Rain fell in abundance last Friday, effectively drowning the university to a standstill.

reports of flooding ... our first decision was to suspend classes until noon and resume them in the afternoon," Sheldon said.

As rains continued to render class space unusable and the commute to campus more dangerous, classes were cancelled for the entire day. According to Sheldon, other damage, such as from wind or fallen trees, was minimal.

According to the acting director of physical facilities, David Gonzales, the tree count had reached 200 by Friday afternoon. Most of the fallen trees were from the galeforce winds Monday evening. Campus crews along with outside contractors have been helping to remove the debris.

"Three or four outside contractors were working with us since last Tuesday, helping to clear the debris ... and we've had all our crews "Because we had lots of different out. They've been out since 6 a.m.," Gonzales said.

The most visible damage from the storm has been the lagoon flooding, according to Gonzales. Paths to beach access were further submerged after Friday morning's storm.

UCSB Student and Alumnus Help Battle Downtown Fire

Sigma Chi Frat Brothers Grab Garden Hoses, Fire Extinguisher To Save Neighboring House BY ALEXIS FILIPPINI Staff Writer

A UCSB student and a recent graduate got up close and personal with a fire in a downtown Santa Barbara home Sunday morning.

Fifth-year history and political science major Scott Sizemore and UCSB alumnus Jay Dohner noticed flames emerging from the window of a neighboring home. The two Sigma Chi fraternity members took matters into their own hands and battled the fire with garden hoses, Sizemore said

"We saw flames about halfway up the window," he said. "It was around 11:30 [a.m.] We came outside and started yelling, trying to see if anybody was in there, if any of the other apartments had hoses or anything, but nobody came out."

They then called the fire department, but did not wait for the trucks to arrive, Sizemore said.

"We found a hose and a fire extinguisher," he said. "There's a tree next to [the house]. I climbed a branch and leaned inside the window. [The fire] had already broken the window."

Dohner found another garden hose and fought the fire from the ground, he said.

"I sprayed the water in, and it broke more windows," he said. "[Sizemore] almost got knocked off the wall. The firemen came in and busted the other window."

kes, After Shocks Rock Afghanistan

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Snow, fog and civil war slowed relief workers struggling Sunday to reach quake-stricken northeast Afghanistan, where new tremors killed up to 250 people, according to the military alliance that controls the remote mountain region.

Between 2,150 and 4,850 people are believed to have been killed in Wednesday's 6.1-magnitude earthquake and its after shocks, and thousands left homeless by the tremors and landslides are suffering from subfreez-ing temperatures. "Another quake hit Takhar province today, destroying three more villages," said Abdullah, a spokesperson for the military alliance, said by satellite phone. Like many Afghans, he uses only one name.

He said 250 people were killed and 50 injured in the latest tremor in the Rustaq district of Takhar province, 150 miles north of the Afghan capital, Kabul. Sunday's shaking caused

Abdullah

There were more tremors late Saturday night and before dawn Sunday, which crumbled more villages. Abdullah said powerful jolts continued through the day. Masood Khalili, the Afghan ambassador to India said soldiers had dug out 3,681 bodies by late Saturday. While Afghan officials have put the death toll as high as 4,850, including the new victims, the Red Cross is sticking with an estimate of 2,150, noting that the area was sparsely populated. Khalili said Wednesday's earthquake destroyed 11 large villages.

In the worst-hit village, Ghunji, 600 homes were destroyed and 1,600 people were killed, he said.

Physicians from Doctors Without Borders, the first foreign aid agency to reach the region, had treated hundreds by Saturday.

A Red Cross plane packed with medical and water sanitation supplies landed Sunday in nearby Hajaghar. But the 24-mile road journey to the villages hardest-hit by the quake could take hours, since after shocks have cracked roads.

U.S. Policy-makers Debate Possible Reactions to Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Madeleine Albright promised Sunday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein will be punished severely if the United States decides to use military force to enforce U.N. resolutions.

Republican leaders contended that's not enough - the ultimate goal, they said, is to drive Saddam from power.

Albright repeated that Saddam has only weeks to accede to a diplomatic solution to avoid a U.S.-led attack.

Bill Richardson, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, rejected the latest Iraqi offer to avoid it, a two-month window for U.N. officials to inspect Saddam's presidential palaces for concealed weapons.

Albright, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," said any military action against Iraq for interfering with U.N. weapons inspectors would be a "substantial strike" aimed at diminishing Saddam's ability to rebuild weapons of mass destruction and threaten his neighbors.

Defense Secretary William Cohen arrived Sunday in

Heavy Rains Lead to Rushing Flood Waters in N. Mexico

Saudi Arabia to discuss the Iraq question and said the United States had enough firepower in the region to carry out strikes without using U.S. bases in Saudi Arabia.

Saudi leaders have been reported opposing the use of force against Iraq and have been reluctant to allow military missions to originate from Saudi soil.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott (R-Miss.) speaking after Albright on CBS, said there are worries in Congress that the administration lacks an effective endgame, which would include removing Saddam.

Lott suggested support for democratic forces in Iraq as a way to do it, or setting up a Radio Free Iraq or expanding the U.N.-ordered flight-interdiction zone over Iraq. "I'm not talking about assassination, but I'm talking about a coherent long-term policy," Lott said.

Sen. Richard Shelby, (R-Ala.) chair of the Senate intelligence committee, said on "Fox News Sunday" that he would support military action against Iraq but added: "Ultimately, though, we're going to have to face up to the fact we're going to have to get rid of him, one way or the other."

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Early morning storms caused flash flooding in the border city of Tijuana on Sunday, killing at least six people and forcing hundreds from their homes.

The victims included three girls ages 13 to 15, state public safety officer Rodolfo Venegas said.

"Some of the victims were carried away by floodwaters and some died trapped in their vehicles" on Tijuana roads, Venegas said in a telephone interview.

Red Cross employee Marisol Robles described how heavy rains and high winds battered the city for a few hours early Sunday.

"It was bad the whole night ... and then some trees and containment walls began to collapse," Robles said.

The Red Cross said several people were reported injured in the flooding, but provided no information on their condition.

The flooding was apparently worsened by insufficient storm drains in the border city, where torrents of water ran through hillside communities.

Venegas said the floodwaters "came down canyons and hillsides and swept away everything in their path."

City authorities called for aid from the Mexican army in rescuing victims and repairing storm damage. Workers struggled to remove mud and rocks from some of the main streets in Tijuana, a major center for tourism and border assembly plants known as maquiladoras.

 LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Beach Boys founding member and lead guitarist Carl Wilson insisted on touring last year even though he was dying of lung cancer, the band's publicist said Sunday

Wilson, who died Friday evening at 51, refused to let his illness keep him from completing the band's 36th annual tour last summer, publicist Alyson Dutch said.

*Carl was a deeply spiritual being who had an incredibly positive outlook on life," Dutch said. "He had an amazing support system. His wife, Gina, was on tour with him, at his side, on every date this year. His sons said he was a perfect father who was there for their needs.

Wilson, who was the seminal surf band's lead singer on many of their classic recordings, including "Good Vibrations" and "God Only Knows," died in Los Angeles of complications of lung cancer. He also had brain cancer.

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) - A Costa Mesa man was arrested for allegedly mailing a package bomb that seriously injured an apartment dweller, authorities said Sunday. Federal authorities arrested Darryl Anthony Carr, 34, on Saturday night after about 13 hours of questioning, U.S.

Postal Inspector Pamela Prince said.

She declined to discuss a motive for the bombing. Carr was being held without bail at a federal facility in downtown Los Angeles and was to be charged Monday with one count of mailing an explosive device with intent to injure, Prince said

He could face up to 20 years in prison if convicted. A man whose identity was withheld received abdominal injuries in Friday night's explosion and remained in serious condition at Western Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said.

Dan Akroyd and John Goodman were on "E!" this past weekend and they were discussing the upcoming "Blues Brothers 2000" sequel/new movie. Just when I was about to start off on another tirade about remakes and how some things should be left as is, John Goodman was asked whether he thought he could properly fill John Belushi's immortal shoes as the other half of the infamous comedy team.

Goodman replied with a simple "no" and explained that no one could compare to or fill Belushi's shoes because they were already hung up and bronzed.

IVRPD Discusses Damage, Projects

By HAMIN O Staff Writer

The Isla Vista Recreation and Park District discussed plans for storm damage control, project improvements and updates at Thursday night's meeting.

IVRPD General Manager Derek Johnson debriefed the board regarding the effects of last week's inclement weather. According to Johnson, the damages to the teen center and other IVRPD projects were insured, so the district will not incur any repair costs.

"Well, the storm of '98 hit pretty big in the parks district," he said. "Thirty-one trees went down and eight cars were damaged. It would cost approximately $3,000 just for the trimming and $4,000 for the bush cleanup. The teen center was damaged and the estimate for the repair is $600 even, though 65 percent of the materials for the project were donated."

IVRPD Director Pegeen Soutar addressed the immediate problems caused by the flooding.

"I am concerned about the path [near I.V. School] where it gets muddy from the heavy rain. Children cannot walk through there to get to school," she said.

Santa Barbara County Contractor Dave Hubert, who developed a restoration plan for the Camino Corto project, explained that his plans to restore the desolate land have altered.

"I have to redraw the plan because my thinking has changed slightly," he said. "There are two pools along Camino Corto. The changes will have construction not interfere with traffic changes in Santa Barbara."

The board also addressed the success of the Adopt-a-Block program. According to IVRPD Director Dave Fortson, the program has yet to overcome its biggest obstacle — a lack of community involvement.

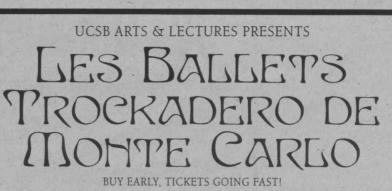

"The Adopt-a-Block program has 70 people involved. We need more publicity for the program," he said. "Residents in Isla Vista don't even know what it is." IVRPD Director Diane Conn initiated a discussion of the ongoing proposal for the Perfect Park Peace Monument.

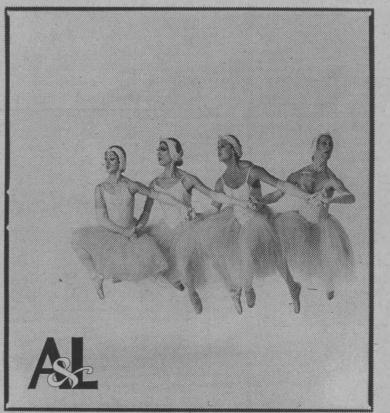

"It is a monument to commemorate the peaceful protest that led to the community organization and establishment of the Park District, [I.V. Food] Co-Op, and other services. There were no services in Isla Vista [prior to the protests]," she said.

Conn also announced that the History Committee has selected third-year history graduate student Chris. Ziegler-McPherson to write the updated history of I.V. While Ziegler-McPherson is the only person working on the project at the moment, the board would like to encourage more participants, she added.

"We've arranged internships so someone could get credit for the project. It is so there can be [someone to] help organize," Conn said.

On Feb. 20 the board will hold another meeting to discuss issues including the Camino Corto project, the History Committee, housing and the Del Playa Seawall.

It's Not Just Good Sense – It's the Law

> Jet Skiers Need To Respect Safety Boundaries on the Water

HENRY SARRIA

Winter is among us, and with it comes those storms that bring us big swells, which means there will be lots of my fellow surfers out in the water as well as the kayakers, boogie boarders and bodysurfers.

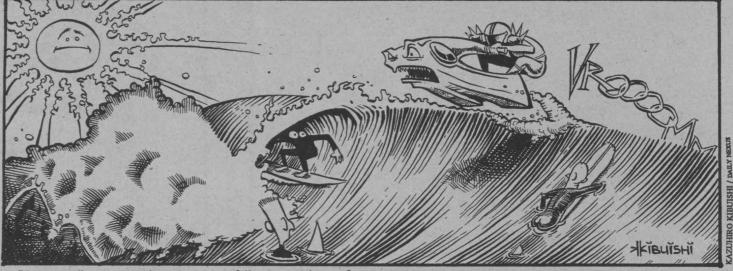

Along with us will also be the jet-ski crowd with their noise-making, exhaust-spewing, pink and purple polka-dotted new-wave machines that can go at a much higher velocity than a surfer. With this said, let it be clear that while I don't ride jet-ski-type vehicles, I really have nothing against them, as long as they stay well out of the boundary used by surfers, like myself, and other non-jet skiers, AS THE LAW STATES.

they have to piss everyone else off by going against common sense. It's these jerks I'm talking about.

You can't miss them with their Oakley Blade sunglasses, spiky-inthe-front hair cut, either a NO FEAR or Bad Boy Club sticker on their jet ski, ultra-fluorescent-colored wet suit and they're usually obligatory mouth-breather types. (This indicates a much lower level intelligence.) I know this is a big generalization, but unfortunately, it's an accurate one.

The unfortunate side to it is that they're not aware that if enough people complain about this violation, the act of jet skiing itself in this area would be made illegal, and then even the lawful jet skiers will suffer.

To most non-jet-ski types, this would be a welcome situation, but not a fair one to those jet skiers who do follow the law.

I know we all want to use the waves to their fullest potential, as surfers like to ride them and jet skiers like to jump them, but when the two come in close contact, well, this can prove for the worse in many ways.

Common sense should prevail, but as it's said in the South, "For something so common, common sense ain't so common at all." This is where the problems arise and the friction between surfers and jet skiers begins.

I can't go telling someone what they can or can't do, and I'm not about to start, but instead of banning something, we can designate areas for the activity in question to take place. For the jet-ski contingent, the area for said activity is the part of Goleta Beach closest to campus, and in all other areas it's 200 feet out from shore and 100 feet out from ANYONE in the water, surfers included, while traveling at a maximum speed of 5 mph.

Unfortunately, there are those few that feel they need to be "rebels" or "renegades" (for some idiotic reason) and go past the boundary. This is where the trouble begins to brew. As a surfer, it's bad enough already when another surfer cuts you off or drops in on you, but these are traits of the sport that usually blow over with a simple apology or future avoidance. When two surfers collide, it's usually at equal velocity, and it's mostly flesh-on-flesh contact, so no severe injuries occur. If they do, it's mostly to the surfboards in the form of dings.

If a jet ski runs into a surfer or boogie boarder, the force of the impact is MUCH greater, and with this the injuries become much more severe, even life threatening.

Now, I know there are many jet-ski fans out there, and I'm not lumping you all in the category of careless morons because I know this would be an act of self-righteous wrongness.

However, there's always that small percentage of idiots that exist in ANY part of society or culture that feels in order to impress someone Statistically, there's more non-jet skiers (surfers, boogie boarders, swimmers, divers, and kayakers) using the ocean than there are jet skiers, so by majority rule the favor goes to the non-jet skiers, and this is why the law is written as such.

We don't need more laws, and we don't need more friction, but as long as there's careless jerks out there, friction will continue to grow. What good will that do? Not much.

All I ask for, on behalf of the surfing community as well as those who don't surf but still get out in the water, is for the jet skiers to adhere to the current regulations.

We can share, but it has to be in a way that will not result in the injury or death of someone based on the carelessness of the few who refuse to know any better.

Granted, surfing is a much more environmentally sound practice (except for the manufacture of surfboards, which requires the use of resins and epoxies) than jet skiing, but the fact that jet skis exist means they need a place where they can be safely operated without the risk of injuring or killing someone.

The ocean is there to be enjoyed by everyone, jet skiers included, but it's not much enjoyment when non-jet skiers have to keep looking over their shoulders just to assure some level of safety due to some careless buffoon's actions.

The boundary has been set and established, so adhere to it, not only because it's the law, but because it's also common sense.

Daily Nexus

NEXUS ARTICLE SUFFERS

The Reader's Voice

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This letter is to call to your attention the numerous inaccuracies found in the article "Rally at Root of Investigation Into Improper Appropriation of Finances" (Daily Nexus, Jan. 26). Your reporter, Ted Andersen, obviously did not have a fair understanding of the material about which I was interviewed and proceeded to write an atrocious article. Many times my words were incorrectly stated, paraphrased and then quoted, or taken completely out of context. This all culminated in a jumbling of the facts so that the casual reader was left bewildered as to what the hell the issue was.

First, the Jan. 26 hearing was an appeal of an earlier Sub-Judicial Council hearing. Andersen did not inform the reader of this fact until he was a whole six paragraphs into the story. This Sub-Judicial Council hearing occurred Nov. 12, not Jan. 12. I specifically stated this fact to Andersen during the course of the interview.

Second, the whole thrust of this case revolves around the Court of Appeals decision of Smith vs. Regents. While the campus implementation guidelines for funding campus organizations are derived from this decision, Smith vs. Regents is the root of the controversy. This was never stated. This fact was crucial to understanding the story.

Which leads to my third point. The first quote attributed to me is correct, with the exception of the fact that such activities mentioned in the quote are in violation of Smith vs. Regents and, as a function of that violation, also violate campus policies.

Next, the second quote of mine beginning with "In the first case ..." is incorrect because I was not a member of the board that heard that case. I was not a part of that body in any official capacity. Additionally, this quote is ambiguous. The reader doesn't know which event or which hearing. Some clarity is needed in order to understand this complex issue.

Lastly, and most importantly, the entire section concerning the refund mechanism which starts "According to Trindle ... " and ends " ... Trindle said." is inaccurate and out of context. A refund mechanism is ALREADY in place for conflicts that may arise. This refund procedure is in place because of Smith vs. Regents. The initial hearing is mandatory via Smith vs. Regents to determine whether or not students are eligible for the refund, not whether or not a refund procedure should be instituted. I related this to your reporter several times. I also explained why the decision from the previous hearing was being appealed, why Eric Shapiro was fighting this action and many other integral facts which did not make their way into the story.

I am disappointed that such errors were not found prior to printing. I do understand that mistakes happen and that Ted Andersen is a human being. However, the severity of the mistakes cause me to question his training, and thus the Nexus staff in charge of such activities.

The Nexus is THE source of campus news and it is therefore paramount that the news be correctly reported. A correction box in the Nexus or something addressing the inaccuracies would be appreciated. Additionally, I would suggest that Andersen receive some training in the area of interviewing and more help in the area of writing.

Thank you for your time.

African-American Women Acknowledged in Play

BY RAJA SESHADRI Reporter

Spoken word and song blended together in a performance that captured the trials and tribulations of African-American 'women in history.

As one way to commemorate Black History month, the UCSB Women's Center presented a one-woman historical play last Thursday titled, "I am that I am: Woman, Black," which featured actress Adilah Barnes. The hour-and-a-half long play honored seven famous African-American women and their contributions to the fields of human rights, education, literature and politics.

At the end of the performance Barnes led the audience in a discussion about the characters she portrayed and explained her reasons for wanting to do the performance.

"I did this performance largely for two reasons. First, most actors feel that the highest level of their acting ability and creativity is a solo performance because if anything goes wrong you have nobody to blame but yourself," she said. "Second, it is also because of my great love and respect for these women. This historical play pays homage to the immortal spirits of these women. ... Finally, I feel that it is one way that I can keep African-American history alive."

Through speeches, poems and hymns, Barnes illustrated the lives of select African-American female figures. Barnes' performance included representations of early feminist activists, such as Harriet Tubman and Sojourner Truth, to modern civil rights activists like Mary McLeod and Black Panther member Angela Davis.

Junior aquatic biology and black studies major Danielle Hill found Barnes' performance touching and powerful.

"I thought it was inspiring and really heartfelt," she said. "I really liked how she covered many different women and historical time frames with her one voice."

Sudarat Musikawong, a UCSB alumna, felt that the event was a well-rounded success.

"I thought this performance was really powerful ... I really found this performance educational as well as entertaining," she said. "I think she really brought the characters to life with her outstanding acting ability and enlightened the audience to the numerous contributions African-American women have made to America."

emergency in five more counties and asked the White House to declare a federal state of emergency for the California counties already at state emergency levels.

"That brings to 27 the total of counties in California now under a state of emergency," he said. "I've also asked that the federal government provide assistance to California."

Though local I.V. flooding was apparent, I.V. Foot Patrol Dep. Dave Brookshire said that no major damage resulted. "The top of the [Embarcadero] loop flooded. The 6500 block of Sabado, 6700 block of Trigo, Camino Majorca and Del Playa all flooded," he said. "No houses were lost to the water. I think there was some water damage, but it could have been from the driving rain, too."

Sophomore sociology major Shari Kushins, who lives on the 6500 block of Sabado, said the flooding must have occurred between 7 and 8 a.m.

"I left for work at 6:45 and it was nothing like this. I decided to drive," she said. "I called home because school was closed and my roommate said that the house was flooded."

Kushins witnessed the effects of the flooding, especially in conjunction with the parked cars on her street. "Every time people go speeding by, [the car] moves further and further into the street," she said. "It's been happening for hours, people keep driving by."

The problems subsided as the rains did, according to Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Dept. Sgt. Lindburg.

"We didn't have any major flooding problems after about 8 o'clock [Saturday] night," he said.

The County Flood Control District expects Monday to be fair, and Tuesday to have increasing clouds with a chance of rain. The district urges residents to exercise caution, as saturated soils and rapidly changing weather conditions may combine to put homes at risk.

Neighbor Ann Wellman said that the fire department was unsure of the exact cause of the fire.

"They couldn't figure out what it was that had melted down," she said. "Something was plugged in and that was where the fire was coming from."

According to Wellman, the fire was hardly noticeable from her house. "When I came out to ask what was going on, all I could see was a little wisp of pus, there's excess water in the lagoon. So we had to create a path from the lagoon through the road to the ocean so the water could ... channel [out]," he said.

The path was laid down with sheets of rubbery plastic material called visquene, creating alternate water routes to the ocean in order to alleviate the swelling lagoon, according to Gonzales.

Residence halls suffered minor rain damage. Doors to San Rafael's first-floor cluster residences were lined with sand bags and furniture was pushed away from the doors as waters seeped in, according to desk attendant Tedra Tanner.

"Damages happened mostly Friday," said the undeclared sophomore. "Sandbags were put up to help keep the water from coming in ... whenever there was a problem, it was taken care of quickly."

Damage costs are still being estimated and won't be complete until the last of El Niño's storms have hit. To offset damages, the school has two insurance policies - one that covers property owned by the university, said Lee Mudrick, University Insurance Administrator.

"The storm was of such severity that it's called, 'An act of God' ... and thus covered under the self-funded UC property insurance program," he said.

Fallen trees, lights and the costs accrued from flooding damages are essentially picked up by the university through this program, according to Mudrick.
