Fee Hikes a Prospect for Funding UC Quake Relief

By Duke Conover
Staff Writer

With an estimated $22 million in damage to the University of California at Los Angeles from last month's earthquake, University officials are scrambling for funds from governmental agencies, while considering an increase in student fees.

UCLA Chancellor Charles E. Young told students on Jan. 24, after filing a notice of intent to seek out Federal Emergency Management Administration funding, that a systemwide increase in student fees would not be ruled out as a way of deferring costs.

Although UCLA officials refused to discuss the damage in dollar amounts, figures from the California State Assembly's Committee on Higher Education estimate that $3 million in structural repairs to UCLA's Royce Hall and $19 million in instructional repairs to replace computers and medical equipment will be needed at the Los Angeles campus.

"It's believed that students could expect anywhere from a $50 to $300 additional fee increase for next year to cover damage at UCLA," said a state education analyst in Sacramento who chose to remain nameless. "These are just early estimates, though. Nothing is conclusive until FEMA commits

Interviewing for Chancellor Candidates Will Commence

By Chris George
Staff Writer

Interviews for the UCSB chancellor position may commence this month, as an advisory committee charged with selecting the finalist plans to reveal its candidate of choice in March.

The Joint Committee to Advise the President on the Selection of a Chancellor for the Santa Barbara Campus met last Thursday in Oakland, narrowing the list to four candidates and one alternate, according to committee member and Associated Students President Geoff Green.

"Four candidates are left, and potentially a fifth if one of the first four declines to be interviewed," Green said.

However, committee member and biology Professor Alice Alldredge said additional candidates are still involved in the query. "The list is longer [than five]," she said. "There is a prioritized list, but our top can-

Adaptation of Smith v. Regents Up to Students

Group Funding, Fee Range on Winter Ballot

By Lisa Sato
Staff Writer

Special Winter Quarter elections will be held later this month to decide how the campus will comply with a controversial California Supreme Court ruling that restricts funding to student organizations.

The Smith v. University of California Regents decision prohibits the UC from using mandatory student fees, allocated by Associated Students and the Graduate Students Assn., to fund groups whose activities are considered ideological, political or religious.

Due to the importance of the ruling, the elections will take place as an effort to draw more attention to the issues, said A.S. President Geoff Green. They will be held on March 1-2 for undergraduates and Feb. 22-March 2 for graduate students.

"We're voting on ways to deal with Smith," Green said. "Essentially, we're trying to separate this issue which we feel is very important from the politicking of a normal spring election. This can get lost in referendums, lock-ins and candidates, and this is much more important and will last much longer than any of those."

Smith prohibits all lobbying activities outside the University, which include those historically carried out by the UC Student Assn. on behalf of students systemwide. Because UCSA can no longer receive funding via mandatory fees, the UC Lobby Corps has been created to conduct the functions, and will be funded by the proposed voluntary fees.

The special ballot will address two issues regarding the UCLC. The first is whether the voter favors supporting a voluntary fee collection mechanism for the group; the second is the question of whether setting a fee range is necessary.

Voting in favor of the initiatives does not bind the voter to paying the fees, but it does establish the opportunity for students to continue funding the organization in question. Because they are voluntary, students would pledge or agree to donate a predetermined sum of money, Green said.

Aaron Jones, A.S. vice president for UCSA, said failure of the measure to pass would significantly curtail student representation at the state level.

"There would be no lobbying external to the University next year in Sacramento at the [state] Legislature. This is the crux of the future student voice in Sacramento," Jones said.

Jones believes students will support the UCLC measure, but said it is paramount that students understand that voting in favor of the collection mechanism does not obligate them to pay the proposed fee.

"So long as students understand that they're not assessing fees, they're voting to institute the mechanism to collect a voluntary fee, I think they'll vote in favor of it. I think if we do a good job and educate everyone, we'll get a good response," he said.

Although UCSA President Don Daves believes students will support UCLC, if the prop-

Office of the President Spokesman Mike Alva was unsure about the current state of University monies in the African nation. "They may have already or they may not have yet [reinvested]," he said. "We're following [Mandela's] call, and his call is a result of changes in South Africa."

Economics Professor Rajnish Mehra believes reinvesting in South Africa will strengthen the University's financial standing. "It'll benefit us because we'll have a larger diversification of the UC's portfolio," he said.

See AFRICA, p.12

The University of California may reinvest in South Africa, reversing an eight-year policy instituted to protest the country's apartheid policies.

Responding to African National Congress President Nelson Mandela's call to end economic sanctions against the nation, the UC Board of Regents voted unanimously last November to reinvest in South Africa.

The University began withdrawing its assets in 1986 after then-Gov. George Deukmejian proposed sanctions to protest the nation's segregationist laws. The regents also discon-

Marine Wounds Self After Killing Two

CAMP PENDLETON (AP) — A young Marine who kidnapped his estranged wife and killed two people who tried to intervene shot himself in the head Monday after freeing his wife, police said.

The bloody 18-hour string of events ended at noon when Lance Cpl. Timothy Clemons, 22, of Chicago put a gun to his head after being confronted by military police at his old barracks.

His wife, Debra Hearn, who was granted a temporary restraining order two weeks ago, persuaded Clemons to release her after he abducted her Sunday night and drove to Mexico, said Carlsbad police Lt. Michael Shipley.

The two returned by bus to Carlsbad on Monday morning. Hearn called her parents while Clemons went to the base.

Clemons was in critical but stable condition at the Naval Hospital in San Diego, said base Master Sgt. John Farrell.

On Sunday evening, Clemons had shot to death two of Hearn's friends on a sidewalk outside the Carlsbad shopping mall where Hearn worked, Shipley said.

As horrified bystanders looked on, Clemons confronted his wife as she left work about 6:30 p.m. When the two friends waiting to drive her home tried to intervene, Clemons shot both, Shipley said.

Monique Mejia, 18, described as Hearn's roommate, died in surgery at Palomar Medical Center. A 21-year-old man, whose name had not been released, was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital.

Clemons then grabbed his wife and took off in his car, Shipley said. On Monday morning, after driving to Tijuana and threatening his wife, he agreed to take a bus back to Carlsbad, a San Diego suburb.

After leaving Hearn at the bus station, Clemons returned to the barracks where he had lived before marrying, Farrell said.

Someone at the barracks called police. When an MP approached with a gun and ordered Clemons to surrender, Clemons shot himself, Farrell said.

Clemons, a field radio operator in the Marines for three years, tried to choke and suffocate his wife on Jan. 16 after picking her up at work, according to Hearn's application for a restraining order.

She described him as "violent and aggressive" in the handwritten application. On Jan. 28, Clemons was ordered by a Superior Court judge to stay 100 yards away from both Hearn and Mejia.

Clinton Endorses Air Strikes Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration called on its allies Monday to extend a protective shield to civilians in Sarajevo by threatening air strikes if Bosnian Serbs continue their attacks. No more empty threats, the president said.

The aim is to end the siege of the Bosnian capital, where 68 civilians were killed and some 200 injured in a mortar attack on a Muslim marketplace on Saturday.

It would require a change of heart by many of the European governments to whom the Clinton administration has assigned the primary responsibility for ending the fighting in the Balkans.

In Houston, Clinton was asked why the Serbs should take this latest threat of air strikes seriously, given the West's previous saber-rattling.

"Let's see what happens in the next couple of days," the president said. "You know what I feel about that. I don't think we should have any more empty threats."

Last year, the NATO allies blocked a U.S. appeal to both lift an arms embargo against the Muslim-led government and to bomb Bosnian Serb artillery and mortar sites if attacks continued.

Partly out of concern that U.N. peacekeepers might get caught in the crossfire, the allies shied away from forceful intervention. Continued bloodletting in what Secretary of State Warren Christopher called "unacceptable actions" by the Serbs is expected this time to result in allied unity.

"We expect the North Atlantic Council will decide on a course of action, on an overall strategy, within the next few days," Christopher said after President Clinton's senior advisers met for a second day at the White House.

The NATO meeting will be held on Wednesday in Brussels, Belgium. The ambassadors to NATO from the 16 allied countries are expected to attend.

In Brussels, European Union foreign ministers urged the NATO nations on Monday to use all means to lift the siege of Sarajevo, including the use of air power.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali asked the NATO allies on Sunday to authorize use of air power in response to the shelling of Sarajevo.

Clinton, in a speech in Houston, said he had long hoped the U.N. official would take the step. The president said, however, that "until those folks get tired of killing each other over there, bad things will continue to happen."

Christopher said he expected the NATO Council to approve Boutros-Ghali's proposal to give commanders on the ground authority to call for air attacks. But beyond the "narrow" request, Christopher stressed that the allies would consider a range of other actions.

Osaka Planning Future Metamorphosis

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — What Japanese metropolis claims a gross product roughly equal to Spain's and more than twice that of Sweden or South Korea? If you guess Tokyo, as most people do, you're wrong.

The right answer is Greater Osaka, Japan's second largest urban area, a confused sprawl that one-sixth of Japan's 125 million people call home.

Like virtually all provincial cities, Osaka has a recognition problem. For all its size and wealth, it is forever lost in Tokyo's shadow.

"Yes, yes, I know," Kenichi Nagata, the chief city planner, said testily. "Tokyo is the center of Japan's culture, of its politics, of its economy, of its everything. How are we supposed to compete with that?"

Osaka's answer, which Nagata explains with the help of a table full of maps and advertising brochures, is a new international airport first, then maybe the Olympics.

"We need something to help shape our identity as a city," he said, thumbing through a glossy booklet in English called "Putting Osaka on the World Map."

Osaka officially kicked off its campaign for the 2008 Olympics in January. The $10-billion airport is under construction on a manmade island in Osaka Bay, 22 miles from Nagata's office in city hall. It is to open in September, 15 months late and $3 billion over the original budget.

Those problems notwithstanding, officials see the airport as the beginning of a 21st-century metamorphosis. More than 900 parallel projects costing about $350 billion are underway or planned.

"The idea is to make Osaka the gateway to Asia," said Tomoaki Ando, an aide to Nagata.

"The Asian-Pacific region is growing fast and we hope to capitalize on that."

With a recession entering its fourth year, prospects are less rosy than they seemed when the airport project began in 1987. But Osaka hopes the airport, aggressive promotion and its traditionally close ties with other Asian trading centers — Seoul and Taipei in particular — will help lure business away from Tokyo.

Osaka, 255 miles west of Tokyo, has long been the economic hub of western Japan and is headquarters for some of the country's best-known trading companies, banks and textile makers. Matsushita Electric Industrial, known for its Panasonic brand, is among them.

Private Support to UC Increasing

By Jill Hancock
Reporter

Private gifts to the University of California reached an all-time high last year, enriching the academic enterprise and helping the system maintain its standing as a top-notch institution, official reports said.

The UC system garnered $472.4 million in donations from corporations and private individuals in 1992-93, most of which were designated to specific campuses and departments by the donors. This figure has doubled in the last decade, growing from $256.7 million in 1983-84, the Office of the President report said.

Private support accounts for approximately 5% of the UC's total funding. This proportion has remained constant for the past decade. These funds fill in where state funding falls short, financing campus services such as the library, athletics and specific programs, according to Assistant Vice Chancellor for Development Mike Vorhaus.

"If there was no private contributions we would definitely need more state funding," he said.

Although private gifts to UCSB dipped from just over $15 million in 1992 to $13.5 million in 1993, this can be attributed to the decline in nonmonetary gifts such as computers and equipment. Monetary gifts, primarily from individual donors, increased by 16%, according to The UCSB Foundation Annual Report of Private Giving.

The monetary increase has supported several student services, according to Steve Waggener, UCSB Foundation chief financial officer. "In the fiscal year ending June 30, $1,611,389 went towards student support, including financial aid, scholarships and fellowships," he said.

Donations to UCSB come in two forms: restricted gifts, which are designated to specific areas, and unrestricted gifts, which the foundation board of trustees distributes to different campus entities.

A large portion of the undesignated contributions are allocated to the Development Office,

I.V. Council to Discuss Drug Raid

The Isla Vista Community Advisory Council convenes tonight to discuss a local drug raid and hear UCSB respond to a proposed parking permit program for I.V.

Columba Quintero, a UCSB student who chairs the council, said members hope to have law enforcement representatives on hand to inform the group about the raids that took place last year.

"Some of the people involved in some of the cases are going to fill us in on what happened,"

Quintero said.

Assistant Chancellor for Budget and Planning Bob Kuntz is expected to present a letter outlining the university's concerns with the county's preliminary proposal to issue parking permits to I.V. residents.

According to Associated Students External Vice President Mark Milstein, the letter indicates that the administration is not completely satisfied with the proposal.

"This is my impression [of the university's position] ... the parking permit plan, the way that it is designed, does not constitute an overall transportation design," he said.

In additional business, members of Familias Unidas will outline issues that concern I.V.'s Latino population for the IVCAC to relay to 3rd District Supervisor Willy Chamberlin, Quintero said.

Continued from p.1 to how much they're going to cover. But it's believed that student fees will certainly have to go up."

Historically, student fees have been used to pay for University costs not related to education. However, last month the UC Board of Regents approved a long-term fee policy that allows student monies to be used for educational purposes such as teacher salaries and instructional equipment.

"When they approved the fee policy, they gave the Office of the President the authority to backfill any deficit or lack of revenue to the UC budget," said Aaron Jones, A.S. vice president of the UC Student Assn. "Using fees for these kinds of repairs is a perfect example of why that decision is so scary."

Al Solomon, assistant vice chancellor of administration at UCLA, was unwilling to comment on the expected price tag of repairs, but said that "a variety of sources — none of which are student fees" could be used to rebuild and replenish the campus.

Monies had been set aside by UCLA to retrofit buildings, and officials are also looking toward more advanced educational systems such as "virtual reality laboratories and libraries," said Andy Shaw, chief consultant for Assemblywoman Marguerite Archie-Hudson (D-Los Angeles).

"There is a lot of talk about creating virtual chemical labs where experiments can be simulated instead of acted out," Shaw said. "Most experiments can be conducted on computer. We don't need to have every student with test tubes in their hands."

Shaw believes that although the regents and the University have their decision protected by the state constitution, they would be "shooting themselves in the foot" if they actually try to raise fees to defer costs. Sacramento lawmakers will not tolerate another fee increase this year, he said.

"Legally there is nothing we could do to stop them, but I don't think that action would sit too well with the [California] Legislature," Shaw said. "The Legislature controls the purse strings, so I don't think the regents would be interested in burning their financial bridges."

VOTE

osed fee mechanism is voted down, the group will seek other options to fund the lobbying segment of the group.

"I'm pretty confident we'll be able to get the measure passed," Daves said. "We've discussed other mechanisms — fund raising, looking at grant writing. There are still other options and backup plans in case the measure does not pass."

The second question on the special ballot will ask students whether they favor establishing a voluntary fee mechanism for student organizations that, under Smith, are no longer eligible for mandatory student fees. Setting a limit on the amount of the fee will also be addressed on the ballot.

Green said that all student organizations are being asked to identify their individual purposes and activities, to determine if they qualify for the mandatory or voluntary fees.

"There are some groups who aren't going to say they're not political, and they'll no longer receive student fees," Green said. "We're trying to help out groups like that. There's no excuse that these groups or these points of views should be eliminated. We're trying to make sure this doesn't happen."

Chancellor Barbara Uehling is footing the bill for the special elections — up to $10,000 for all costs incurred. The election itself will cost $8,000, and the remainder will be used for educational purposes, Green said.

Bryant Wieneke, Uehling's special assistant, said the monies are coming from funds the chancellor has authority to allocate from at her discretion. "Since it [the ruling] is being imposed on the students, the chancellor did not think it was fair that the students should pay for it," he said.

A 20% student body turnout is required to validate the winter elections, and a majority vote is necessary for the voluntary fee collection mechanisms to take effect in fall 1994.

"Our biggest challenge is to get people to vote. Special elections are notorious for small turnouts," Green said. "The burden lies on us, those who know about Smith, to educate everyone we possibly can. I'm confident if people know what it means, it won't be a problem to secure enough votes to implement a voluntary fee mechanism."

A.S. Executive Director Tamara Scott said options for the collection mechanism — such as a positive or negative checkoff, or a pledge system — must be approved by the regents before the monies can be collected. "It will take a decision from the regents before the mechanism can be implemented," she said.

"Far more crucial than what we know or do not know is what we do not want to know."

—Eric Hoffer

The Real Test Question

So You're Here At a Higher Learning Institution...But Why?

Editorial

Responsibility takes on as many forms as there are people. And one responsibility students at the University of California are faced with is an academic obligation to become actively engaged in the learning process.

Sounds pretty basic, but what does it mean? Is it simply a matter of dragging one's ass out of bed on time and doing well on a test? Is it even possible to define this duty in a single sentence?

As with anything, one can start with this premise: To do anything well, a person must first understand why he or she is doing it. So it is with a university education, or any particular course of study within the disciplines offered at a college campus.

So why are we here? Some students are pursuing a degree in the hopes that it will allow them to find quality employment, whether that means a job they will really enjoy or just one that will bring in the biggest paycheck. In this respect, college is a stop along the way.

Others, however, are in school out of a genuine love for learning. They may have found that they enjoy an atmosphere of intellectualism, or perhaps they feel more at home in academe. For them, learning is its own reward.

It is not the place of the Nexus Editorial Board to judge such matters; people all over are trying to find their niches in the world by their individual means. Our society needs both thinkers and doers — the woman who believes her contribution will be made by pursuing a teaching credential and hits the books relentlessly, and the man who meditates upon East African civilizations and tries to make their lessons relevant today by talking to his friends in the dining commons.

All too often, however, we encounter people who have several years at a university under their belts, but still confess to having no idea why they are here. For many of us, and this is not a bad thing, college was simply what came after high school — we went because our parents wanted us to or because we wanted the opportunity to get away from home.

But it is necessary that we go beyond this reasoning if we plan to stay in school. It doesn't make sense to just be taking up space here when there are others knocking at the Ivory Tower's door. There is obvious value to simply attempting to live independently — you don't have to be enrolled in a university to justify it. If you can't figure out why you're pursuing your particular major, there's something wrong.

Which brings us to the issue of responsibility and learning. In a very basic sense, we are university students because we are here to learn. In addition, we have a responsibility to do more than simply remember facts and theories; we must apply what we learn, give it life by making it important.

This is not to say that all our learning must take the form of curricular education. We learn by creating an atmosphere for expanding our perspectives — we should never stop learning, never stop growing. The university environment presents a unique chance to do this. It is our responsibility to make good on this opportunity.

We at the UC are supposed to be the best of the best that California can produce; we can do what we set our minds to. If you find that your professor cannot tell you why his or her class is important, challenge him or her to come up with an answer. But first, you must ask; first, you must care. It is our responsibility to take steps toward making the academic relationship dynamic, making the exchange of ideas an ongoing vibrant process.

Perhaps some of us can remember from our childhood coming home from school and being asked, "So, what did you learn in school today?" and having to make something up because we didn't feel we did learn anything. That time is over. If you're not learning anything in school and somebody is paying thousands of dollars for it, you are being irresponsible.

It needn't be a huge enterprise to learn, it can be as simple as taking one idea and making it real, not just words on paper. Words on paper are nice, but the old gray matter has to be involved as well.

We cannot print letters or columns without names and phone numbers, so do not submit them. Do submit letters or columns with names and phone numbers.

After hundreds of thousands of deaths in the name of the United Nations finally seems ready to take a tough stance in the former Yugoslavia. On Sunday, U.N. Sec. Boutros-Ghali formally asked NATO to begin air strikes in the region. President Clinton seems willing to do so. However, other NATO leaders are less enthusiastic about ending the carnage.

This hesitancy is understandable, though. Military action could easily turn into a bloody quagmire for all parties involved. That air strikes alone will not bring about an end to the war, and the Serbs to the bargaining table, but numerous truces have been taken before.

Last spring, Clinton advocated sending U.S. ground troops. A peace treaty could be signed, not to make war, but to end peace.

Clinton then went on to express his concern for the spread of the nearby provinces of Kosovo and Macedonia to lead to Greek intervention. When confronted by the prospect of U.S. regional involvement, Clinton acknowledged that he would not end the conflict, but believed that at least "contained."

Instead of air strikes or other military intervention, there is a peaceful solution to the conflict. Bombing innocent civilians, but leads to an escalation of force. The presence of ground troops into a mountainous region to hunt down a small number of questionable U.S. national security interest. It is not Bosnians are dying, but adding Americans to the slaughter.

What the U.N. should do is to, as Henry Kissinger advised, send Muslims and Croats all agree to a modest, autonomous U.N. troops could then simply patrol the border of this region. Serbs only when attacked. These ground forces could be used to enforce the arms embargo against the Bosnian Muslims.

In addition, the arms embargo against the Bosnian Muslims, then, once the Muslims have strong defensive capabilities, could assume the border patrol duties. The U.N. should hold free elections in the region to protect civilians from the Serbs. An agreement should also entail all sides freeing their prisoners.

On Friday, President Clinton authorized lifting the arms embargo against Vietnam. This action marks the end of an era. After 15 years of deaths, numerous soldiers left unaccounted for and a president in power, the U.S. government is finally admitting that a war in Vietnam was a humiliating failure.

What Savings?

Jon Stone

The recently approved "equity adjustments" (i.e., salary raises) of $7,024 and $10,900 that Chancellor Barbara Uehling recommended for two nonacademic vice chancellors in her administration, together with the more than $100,000 in merit increases that each of them has already received, have all the markings of cronyism, a cronyism most subtle and cynical.

It is subtle in that Chancellor Uehling has seen to it that her friends and associates are benefited by monies that, as she maintains, have been gained through retirements, administrative reorganization and UC systemwide staff reductions.

It is cynical in that Chancellor Uehling, who earlier last year cut a sweet deal with the outgoing UC President David Saxe before making her resignation official, has spent the better part of this academic year benefiting her friends and associates at the expense of programs vital to the educational interests of UCSB students.

Consider the subtle fallacies in the chancellor's defense of the money for these "equity adjustments" comes from "incredible savings" and that the raises are to compensate for increased duties. First, if, as the chancellor contends, these "equity adjustments" come from savings gained through reorganization and retirements, then why does the UC Board of Regents feel compelled to cut staff salaries 4.16%?

Furthermore, if such savings exist, then why do the regents believe it necessary to offer the incentives for retirement that make up the third Voluntary Early Retirement Incentive Program — a package more enticing than VERIP I and VERIP II combined? Also, if such savings exist, then why have the regents approved another round of tuition increases for UC students? Still further, if such savings exist, it is inconceivable that the UC would take up the issue of pay raises and tuition with the urgency that marked their most recent meetings.

In good conscience, one cannot therefore say, as the chancellor is reported to have said, that the money for these "equity adjustments" comes from "incredible savings" if such savings do not in fact exist. Put another way, if the regents given for the 4.16% systemwide pay cut for staff and the $20 tuition hike for students is to prevent the system from reducing its services even further, then there is in fact no money to fund the chancellor's requested benefices; that is, of course, unless the money for these "equity adjustments" is coming from the money extracted from staff and students through pay cuts and tuition hikes.

This fiscal sleight of hand by Uehling, current UC President Jack Peltason and the regents gives one the subtle impression that a conspiracy to defraud UC staff and UC students is afoot.)

While the chancellor's first explanation defies the canons of fiscal logic, her second reason for these "equity adjustments," echoed by Peltason, is morally offensive. If it is true that these high-level nonacademic administrators should be paid salaries equal to those of their peers at other top research universities (hence the word "equity"), then it is not only fair and fitting that UC staff should likewise receive salaries equal to those of their peers at other top research universities.

Moreover, if it is necessary to raise the salaries of nonacademic administrators so as to ensure that the UC keeps and attracts the best administrators, then it is equally true that staff salaries should be raised, not lowered, in order to ensure that the UC keeps and attracts the best staff.

The flaw in the chancellor's, and Peltason's, argument is apparent. The chancellor would have us believe that these nonacademic vice chancellors — administrators who serve at the pleasure of the chancellor — have acquired many new responsibilities that demand greater remuneration as if they were the only employees of UCSB affected by staff reductions.

Here, then, lies the greatest of moral offenses: what contribution could these nonacademic vice chancellors possibly be making to the teaching and research goals of the university that would merit remuneration three and four times greater than that of full-time lecturers and assistant professors, more than twice that of associate professors and half again as much as most full professors?

(Incidentally, let us not forget to mention the chancellor's other nonacademic vice chancellor, Edwin Birch, who, after taking VERIP III, was hired back by Uehling at a lucrative wage, a maneuver that gave him the kind of salary increase he would not have gotten through ordinary channels.)

Thus, the recent "equity adjustments" recommended by Chancellor Uehling and approved by President Peltason and the regents, when set against the concomitant 4.16% pay cut for UC staff and the $620 systemwide tuition hike levied against students, are not only a fiscally indefensible action, they are a morally offensive act.

At best, this action represents one more example of those in positions of power lining their pockets with money wrung from the sweat and toil of those who work and serve under them. It is cronyism of the most subtle and cynical kind. Indeed, the conceit with which Uehling, Peltason and the regents callously fleece those who loyally serve the UC system and those who study in their classrooms — and the deceit by which they conceal their self-aggrandizing actions — is an abuse of responsibility so flagrant as to warrant systemwide protest, if not legal investigation.

A.S. It Is

Geoff D. Green

It's been slightly more than a year since the highest court in California ruled in favor of Smith in the now infamous Smith v. Regents decision. Over the course of that year there has been much talk, much planning, some debate, some fear, and most of all, uncertainty. Until October 1993, it was unclear how soon and to what extent we, as students, would need to respond. However, when the United States Supreme Court declined to hear the case in early October, it became perfectly clear that we had to prepare for what is potentially the greatest threat to students' rights to political speech and representation in the history of the University of California.

Although virtually all components of the University give lip service to the opinion that Smith v. Regents is "bad law," the UC Office of the President has not hesitated to demand that students immediately conform to it. This demand translates into the halting of all "political and ideological" activities that have traditionally been supported with mandatory student fees — those fees that the majority of students voted in favor of paying in order to support student government, student groups and other activities.

In practical terms, this mandate affects students in two primary ways. First, the statewide lobby effort that the UC Student Assn. has carried out for the past decade and a half has been targeted by the UCOP as a major violation of the Smith decision. This lobby effort has educated state legislators about the realities of the current state of affairs within the University from a student's point of view. If we fail to maintain such a lobby effort, the legislators who decide the University's dwindling annual budget will have only the UC Office of the President as their information source. The UCOP will have virtual control of public opinion. We cannot afford that.

Secondly, student groups who choose to be "political or ideological" or sponsor events that are "political or ideological" in nature are no longer eligible for financial support from mandatory student fees. Although this may sound to some like a reasonable way of protecting one's (the fee-payer's) freedom of association (as the court believed it was), let's take a closer look. What is "political?" Perhaps a better question would be, "What's not political?"

The court did not define its terms; it merely stated that "predominantly educational" activities and organizations could still be funded by mandatory fees. This may also sound like a reasonable standard until one attempts to define its terms.

A group of students, staff and administrators have agonized over this problem for some time now. The decision was made to allow groups to define themselves by the criteria (or lack thereof) stated in the Smith decision.

Still, some student groups will define themselves as "political" (the P-word), and therefore be ineligible to receive mandatory student fee funding, in spite of the contributions many such groups make to many students' educational experience at UCSB. There is no good answer to this problem. However, the aforementioned group of people have determined that the best possible answer in the near future is a special Winter Quarter election.

At the end of this month, the UCSB campus will hold a special election in an attempt to establish a voluntary fee mechanism that will allow those activities threatened by the Smith v. Regents decision to continue. Historically, it has been exceedingly difficult to get the necessary voter turnout in order to validate the election results. For a campuswide election of this sort to be valid, at least 20% of all UCSB students must vote. I am therefore asking that everyone who reads this make an attempt to educate themselves and their friends on this issue.

We will be asked to vote on the establishment of two voluntary fees. The first would support the newly formed UC Lobby Corps. The second would create a pool of funds that could be allocated to support student groups and activities that are questionable in terms of the Smith decision but contribute to the educational mission of this University. A vote in favor of these measures does not commit any student to paying anything at all, it simply establishes the option to contribute for those who wish to. Please take the time to read all of the information about this issue that you possibly can over the next several weeks. We all have a stake in this.

Until Tomorrow ...

Black History Month Video Series
"Uncommon Images: James Van DerZee"

This is a touching portrait of one of the first and foremost photographers of Black American life, who set up shop in Harlem at the beginning of the century and spent the next sixty years taking pictures there. A man who loved deeply and experienced both joy and sorrow in his life, James Van DerZee brings to his reminiscences the wisdom of a ripe old age. (22 minutes)

AFRICA: Reinvestment May Aid Human Rights

Some experts believe the divestment hurt the UC while not significantly affecting South Africa's economy.

"American corporations were never the biggest investors in South Africa," said political science Professor Benjamin Cohen. "The decision not to invest in those companies meant the UC had to invest in less profitable companies."

Although South Africa may not have suffered large economic losses, the sanctions lowered the country's growth rate and standard of living and raised unemployment, producing damaging psychological effects, according to Mehra.

"[Divestment] is a form of condemning the country. South Africa was politically ostracized," he said. "It demoralizes the country. In terms of direct economic consequences, I don't think it had far-reaching consequences."

Black studies Professor Cedric Robinson said the lack of stringent compliance with the policy may have spared the country from economic ruin. "[Divestment] was never really a reality. It was more often sleight of hand," he said.

Robinson believes the end of apartheid and lifting the sanctions will improve South Africa's economy and human rights if investment projects are once again undertaken.

"It's going to be a boon to the economy," he said. "In terms of the state's responsibilities and according to the leading party, there will be substantial land reform and a rather ambitious housing project."

Beyond the current benefits of reinvestment, the regents' unanimous decision to end economic sanctions should not come as a surprise because the governing board was reluctant to let go of moneymaking ventures back in 1986, said then-Associated Students President Doug Yates.

"As far as the regents were concerned, you were attacking the richest companies," he said. "Many of the regents were people who sat on the board of directors of these corporations."

Yates said the initiative to penalize South Africa started as early as the 1960s, but no action was taken until knowledge of University investment ties to the nation became public.

"A lot of universities at that time were unconscious of their relationship between their portfolios in South Africa and apartheid," Yates said. To raise awareness, students organized Cheadle Hall sit-ins, held vigils, initiated letter-writing campaigns and travelled to Berkeley to participate in protests, he said.

Schick 3X3 Super Hoops-Free Open Recreation

3-on-3 Basketball Tourney

Looking for some competition this weekend? Check out Schick Super Hoops. For the tenth year, Schick Super Hoops, the Official 3-on-3 Collegiate Basketball Tournament of the NBA, will challenge more than 250,000 college students from 800 schools to elevate their game and rise to the top...only this time, the top means the first national championship game in the history of the tourney.

After ten years of expansion, this latest development is the natural evolution of the tournament's format. This year's divisional champions will vie for the national crown. The divisional playoffs will still be held at NBA arenas which may be incentive enough for aspiring champions. But this year you have the opportunity to be the best Intramural team in the country!

Wouldn't be great to have the Pacific Region represented by both a men's and women's team from UCSB. Come into the Intramural Office, Rob Gym Tr. #304, ASAP and sign-up your three person team (undergrad teams $10). There are both men's and women's divisions. Gym capacity only limits us to a certain number of teams, so come in today for your chance to be the National Champions.

Shaving Stats & Facts, Did You Know?

...in a lifetime the average man spends 3,000 hours (130 days) shaving...the average man has 30,000 whiskers...Women remember to shave your legs with long even strokes against the grain to maximize closeness...The IM office has lots of razors to give away to participants of the tourney!!!

WE ARE THE CHAMPIONS

Schick Super Hoops would like to congratulate last year's teams and the schools they represent. The victors are listed below:

DIVISIONAL CHAMPIONS
Division	Site	Men	Women
Eastern	Spectrum	Navy	Walter Reed Med. Center
Southern	Reunion Arena	Jacksonville St.	Washington Univ. - Law
Northern	Market Square Arena	Illinois State	U. of Dayton
Pacific	Great Western Forum	U. of Washington	U. of Washington

Upcoming Intramural Events

February 12-13 Schick Super Hoops 3X3 Basketball Tournament-The top Collegiate men and women's teams go to the Schick "Super Hoops" Regional Festival!!

February 26-27 Volleyball Tournament 4X4 Spikefest for H.O.P.E. Sign-up a team (undergrads only $10) and compete!

February 26 Badminton Tournament. 9am-noon. Both singles($5) and coed doubles($10) divisions. Come in for info.

didates may not want to be interviewed."

The discussions will be conducted off campus to maintain the cloud of secrecy that has surrounded the search process. "It's a hard thing, especially at the Santa Barbara campus, to maintain confidentiality," Green said.

According to Green, the interviews are slated for Feb. 25, but committee member and English Professor Porter Abbott said the date has not been confirmed.

"I can't say right now. It depends on everybody's schedule and the schedule of the candidates," Abbott said.

Initially, some prospects were unaware they were under consideration for the executive post. However, the committee has switched to the interviewing mode and will interact with the applicants, Green said.

"At this point, we're going to have to ask some very straightforward questions like, 'Are you interested in the position?'" he said.

Graduate Students Assn. Internal President Marisela Marquez said committee members are accepting community input. "Collecting questions for these people is kind of a big thing," she said. "I'm hoping that people who know who we are will write in anonymously with questions."

The committee hopes to present its final recommendation at the UC Board of Regents meeting March 17. UC President Jack Peltason has the final authority over the appointment, which must be made by spring to have the position filled before Chancellor Barbara Uehling leaves in July.

February 7-11, 1994

Look For Exciting Events All Week!

EATING DISORDER INFORMATION TABLE

Tuesday-Friday, Feb. 8-11 • 11 AM - 2 PM • Bookstore Patio

Educational flyers and free information on how to help a friend with an eating disorder. *If raining, Student Health Service Lobby

THE "PERFECT BODY"

Tuesday, Feb. 8 • 7:30 PM - 9 PM • Santa Cruz Formal Lounge

In this film, four college women candidly share their struggles to accept their bodies in light of the often unrealistic and unhealthy cultural ideal to be thin. Discussion following.

TAKING UP SPACE

Tuesday, Feb. 8 • 6 PM - 7:30 PM • Women's Center

This program features a panel discussion by bright, active, healthy men and women who challenge stereotypes of fat people. The panelists will confront "size-ist" ideas and support fat people's taking up their fair share of space.

DIET BOOK TOSS-AWAY

Wednesday, Feb. 9 • 11 AM - 2 PM • Bookstore Patio
Come throw away your old diet book (magazines okay too!) and win a guilt-free prize!

"MIRROR MIRROR"

Wednesday, Feb. 9 • 6:30 PM - 8 PM • Santa Rosa Formal Lounge

In this film, two women candidly share their personal stories about their struggle with anorexia and bulimia. Another woman shares her story about struggling to help an anorexic friend. More information on how to help a friend and discussion following.

"STILL KILLING US SOFTLY"

Wednesday, Feb. 9 • 7:30 PM - 9 PM • Student Health Conference Room

A film that examines how advertising depicts women as objects. Discussion following.

All events are at UCSB and are FREE!

Gauchos Ready to Go Against Familiar Face

Ex-GaUCHO Stevenson Expected to Get the Start for UCLA Squad Today at Westwood

By Curtis Kaiser
Staff Writer

After a slow start to their young season, the GaUCHO baseball team (1-3) will face its toughest test yet when it heads to UCLA to take on the Bruins in a 2:30 p.m. game at Jackie Robinson Stadium.

UCLA, who defeated UCSB in both of their meetings last season by scores of 10-4 and 13-4, will be opening their season against the Gauchos. A consistently top-ranked team in the Pac-10 conference and national standings, the Bruins are ranked 32nd in the nation by Collegiate Baseball. They finished second in the Pac-10 and had an overall record of 37-23 last season.

Though the Bruins had nine players from last year's team drafted by Major League teams, they still remain a very potent team.

"It's going to be another test for us to see where we're at,"

UCSB Head Coach Bob Brontsema said. "We'll see their #1 pitcher [former GaUCHO Brian Stevenson], someone we're fairly familiar with. On the scale of things, he should be the best pitcher we'll have faced all year."

"On the offensive side of things, we're going to try to be more execution-oriented," Brontsema said. "On the pitching side of it, we need to keep our pitch counts down, throw more strikes, and get ahead in the count more."

Pat Treend, who started the Gauchos' opening game against

MICHAEL D'EPIC/Daily Nexus

UCSB infielder Matt Bokemeier gets back in time to beat the pickoff move during this weekend's three-game set with the University of San Diego Toreros. The Gauchos travel to take on UCLA at Jackie Robinson Stadium today, weather permitting.

Westmont College, will take the mound for UCSB.

"We're looking forward to Tuesday," catcher Matt Bazzani said. "It's a big game for us. We're looking to go down there and prove a point to him [Stevenson] that it was a mistake to leave."

"We're really getting up for the game. We played well here, and we're looking forward to carrying that over to some of the bigger schools," Bazzani said.

GaUCHO outfielder Doug Smaldino has provided early leadership on offense. The junior from Arcadia smacked three home runs during the three-game homestand against the University of San Diego this past weekend.

Although it rained at UCLA on Monday, a tarp covers the infield at Jackie Robinson Stadium, and barring further downpours, the game will likely go on.

Surging Gauchos to Get Tough Test

Fast-Starting UCSB Team to Make the Journey to Face Powerful USC

The biggest and brightest stars of women's collegiate tennis were deep in the heart of Texas last weekend, playing in the Rolex National Indoor Tournament in Dallas.

Jean Okada represented UCSB's program but was unsuccessful in her bid to get out of the first round. Wendy Crabtree of Notre Dame beat Okada, 6-3, 6-2, in a match that was closer than the score indicated.

"I was hitting good, I wasn't off or anything — I felt my groundstrokes and serves were working," Okada said. "I was a little fatigued, I think. It was probably from the traveling."

Okada indicated that in her next match, in the consolation round, she felt much better, and it showed as she downed Southern Methodist's Anne Brown, 6-0, 7-5.

"I felt I was in control, but the second set wasn't too good. I was down 5-2, I lost a little concentration and made unforced errors," Okada added.

However, Okada ran into Kim Rogers from Kansas University in the following round and was defeated, 6-4, 6-2. Okada felt that part of the reason she lost was that she just didn't take enough chances to win the point.

Okada will join her team to take on the #8-ranked USC team today at 1:30 p.m. at Los Angeles. The Gauchos (5-0) take on the Trojans on a hot streak, coming off an upset win over #13-ranked Arizona.

"We're capable of winning at every spot, we just have to take chances and dictate [the point]," UCSB Head Coach Chris Russell said. "It's our goal to play at the level where we're capable of playing."

However, USC has four nationally ranked players who will oppose any GaUCHO upset at-

UCSB's top three have a winning streak of their own and will pose a definite threat. Okada, Lynn Coakley and Laura Rutledge are all legitimate #1 players and form the team's backbone.

UCSB Handles Ducks, Lets UNLV Off Hook

The UCSB men's tennis team traveled to Las Vegas and split two matches this past weekend, shutting out Oregon, 8-0, and losing a heartbreaker to UNLV, 6-1. The Gauchos could have easily defeated the Rebels, as five matches went three sets with UNLV winning four of them.

UCSB Coach Don Lowry was pleased with the competitiveness of his squad against a high-profile team like Vegas, and is optimistic that this quality is a sign of things to come.

"We didn't seem to be too affected by the environment or the altitude," Lowry said. "This is as good as I've seen them play."

Lowry thought that the Oregon match would be nothing more than a tune-up for UNLV, and sure enough it was, as the Gauchos dropped only two sets in the six singles matches.

Lowry was especially happy with the #2 singles player, junior Jeff Spalinger, who defeated Oregon's Josh Prager, 7-6, 6-1. Spalinger had been struggling coming into the match and was benched the previous weekend at USC, but Lowry stuck with him and was glad to see him pull through.

"That was a match he would have lost a couple weeks ago," Lowry said. "It was a good all-around performance."

The key to the Vegas match was UCSB's inability to hold third-set leads. GaUCHO #1 singles player Laszlo Markovits was up 3-0 in the final set in his match against Roger Petterson, but lost, 7-5. Darren Potkey, the Gauchos' #4 player, led 4-1 against Tim Blenkiron, but lost the final five games of the set.

And then there was freshman Eddie Weiss. Up 5-2, Weiss lost, 7-6 (9-7), in the tiebreaker.

Spalinger also lost a tight final set, but unlike his teammates, his match against UNLV's Matt Rivera was nip-and-tuck throughout. The two were on serve at 4-5 when Rivera broke Spalinger to win.

"It wasn't like he hit four winners to break me," Spalinger said. "I made a couple of mistakes and he played tough."

At the #5 singles spot, UCSB's John Bowerbank did pull out a third set for the Gauchos' only point, defeating Marcus Ekstrand, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3. However, everyone else was bit by the "close-but-no-cigar" bug, as all three GaUCHO doubles teams lost by a score of 8-6.

The Gauchos were slated to open their home schedule tomorrow against Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, a team new to Division I, but the match has been rescheduled for Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at the East Courts.
