the sterilization of pets. If passed, the bill would make it a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $250 to adopt a pet from the Humane Society or an animal control agency and then fail to have it fixed within 60 days.

The law would also require pet stores to offer information on the benefits of sterilization to customers.

These solutions should sit well with Isla Vista Recreation and Parks District Director Hal Kopeikin, who sees a large animal problem in I.V.

Election Raffle Will Be Incentive for A.S. Vote

Prizes Offered in Hopes of 40 Percent Turnout

Doherty would like to see a 40 percent turnout, but hopes the issues on the ballot will draw students to the polls anyway. "There are a lot of important lock-ins and issues on the ballot, and once we get students to the polls I think those things will speak for themselves," she said.

A.S. President Rachel Doherty, along with other members of A.S. Legislative Council, is organizing a raffle for voters in the April 21-22 election to help insure that at a good number of students hit the polls.

In the last Spring General Election, the sub-20 percent turnout wasn't enough to validate the results for the lock-in fee initiatives on the ballot. A special make-up election was held later in the quarter with Blow-Pops given to all voters as an incentive.

Supervisors Deny Pay Raise in Light of County Budget

By Don Frances
Reporter

Hoping to show county agencies that they can take it as well as they can dish it out, the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors rejected a pay raise for themselves at their Tuesday meeting.

Faced with a $22.5 million budget deficit for the coming year, the supervisors have spent recent months slashing the budgets of numerous county agencies. Tuesday it was their turn.

Each of the five district supervisors were asked to make several sacrifices to save the county around $15,000 at the meeting. Areas considered for cutting were supervisors' salaries, office management costs, travel funds, membership dues to the California Supervisors' Assoc. and office furniture.

The largest sacrifice came with the board's decision not to accept a salary increase, a move saving close to $11,000. "The biggest ticket item was the salaries," said Mark Chaconas, assistant to 3rd District County Supervisor Bill Wallace.

"They decided not to take their salary increase, and they took out overtime and extra help, with the exception of sick leave," Chaconas added.

Although extra office help will be eliminated, the board will keep $500 in potential staff pay for each

Skeptical Response to Newly-Introduced Child Abuse Bill

By Z. W. Shubb
Reporter

Legislation aimed at protecting minors who testify in child abuse trials is stirring up fears that a provision in the bill will allow intervention by unqualified agencies.

Authored by State Assemblyman Jack O'Connell (D-Santa Barbara), the bill would require that only one judge, with special training in child psychology, preside over a child abuse case from beginning to end.

Current legislation allows a case to be heard by as many as three different judges, none of whom are required to be educated on the effects testifying in court can have on an abused child.

“I really don't think most animal controllers are experts ... Where does it stop? Lifeguards? Bartenders?”

"Child abuse is a serious societal issue," said Paul Smith, a representative for O'Connell, adding that the bill is "vital to the protection of children."

But the legislation would also require local agencies, such as the county Animal Health and Regulation Department, to become involved in detecting child abuse incidents.

Animal control officers would be required to report possible abuse cases because, according to Federal Humane Society representative Eric Sacach, "there are correlations between animal abuse and child abuse."

Animal control officers often "turn their back" when they suspect child abuse, Sacach said, because they had only been called out to check on reports of animal abuse.

The bill's opponents claim animal control workers lack the qualifications needed to identify possible child abuse situations.

"I really don't think most animal controllers are experts" at spotting child abuse, said Melissa Nappen, a legislative advocate for California Attornies for Criminal Justice. "Where does it stop? Lifeguards? Bartenders?"

Karen Roser, a child psychologist from the Victim Witness Program, a division of the Ventura County District Attorney's office, said if animal controllers get involved in spotting child abuse cases, they will need to learn what the signs of abuse are. "The key to

Resilient PLO Leader Walks Away From Airplane Accident

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Yasser Arafat, who has survived gun battles, air raids and assassination attempts as leader of the Palestinian cause, walked away Wednesday after his plane made a belly-landing during a desert sandstorm.

PLO officials said three of the five crewmen aboard were killed when the plane's nose plowed into a hill.

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi made a bedside visit with Arafat Wednesday night at a hospital in Misratah, 120 miles east of Tripoli. Libyan TV showed Arafat, lying with a bandaged right eye, smiling and chatting with Gadhafi, who embraced him.

"We have treated him fully and comprehensively," Dr. Muftah al-Shwayhidi said. "His health is excellent."

In a televised interview with a Libyan reporter, Arafat thanked Gadhafi for having "mobilized the whole state" to find him. He said the two pilots and engineer were killed and five others badly hurt. Others on the plane suffered minor injuries or escaped unhurt, he said.

Arafat's office said he sent a terse message after his rescue, saying: "I'm well. Everyone is well. Thank all those who were involved."

Arab East Jerusalem exploded in celebration Wednesday at news that Arafat was alive. Thousands of Palestinians hugged, shouted and clapped in the streets. One avenue was almost carpeted with candy thrown in jubilation.

Bassam Abu Sharif, a close adviser, said Arafat should be healthy enough Thursday to preside over a session of the PLO's 80-member, policy-making Central Council.

Sharif also told AP Network News that the PLO asked former President Carter to intercede with the White House to get U.S. officials to provide satellite data to help search for Arafat.

He would not say directly whether such help was received, but that the American "goodwill toward Arafat will definitely help the peace process."

U.S. officials said they were still considering Carter's request when Arafat was found. "We were not involved in any effort to help locate the plane," said Margaret Tutwiler, spokeswoman for the State Department.

Any U.S. help for the PLO would stir controversy with Israel, which considers the PLO a terror group dedicated to the Jewish state's destruction.

The United States long banned official contacts with the PLO, but began a dialogue in late 1988 on grounds Arafat had accepted Israel's right to exist.

State of Emergency Declared by Former Yugoslav Republic

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The leaders of this newly recognized nation declared a state of emergency Wednesday and said "war is imminent" with Serbs and federal army troops that have been moving into the republic.

President Alija Izetbegovic and the other Croats and Muslims in Bosnia-Herzegovina's collective leadership said they were assuming command of the territorial defense, normally under control of the federal army.

The ethnic Serb members of Bosnia's presidency have resigned because they oppose Bosnian independence, which the United States and European Community recognized this week.

Residents of Sarajevo kept their children home, shuttered their shops and switched off street lamps to frustrate snipers as gunfire and explosions enveloped the capital.

At least 13 people were killed Wednesday across the republic, and 10 were wounded by sniper fire despite the darkness, Radio Sarajevo said.

Serb militants holding the eastern and southern outskirts of town engaged in mortar and artillery duels with police and the Muslim "Green Berets" militia.

Muslims, Serbs and Croats who have lived together for centuries recoiled from the violence.

"We fear for our lives and what will happen tomorrow," said Dejan Petric, a Serb. "How are we going to look into each other's eyes when and if this madness passes?"

The latest events threatened to bring all-out war to the republic's patchwork of ethnic communities, which had been trying to stave off the brutal fighting that swept Croatia after it declared independence in June. About 10,000 people have been slain there.

With the secession of Slovenia, Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina, Yugoslavia is only a slice of its former six-republic self. Another republic, Macedonia, has announced its independence but has yet to win recognition from Europe and the United States.

Serbs vehemently oppose independence and have announced the formation of an independent Serbian Bosnia that would be linked to neighboring Serbia, the largest Yugoslav republic.

The territorial forces that President Izetbegovic said he was taking over Wednesday have already begun to splinter along ethnic lines, though they are nominally under control of the federal army.

The Serb-dominated Yugoslav army appears divided over whether to accept Bosnia-Herzegovina's independence.

A senior Bosnian official said Gen. Milutin Kukanjac, the federal army commander in the republic, seemed willing to accept Izetbegovic's authority.

The federal defense minister, Gen. Blagoje Adzic, was weighing an offensive, he said.

Clinton Slips by With Victory Against Brown in Minnesota

ST. PAUL (AP) — Bill Clinton won Minnesota's non-binding Democratic primary Wednesday by fewer than 1,000 votes.

In unofficial returns with all of the precincts reporting, Clinton had 33 percent, or 63,367 votes, to Jerry Brown's 62,425 votes or 32 percent.

Delays in counting votes in St. Louis County stretched out the Democratic decision for nearly a day in Minnesota's first presidential primary since 1956.

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who quit the race last month, trailed with 22 percent.

"It's significant that we were able to prevail in a state ... where the candidate didn't campaign personally," said John Wodele, Clinton's Minnesota campaign spokesman.

Brown's campaign claimed a symbolic victory in the former California governor's narrow loss.

"Only a few hundred votes separated the two," said Neal Miller, Brown's Minnesota campaign coordinator. "Obviously, it's not a victory with a big 'V,' it's a victory with a small 'v.'"

In the past, the county had compiled unofficial returns by telephone on election night, but that was dropped this year to save money.

Government Demands Faster Nuclear Waste Site Cleanup

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission demanded speedier cleanup of 46 severely contaminated nuclear sites Wednesday, complaining that the effort has been lagging for years.

Owners of the facilities could face fines or future license restrictions if they don't comply. Most of the sites have long been closed.

Separately, an Environmental Protection Agency study estimated there are more than 45,000 locations nationwide where there once were nuclear activities that may have contaminated land, buildings or water systems.

In most locations, this contamination is probably at very low levels, barely above background radiation, but in other cases, such as at federal weapons facilities, it involves highly radioactive wastes and liquids, said officials who have reviewed the EPA study.

The eight-month study, which is to be presented Thursday at a Senate hearing, represents the first attempt to assess radiation pollution nationwide so that new standards for cleanup may be developed.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission action focused on a relatively small number of locations where the radioactive contamination from past nuclear activities has been known for years.

Assembly Committee Rejects Governor's Cuts on Welfare

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An Assembly committee rejected Gov. Pete Wilson's welfare restrictions Wednesday, including his proposal to cut family benefits as much as 25 percent.

Similar legislation supported by the governor awaits action in the Senate, but at least one backer predicted Democrats would defeat the cuts there, too.

"That's why the governor introduced the initiative," said Assemblywoman Tricia Hunter (R-Bonita) after the Assembly Human Services Committee defeated the welfare restrictions.

Hunter referred to the initiative that Wilson is trying to qualify for the November ballot.

Both the initiative and the governor's welfare bills would cut Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits by 10 percent immediately, followed by another 15 percent cut after six months unless the parents were unable to work.

Wilson's plan also would require teen welfare mothers to live at home, create cash incentives for teen mothers to stay in school, provide no additional benefits for mothers who have more children while on welfare, and cap the amount of aid that goes to families who move from other states.

Southwest Museum Director Pleads Innocent in Art Case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Southwest Museum director pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges he stole millions of dollars worth of American Indian artifacts.

Patrick Thomas Houlihan entered innocent pleas to eight counts of embezzlement and three counts of grand theft in connection with the unauthorized sale or distribution of 110 pieces of art including pottery, blankets and kachina dolls, said Deputy District Attorney Alexis de la Garza.

Houlihan refused to talk to reporters, issuing a written statement:

"The scandalous state of disrepair and confusion relating to the collections at the Southwest Museum when I arrived ... was nothing short of chaotic," his statement read.

"The museum's practices demonstrate how totally incredible the allegations against me are," Houlihan's release said.

Southwest Museum officials could not be reached late Wednesday.

The 50-year-old Houlihan is a nationally recognized expert on American Indian arts and crafts and was Southwest Museum director from 1981 to 1987. He currently is director at the Millicent Rogers Museum in Taos, N.M.

John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band were just this club act until their music was featured in Edie and the Cruisers. The movie wasn't a very big success and everybody forgot about it. Later that year, radio stations started getting many requests for a song from the soundtrack called "On the Dark Side." For no reason, the single took off and it reached the top ten in the summer of 1984, almost a full year after its release. The movie then thrived in the cable and home video markets. The following year, John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band put out a song for the Sylvester Stallone movie, Cobra. The song was called "C-I-T-Y" and it went to number 18.

Isla Vista Issues Dominate A.S. Debate

Candidates Argue Living Conditions

By Sal Pizarro
Staff Writer

Students living in Isla Vista can expect some help from their Associated Students president next year, if any of the promises made at Wednesday's debate are realized.

The issues of UCSB's bedroom community were the main topic at the presidential debate in The Pub, the second of three that will be held before the April 21-22 Spring General Elections.

Criticizing past A.S. efforts to improve I.V. living, the candidates pointed out several areas in the community where improvement is needed.

"We're living in Third World housing right now," said candidate and A.S. Rep-at-Large Bob Salk. "The Board (of Supervisors) said 8 percent of the houses are in good living condition. That means 92 percent of the places we're living in are in poor and dilapidated condition."

Keith Cody disagreed with Salk that poor conditions are primarily the fault of landlords and building owners. "We treat our place like shit," said Cody, a former program director at KCSB radio. "If there's going to be some change, it has to be a whole attitude change. And that's not going to happen overnight."

Rep-at-Large Aaron Jones cited skyrocketing I.V. rent as a sore spot in community relations and urged the implementation of rent control, but Cody, a business major, argued against the rent control, saying, "It just won't work."

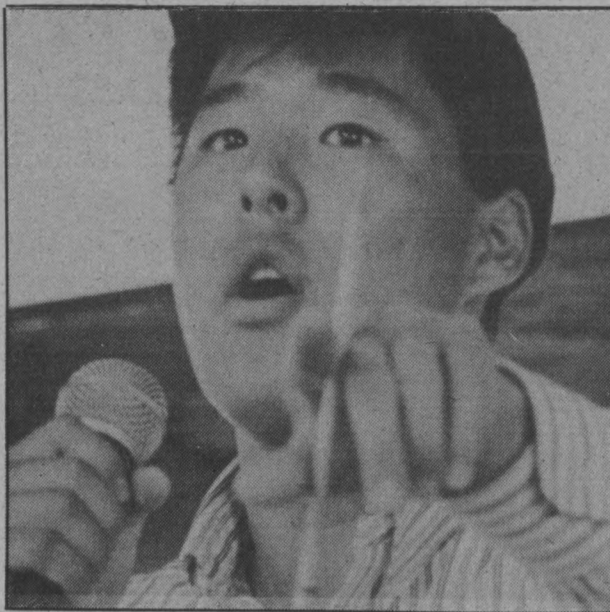

The candidates also formulated plans to increase safety in I.V. and lower tensions between police and residents.

"Half the street lights in I.V. don't work," said Rick Marazzani, who showed up halfway through the debate. "If we're going to start anywhere, we should start there."

Salk went a step further, and promised to place emergency telephones throughout campus and I.V. "I know the concerns of women, having been on the A.S. Status of Women (Commission) all year, but as men the four of us can't really understand the problems."

Cody charged residents with having the first responsibility for keeping I.V. safe. "First thing is drivers," Cody said. "We have a lot of uncontrolled intersections, where a lot of accidents happen."

"And we should be reporting things more often instead of just assuming that they're fraternity pranks or somebody being stupid. 'Why is that guy on the roof?' — we should be thinking about this," Cody said.

Jones agreed that many of the points brought up by the candidates were important and should be acted on, but specifically addressed the issue of resident-police relations, a subject he has worked on as a member of A.S. Legislative Council this year.

"As far as I.V. Foot Patrol is concerned, they need to be educated about us, and we need to be educated about our rights as students. The officers need to be educated on our diversity, and how to deal with that," Jones said.

"They have a tough job," Marazzani agreed, "but they have to recognize that we're not just a bunch of regular people. We're students, and we have a different lifestyle."

The next presidential debate will be held in The Pub at noon Tuesday, followed by an open forum in Storke Plaza next Wednesday.

Lock-in Initiative Asks Students to Help Fund I.V. Social Programs

By Sal Pizarro
Staff Writer

An initiative on the Spring General Election ballot would provide up to $45,000 a year for Isla Vista social service organizations, but some are concerned that the initiative takes the wrong approach to the issue.

Students will have the option of voting for either a 75 cent per quarter or $1 per quarter lock-in fee. If it passes in the April 21-22 election, the money would be distributed by an A.S. council to the groups Let Isla Vista Eat, I.V. Youth Projects and the I.V. Recovery Group.

"If you're looking for how this benefits students, you have to ask how students can live in a high quality of life when there are people in the community living in abject poverty," said Ombudsman Geoffrey Wallace, who serves as chair of the board for LIVE.

Martin Boer, the author of the bill, said there were students who would benefit from the aid. "There are a lot of students who are homeless, or at least who can't afford food, and I.V. social services can help a lot of students with children or who are hungry. Students who are working for these groups will also benefit because of the experience," he said.

However, Rick Marazzani, the only A.S. presidential candidate to come out against the lock-in, didn't feel the benefit to students was immediately visible.

"Lock-ins should go towards programs that will benefit students," Marazzani said. "These are great organizations, but they will not definitely benefit students. A.S. is not a social-welfare institution."

Questions have also been raised about the administration of the money, and the organizations it would benefit. The Community Affairs Board, which is a state-recognized social-service agency that works in I.V., probably won't be helped by the initiative.

"CAB is a separate issue and a separate entity that should probably get a separate lock-in as well," Boer said. "I am personally involved in LIVE but not in CAB, and perhaps a Leg Council- or student-sponsored bill written by someone who is involved in CAB can do something for them."

"As for why they weren't consulted in the formation of

S.B. Group Fights Crime With Rewards

Hopes Are High for the Capture of Two Men Suspected in Murder Case

By Don Frances
 Reporter

Jeffrey Wayne Fauble is wanted for murder, and a local crime-fighting organization is willing to pay to see him caught.

United Against Crime is a Santa Barbara-based group dedicated to the prevention of crime, and its central philosophy is to reward people who help bring wanted criminals out from underground and into jail.

Friends, acquaintances and fellow criminals are expected to become good samaritans and offer tips to the wanted person's whereabouts with a little incentive — cash.

UAC is currently searching for Fauble, who is wanted for the murder of Cindy A. Kater, a Santa Barbara woman who was found dead in her Carrillo St. apartment on St. Valentine's Day this year.

"We give a $1,000 reward for anyone who gives us a tip leading to the apprehension of a wanted criminal," UAC Executive Director Timothy J. Mahoney said. The UAC releases wanted posters and acts as a clearinghouse for crime tips in Santa Barbara.

The reward money, along with all other UAC funds, is made up mostly of donations. "We are an independent, non-profit organization, and most of our support comes from citizens and business foundations who support our cause," Mahoney said. "We survive simply off fund raising."

The group is also seeking Marcos Ramirez, who is believed to be in possession of some property stolen from Kater's apartment the night of the murder.

"If you find Ramirez," Mahoney said, "he's going to have to tell us how he got the stolen property, and that should lead us to Fauble." Mahoney added that Ramirez is not wanted for murder, only for questioning.

If a tip received via UAC's 1-800 number leads to an arrest and conviction of a criminal, the tipper may collect his or her reward in complete anonymity, under the protection of a code name and secret drop site.

"The person might go to such-and-such a bank at such-and-such a time and give, say, teller number three, a code name, and collect the money," Mahoney said.

Established three years ago, UAC has been successful in helping the police catch several wanted criminals. They have also established two crime-prevention curriculums at local schools: the nationwide Drug Abuse Resistance Education and Stop, Think, Act and Review.

"These are school curriculums that fit anywhere in elementary and junior high schools," Mahoney said.

Whether UAC has been able to help in the case of Cindy Kater is unclear, but Lt. Richard Glaus, public information officer for the Santa Barbara Police Department, is keeping his fingers crossed.

"You never know what information is going to be a break for us," Glaus said, adding that UAC has been helpful in the past. UAC was "put together to help law enforcement, and they've done that in a number of ways," he said.

Although not willing to discuss an open case, Deputy District Attorney Thomas Sneddon conceded UAC's occasional helpfulness. "In some cases they have been successful, and in some cases they haven't," Sneddon said.

RAFFLE: Doherty Works to Bring Out the Voters

 A.S. Elections Chair Ansel Kanemoto said the political climate this year called for a voting incentive again. "For this year, we had an incentive program because there are so few ballot measures and candidates that people don't feel associated with the issues," he said.

Voters wishing to enter will have their names included in a massive drawing to take place after the elections. Doherty has recruited some Leg Council members to help her recruit businesses willing to donate prizes for the raffle, and so far, she's gotten a healthy response. able voters to pass. "I'm looking for a huge turnout," Lagomarsino said. "I think we'll get it, too, because intramurals affect a broad range of people."

However, Inside Wave Co-Editor Mike Lawrence, whose weekly paper also has a fee initiative on the ballot, thought the turnout would be moderate at best. "I don't believe we're going to get anywhere near the 40 percent A.S. is expecting, but with publicity we should be able to reach the necessary 20 percent on the first time around," he said.

Kit Delmar, manager of I.V. Bikes, thinks the raffle will help get students to vote, but doesn't view it as much of an advertising tool. "We try to do what we can to support the student body, but I don't think this is going to bring in a lot of business," Delmar said.

But besides the material prizes, Doherty said, "Everyone who votes gets the prize of knowing they're doing a good thing."

Doherty is also working on other prizes like free pizzas, two trips to Las Vegas, and gift certificates at other I.V. stores and businesses. Supporters of the lock-in fees students will vote on are also counting on a big turnout. Intramural Sports employee Dave Lagomarsino said his department's fee initiative will need a high turnout since it will require two-thirds majority of at least 20 percent of the avail-

Students to Select the Nominees for the Best 3 Teaching Assistants

By Julianna Boyd
Reporter

Undergraduates will have a chance put their votes where their grades are this quarter by casting ballots for the Graduate Student Association's Outstanding Teaching Assistant Awards.

Along with the satisfaction of knowing that they are excellent TAs, the three winners will also receive $1,000 cash for standing up to the scrutiny of students and faculty.

"A lot of undergraduates become graduates, and this is a way for them to point out the people who they find are doing really good work," said Jackson Dodge, academic vice president of the GSA and coordinator of the five-year-old award.

Nominations can come either from undergraduates who took a course with a TA, a faculty member who taught or supervised the course, or from fellow teaching assistants, Dodge said.

Most TAs think the award with its $1,000 jackpot is a good incentive to improve their skills.

"It is important to reward people for teaching well because it is a difficult thing to do," said Nancy Plooster, a TA for English 162.

"But, it might be a mistake to elevate one teacher above another," she added, noting that factors such as which room a section meets in can affect a student's judgement of a TA.

"As long as the decisions are based on the students' evaluations, then I think it's a fine idea," said Wils Corrigan, TA for P/Stat 5.

Dodge said nominations in this fifth year of the award are judged in light of the TA's past teaching evaluations and history as well as the nomination.

The award's review committee is made up of graduate students who sit on GSA's general council. GSA represents the entire body of more than 2,200 grad students on campus.

Dodge stressed that the awards are an opportunity for undergraduates to promote excellent teaching since they are the ones with the most direct contact with TAs.

"Undergraduates can make themselves heard not by

of the five districts to fall back on.

Some office staff reductions will also be made. "It's difficult to make (budget) reductions without reducing your staff," said Ken Masuda, assistant to County Administrator Kent Taylor. The board also elected not to buy Wallace a new couch. "My furniture is over 16 years old, and the couch is pretty frayed," Wallace said.

One area that remained unscathed was the supervisors' travel fund, which they said was indispensable. "We need to be able to fly (to Sacramento) so that we can lobby state representatives. A lot of bills pass up there that affect this county,"

Wallace said.

Wallace cited the current debate over whether tankers should be allowed to transport crude oil through local waters as an example of an issue requiring transportation to Sacramento.

Taylor noted that the board's expenses account for only a small fraction of the county's total budget. "The county's total budget is $360 million, so the Board of Supervisor's budget is pretty small in the scheme" of necessary cuts.

"We have a very small budget," agreed Wallace. The board's actions were undertaken more as a gesture of fairness than as a necessity, he said.

Added Taylor: "Their effort is aimed more at equal treatment than at big reductions."

A $1 Billion Blow

Federal Govt. Abuses Defense Contractor Suit to Demand Millions in Sales Tax Refunds

Editorial

As California lumbers toward a projected $3 billion annual deficit, it is being dealt yet another staggering economic blow as a result of a recent court case entitling the federal government to reclaim millions of the state's sales tax dollars.

The sales tax revenue in question — which will perhaps run into the billions — was paid to state, county and city governments by aerospace companies under contract with the U.S. Department of Defense. But as a result of a little-known lawsuit brought by the Aerospace Corp. of El Segundo more than 10 years ago, this money has been deemed inappropriately acquired. Because the company's product — defense machinery — is the property of the United States, they should not have been charged sales tax on the materials used to manufacture it, Aerospace attorneys said, citing a defense contract clause that prohibits the state from taxing the federal government.

And in 1990 a state court of appeals agreed. As a result, the door now lies open to hundreds of defense contractors to receive large state refunds, plus interest. All told, experts are predicting that the price tag of this legal snafu could run well over $1 billion — one third of California's projected deficit.

One shocking element to this whole catastrophe is the fact that the materials being exempted from the sales tax are not just the stuff of warheads and fighter planes, but items like toilet paper and light bulbs. The state, therefore, is being asked to pick up the sales tax bill for anything that falls remotely under the overblown umbrella of defense contracts.

What's not surprising about this economic skeleton is that it has popped out of the defense industry closet. What is outrageous about it is that the federal government is dumping it in California's lap without so much as a second thought.

Responding to the crisis, the federal government — already infamous for its inability to control abusive and absurd overcharging on such contracts — has swooped in like a vulture to the kill, ordering the contractors to file claims for this money and then hand it over to the Department of Defense. These administrators in Washington have apparently abandoned any sense of responsibility for the state of California — even as it flounders in the economic sinkhole of a stalled defense industry.

According to officials in Sacramento and numerous county and city governments, there is simply not enough money in their already-depleted budgets for these refunds. State officials say they had no idea the sales taxes were unfair. But given the opportunity to recoup extra money to balance their own severely unbalanced books, the federal government is acting like an independent body responsible only for its own welfare — even if it comes at the expense of one of its states.

It seems clear that federal officials would rather see California suffer any hardship than take responsibility for their own poor management. Rather than blindly demanding total and immediate refunds, the DOD should be working to create a reasonable plan for refunding any taxes that were inappropriately levied. For starters, it is clear that items such as light bulbs and toilet paper should not fall under this exemption. Furthermore, these refunds need to be repaid over a longer period of time — allowing California to find the money and avoid more economic devastation.

Go for Perot

Editor, Daily Nexus:
There is a grassroots movement afoot in the United States that is smoldering like an underground wildfire ready to burst into flames at any moment. The reason ... Ross Perot.

Because of an interview on a "Larry King Live" show and a subsequent speech given to the National Press Corps, Americans all over are getting caught up in a fervor to "place a new face" on the political landscape. Whether people are disgusted at the way present-day politics are handled in Washington, or concerned that time is running out while our country is being run into the ground both physically and economically, the response is united! Give us a choice for president besides what the Republicans and Democrats offer. Ross Perot has stated that if the people of America want him and, on their own initiative put him on the November ballot in every state, then, and only then will he run for president.

I can only ask every American citizen out there to please be informed. Make the effort to hear Ross Perot speak so you will understand why all of us are so excited. On April 24, the ballot initiative drive will begin in California, so if you would like to have a choice for president, please lend your signature to the ballot drive and let's get Perot in the ring.

It is time for a wake-up call, folks, and there may not be another chance. Keep an eye on your local newspapers for articles, television appearances, rallies and ballot drives. We need everyone's help.

UC San Diego

An Alabama man accused of killing six women in San Diego, including one UCSD student, may face the death penalty if prosecuting attorneys prove their case.

During the arraignment of Cleophus Prince Jr. in March, Superior Court Judge Frederic Link announced that assistant district attorneys Dan Lamborn and Rick Clabby would be seeking the death penalty due to two special circumstances: alleged murder in the commission of a rape and alleged multiple murders.

Prince also waived his right to a trial within 60 days of his arraignment. Because evidence is still being collected in the case and Prince's attorneys are still preparing their defense strategy, the trial may not begin for quite some time.

"There are a lot of things that need to be done to tie up this case on both sides," Lamborn said. "(The trial) will probably be in the fall at the earliest."

While the delay is important to both sides, Lamborn indicated that the more than two years between the murders and the beginning of the trial may stretch the memories of witnesses in the case. The first murder, that of San Diego State University student Tiffany Schultz, took place on Jan. 12, 1990.

"It's unfortunate," Lamborn said. "I'd rather have witnesses (on the stand) the day after it happens, but that's not realistic."

Lamborn also said that he expected the defense to ask that the trial be moved out of San Diego County. However, he noted that other high-visibility court cases, such as the murder trial of La Jolla socialite Betty Broderick, had not been moved out of the county.

Prince is charged with six murders, as well as burglary, assault, indecent exposure and perjury. Among the murder victims was UCSD senior Janene Marie Weinhold.

UC Berkeley

On an otherwise typical Wednesday night at Cafe Milano, two UC Berkeley students sit at a table laughing at the comments of the five other people they are talking with. But there's a catch. The other people are not at the cafe at all.

The students — scattered among cafes all around Berkeley, San Francisco and San Rafael — are chatting via SF Net, the first-ever cafe computer network.

Last April, computer consultant and real estate broker Wayne Gregori decided to combine the conversational tradition of the cafe with the modern technology of computers. Four months later, the first machines were installed in cafes around San Francisco.

The computers resemble normal cafe tables, but beneath the plexiglass table top lies an amber monitor and the front of the table holds a sunken keyboard. Users deposit 50 cents for the first eight minutes and can stay on as long their change holds out.

opinion," Sharp said.

Students who leave their pets in I.V. when they move contribute to the problem, according to Kopeikin. "The desertion problem of pets also seems to be a major issue," he said. "Students don't remember that taking in a pet is an eight-year-long responsibility."

"If people would just take care of their pets, give them their shots, have them spayed or neutered and love them a lot, our pet problem would improve," Vevron said, adding that for every human birth, there are 15 dogs and 45 cats. "It's incredible, the amount of strays we have; and the sad thing is, most of them won't find foster homes ... they'll be put to sleep."

The awards will be presented to one TA in each of three areas: humanities, social sciences, and math and physical sciences. Dodge said the nomination forms can be picked up in each department office, or at the GSA office in the Graduate Tower.

The $1,000 award is a large part of the GSA's budget, Dodge said.

"These awards reveal how we respect and value the possibilities of the education process and show some of the best aspects of the UCSB education," Dodge said.

The deadline for nominations is next Tuesday.

"This is a chance for the school to show the quality of its program on a national scale," he added.

In preparation for the secretary's visit, Cooperman said the students discussed the America 2000 goals that Bush wants met by the turn of the century. He added that the students also made a scroll welcoming the secretary in 20 languages.

After the classroom visits, Alexander will meet with the Santa Barbara Industrial Education Council. IEC and local officials will discuss the America 2000 plan with Alexander, as well as other educational issues.

Both UCSB Teams at Western Regional Meets

Men in New Mexico Searching for Fourth Spot in Finals; Brandon Ill

By Ross French
Staff Writer

UCSB men's gymnastics Head Coach Mircea Badulescu knows that the cards are stacked against his team as it enters this weekend's NCAA Western Regionals at the University of New Mexico. Ranked eighth in the West, the Gauchos face some of the nation's toughest competition in their quest to go to the NCAA National Championships.

"Three teams from our region are already going to go," Badulescu said, naming Stanford, BYU and Nebraska as the top teams in the West. "Only by a miracle—or injuries—will they not go. But for the fourth spot, the fourth through ninth teams all have a chance to get it, if they hit their best day of the season."

Among those teams that Badulescu feels are in the hunt for that fourth spot is the Gauchos. The squads that will be hounding them in the race for the last ticket to the NCAA finals are UCLA, Oklahoma, UC Berkeley and Arizona St.

"There is no big gap between any of these teams," Badulescu said.

A problem for the Gauchos this weekend will be illness. Sophomore Jeb Brandon, who won the floor exercise at the Pac-10 Championships two weeks ago, has come down with the flu and strep throat.

"He is on medication, and hasn't practiced all week," Badulescu said. "We're going to take him with us anyway. We will rest him, and we'll go by that."

"It's better to have him over there and compete than to not to have him at all," he added.

Badulescu has chosen eight of the nine positions for the meet, with the only remaining question being whether to compete junior Andy Gotelli or sophomore Eddie Harwood.

"I still haven't decided," Badulescu said. "I'll see how they move at the Friday workout, then see what we should do."

Seniors Mark Brodman, Eric Jones and Brandon will compete as all-rounders, with seniors Marc Jones, Phil Ramirez, juniors Steve Taylor and Chris Bosso, and sophomore Ken Jones completing the squad. Junior Skip Erickson and either Gotelli or Harwood will be the alternates.

The top four teams from the Western Regionals will continue on to the NCAA Championships in Lincoln, Neb. on April 23-25.

Entire Women's Squad Qualifies For First Time, Competes at Berkeley

By Daniel Solomon
Reporter

When the UCSB women's gymnastics team walks out on the floor at Berkeley's Harmon Arena this Saturday, it will be history in the making. It will mark the first time that an entire squad has qualified for the NCAA Regional competition.

The seven-team competition will feature six top-20 schools from the West and Midwest, while a separate tournament will pit the best of the East against one another. The #30 ranked Gauchos will face Oregon State, UCLA, Stanford, Boise State, U. of Washington and host Cal Berkeley.

"Oregon State (ranked #3 in the nation) is the favorite to win, and will most probably do so," said UCSB Head Coach and Big West Coach of the Year Tim Rivera. However, just because Rivera feels that Oregon State is a near shoe-in doesn't mean that he is giving up hope that the squad will advance to the NCAA Nationals.

In addition to the top five regional winners, the seven top scores will also go on to the Nationals, which are being held in Minneapolis, Minnesota on April 24-25.

Because of this, Rivera believes that a second- or third-place finish in the Regionals could give the Gauchos enough points to advance to the Nationals.

"We're going there hoping to surprise and intimidate the other teams," said sophomore Eve Lopez. Lopez and freshman Lauren Yee will be competing in the all-around competition. "We are peaking right now, and we should do pretty well."

Yee shared her enthusiasm. "We have a good chance to beat a couple of the (higher-ranked) teams," she said.

The remaining gymnasts will be competing in combinations of the four events; the uneven bars, the balance beam, the floor exercise and the vault.

Unless the team makes the Nationals, the Regionals will be the final competitions for two UCSB seniors. Four-year veteran Tracey Teruya and two-year Gaucho Dawn Fowler, who transferred from Cal Poly Pomona, will both be competing on the uneven bars this weekend.

But regardless of the eventual outcome, Rivera is very happy just to have made the Regionals.

"Nobody expected us to be here at the beginning of the year, but here we are," he said.

Sounds like he doesn't ever go to class. Actually, the opposite is true, according to Preston.
"He's really stuck it out with school," attests the Gaucho coach. "Basically, he came because he wanted to play volleyball. But he'll graduate next December, and that's one of the things that makes me the proudest of him."
Even with his degree, the senior knows what life holds after the season. Fonoimoana is going pro, heading for life on the beach tour. Having already attained his AAA rating, necessary for playing at the highest level, the Gaucho star spends time in Manhattan Beach, playing with big names like Tim Hovland, Mike Dodd and Brent Frohoff.
"I play against those guys, and I beat them a lot. They beat me, of course, but I think I have the definite potential and the confidence to compete against those guys," Fonoimoana asserts.
First things first. The Gauchos have something to prove in the upcoming post-season, and Fonoimoana has a special reason for his success and that of the team.
"This year I've decided to motivate myself, and I've dedicated this season to my mom," he says. "She taught me a lot of things about life before she passed away."
One of the things Fonoimoana has learned is that people aren't always going to get his last name right. So say it again. Fonoimoana. Chances are, you'll be hearing it quite a bit down the line.

UCSB Volleyball Captain Eric Fonoimoana and his teammates will begin postseason play at the WIVA Selection Tournament next week. The Gauchos, led by senior Fonoimoana, have amassed a 15-11 overall mark this season.

Heavy Hitter: Eric Fonoimoana

The UCSB captain's name strikes fear into hearts of opponents. But can they pronounce it?

By Dino Scoppettone, Staff Writer

Say it slowly. Let it roll off your tongue. It's not as difficult as it looks.

Fonoimoana. If you're still having trouble, listen to UCSB public address announcer Cubby Jacobs after a big kill: "FO-NOI-MO-ANAI!"

"A lot of people don't know how to pronounce it, but it's pretty much exactly how it's written down," says the leading authority on the subject, Eric Fonoimoana. "You can sound it out."

So try it again. Sound it out. It's easy, once you get the hang of it.

Volleyball came easily to Fonoimoana, once he got the hang of it. That was back when he was still in junior high, helped along by three older brothers who taught him the ropes. Now, he is the captain of a Gaucho volleyball team that is picking up speed as the playoffs approach.

It seems fitting that with Fonoimoana at the helm, Santa Barbara is having its best season in some time. The 6'2" senior has seen it all during his five years in the Gaucho program, beginning with a freshman season that saw his team advance all the way to the NCAA finals.

For Fonoimoana, a cocky hitter out of Mira Costa High in Manhattan Beach, that freshman year of 1988 was a baptism by fire. All-Americans David Rottman, Jose Gandara and Jon Wallace showed him the ropes.

"They kind of tried to intimidate me at the beginning," Fonoimoana says of his star teammates. "I guess they were not used to having a freshman come in and play with them. They taught me a little discipline."

The Gauchos were not as successful the following year, but Fonoimoana had deeper things on his mind. His mother, Connie, passed away in an auto accident, and Fonoimoana began having thoughts about staying in school.

"I debated whether I should continue with school or not, and I thought to continue would be best, because I thought she would want that," Fonoimoana says, with good reason. After all, it was his mother that had prompted him to attend UCSB in the first place.

"I was going to go to San Diego, and she said, 'No, I think you're going to Santa Barbara,'" he recalls. "I respected her opinion and thought that she would know best."

As Fonoimoana dealt with his tragedy, another problem came knocking on his door. With college volleyball filling his school year and beach volleyball taking up his summers, Fonoimoana was almost begging for knee troubles. He got them, and his only recourse was to redshirt the 1990 season.

"The year off hurt him, and when he came back, we had a rough year last year," says Ken Preston, Fonoimoana's coach. "Rough" may be an understatement: Last year's Gaucho team finished 10-20, Preston's worst year as head coach. Preston and the team vowed that things would be different this year, and they are, due in no small part to the Gaucho captain.

Funny thing about team captains: They come in all shapes, sizes and voices. In this case, the soft-spoken Fonoimoana leads mostly by example.

"He's the quiet type of leader, everyone knows that," says Gaucho middle blocker Jason Mount. "But he gets as much respect as anyone on the team. Even as a freshman, he was a leader there, too."

Preston agrees, adding that there is a big difference between the Fonoimoana of 1988 and the current team leader.

"This is his most mature year, like it should have been. He has led this team and really been the stabilizing influence when things get a little rough. He doesn't talk that much ... but people listen to him, and accept what he says," Preston says.

Fonoimoana isn't willing to take all the credit for motivation.

"I think people respect what I have to say," he believes, "but at the same time I think there are a lot of guys who are mature enough to take it upon themselves this year. That was a turnaround, too ... others picking up their own game."

Fonoimoana has picked up his game as well, improving his passing and defense in the off-season. After witnessing a crushing cross-court spike, however, one can quickly deduce where his real strength lies. Fonoimoana can put the ball down with the best of them.

"He's explosive and he has a really good wrist," says Gandara, now an assistant coach with the Gauchos. "He's not afraid of the block, he's not afraid of swinging. He'll live and die swinging."

Most likely, he'll live swinging, or rather, make a living swinging. Fonoimoana has his priorities in order.

"School has always been second for me," he says. "I never really was too interested in it. Volleyball's always been my main thing, and the reason why I go to school is just so I can play, so it's kind of like a tradeoff. In order to play, you have to do well in school, and that's what keeps

"O" Knows

Some goodies from the Gaucho grab-bag ... It hasn't been the type of season that UCSB Head Baseball Coach Al Ferrer had probably hoped for. His team is currently 19-14-1 overall, but just 2-7 in Big West conference play. Furthermore, nine of those 19 victories have come against non-Division I opponents.

But it hasn't been just Gaucho opponents that have given them their share of problems. Two weeks ago when UCSB traveled to Arizona St. for a two-game series, forces of nature seemed to be against them. One of their vans caught on fire on the way to LAX and the players in the van, including some regulars, had to be escorted to the airport, making the group late for its scheduled flight. Ferrer had already put together a makeshift lineup of reserves when the rest of the players arrived just before the first game ... so, of course, the Gauchos went out and won the game, 6-5.

After leading his team through the best season in school history, UCSB Women's Basketball Head Coach Mark French was recently seen relaxing at a UCSB baseball game. French was an all-conference pitcher for UCSB back in the early '70s.

"Are you going to pitch in the alumni game?" a reporter asked him.

The reporter was convinced that maybe that wasn't such a great idea when French described the home run that former USC Trojan Fred Lynn hit off him, believed to be the longest ball ever hit at Campus Diamond.

By the way, did he say "Alumni?" Ferrer may be giving him a tryout for the 1992 team pretty soon.

Speaking of women's basketball, French now has the tough task of making up for the loss of the seniors that made up the Gauchos' nucleus — Big West Player of the Year Barbara Beainy, All-Conference stars Erika Kienast and Lisa Crosskey, as well as shot-blocking center Susie Matthews and backup point guard Margaret Lewis.

However, don't expect too big a falloff from the past season. Christa Gannon showed signs of sparkling play in the Big West tournament and should be a formidable replacement for Kienast at the power forward spot. Anna McConnell and Karin Banks are both unproven, but have the potential to play at the Division I level. Replacing Beainy, however, will be the toughest job.

Ellen Proconier, who figured to give UCSB depth in 1991-92, was forced to redshirt the season after knee surgery and should be counted on heavily next season. After that, French will hope a talented crop of recruits will be able to make somewhat of an impact to ease the pain of the loss of Beainy and company.

Point guard Cori Close will be returning for her senior season and will most likely be looked upon for more scoring than in the past. But the success of next season may hinge most heavily on center Becky Brown, who had a brilliant Big West tournament but played horrendously in the NCAA tournament. Brown is a potentially prolific scorer who at times lets the emotion of competition get the best of her. If French can get her to remain focused for 40 minutes a night, it could be another big year for Brown and the Gauchos.

Expect some good things from the UCSB men's volleyball team next week in the WIVA playoffs. Ken Preston's team has won 10 out of its last 11 matches and made quick work of fifth-ranked Cal State Northridge Tuesday night at Rob Gym. The best sign may have been the blocking of 6'10" Jason Mount. The junior had 10 blocks and hit for a .750 attack percentage as the Gauchos swept the Matadors in three games. When the Gauchos are blocking well, and are getting balanced attacks from hitters Eric Fonoimoana, Todd Ahmadi and Stace Lougeay, they can play with anyone in the nation.

UCSB wraps up the regular season Friday night at Stanford, the second-ranked team in the country. Needless to say, a win over the Cardinal might make the Gauchos scary in the tournament.

UCSB women's volleyball Head Coach Kathy Gregory was on middle blocker Tina Van Loon's case throughout the 1991 season about her hitting. Van Loon may be finally getting the message.

"It looks like Tina will be an offensive threat next year," said Gregory, whose team is currently going through spring practices. "She's been getting more sets and seems to connect better with (setter) Chrissy Boehle. I think she finally just got fed up with not being able to hit."

Van Loon may also be feeling the footsteps from Haylee Red and Tammy Steiner, two highly recruited middle blockers that will be joining the Gaucho program next season.
