UCen Fee Hike Brings Alterations to Fruition

BY IAN BARKER Staff Writer

Six months after voting a portion of their cash to the UCen, students are beginning to see results.

The student body approved a $9 per quarter lock-in fee in the spring Associated Students election to help cover operating and maintenance costs for the previously self-supported center. UCen director Alan Kirby said that without the extra funding, the 32-year-old center would have been forced to eliminate hours.

"It was specifically to help with the operating costs of keeping the UCen open and to contribute to the major maintenance costs," he said. "We were faced with restricted building hours. [The money from the initiative] is around $450,000 a year."

The fee increase allows a number of student-accessible improvements, including extended late-night hours and increased computer access, Kirby said.

"The primary focus is that we have opened up the whole lounge area until one in the morning. We brought in eight computer work stations. We created Late Nite at Nic's. The Netstations are actually Netstations Plus with Word and Excel," he said. "We've extended the post office another hour. It used to close at three, now it's open until four."

Nicoletti's Student Manager Erin Childs said that extending closing time from 9 p.m. to one in the morning Monday through Thursday has not resulted in significantly greater business, although she expects an increase in the future.

"We haven't really had that many customers between nine o'clock and close," she said. "I'm expecting a lot of people during midterms and finals."

Childs said she views the extension as a student benefit rather than a financial maneuver.

"It's sort of a 'scratch my back and I'll scratch yours' situation," she said. "It wasn't a profit-driven thing. It was for the students. It was sort of a trade-off."

According to Retail Dining Services Director Sue Hawkins, the student response has been gradually improving.

"We're able to stay open at Nicoletti's until one and keep Paterno's open until 10. [Paterno's] used to close at six, Nic's used to close at six," she said. "It's kind of slow right now. Every day we've seen a little more business in the evening."

The lock-in will soon provide an increase in student wages and employment positions, allowing the UCen to keep up with California's growing minimum wage without layoffs, according to Kirby.

"We'll be able to handle the first increase from $5.15 to $5.50. It will go up to $5.75 in July to stay in accordance with federal and state requirements," he said. "Our problem was that without additional funding, we would have to cut jobs."

Kirby said that while the funds are directed mostly to the student access areas of the UCen, the

Housing Watchdog May Help I.V. Tenants

BY TENNILLE TRACY Staff Writer

Isla Vistans frustrated with their housing conditions have a new ally in their quest to find a safe, dependable and legal home.

The newly created position of I.V. Housing Code Inspector was filled by Steven Fairly when the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors approved his position in April. The inspection program was proposed by 3rd District Supervisor Gail Marshall. Fairly said that he intends to ensure safe living quarters while acting as a liaison between tenants and landlords.

"Our goal is to try to be certain that the people living in the structures are getting their dime's worth and that the landlords are also provided with the safety of a good working environment," he said.

According to Marshall, the original plan for the housing inspector provided for thorough inspections of all I.V. units within a period of five years, but the board of supervisors voted against it. Marshall said she continued to bring the position before the board until it was approved because she felt conditions in I.V. were not satisfactory.

"The students of UCSB deserve a level of health and safety that they don't currently enjoy," she said. "They probably pay the highest rents of all college students in the state, and for that they deserve higher standards. Instead, they have many landlords ... putting in illegal walls. The landlords are making out and the students are at a loss."

Fairly said his inspections use the guidelines of the Uniform Housing Code, determined by the International Conferences of Building Inspectors. Inspections occur when a problem is presented to him by the tenants, he added.

"[The inspections] are complaint-driven," he said. "There is a complaint form at this point on the Web [and] it's also available in our newsletter which I suggest students get their hands on. They are at the Community Center in I.V. at my office."

Recent Acts of Arson Cause Worry in I.V. Community

BY JON MAUCELI Reporter

Many party-goers making their way through Isla Vista on recent weekend evenings might have found the streets lit by the glow of couch and dumpster fires.

Since June of this year, I.V. has been the sight of some 80 fires. In the past, fires were commonplace during finals week, but this summer and fall in I.V. the number of incidents has remained high, according to Santa Barbara County Fire Dept. Capt. Charlie Johnson.

"Typically what has gone on in I.V. is fires increase during finals week when kids torch dumpsters, piles of trash and couches," he said. "Lately, though, these fires haven't quit after finals week."

The frequency of these incidents has been coupled with an increase in the amount of damage sustained in each instance, Johnson said.

"We are now noticing very specific cases where these dumpsters or couches have been pushed up against buildings or cars, so it has taken on an even more serious tone," he said.

Residents may harbor a false sense of security, believing that these fires are harmless unless they directly affect personal property, according to Johnson.

"Students feel dumpster fires are merely a harmless prank, but in reality they divert the department's attention and take engines away from responding to possible real emergencies," he said.

While an investigation is being carried out by the Fire Dept., the success of the endeavor depends primarily on bystanders present when the crime occurred, said Johnson.

"So far we haven't had the witness cooperation necessary to put a stop to these offenses," he said. "The job of patrolling falls under [I.V. Foot Patrol], but we are also relying heavily on the people out there who witness the act or help put a stop to this before someone gets hurt."

NATO Air Strikes on Serbia a Possibility

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — U.S. bombers moved into position for possible NATO airstrikes on Yugoslavia, and a U.S. envoy accelerated talks with President Slobodan Milosevic on Sunday after reporting no change in the leader's tough stand on Kosovo.

Richard Holbrooke and Milosevic began meeting at midday Sunday and talked until early Monday with only a short break, U.S. sources said. Afterward, U.S. Embassy officials said it was too early to say whether the talks would resume later Monday.

There was no immediate word on whether the sides were any closer to a deal. It was the sixth time in seven days the two sides had met in search of a peaceful way out of the deadlock.

Holbrooke said early Sunday that he would "continue an intense effort to find a peaceful, acceptable, fully verifiable compliance system as an alternative to the other choice" — meaning the use of force.

But he also said NATO would meet Monday to authorize action if his mediation effort fails.

In Washington, National Security Adviser Sandy Berger told CNN that Mifugees to return home and beginning talks with ethnic Albanians on Kosovo's future.

Meanwhile, journalists heard sporadic gunfire Sunday and saw white and gray smoke rising from about six houses in the ethnic Albanian village of Makmalj,

There will be significant jeopardy there because the Serbians have a very good defense system.

— Sen. John McCain

losevic "is not in compliance as of this point." The Americans and Europeans are demanding that Milosevic halt the crackdown he launched Feb. 28 against the separatist Kosovo Liberation Army.

The major obstacle appears to be Holbrooke's demand that Milosevic agree to an expanded international monitoring mission to verify compliance with demands of the U.N. Security Council.

Those demands include an immediate cease-fire, a withdrawal of special troops in the province, allowing re-about 20 miles west of Pristina.

Ethnic Albanian rebels claimed the activity was part of a Serb police operation. Police prevented the journalists from getting closer than about a half-mile from the village.

The Pentagon is continuing military preparations if Holbrooke's mission fails. Six U.S. B-52 bombers arrived in Britain on Sunday and a contingent of A-10 anti-tank planes flew from Germany to Italy.

On Sunday, Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) warned that Americans may be killed in the bombing raids. "There will be significant jeopardy there because the Serbians have a very good defense system," the former Navy pilot said on "Fox News Sunday." In Bucharest, the Romanian government agreed to allow NATO to use its airspace in "emergency and unpredictable situations" if the alliance launches airstrikes against Yugoslavia.

Pavle Bulatovic, Yugoslavia's defense minister, warned neighboring countries Sunday that a NATO attack could plunge the entire region into conflict.

"Bombs cannot bring peace, bombs can only bring conflicts, war and instability, not only in Kosovo but in a wider Balkan region," Bulatovic told recruits at an army barracks in northern Yugoslavia.

The United Nations has condemned recent massacres of ethnic Albanians, but has not endorsed airstrikes. The Clinton administration, however, believes it does not need a new U.N. resolution for the attacks.

U.S. Discloses Military Strategy Against Serbia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first stage of an attack on Serbia would feature U.S. B-52s launching cruise missiles from outside the reach of Serbia's formidable air defenses while a pair of B-2 Stealth bombers would work at night, targeting bunkers and underground caves that hide Serb warplanes and command posts, according to defense officials familiar with allied strike planning.

Though designed to force Serb leader Slobodan Milosevic to end repression in Kosovo, the strikes would extend beyond that region throughout all of Serbia. As many as 430 NATO planes are ready for what could grow to become the most massive air campaign in the history of the alliance.

U.S. spy satellites have captured images of Serbia's small but potentially troublesome air force dispersing to caves, bunkers or even fields to avoid the onslaught that could begin as soon as Monday if diplomatic efforts in Kosovo break down, according to Clinton administration officials who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity.

Only a fraction of Serbia's force of 65 MiG-21s and 15 highly capable MiG-29s remains at Serb air bases, and those aircraft are no longer parked wing-tip to wing-tip, where they could be quickly decimated by NATO air power.

NATO military planners expect Milosevic would try to preserve his costly fighters rather than throw them against an overwhelmingly superior allied air force.

If Milosevic continues to defy international pressure — and there was no indication of a change in his hard-line stance Sunday — NATO would launch what military planners are terming a "limited air response" involving perhaps 200 aircraft. Continued Serb defiance would prompt a "phased air campaign" that would intensify, with pauses to allow Milosevic an opportunity to yield.

President Clinton has said this phase, involving 260 U.S. aircraft and 170 allied warplanes, would "strike Belgrade's military capabilities in ways that will damage (Milosevic's) ability to conduct repressive operations in Kosovo." Far from the secrecy that surrounded the August cruise missile strikes on suspected terrorist targets in Afghanistan and Sudan, the United States is being unusually open about what military planners have in store for Serbia — an openness the Clinton administration hopes will make the strikes unnecessary.

White House Lashes Back at Starr, Impeachment Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusations against President Clinton in the Monica Lewinsky affair fall so far short of being impeachable offenses that impeachment would endanger future presidents, the White House said Sunday.

The comments came as word surfaced of discussions among congressional Republicans and Democrats on ways to punish the president short of impeachment. A Democratic senator said two actions Clinton should take first are to "correct" his testimony to prosecutor Kenneth Starr's grand jury and to settle the Paula Jones sexual harassment case now on appeal.

Greg Craig, the White House's new special counsel, said the House Judiciary Committee has legitimate reason to call Starr to testify in its impeachment inquiry.

Whatever Starr's report to the committee accuses Clinton of having done, Craig said, "It does not rise to the level of impeachable offense standard that we have used throughout history, and we lower that standard at our peril. ... It would do grave damage to the presidency and to future presidents if the bar were lowered."

Craig said there are "serious questions about the way" Starr conducted his investigation, and the White House view is that committee members "may well have a number of questions to ask Mr. Starr." Clinton supporters suggest that Starr's office colluded with conservative operatives to initiate the Lewinsky probe, an accusation the prosecutor denies.

Craig did not specifically suggest that Starr should be summoned and said it is "premature" to say whether Clinton should be a witness in the House inquiry, as some members of Congress have suggested.

"We've got to first determine what the rules and the processes are and what the intention of this committee is as it goes forward," Craig said. "Is it going to be a repeat of the unfair and partisan party line kind of stuff that we saw during the first month? Or are we going to achieve some success in elevating the debate?"

Weather

Wow, I've had two complaints in as many weeks! I didn't even know I had two readers. The first implied that I was a little too "cynical." The second thought my idea of having quick releases on bras was degrading. Before I go on, let me say that the last thing I want is to make people feel bad about themselves. But it's a rough-and-tumble world out there and if the weather tears into you so much how are you going to survive? I have two suggestions: First, stop reading the weather. Second, get some coping skills.

Now, my other female co-workers thought an easy-off bra was a great idea. I mean please, would it be better to have bras that are hard to come off?

It seems there are always people who think they can make a difference pointing out things they perceive as "insensitive." I, on the other hand, feel it is better to stop trying to make the world a safer place and instead concentrate on making yourself safe for the world. That means building enough self-confidence to withstand life's inevitable slings and arrows. Now stop being such a P.C. thug and get a sense of humor.

Light Shed on Domestic Violence

BY CHRISTINE PUTNAM
Reporter

Students and faculty met at the Women's Center on Friday to discuss the growing problem of domestic violence in one of many events planned for Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

Tracy Faye Tolbert, a USC graduate student, brought her research on domestic violence to the Women's Center on Friday in order to bring new light to the subject. Tolbert focused on the problems that not reporting domestic violence and sex crimes can bring to the community and the individual.

"Nonreporting is a major social problem today," she said. "One hundred forty-one thousand rapes are reported each year, but the majority of women who are raped or experience some sort of sex crime don't report."

Santa Barbara Shelter Services for Women is also planning many events and activities to promote awareness. This year's annual candlelight vigil was held in Santa Maria on Oct. 7, according to Shelter Services' Rebecca Robertson.

"From July '97 to June '98 Shelter Services responded to 1,271 domestic violence crisis calls that involved 911 calls and the police," she said. "I think the main thing is not to be silent about it. This month's theme is 'End the Silence.' People should get involved. There is help available."

coordinator, said she has noticed high levels of domestic violence among young unmarried couples.

"Twenty-eight percent of high school and college students have been in an abusive relationship," she said. "The sad thing is that these aren't always recognized because often the couple is not living together, and the victims don't think they have any resources. ... It is important that people realize that abuse isn't only domestic — it happens in dating relationships. They need to acknowledge that it is abuse and find someone to talk to about it." Law and society and psychology major Amber Willey, who attended the discussion Friday, stressed the importance of being aware.

"Students need to know that [domestic violence] happens and it's real," she said. "Together we can reduce the instances of domestic violence."

On Tuesday, Oct. 20, there will be a display in front of the Women's Center called the Clothesline Project. Mosely hopes that this demonstration, which will feature shirts decorated by victims of domestic violence, will capture the public's attention.

"The shirts are powerful, sometimes upsetting because of the pain expressed on the shirts," she said. "I hope they get people's attention and make them aware."

Tonight in the Multicultural Center at 7 a film entitled "In Love" about four young women describing their relationships will be shown. A discussion facilitated by the Rape Prevention Education Program will follow. For more information regarding Domestic Violence Awareness Month, contact the campus Women's Center located across from Storke Tower.

SAFETY

If a violation is found, landlords or management companies are contacted and given a correction notice, according to Fairly. At that point, a permit fee of approximately $135 is issued for minor repairs. Fairly added that major violations are assigned double the permit fees and an investigation fee.

"If it's a significant issue and [landlords] have to put in submittals and blue prints and engineering and they've been working without a permit, then we work off what is called a valuation of the work. That valuation is then doubled as a fine which is determined right out of the Uniform Building Code and right out of the Uniform Housing Code," he said.

If the landlord or management company fails to make the repairs within an allotted amount of time, a $130 per day fine can be issued per violation, according to Fairly. Liability issues have been further motive for landlord cooperation, he added.

"If in the investigation of [an accident], the insurance and building inspectors find that something was altered from its original construction, it has been illegally done. It will basically absolve the insurance company from covering people," he said. "So what the business people are starting to realize is that it's a win-win-win situation for everybody."

David Russo, vice president of Bartlein and Co., a management company with properties in I.V., said that a housing inspector could alleviate frustration between tenants and landlords.

"Sometimes it takes an intermediary to choose how to solve problems," he said.

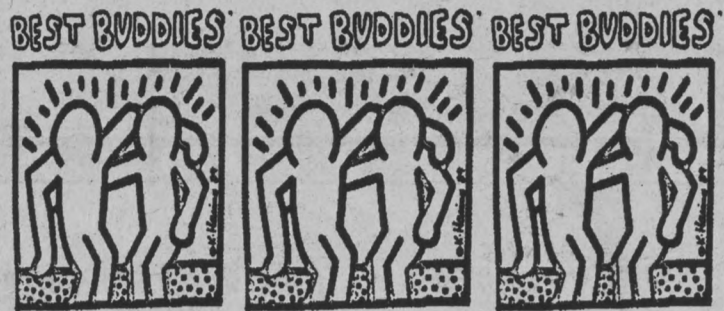

Although there is currently no Spanish complaint form, Fairly said bilingual employees are available to accommodate the Latino community.

"We're working very hard for the Hispanic population at this point," he said. "Some of their units are the more blighted units."

Potential tenants should consider possible problems before signing a lease, Fairly said.

"For example, if you sign a lease for a property and you know you're living in a garage and the garage has been converted, you better check and see if that garage has been converted without a permit. If it's not, you don't know if the ventilation or egress standards are there so we can get you out of this thing safely," he said. "Do your homework. Call my office."

Fairly can be contacted at his office, which is in the I.V. Community Services Center behind Deja Vu, at 685-3028.

Leg Council Needs Direction

Lengthy Meetings and Continued Bickering Threaten Optimism for the Rest of the School Year

It's amazing to think that although only a few weeks of this new school year have passed, Associated Students is already having major problems. These problems seem to follow A.S. wherever they go and into whatever they attempt to accomplish. The first two weeks of the quarter have sent some major shock waves through groups such as the Finance Board, Legislative Council and other boards and committees of A.S.

Wednesday night's Leg Council meeting exemplified everything that's wrong with A.S. right now, and did not point to any signs of improvement for the near future. The absurdity of a six-and-one-half hour meeting this early in the year is something that can and will provide plenty of discussion in the upcoming week before the next installment of the crazy A.S. Files.

The sheer time factor was the main problem at Wednesday night's meeting. There is absolutely no reason why anyone — including Leg Council — should be expected to sit through a meeting that lasts well into the early hours of the morning and presents repetitive and pedantic information to all those involved. People have classes to attend, studying to do and many other ways to spend their time.

Those who suffer the most are the random students who show up to Leg meetings to offer their ideas and suggestions, as A.S. constantly urges people to do. Such students who take time out of their busy schedule to attend a meeting — which in itself is a serious act of bravery — are punished by being forced to wait hours on end to say their piece while the executive officers bicker over funding. Either that or they simply get fed up and leave, possibly with an idea that could be the most important comment of the night. Although the keynote speaker was able to talk, she had to leave when the meeting exceeded its limit on people's patience and time.

Others who are punished by the epic saga of Leg Council Meetings are people such as Chancellor Yang, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Michael Young and Dean of Students Yonie Harris. All three took time out of their schedules to attend the meeting, only to find that a couple of hours into proceedings, nearly three-quarters of the agenda had not been addressed. We are lucky enough to have three such administrators at a Leg Council meeting — something which few UCs can boast — and they, too, are forced to leave and miss important proceedings due to the length of the meeting.

Something needs to be done about the problem of lengthy proceedings at Leg Council meetings. Whatever it takes to remedy the situation, it must be done and it must be done soon. It is too early in the year to set a precedent that could lead to long meetings and disputes lasting the rest of the school year.

Granted, it was the first meeting of the year and there were issues held over from the lack of a meeting the previous week. However, if things continue to occur the way they did Wednesday, the same issues and others will be rolled over to the next week's meeting time and again until proceedings will end by the first class Thursday morning. This is true, especially considering that the main topic of debate — approving Monday's Finance Board minutes — will roll over to this week, as Leg Council sent it back to Finance Board.

The lack of control evident at the meeting was also quite disturbing. As with any group of people required to attack the same issues for hours on end, both the crowd and Leg Council members became unnerved and restless. As people dozed off or passed notes to each other, no one rallied the group together to attempt to remain focused and on track.

The lack of coordination also transferred to speakers, with every person agreeing with the thoughts of the previous and proceeding to say the same thing, only in different words. This caused the meeting to drag on from the beginning, and could have quite easily been prevented with any sort of authority at all.

Also, many people need to understand that Leg Council meetings are simply meetings by and for students at a university, and not the Academy Awards. The amount of crying visible at the meeting almost brings a giggle to the face of a viewer rather than a tear to his or her eye. Many of the issues debated at the meetings are very important and involve a great deal of passion, but when a panel of people are left grabbing for a tissue, enough is enough.

These decisions need to be made rationally and with a clear head. Emotion is important to the issues involved, but not the decisions that choose their fate. The performances turned in only add to the problem and emphasize the childish manner in which much of the meeting was conducted.

Wednesday night's meeting was indicative of the attitude A.S. as a whole seems to possess. By failing to remain on agenda and appealing to minor issues, such as a private printing company refusing to print something when they have the right to do so, Leg Council displayed its ability to stall movement in the right direction.

Associated Students: Heed this warning and figure out a way to more efficiently run things, while at the same time sacrificing nothing for expediency. The only people it can help is all those involved, including yourselves.

And to the students of UCSB: Take this as your opportunity to truly voice what you think will benefit the university and yourselves as students. The way to do that is by attending the upcoming Leg Council meetings and presenting your ideas, writing your elected A.S. reps or paying them a visit with your personal concerns in their office located in the Associated Students building near the UCen.

Student participation in the way A.S. represents them is as integral a part to the campus as going to class. This university should belong to the students, and ensuring that is one of A.S.'s most important functions. We elected these reps to do exactly that, but a large part of their success depends on student cooperation.

Affirmative Act

Preferring Historically Under-Represented

LEE GIENKE

Editor, Daily Nexus:

The discussion of Affirmative Action is a hot one, for unless we want to forget our history, we have no business establishing racial and gender preferences. America is the most diverse nation in the world, and we draw our strength and our ideas from our diversity.

Two hundred and twenty-two years ago, some of the greatest minds ever to grace one room told the world of England that he was just a man, not an omniscient god that could impoverish and enslave at a mere word. They made their argument quite simply by acknowledging a "self-evident truth" by stating that "all men are created equal." To even consider repealing affirmative action on race and gender preferences is to forsake our principles of freedom, equality and individual opportunity and those that have fought and died so that these principles of freedom, equality and individual opportunity are passed on to the next generation.

We need to ask those who have a desire to repeal affirmative action: What preferences do they stand for? Do they want to lower the grade and diminish someone's accomplishment because they have worked hard, but are of a different color? Do they want a return to the destruction of the values that Americans hold as true?

With their current logic, the answer to those questions is 'yes.' Why someone would want to do hard work because of external circumstances is not common sense and undermines the importance of achievement. WE should be prouder of a higher GPA, a higher SAT score or being able to do more rather than the color of our skin. These are things we have the ability to improve if we are unhappy with our circumstances.

Under the current law, which will require

LOAN APPLICANTS: CHECK THIS OUT

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I would like to tell you about a new law that has just been signed by the president that could affect many college students or recent graduates with student loans. You've got to act quickly, however, because there is just a small window of opportunity to qualify.

The new law reduces the interest rate on new student loans by almost one percent. This means that if a student borrows $13,000, he or she will pay $700 less on their loan and a student who borrows $20,000 will pay about $1,000 less.

The law also allows recent graduates who are still paying off their debt to consolidate student loans. Borrowers have until Jan. 31, 1999 to consolidate existing loans at lower rates into the direct lending program, available to former students who have any kind of federally guaranteed loan. Current students who are in school can consolidate loans only if they have direct loans made directly by the U.S. Dept. of Education and not through banks.

If you have any questions on how the new law affects you, please

Action Reverses Injustice

Over-Represented Groups Defies the Logic It Promotes

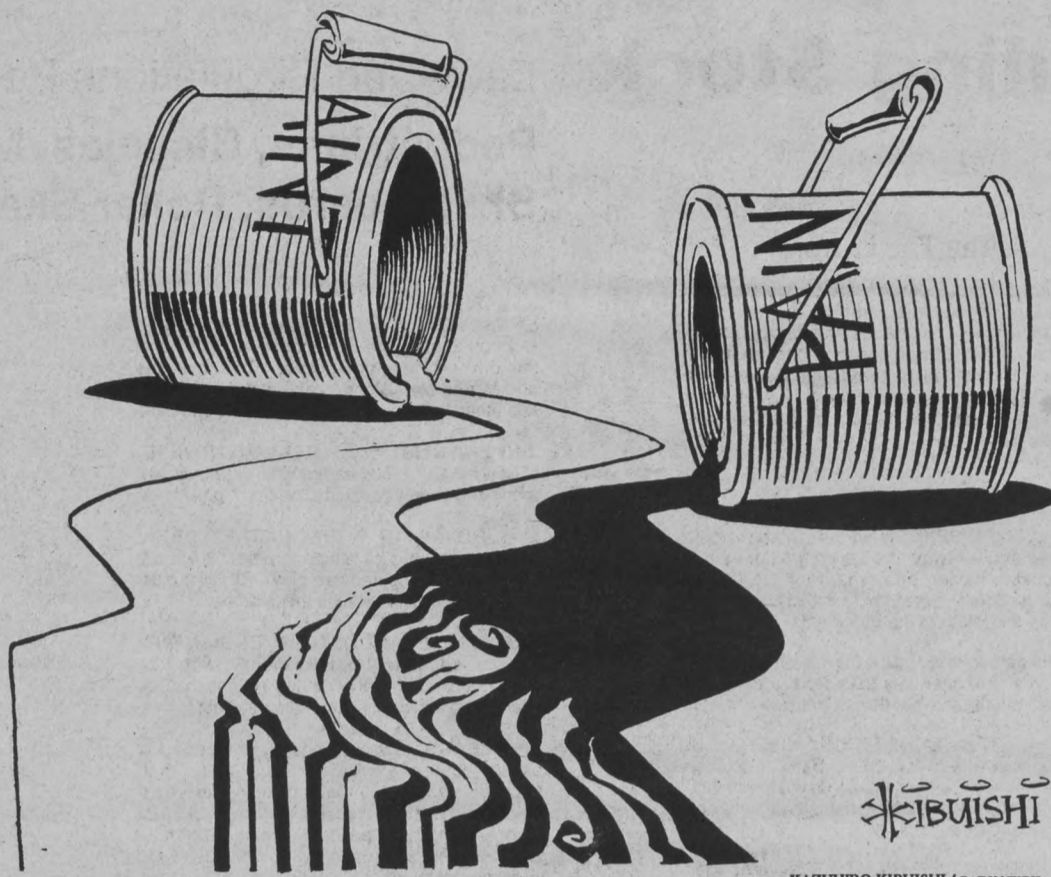

tests, no press conferences and no effort to change, we can diminish the importance of grade point averages, diminish the importance of the SAT and add race/gender neutral points for community and interscholastic activities.

Activities such as scouting, volunteering at a local hospital, participating in intramural activities or other community-orientated work has a greater effect on a person's character and does not discriminate against those born with a different skin tone. The results of race-neutral admissions may cause a campus to be multicolored and will bring students who are civic minded. Working with one's community diversifies the content of a person's color without that person being judged by the color of their skin.

The newest and most popular attempt to skirt the ban on Affirmative Action programs within the UC system is to institute a program of atonement by giving preferences to "historically under-represented groups." Historically under-represented groups are people from groups that have had a smaller presence on campus throughout the history.

Again, this defies logic because why don't we give preferential admissions to "historically under-represented" religious groups? If that were an option we might find that Jewish and evangelical Christian groups move into the "over-represented" category and by the criterion used under a policy of Affirmative Action, lose points toward their admissions. By admitting "historically under-represented groups," we begin to see that this is a poor attempt by the proponents of Affirmative Action to reinstate racial preferences.

One should also notice the word "historically." Does this mean that future generations are being made to pay for their parents' mistakes? Again, 'yes.' We, and the generations after us, are being made to pay for mistakes that our parents made. We are not our parents; we are supposed to be better than our parents and by creating preferences for "historically under-represented groups," we pay for our parents' mistakes. This runs against the grain of the ideals set by the writers of the Declaration of Independence, so soon we forget that "all people are created equal."

A bit of advice to the Associated Students and the supporters of Affirmative Action: Save your time, reread the text of the California Civil Rights Initiative and see what 54 percent of California's voters see. Look at this year's freshmen. See that they are projected to graduate at a rate higher than the previous year's freshmen.

See that they are more prepared for life at UCSB and they were admitted without racial preference. See that there is an equal opportunity accorded to all by the California Civil Rights Initiative and that racial preferences create a division in the American race. See that all people, in the words of Martin Luther King, are created equal, and have every right to be judged by the "content of their character," not on the color of their skin.

Realize that the time is now to continue to work toward the creation of a colorblind society and the reinstatement of race-based admissions are a step in the wrong direction.

Lee Gientke is the president of On-Campus Republicans.

WORK HARD AND REAP THE REWARDS

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I would like to address the article that appeared on the front page of the Nexus on Oct. 8 titled "Reps Argue Over Cash." First of all, I understand that misquotation occurs and therefore I would simply like to do the Nexus a favor and try to clear up what was printed and what was actually said.

My name is Sara Azadi. I am a rep-at-large, not an off-campus rep, as printed. Second, I would like to address what I was quoted as saying. I will not deny that I said what was printed. The fact of the matter remains that it was said during a five-minute speech in which I defended The External Vice President for Statewide Affairs and Statewide Affairs Organizing Directors. I did not believe that every time they needed money they had to go and beg for it at the Finance Board meetings — which I believe is wasting their time and energy while they could be concentrating their energy into making a difference.

What was printed was that I said, "No one should work hard for money." Taken out of context, this sounds absolutely absurd, but if it was printed in the context of what was actually said it would make sense and maybe I would not have sounded brainless. I said that the EVPSA and the SAOD should work hard for their issues, not work hard wasting their time to receive funding; and no one should have to work hard for money that can be given to them all at one time when receiving the money could allow them to make so many more positive changes on campus and address statewide issues. I hope next time when such important matters are being discussed, the Nexus will not undermine one side of the issue through misquotation.

ADVENTURE PASS IS WORTH THE MONEY

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This letter is in response to Leonard Dhein's letter titled "Adventure Pass Is Not Beneficial" in the Oct. 6 Reader's Voice section of the Nexus. His curiously abstract dribble concerned the Los Padres National Forest 'Adventure Pass' that, in a nutshell, is a $30 yearlong parking permit.

This pass saves a frequent park visitor from paying $5 to park their vehicle on every sojourn. Apparently some very concerned (or painfully bored) citizens felt this fee was unjust and decided to picket a local business that serves as a distribution point for these passes.

Somehow, these altruistic activists convinced Leonard that the Adventure Pass is an oppressive tool of the government aimed at allowing "only the more affluent people to use our public land." Furthermore, according to our friendly boycotting force, because of our involvement in the first and second World Wars, we are somehow assured the right NOT to pay for this Adventure Pass.

Now, this second point has completely eluded my comprehension Leonard, so I won't even try and address it, but I would like to say something about the first point regarding the motives behind the Adventure Pass.

I think it is entirely possible that the fee required by the National Park Service is actually justified and not unreasonable. As far as I know, Adventure Pass fees go to servicing the park. Believe it or not, it takes money to maintain trails, campsites and roads within the park, to print the complimentary and absolutely necessary maps of the area and other services utilized by the public. I can't say I know the logistics concerning federal allocation of funds or even park budgeting, but it makes sense to me that those who are using the trails, campsites, etc. should help pay for the upkeep.

I just think that somebody has grossly overanalyzed the politics of a parking permit. I doubt this money is ultimately landing in the hands of some greedy, conspiring policy maker. The local business being picketed was merely offering a distribution site for convenience and doubtfully received any monetary profit from it. And as for World War I and II ... well, I won't even go there. If all this doesn't seem simple enough, think about the fact that if you have a car to get out to the Los Padres National Forest in the first place, the $5 parking fee probably isn't putting a tremendous dent in your wallet.

Incidentally, the Los Padres National Forest charges considerably less than every national park I've ever been to.

CASH'S MISTAKE CAN TEACH US ALL

Editor, Daily Nexus:

A response to Frank Wustner's article, "Legislating Morals?" in the Nexus on Oct. 6:

I agree that we as a people must end this co-dependence on Government.

Leaning on legislation brings the Eyes of authority closer, hence threatens our personal liberties. But how then, can we deal with Cash's imperfection? We can't. It's too late.

He had his moment of truth and failed. But by seeing ourselves in him we can prevent another Atrocity by Developing and connecting Reason with Compassion. Therefore we as a people of thinkers can react, speak up! Even in political situations. Personal action lessens the need of Big Brother.

IT'S THAT SIMPLE.

This is how freedom evolves into REALITY.

Often it is hard for a witness to identify the offender because they usually flee the scene, according to I.V. resident and Santa Barbara City College student Tim Mulloy.

"Last weekend I saw people light a fire and take off right away, so it would've been pointless to call the police because they wouldn't have gotten there in time," he said.

Due to the danger associated with acts of deliberate arson, any offense will be taken very seriously, according to County Sheriff's Dept. Sgt. Ken Reinstadler.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 5 — Today looks slightly difficult, with problems at home demanding attention. Tuesday and Wednesday will be a lot more fun, but don't let it interfere with your work. Definitely put fun aside on Thursday and Friday. Accuracy is very important then. Relax over the weekend by doing whatever your mate wants.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 5 — Comfort a loved one today and get the same back in return. Your stresses get worse before they get better, as you face a work-related decision Tuesday or Wednesday. Not to worry. You'll live through it. By Thursday or Friday, you'll be ready to celebrate. The weekend will be busy again, but by then it'll be more fun.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 5 — Don't throw your money around today. You'll feel better if you save it. Over the next few days, study ways to make your sweetheart happy. Fix up your place on Thursday and Friday so you can entertain romantically over the weekend. You'll be in the mood for love. Your significant other probably will be, too, so plan ahead.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is a 5 — Someone doesn't want to mind you. Make sure you make your point, even if you have to say it three or four times. It'll be even harder tomorrow. On Thursday and Friday, an ally comes to your aid, but over the weekend a loved one will get his or her way. Stop worrying. It'll be more fun than you expected, and probably not as expensive.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is a 5 — Pressure could get uncomfortable today, but don't despair. Tuesday and Wednesday are yours. Others will jump to do your bidding. Get practical on Thursday and Friday, and you can generate more income. Spend quickly but wisely on Saturday, and share your triumph with close friends and neighbors on Sunday.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Today is a 5 — Get your money in order so you can try something bold. You'll be feeling more outrageous soon, due to Mars coming into your sign. Confusion is predicted for Thursday and Friday, but change is most possible then. A rather stressful but exciting Saturday leads to a good reason to celebrate on Sunday.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Today is a 5 — Mind an older person today and you'll make points. Help out with a team effort on Tuesday and Wednesday. The next few days are a little more difficult, as you tally your points. Neatness counts, too. You can relax on the weekend. You'll be awesome then. Besides, you'll have already won your game.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — Today is a 6 — Let a foreigner into your heart today. You'll want to keep that one there for a long, long time. Find out what an older person wants on Tuesday, so you can provide it by Wednesday. You succeed through serving well on Thursday, with the help of your friends. Put on the final touches Friday, and gather with buddies to celebrate Saturday.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is a 5 — Count your money, including what you can borrow. You may soon get an opportunity to do something you've always wanted. Looks like travel associated with education, so check out those options. Thursday and Friday, your career demands attention. There are a couple of excellent opportunities, so move quickly.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is a 5 — You're facing a challenge at work, but you can rise to the occasion. Make an older person's mind up and you could win the promotion. Count your money on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the other people's money too. Never hurts to know who has what. Wanderlust strikes Thursday through Saturday. See if you can get time off.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is a 5 — Travel is good all this week, so you really ought to be on vacation. If you still have a couple of things to do, finish them off quickly. Tuesday and Wednesday, a partner demands your attention. Shop for provisions Thursday and Friday. You'll get the best deals then. Launch your expedition on Saturday, and go through Sunday.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is a 6 — An attractive person is watching you right now, but take care. The attention may cause conflict elsewhere in your life. Tuesday and Wednesday are intense workdays. Avoid an argument with your partner on Thursday and Friday. You'll get the best deals then. Launch your expedition on Saturday, and go through Sunday.

Today's Birthday — (October 12) — Your assignment is to learn to please others. You can do it. You're a natural negotiator. Focus on the one with the most power and authority. Figure out how to make him or her look good, and you'll look good in return. Something you want for your home becomes available, and an unusual relationship provides security. There's plenty of work and plenty of money, even if you have to borrow some of it. Be willing to change to advance, and trust an old friend's advice.
