Paradise Cafe: A Veritable Garden of Eatin'!

By Stephen Lynne-Bachelor

Paradise Cafe is so good. But let me start from the beginning ...

America. I love it. If there was ever a country like this one, a place where so many different elements converge in one unlikely spot with such fantastic results, then I've never heard of it. This country is, among other things, a great place for the seemingly incongruous to sit side by side in peace. All you have to do is look out by that merchant area next to Storke Plaza to see credit card companies camped out right next to strange bead-vending types. Pachouli and credit incentives, together at last. People reaching out to serve the different needs and wants of other people — who would have thought it?

And if America is about freedom of choice, nothing can beat that spirit of healthy competition locally than the restaurants here. It would seem that Santa Barbara residents love nothing more than dining out, judging by the uncountable number of restaurants in the area. And, believe you me, there is a thick variety of eateries competing for your mastication dollar. We have everything from traditional American fare to some of the most outlandish renege cuisine that I have ever had the pleasure to notice. I think you'll agree.

This is one of the ways that we, here in America —

the land of the free, and I love it, purple mountains majesty, sweet land of liberty — keep up high quality. If your product is not nooked in the toppish notch, your business will not survive economic storms and brief-but-powerful fads. You need to outshine with class, serve with quality, win trust with affordability and never forget that the satisfaction of your patrons is your ultimate success.

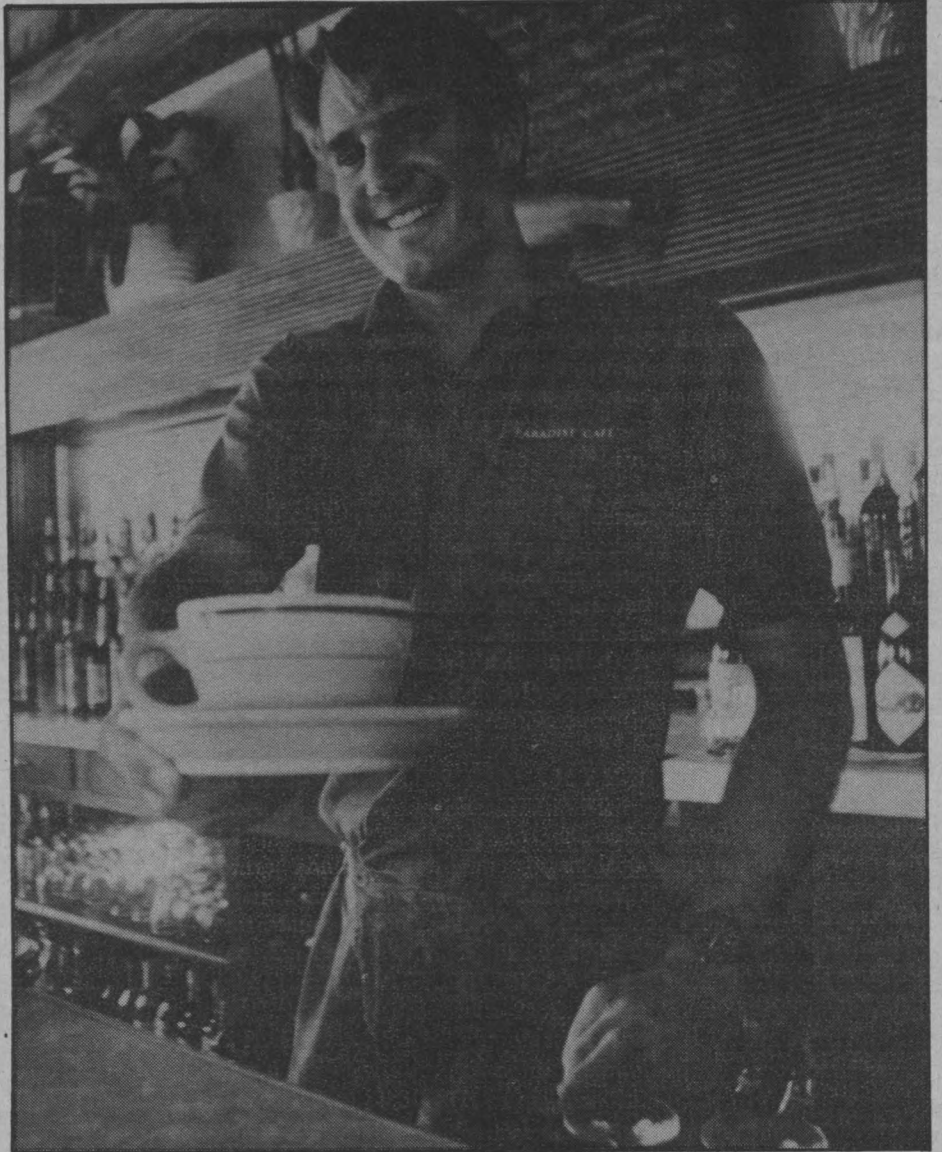

This is why Paradise Cafe gets my vote for great restaurant. Simply put, it combines all the positive aspects of America and is a superior restaurant.

Let's break it down. The Paradise Cafe excels in the area of diversity. I'm not talking about a jumbled sense of variety, where you end up with a disjointed menu of burritos and Waldorf salad, here. That is, the Paradise Cafe doesn't have an Italian food section and an American food section and a Chinese food section and all that like you see at some restaurants that try to be diverse. Instead, the Paradise Cafe has combined the best elements of a great number of food styles into one cohesive unit. Nothing seems out of place or thrown in as an afterthought.

Now, originality. Some say the overriding theme of the Paradise Cafe is "California Cuisine," but I'd be surprised if that were actually the case. True, the dishes have a health-conscious, non-heavy-handed tone and there are a lot of chicken and oak-broiled fish on the menu, as well as a number of vegetarian tour de forces. But I wouldn't confine the Paradise Cafe to such a label. While their pasta dishes are beyond reproach in tangy, good-for-you, rib-sticking, non-strictly-Italian and general tastiness terms (traditionally a sign of a successful California Cuisine restaurant), their hamburger makes no bones about giving you a thick, hot, cheese-dripping "in-of-body" experience. The black bean soup is better than any I've tasted and the salads are different than standard coffee shop iceberg lettuce fare, but not conspicuously so. You see, the Paradise Cafe is not about getting your attention cheaply with exotic lettuce, or about fitting in to some nationally obscure but locally hip restaurant trend. It is my belief that the Paradise Cafe serves "Paradise Cafe Cuisine." In this way, the Paradise Cafe stands on its own. They have truly created an original menu, overall.

And the atmosphere and service are different than what you might have become accustomed to in the '90s. The restaurant is quiet and stylish without overwhelming you with an overbearing sense of stagnant tradition or sensory inactivity. The restaurant itself, along with the truly considerate and affable waitpeople, give the patron the feeling that he or she is having a positive, actual experience. No humbug hostess or inattentive

ANDRE FAIRON/Daily Nexus

COFFEE? Paradise Cafe will do a wake-up call on your taste buds.

waiter will leave you in the lurch or make you feel like a jerk for ordering a meal with one or two slight peculiarities, like "no onions."

And if America is the "land of the free," then the Paradise Cafe follows that right up by being the "restaurant of the affordable." That's just another correlation that I thought you might like to know about.

Baja Joe's Is Sobre the Competition for Great Food and Low, Low Prices

By Gary K. Coleman

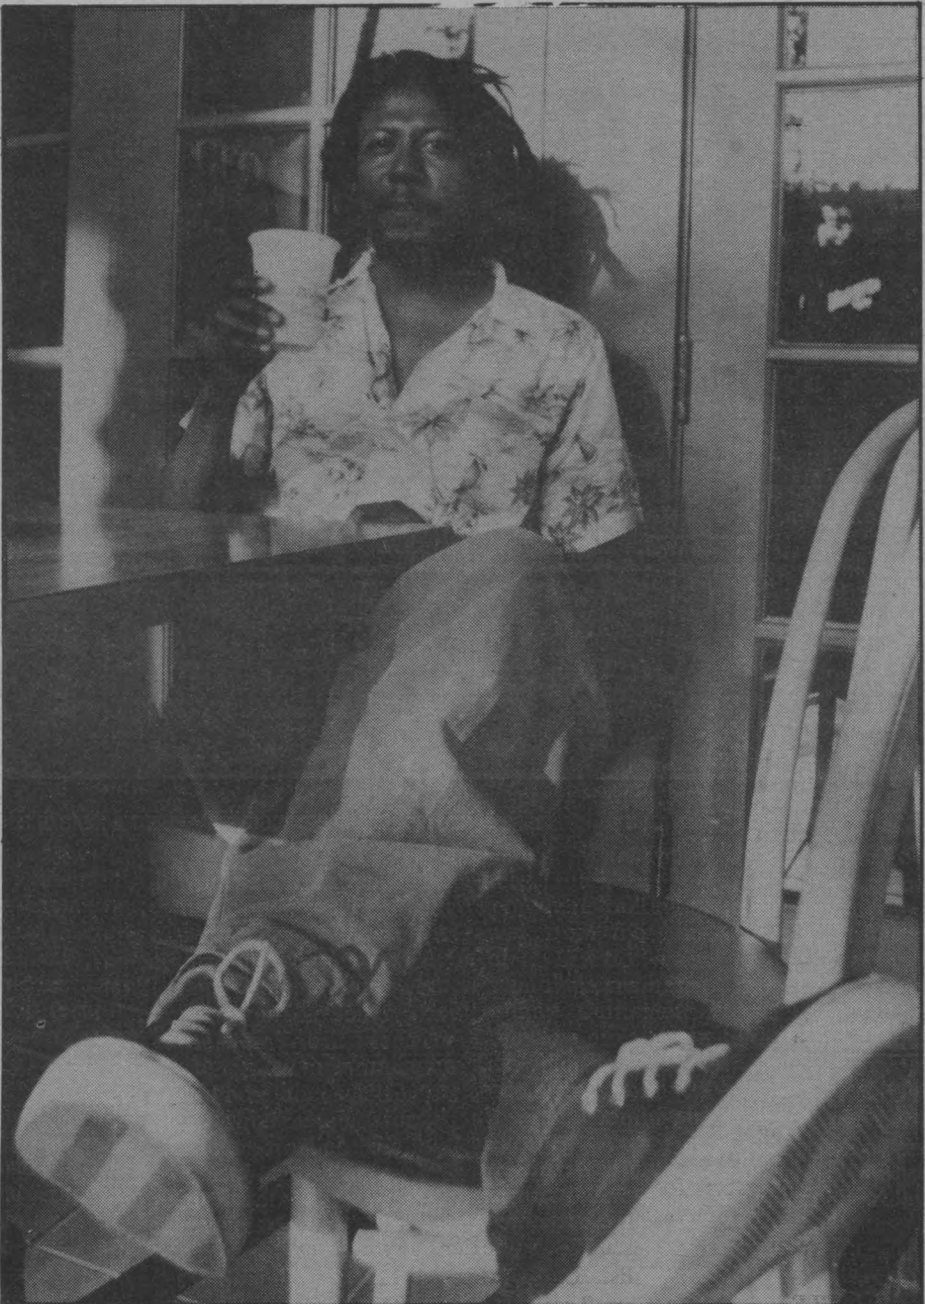

The election is over. Feeling real good about the United States of America, vote's over and, as always, the good guys and gals won. Yep, every four years we get a nice reminder of the fact that we are a free country, we get to choose our leaders and we can only blame ourselves if they turn out to be lying cheats, wife swappers and bad economic planners. Then we get to blame them for everything and make the same mistake again. What a country.

And what a state. California is the most beautiful state with the most tolerant citizens, and we even grow a lot of food. For example, Oregon doesn't grow a lot of food and they put loopy propositions on their state ballots. That doesn't happen here, no way. Yep, what a state.

What many Californians tend to forget in the rush of their prosperous and free daily pursuits is that the state of California is really only part of the bigger picture. Right across the border lies Baja, an amazingly long and undeveloped piece of the geography we call home. But just because the folks down in Baja, Mexico, don't have state water and therefore don't grow a lot of food, doesn't mean that they don't know how to cook it. No kidding, many would argue that they cook it much better than us.

I've been converted to this culinary school of thought. All because of Baja Joe's, a casual, well-lit place where a good American can feel free to express his or her love of delicious, well-stuffed burritos, tostadas overflowing with delicious toppings, salads with a distinctly south-of-the-border seafood feel (and taste) and many other delicious choices.

"Wow," said my dining companion (who claims to have experienced a lot of Mexican cuisine), "I've never seen so many delicious toppings on two enchiladas before, and there's some really tasty stuff on the inside, too." I had to agree, adding, "Yes, and nothing on the menu costs more than $4.85."

ANDRE FAIRON/Daily Nexus

RELAX — Leave the muy bien cooking to Baja Joe's.

The really impressive thing about Baja Joe's, the thing that made it really significant was that for their low price, a customer is treated just bien by Joe's creative chefs. Creativity is important with food from Baja. We all know that most Mexican fare in Santa Barbara is made up of a short list of ingredients: tortillas, beans, rice, chicken or steak, 'course some guac, salsa and some cheese. This is to be expected. What is not to be expected is the interesting and eye-pleasing, tastebud-igniting way in which these combos are prepared.

Baja Joe's decor is very Southern California, almost as much as its food is Baja-ish. There are fish jumping out of the walls, ceiling, everywhere. There were so many fish that when I used the restroom, I was surprised there were none swimming around in the sink (then I remembered that Baja Joe's is much too high-class a place to let something like this happen). There are surfers too, and pirates and surfboards, and treasure chests, and nice clean tables, and ceiling fans and paintings of surfing sharks with tapped kegs on the back of their boards.

And a fridge full of beer. And kegs full of other beer. I mean these guys have a lot of beer, of all kinds, and they'll sell it to you if you can prove that you are of legal age. Domestic, imports, pitchers, glasses, bottles, cans, they have it all. And you can too. With free chips with your meal. This is the right way to do things in our great state.

And what a state it is! What a country!

POISED — 1000 Watt Don Scott doesn't mess around with dinky props, no.

Interview: 1000 Watt Don Scott on Loverboy, Laser Shows! Ohm Man!

By Stephen Lynne-Bachelor

What can one expect if they hire 1000 Watt Don Scott?

Most anybody who has thrown a big, successful, DJ-driven party in Santa Barbara has heard of 1000 Watt Don Scott. It's no surprise, really.

His experience, equipment, professional attitude and gargantuan music selection have made 1000 Watt Don Scott and his talented crew a local party matter-of-course. If the party is intended to rock, then rock like dervish it will. If the wedding is a quiet, tie-ed affair, then the music floats mellow and pleasant. It's all in a day's work for a man who names himself after a tremendous amount of electricity. He's a man who says he hits to a 16 or 17 when the dealer is showing a five. He's a man who intends and delivers the party scene general. He's 1000 Watt Don Scott: DJ for hire. He'd like to rock your world, if you'll give him a chance.

The Weekend Connection had the pleasure of speaking with the man recently. An edited transcript follows.

Weekend Connection:

Don Scott: The largest music selection, the biggest light show and the best equipment all around with some good DJs. We have a very good light show and we just spent mega bucks on a big laser light show that was pretty much geared to Isla Vista and stuff. It's so big it's taken us a little while to learn how to run it! The light show is something we'd like to be known for, because it's perfect for Isla Vista.

Weekend Connection: Do you get a lot of business in Isla Vista?

Don Scott: Yeah. Every year's a little different, you know. It's been growing, though, because of our music selection. We try to keep up with what everybody wants, young and old. We spend a lot of money. (laughs)

Weekend Connection: So somebody would hire you for one of their big parties and you would come out and rock the house or not rock the house, depending on what kind of party it was.

Don Scott: Yeah, hopefully. We've got over 600 CDs on the system that I work and a cordless mike and a great light show even without the big laser light show. That just adds to it. We need a computer wiz to get over here and really run the thing right.

Weekend Connection: By "laser light show," what exactly do you mean?

Don Scott: Well, have you ever seen ZZ Top or one of those groups that have a huge laser light show?

Weekend Connection: In concert?

Don Scott: Yeah, at the Forum or something.

Weekend Connection: I saw Loverboy ... (uncomfortable laugh)

Don Scott: That must have been a long time ago.

Weekend Connection: About eight years ago.

Don Scott: Yeah, I saw that one, too. That was OK. The one we have blows that one away.

Weekend Connection: Wow.

Don Scott: We're offering the laser show free in November.

Weekend Connection: Free?

Don Scott: Yeah.

Weekend Connection: Is that because you don't have a computer wiz to run it?

Don Scott: That's one of the reasons; we want some practice running it. And we want some exposure with it.

Weekend Connection: What's your favorite type of party to DJ?

Don Scott: Well, frat parties are fun because everybody's dancing and going crazy and having fun. And sometimes you get a wedding where you just play background music all day and they feed you and stuff like that. So there's two kinds of good parties.

Weekend Connection: What's the coolest thing you've ever done?

Don Scott: I survived two US festivals. I'll leave that one to your imagination.

Weekend Connection: And is there anything you'd like to say to the people, the students of UCSB, the peace-loving people of the world?

Don Scott: Well ... "party on."

1000 Watt Don Scott is available for parties of all types. For information, phone 962-8979.

For Authentic Goodness, Head to Acapulco! You Won't Sulk, No!

By Sally Trinkka

Oh, it's been years since I've breathed the scent of authentic Mexican food — not since I was back in good ole Nuevo Mexico where the heat is dry and everyone wears Wranglers, where the tumbleweeds are bigger than Texas, where the chile is hot enough to clear W.C. Fields' sinuses, where the license plates say "New Mexico, USA" and where the state flower is actually a cactus. But as soon as I walked into Acapulco's restaurant, I knew I was home.

I was invited in by both the Southwestern atmosphere and the amiable hostess who offered to seat me either on the large outdoor patio or inside the spacious dining area. When I see peach and teal decor like this, I know it's going to be authentic. The only thing that kept me from stopping at their full wet-bar for a few frosty margaritas was the thought of the tantalizing food awaiting me.

Little did I know, however, that I had arrived just in time to catch the Early Bird special when all the entrees are half price. The crazy thing is they do this five days a week: Monday through Friday between 4 and 5 p.m.! This was even better than home!

After a couple of bowls of homemade tortilla chips and delectable salsa, I was ready to order. However, I was a bit hesitant to jump right into the hot stuff and decided to whet my palate by starting with an appetizer of "burro wings" — chicken wings with a mild yet remarkably tasty sauce. These "burros," unlike their donkey namesake, certainly weren't slow to prime me for the flavors of the old country.

At this point, I felt confident enough to handle the real Mexican cuisine I had grown up on — the cilantro, the guacamole, the roasted chili. Fortunately, my cravings were satisfied by an enormous platter of chicken fajitas complete with refried beans, Spanish rice and pico de gallo. The chicken was smothered with sweet onions, bell peppers and topped with a piquant sauce (that means spicy to you non-natives). There was enough food to make three or four hearty fajitas.

And even though I was amply satisfied, I just couldn't resist having the traditional Mexican desert — flan, a light custard with a caramel topping. It's sweet but not too rich or filling, a perfect dessert to follow that enormous meal. Next time I might go crazy and try the apple chimi because that's a great name for a dessert and also because it's a fried burrito with a cinnamon-apple filling topped with ice cream and whipped cream. I don't know what sounds better — the name or what's inside of it.

Although I knew exactly what I wanted to eat that night, my novice-authentic-Mexican-food-eating friends will be happy to try out Acapulco's buffet where they can sample the many traditional dishes they have to offer including tacos, enchiladas and burritos. I'm certain the friendly folks who work at Acapulco's would be happy to offer any suggestions if they are too overwhelmed by the number of tempting choices.

In the end, my pride was somewhat wounded by the fact that I just couldn't finish the mountain of food that they doled out so generously. But being the hospitable Southwesterners that they are, they packed it up for me, a dream come true for a New Mexican — being able to take a little piece of home back home.

Cattlemen's Restaurant: Refuge From the Hurly-Burly of an Election Year

By Bunyan Valentine

When we walked into Cattlemen's Restaurant, Bill Clinton had a lead of less than 100 electoral college votes. Sunni and I were nervously optimistic, chattering quietly about whether the lead would hold, whether the South would swing to Bush, what would happen in the Rust Belt.

When we left, Ohio had just come in, and the Arkansas governor had it wrapped up with 286 electors.

But during the hour and a half we sat in Cattlemen's, we didn't give the elections a second thought.

Cattlemen's is the kind of place where you can't talk about politics, no. You can haggle over North American Free Trade agreements and such things over burritos at a Mexican restaurant, and you can debate the merits of Francois Mitterand's hair at an open-air cafe, but when you're at Cattlemen's, you'll have no part of that silly business, thank you very much.

Cattlemen's is an American restaurant down to the bone, and as much as good ol' U.S. eateries might seem just the place to quibble over urban housing policy, it doesn't happen in the dining room at Cattlemen's, no.

Now you might find a few political rabble-rousers in Cattlemen's saloon spread, where one of two large-screen televisions was broadcasting election results on Tuesday. With its comfy feel, full bar and wide open rooms, the saloon lends itself to a good conversation about how you could vote for your scalawag of choice.

But once you're back in that dining room, you'll just want to sit back and enjoy what you're doing right then. The closest thing you'll get to a commander in chief is a chef who is obviously in command. No debates, no newspaper endorsements, no George Will. The future of America can wait; you're relaxing at Cattlemen's.

ANDRE FAIRON/Daily Nexus

As if the decor — which combines traditional western art, modest furnishings, cactus and farm tools — wasn't enough to set your mind at ease and carry it far away from the hurly-burly world outside, the vittles at Cattlemen's will do the trick, boy.

Cattlemen's serves up a steak just like you'd expect, but they don't stop there, no. They've got fresh seafood specials every night, many of which come on beds of tender pasta, on top of their regular list of a half dozen more entrées de la mer. But even that didn't satisfy the chef in command at Cattlemen's, who also added a generous selection of chicken dinners, all of which sound quite tempting, to an already full menu.

Add to this a salad bar that puts Sizzler to leafy green shame, as well as some darn fine New England clam chowder, and you've got yourself some fine eatin', yes. This is the only place I know in Santa Barbara where the salad bar is routinely stocked with marinated artichoke hearts, a house tahini/poppy seed dressing, jicama and fresh olives — just to name a few of the niceties — as well as all the regular ingredients.

It's in the entrees that Cattlemen's really shines. Their seafood tortellini — a bowl of tender white and spinach tortellini, filled with cheese, surrounded by scallops and prawns and drowned in a rich lobster sauce — is exquisite and unbelievably filling. The scallop medallions, served in a tangy basil sauce, melted away in my mouth, leaving plenty of room for a baked potato smothered in butter, sour cream and chives and accompanied by a mound of crunchy steamed vegetables.

When you're looking to get away from the flim-flam of an election year, there's perhaps no better refuge than Cattlemen's, no. The prices are a bit on the high side (at least for my student budget), but a bit of serenity amid the storm is well worth it.

Cattlemen's Restaurant is located at 3744 State St. in Santa Barbara. Open 5 to 10 p.m. nightly; Sunday brunch from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Prices range from $6.95 to $21.95. Phone 687-2828.

LOCAL COLOR Anaconda

Get ready to rock once again I.V. because Public Enemy is coming back. P.E. will take the stage this Monday night (November 9) at the Anaconda. Coming out of the New York hip hop style, Public Enemy is one of the most conscious rap bands to ever hit the scene. The boldness in Chuck D's lyrics combined with the powerful beats and Flavor Flav's wacky stage antics make for one hell of a show that you won't want to miss. See ya there.
