Nice, Quiet Weekend for a Game or Two of Rugby

Stanford Bests UCSB in Finals

By Jay Bennert
Staff Writer

The UCSB rugby team rumbled to a strong second-place showing at the 27th Santa Barbara International Rugby Tournament held at UCSB over the weekend.

UCSB lost 31-7 to Stanford in the championship game of the University division, held on Sunday. The Gauchos defeated UC Irvine, UC Santa Cruz, UC San Diego and Chico State on Saturday to earn a berth in the finals against the Cardinal. "We gave it all on Saturday and couldn't come back on Sunday," UCSB senior rucker Chris Hacker said.

"Playing four games in one day takes its toll. Those games are 40 minutes each and the championship game is 80 minutes. We just got worn out," team President Pete Tawil said.

"We were emotionally spent," Hacker agreed.

The tournament was hailed as a resounding success by its director, James Hinkin, as 1,500 athletes and over 10,000 spectators flocked to Storke Field to see ruggers from as far away as Barcelona, Spain compete. The Los Angeles Rugby Club won the top-flight International division defeating the two-time defending national champion Old Mission Beach Athletic Club. Fresno won the Club division and the San Francisco Señors won the over-35 Masters division.

Organizers were happy with the lack of conflicts between the ruggers and authorities.

"We had very little problem with the University Police or the Santa Barbara Sheriff's office, and only one major injury: A guy from San Jose State rugby broke his jaw," Hinkin said.

According to 1990 and 1991 Tournament Director John Fox, the soft, rain-soaked fields helped to contribute to the lack of injuries.

"This tournament has a long history, this is the 27th year, with rugby players and their fans and families coming to have a great time. We're proud of the fact that there were no major incidents this weekend," Tawil said.

As evidence of the tournament's continued popularity, UCSB competed in an expanded University division despite the absence of teams such as UCLA and perennial powerhouse Cal-Berkeley, the defending national champions. "We grew from a 16-team field last year to 24 teams this year. This was the biggest University pool we have had in years," Fox said.

Bunch of Breaks Help Sluggers Top Warriors

UCSB baseball Head Coach Al Ferrer was waiting and waiting for the breaks to finally go his team's way. And when it finally happened, it happened in a big way.

The Gauchos were the benefactors of seven errors and a bizarre umpiring call in a 9-4 victory over cross-town rival Westmont College Friday afternoon at Campus Diamond, snapping UCSB's losing streak at five.

"In baseball, five games seems like an incredibly long losing streak, and when you're striving for a certain level of

Struggling Spikers Nearly Wake Slumbering Lions of Loyola

What should have been an easy victory for the UCSB men's volleyball team almost slipped away as it narrowly defeated Loyola Marymount in five games, 10-15, 15-4, 15-7, 7-15, 15-12.

While Santa Barbara (14-11 overall, 8-6 in conference) came out on top, the Gauchos were anything but excited over the performance.

"It was a little disappointing," UCSB Head Coach

Ken Preston said. "We weren't playing with any kind of enthusiasm, or any kind of focus or anything. They toolled us on the line, sided out through the middle and our defensive adjustments weren't very good. We were outthit by a team that's 0-15 in the league."

The victory over the last-place Lions proved to be much more difficult than was anticipated by the Gauchos. What should've been a three-game sweep turned into a five-game struggle.

"I didn't expect it to go five games at all," hitter Eric Fonoimoana said. "We're better than that team and we should beat them pretty handily. We just have a tendency to let any team play with us, which is a big problem that we've had."

The Lions (3-23 overall) took advantage of this lack of mental preparation early in the match. Focusing on the Gauchos' lack of blocking over the middle, LMU surprised Santa Barbara with efficient middle hitting to take the first game 15-10.

"(LMU) just ran through our middle like water under a bridge," Preston said. "Their middle hitters swung at 89 balls and hit over .500 for the match. They kept siding out over the middle, and we didn't make the proper adjustments."

The Gauchos regrouped in the second game behind the incredible hitting of Stace Lougeay, who led the team with 29 kills on the night at a .327 efficiency.

While playing more like their #6 ranking, Santa Barbara crushed the Lions in the next two games, 15-4 and 15-7, with help on the outside from Fonoimoana and Todd Ahmadi. Fono-

It's That Wonderful Time of the Season

I had scarcely opened my textbook when I heard The Voice.

"If you build it, he will come," The Voice said, a slight whisper that faded into the swishing of the corn. I looked around my apartment in surprise.

"What? What do you mean?" I asked. "Build what? Who will come?" The only answer was the swishing of the corn, corn that had overrun my apartment after I had failed to clean it before Spring Break.

If you build it, he will come. Suddenly, my vision blurred, and the image of a baseball field seared itself into my brain. Baseball?

Yes, baseball. The sport of zillion-dollar salaries, drug problems, pouting outfielders and skyrocketing ticket prices. I started having my doubts about baseball around the time that Rickey Henderson complained of being "underpaid and unappreciated" while pulling in $3 million a year.

The baseball field returned to my mind, and I knew what I had to do. With a sigh, I started clearing the corn from my living room. After arranging four china dishes in the shape of a diamond, and placing a wok pot in the center for a pitching mound, I was left with a makeshift baseball field, smack dab in the middle of my apartment. The remaining corn served as the outfield wall.

It was built. I waited. Finally, he came, appearing from nowhere and striding through the corn onto the field.

I blinked. I blinked again. He was still there, big as a tree, eyes hidden behind expensive shades.

Jose Canseco was standing in my living room.

Finally, he spoke. "You like baseball," he said. "You like baseball because of a 510-foot blast that finds the upper deck."

"What about your speeding tickets?" I asked. "What about your alleged affair with Madonna?"

Canseco frowned. "Does it matter?" He turned and disappeared into the corn. I watched him go, entranced. My concentration was broken by the voice behind me.

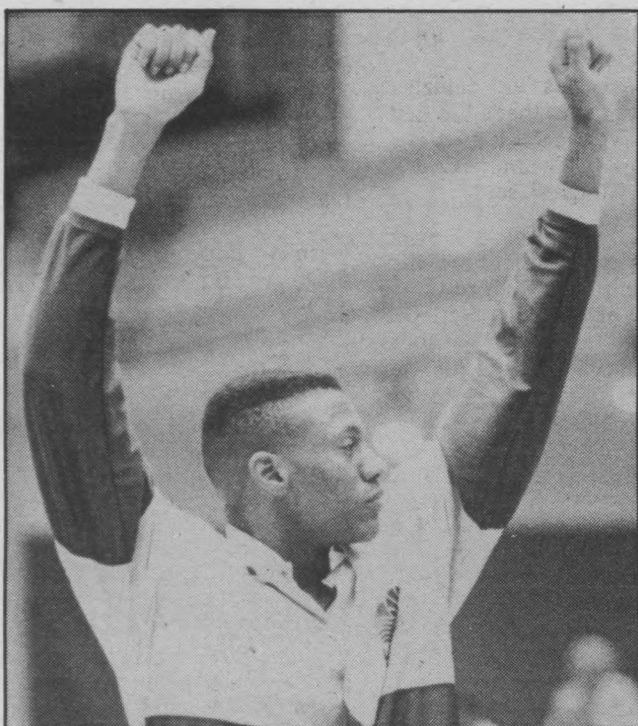

"You like baseball. You like baseball because of a diving stop on a ground ball up the middle."

I whirled around. The voice belonged to Ryne Sandberg, a master of the diving stop.

"What about your $7 million contract?" I countered. "Isn't that a bit much?"

Sandberg's face grew sad. "Does it matter?" He strolled past me into the Gauchos forward Lucius Davis hit five of nine field goal attempts, helping the West defeat the East in the NABC Collegiate All-Star Game Friday.

Davis Stars at Collegiate All-Star Game

By Scott McPherson
Staff Writer

UCSB men's basketball team captain Lucius Davis may not have been able to lead his team to an NCAA championship this year, but the senior forward was chosen to make a guest appearance at the Final Four in Minneapolis over the weekend. Davis, the top scorer in the Big West Conference this season, was selected to the 10-man West squad for Friday's NABC Collegiate All-Star Game, part of the annual Final Four festivities.

The contest was a high-scoring affair, with the West ultimately prevailing 117-93. Davis made his share of contributions, totaling 14 points and several big defensive plays during his 20 minutes of playing time. The game, televised by ESPN, showcased some of the country's top players and was a gathering place for many NBA scouts.

"There are a lot of scouts here," said UCSB Head Coach Jerry Pimm, who is in Minneapolis for the Final Four. "I talked to some before the game, at halftime and afterwards."

Davis — the 1992 Big West Player of the Year — started the evening slowly by missing his first three shots, and scored all three of his first-half points from the free-throw line.

"He was kind of tight to start with," Pimm said of Davis. "But he joined in the fun of the activity in the second half... he started to put the ball on the floor and create his shots."

Davis was able to convert on five of his six second-half shots, and finished the night as the West's third-leading scorer. Doug Christie of Pepperdine was selected as the game's most valuable player for his 16-point, five-rebound performance. Christie also won the slam-dunk contest held that day.

According to Pimm, the pro scouts who were able to watch Davis play liked what they saw.

"Many of (the scouts) have been able to watch his progress this season, and watched him mature as a player," he said. "They all like him."

Pimm added that Friday's performance among top college players showed that Davis could make it at the next level.

"It proves he can play, and that he can do a good job in the NBA," he said.

Davis was the fourth Gauchos player in the past five years to be selected for the All-Star competition. Forward Gary Gray made the team last year, with guard Carrick DeHart gaining the honor in 1990. Guard Brian Shaw, the Big West Player of the Year for 1988 and currently with the NBA's Miami Heat, earned a place on the West roster after his senior season.

Softball Drops Three of Four

Berline Declared Academically Ineligible, Lost for Season

By Jason Masini
Staff Writer

Becca Berline

Win or lose, UCSB softball Head Coach Sandy Pearce knew she was in for a long weekend. Having lost her top pitcher to grade problems, she was faced with having back-to-back road games with the University of the Pacific, Saturday, and #4 Fresno State on Sunday. Though Pearce hoped to split the two series, the road-weary Gauchos lost three of four.

Before the weekend's action began, the Gauchos learned that sophomore pitcher Becca Berline would be academically ineligible for the remainder of the season due to grades, leaving juniors Kelli Schott (6-8) and Margo Melendrez (1-2) as the only pitchers on the squad.

Sunday, Santa Barbara (12-16 overall, 4-10 in the Big West) was swept by the Bulldogs, losing the first game 5-0 behind a one-hit effort from Fresno pitcher Terry Carpenter (14-4) and dropping the second game 3-0 with Fresno's Marcie Green (15-2) picking up the victory.

The first game against Fresno State was highlighted in the third inning when Fresno State's Michelle Bolt hit a three-run triple off Schott, who was returning to action after missing Saturday's doubleheader against Pacific, for personal reasons.

The Gauchos were held hitless in the first game for 5 2/3 innings until Melendrez was able to reach on an infield single, ending Carpenter's bid for a no-hitter.

The second game saw Schott return to the mound and the Bulldogs greeted her with the same appreciation they had in the first game. Fresno State tallied once in the fourth inning and then twice more in the fifth on a bases-loaded single by Bulldog Kim Maher. UCSB was able to get five hits in the game, two each from junior Krissy Kyriazis and Schott.

"Fresno is a very talented team," Pearce said after the game. "It would have taken a perfect game from us to beat them. We worked really hard today, but it just wasn't enough to win the game."

Saturday's outcome was a bit more pleasing for UCSB as they split the doubleheader with Pacific, losing the first game 4-1, but taking the second, 3-2.

With both Schott and Berline unavailable, it was up to Melendrez to pitch both ends of the doubleheader and she came through with a quality performance.

The Tigers' Wendee Espinosa was the star of the first game as she hit a run-scoring triple in the first inning and then came back with a two-run double in the fifth.

The Gauchos' only run came in the seventh inning when Melendrez was able to drive in junior Jennifer Gomez, who had singled earlier in the inning. Both Melendrez and Gomez had two hits for UCSB.

The second game saw Pacific go ahead 1-0 in the first inning, but this time Santa Barbara was able to come back. In the second inning, Melendrez walked, Kyriazis reached on a fielder's choice and Gomez walked, loading the bases for junior Alison Brickner. She promptly smashed a single that scored both Melendrez and Kyriazis, giving UCSB a 2-1 lead.

Pacific tied the game in the fifth, but the Gauchos were able to go ahead for good when Brickner doubled, scoring Kyriazis, who had singled. Kyriazis had three hits in the game, while Brickner had two with three RBI.

Laura Rutledge, the Gauchos' #2 singles player, was victorious in straight sets over Fresno State's Mary Fallara Saturday.

Lady Netters Blow Away Bulldogs

Buried amongst the excitement of the NCAA Final Four and the beginning of the baseball season, the UCSB's women's tennis team scored a big home win that shouldn't be overlooked, taming a spirited Fresno State squad Saturday, 8-1.

The Bulldogs (16-8 overall, 5-3 in the Big West) came to Santa Barbara hoping to avenge their shutout loss of last season to UCSB, coming out aggressively in each match against the Big West champion Gauchos (6-8, 4-0).

UCSB's #1 singles player, Debbie Goldberger, started the day with a 7-5, 6-1 victory over Fresno's Cecile Bourdais. Gauchos Laura Rutledge was victorious in straight sets as well at #2, downing Mary Fallara, 6-4, 6-2.

In her third straight comeback victory, UCSB senior co-captain Julie Coakley let her experience and stamina pull her through in defeating Amy Gallagher, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, while sister Lynn Coakley extended her win streak to eight by beating Kristy Smith, 6-1, 6-4.

"Lynn is a very competitive player," UCSB Head Coach Chris Russell said. "She found her groove of confidence. Her opponents are going to have to play very well to beat her."

Santa Barbara's Kathy Peterson had a long two-set match at #5, as she edged out Karen Farquhar, 7-6, 6-4. The Gauchos' only loss of the day came when Susie Drage fell to FSU's Patricia Marosova, 6-0, 6-3.

UCSB had equal success in doubles competition, sweeping all three matches.

Today the Lady Netters hit the road, putting their undefeated conference record on the line against Long Beach State.

Men Fall in a Squeaker to SDSU

They say you've got to play the best to be the best, but every team needs a breather.

The UCSB men's tennis team, which has played its last four matches against teams ranked in the top 25 nationally, would probably agree with this statement. The Gauchos, who have split the four matches, lost to #25 San Diego State, 5-4 Sunday.

The match could have gone either way, but SDSU took two of three doubles matches to squeak out the win. The top of the Gauchos lineup played well, as senior David Decret beat Joe McDonough 6-2, 6-2 at the #1 spot, and sophomore Laszlo Markovits continued his phenomenal play — 31-6 this year in singles — by beating Chris Numbers, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5.

"Laszlo made a great comeback," said sophomore Henrik Rosvall, who lost 6-2, 6-1 at the number-four spot. "He was down in the third with a break and came back."

Senior Bill Pham won at the number-three spot, 6-2, 6-2, but the Gauchos couldn't get a win from the four through six spots, and entered doubles tied 3-3.

In doubles, Markovits and Decret won 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, but Rosvall and sophomore Mike Shea lost at the two spot, and Pham and Mark Ellison fell at the three spot.

As for today's match, the Gauchos will be playing the University of San Diego, a team they already beat once (4-2 at the Blue/Grey Classic in March) and which is without its number-one player, Jose Luis Noriega, but is still tough and still ranked #23 in the nation.

"USD is playing without their number one," said Assistant Coach Benson Curb. "We've got a couple guys who are sick, but I think we've got a good shot at winning."

 perfection, it's hard to accept something like that," Ferrer said. "There's no question that (winning) relieves some of the pressure — just to get a win changes things. And we needed a change."

Westmont, which was playing without leading hitter Mike Foster (.398), who was lost for the season Thursday when it was determined he had stress fractures in his back, dropped its fourth in a row to fall to 9-17-1 on the year. UCSB is 19-13-1.

The Gauchos capitalized on three Warrior errors in the third inning, scoring three times to burst out to a 4-0 lead. Santa Barbara's first run came in the second inning without the benefit of a hit off Westmont starter and loser Bob Aslan, who threw into the sixth inning after allowing seven earned runs, 11 hits, three hit batsmen and two wild pitches.

Gaucha ace Steve Lane went seven innings to pick up the win (6-2), while reliever Pat Bennett, who has had his share of struggles this season, pitched effectively in retiring the last five Warriors of the game.

"I was real pleased with the way Bennett pitched — he looked very sharp," Ferrer said. "We've really missed him in conference. I would certainly like to finish those games with Bennett throwing like this."

The strangest play of the year came in the bottom of the eighth with Gaucha catcher Jeff Elder at first and no outs. Steve Ross hit a shot to left-center field where Warrior center fielder Kevin Claytor failed on an attempt to make a diving catch. The umpire, however, initially signalled that Claytor had made the catch and Ross was out, causing Elder, who had progressed down the base line, to race back to first base. The umpire then realized that the ball was indeed not caught and changed his ruling, but by that time Ross had run past Elder as he tried for a double.

According to the baseball rule book, Ross should have been out for passing Elder on the basepaths. However, the umpire ruled that Elder should be safe at second and Ross safe at first because his original out call confused

Santa Barbara's base runners.

"That was an amazing call. I'm sure that's the first time I've ever seen anything like that," Westmont Coach John Kirkgard said.

UCSB scored two more times in the fifth inning with the help of two more Westmont errors, and then put up another pair in the sixth to take command of the game. Shortstop Danny Lane had three hits to increase his team-leading batting average to .384. Third baseman Rich Haar broke out of a mini-slump with a pair of singles.

 moana had 16 kills at an impressive .452 clip, while Ahmadi added 17 kills for the match.

Unfortunately, UCSB wasn't as impressive on the defensive end, which led to a 15-7 fourth-game romp by the Lions.

"We didn't do the little things, like covering your hitters and digging," Fonoi-moana explained. "We sided out with them perfect. But their wasn't an all-out effort on defense, which is crucial in winning and losing games."

UCSB's poor defensive effort proved to be enough in the rally-scoring fifth game, however, winning 15-12 to end the match.

Although the victory was hard-earned, the Gauchos don't want to repeat the same level of performance in future matches.

"We didn't enter the match at all fired up, which is understandable, but definitely not acceptable," Preston said. "I think we'll be much more fired up for Northridge on Tuesday. I just hope we can make the adjustments when we want them, which we didn't do against Loyola."

Santa Barbara is now a game and a half behind UCLA and Cal State Northridge, which are tied for second in the WIVA's DeGroot Division. The Gauchos will face Northridge this Tuesday at 7:05 p.m. in Rob Gym in the last home match of the year.

 corn, dissolving before he reached the television. Moments later, another figure emerged from the stalks of green and yellow.

"You like baseball," Wade Boggs said. "You like baseball because of the high fly that caroms off the Green Monster for a double."

"And you like having affairs," I reminded him. "How is Margo Adams, anyway?"

"Does it matter?" Boggs asked, fading into the miniature corn field.

Does it matter?

Cal Ripken appeared. "You like baseball because of the long throw from the hole that beats the batter by a half-step." What could I say to Cal Ripken?

Kirby Puckett joined him. "You like baseball because of the leaping grab over the wall that saves the home run."

And now, Nolan Ryan. "You like baseball because of the high gas that goes for strike three."

He was right. They were all right. They stared at me, waiting for me to speak. What could I say?

"But the salaries ... the drugs ...," I stammered. Their solemn faces made me stop.

"Does it matter?" asked Ripken.

Does it matter? The crack of the bat, the flight of the ball, the smell of the grass, the roar of the crowd. The stolen base, the long ball, the sliding catch, the big strikeout. The things that really matter.

My smile told them all they needed to know. The three ballplayers turned and cut through the corn, dissolving into nothing. Ripken muttered one last phrase before fading away.

"If you build it, he will come," came the whisper from Ripken's lips. What did that mean? I built it, and they had already come and gone, hadn't they?

I was wrong. The apartment door flew open and my roommate came bounding in. "Let's go!" he yelled. "I've got tickets for Opening Day! Grab your coat!"

I grabbed my coat and we headed for the door. "Baseball's back," my roommate said. "I can't believe it's Opening Day."

"It's the best day of the year," I agreed, shutting the door and leaving my field of dreams behind. "It's the best day of the year."
