DINING OUT: A Practical Guide to Santa Barbara Restaurants

By Maureen Fan

nevitably, every parent asks their son or daughter where they can grab a bite to eat, and they mean just that — not the Biltmore, not the Chart House, not the Holiday Inn and not the Harbor Restaurant. That is not to say they'd like to see if the McDonald's here is any better than the one at home. I've tried to avoid some of the typical tourist listings and stay close to the collegiate scene. So, in no particular order, this is a compilation of arbitrarily-chosen hang-outs, with a few nice places thrown in to boot.

— Let's begin at the beginning, one of the best cures for a hangover really does exist at the Egghead, an I.V. favorite. It's located above the New York Hero House, across the street from Piccolo's. For four or five dollars you can have coffee, a large omelette, and two of the following: homefries, pancakes, cottage cheese, fresh fruit, toast, english muffins, fruit muffins, corn tortillas and refried beans. My usual is the turkey, swiss cheese and mushroom omelette, but two other combinations are also popular: sour cream, jack cheese, avocado and sprouts; and ham, mushrooms, green onions and avocado. The Egghead is open Mon.-Fri., 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. and on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Definitely worth the occasional wait in line.

— Large, freshly-made hot croissants are available at The Bakery, a small establishment at 129 East Anapamu. The atmosphere is pleasant, like a garden party with white chairs, pink napkins, etc. Breakfast or lunch averages $5 per person, more or less. Since they are a bakery as well as a restaurant, 40 percent of their business is take-out. Recently, they have been trying to promote the restaurant as an intimate place for dinners — they make their own pasta for their fettucine, spaghetti and lasagne dishes. Hours are 6:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. six days a week. On Sundays they close at 8 p.m.

— Alex's Mexican Restaurant at 711 State is a hole in the wall compared to its snazzy counterpart in Goleta. But what they lack in atmosphere, they make up in their typical Mexican fare. You can smell the food a block away, and it's popular for business lunches (almost always a line).

They're open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. the rest of the week.

— Dinner at the Palace Cafe at 8 East Cota St. can be casual or classy. Excellent Cajun cuisine in surroundings which are simple yet pleasing. Dixie beer and seafood is specially brought up from Louisiana — fresh regional fish and crawfish are flown in everyday. The key to this place is authenticity. Even the coffee, a flavorful blend of coffee with chicory, comes from the New Orleans institution Cafe Du Monde. Try the Jambalaya or the Shrimp Etouffe, and the breaded Louisiana pudding for dessert. Actually, with 10 or so daily additions to the standard menu, you can't go wrong. Expect $9 to $20 per entree, but expect your money's worth.

— If ribs are your style, a place you cannot pass up is Woody's at 229 West Montecito. Beef, pork, baby backs, and smoked duckling are all treated in an oak smoker, not a gas or electric oven. The cooks go through 600 pounds of potatoes a day for their hand-cut fries. Buckets (as in one gallon pails!) of beer, jars to drink out of, sawdust on the floor — it's a great atmosphere. The lunch menu ranges from $2.95 to $3.50 and for dinner it's only slightly higher: $3.95 to $6.95. Open seven days a week, from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

— Pizza Bob's, on the corner of Pardall and Embarcadero del Norte in I.V., is popular for happy hour from 9 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Unconventional but successful. Pitchers cost $2. Pizza slices for only 95 cents cure the munchies when no one wants a whole pie. The Italian submarine sandwiches at $2.25 (or just over a dollar for a half) are a personal favorite — lettuce, tomato and a little Italian dressing over heated salami, Canadian bacon and melted cheese.

— Spike's Place, at 6030 Hollister between the drive-in and Taco Bell, has always been a favorite. The live guitarist on (See DINING, p.4A)

or ask for one for Graduation

The clones we are referring to are the so-called "computer clones" (So called because they do everything just like an IBM* PC, XT or AT, but they aren't). Look! There's one now!!

This particular baby is our University Special. It has 2 disk drives, a mono/graphics monitor, 640K RAM, MS-DOS 3.1 a word processor¹ and a dot-matrix printer. Best of all it is only $1395.00!! A similar "3 initial" computer would cost you over $3600.00 ($2200.00 if you qualify for the UCSB discount). Best of all, ours doesn't take 6 weeks to get. The paperwork is easier to handle, too.

To order your system or for more details call us at 963-1378.

*IBM does not stand for Itty Bitty Machines Company, it is a registered trademark of International Business Machines, Incorporated, Armonk, N.Y., as are PC, XT and AT. (Armonk?). MS-DOS is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation, Redmond, WA (they moved).

¹You can have Microsoft Word 3.0 or Word Perfect 4.1.

Offer good to UCSB employees and students only, limited to stock on hand, and it expires 6-15-86.

 weekends is great, the potato skins are outstanding, and your name is immortalized on the walls if you make it "around the world." In order to do so, you have to get yourself a Spike's card and get it punched every time you drink one of 40 different beers from Australia, Brazil, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, etc. The casual atmosphere and close location can make it habit-forming. Sandwiches, salads and burgers make Spike's a convenient place for lunch, too. Prices around $4 to $5.

— After a night out downtown, perhaps at Joe's, Zelo or the Open Door (or all three, as the case may be), you will probably find a lot of familiar faces at Frimple's. Located at 1701 State, the 24-hour coffeeshop is a popular place where people often replenish themselves at 2 a.m. The "Frimple," a gigantic cream puff with strawberry, hot fudge and other toppings, is famous — but equally delicious are their cinnamon rolls: a must-try.

— For something a little more civilized, a nice dinner at the El Encanto Hotel offers a fantastic view from what they boast as "Santa Barbara's most beautiful dining room." Everything is a la carte, with appetizers ranging from $3 to $8 and entrees in the neighborhood of $15 to $23. For starters, try their snails in puff pastry shells or the shrimp soufflé. Of their traditional entrees, the roasted rack of lamb is excellent. El Encanto's style is a continental cuisine with California and French influences. Located at 1900 Lausen Rd. near the Brooks Institute of Photography, they offer a meal that is an unpretentious investment.

— And now for something completely different. The Cold Springs Tavern on Stagecoach Road is definitely worth a visit.

After a beautiful ride up San Marcos Pass, you can't miss the quaint, authentic, historical Stagecoach stop that dates back to 1868. It's cozy fireside dining at its best. Prices range from $10 to $15, with game dishes such as buffalo, venison and elk slightly higher. Michael's marinated rabbit with red peppers, onions and mushrooms is probably a good bet. Lunch is served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., and dinner from 5 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. (half an hour later on weekends).

— Derf's at 2000 De La Vina is a casual little hangout, historically popular with volleyball players and decorated with photographs of those who have played at East Beach or just passed through. Something you shouldn't miss if you drop by is an order of their crispy shoestring fries. Also popular is their turkey, bacon, lettuce, tomato and cheese sandwich. Kick back on their outdoor patio/wooden deck (lunches around $4 to $6) or enjoy something from the full bar. Hours are 11 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.

A Sober Graduation: Local Bars Help Out

A significant new program to combat drunk driving and alcohol abuse is under way in Santa Barbara as part of Sober Graduation, a campaign to promote responsible drinking during graduation week.

The program works like this: one person from a group agrees not to drink alcoholic beverages during the evening. This person will be responsible for providing transportation to other members of the group. The designated driver will be given a hand stamp to distinguish him from the rest of the group.

In return, the drinking establishment will give some incentive to the designated driver. The incentive depends on the particular establishment, but is usually a free non-alcoholic beverage.

The "I'm Driving" program is UCSB's effort — together with Anheuser-Busch, the California Highway Patrol and participating establishments — to address our commitment to a decline in alcohol abuse and an increase in highway safety.

The establishments considering this program are: Alex's Cantina, The Elephant Bar, Joe's Cafe, Acapulco, Zelos, The Open Door, and Spike's.

Senior Celebrations: Pub, Biltmore Ready to Stage Graduation Parties

The Senior Week Activities Committee has created two new events for Commencement '86. The committee, comprised of seniors from various areas of campus, is sponsoring Pub Party '86 and a Senior Banquet in an effort to make graduation more of a celebration for seniors this year. The two events have already accommodated more students than have attended the Senior Barbeque in the past, and the committee is expecting many more in the coming week.

Traditionally, students spend the last Thursday night of the year in the Pub celebrating graduation or the end of finals. This year, the Pub will be open to seniors for the biggest graduation party around. The Pub Party will take place on Thursday, June 12 from 7:30 p.m. to midnight and proves to be one of the Pub's greatest nights. Like most Thursday nights in the Pub, there will be dancing all night long. Not only will the Pub itself be open, but it has reduced the price of its drinks to as low as 50 cents to $1. All of the Pub's finest beverages will be served at these prices in addition to specially made non-alcoholic beverages served by the Drug and Alcohol Awareness Program. A photographer will be available to take both individual and group shots during the evening. A video presentation of live "street interviews" of seniors on campus will be shown.

Entrance to the Senior Pub Party is by purchase of the Senior Class Card available for $10 at the A.S. Ticket Office through June 6 and in the Office of the Vice Chancellor of Student and Community Affairs, 5203 Cheadle Hall, during Finals Week. If space permits, Senior Cards may be sold that evening at the door.

Special arrangements for guests who are not seniors may be made. Those seniors who have bought tickets are reminded to bring identification in compliance with the Pub's alcohol policy.

A second, more formal occasion, the Senior Banquet, is planned for Friday, June 13 from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Coral Casio of the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel. Programs for the evening include a social hour and a no-host bar, dinner, an address by an invited administrator, a student address, and the live street interviews shown at the Pub Party. The evening concludes with dancing. Attire for the evening is semi-formal.

The event as an opportunity for students and their families to spend an enjoyable evening in Santa Barbara and a chance to meet administrators, faculty, and other students who have been involved in the lives of seniors during their 4-5 years at UCSB.

Tickets for the Senior Banquet are still available at the Office of the Vice Chancellor of Student and Community Affairs. Reservations are $25 per person. Due to the limited space of the facility, students are limited to two guests only, unless special arrangements are made. If space permits, tickets will be available at the door.

(Call Heidi Keller, chair of the Senior Week Activities Committee, at 961-4256 with any questions regarding either event.)

Alumni Clubs: Life After Graduation

You have your diploma; it's even been framed. You have a marginal job in Santa Barbara, or a good-sounding job in Cupertino — but you don't know where Cupertino is — or six vaguely promising job leads in the Bay Area, or one interview in Washington, D.C. Maybe the next step is graduate school in San Diego or New York.

In any event, it's time to leave UCSB, or at least leave classes, Isla Vista and "free" rides on the MTD. However much of UCSB you are content to say goodbye to, there is much you would just as soon take with you — friendships, contacts, memories. In short, your membership in the UCSB club.

You don't have to live in I.V. or be a perpetual UCSB student to keep that membership alive. UCSB alumni clubs throughout California and in major cities provide a wide variety of opportunities to maintain contact with other UCSB graduates, meet people in a new town, network, provide scholarship help to a new generation of UCSB students, and just have fun.

UCSB alumni clubs also form important regional bases of support for the university. "A UCSB alumni club serves as an outreach of the university in a given geographical area and may provide service to the university in a variety of ways," says Alumni Association Executive Director Jack Kinney. "Legislative relations, student recruitment, scholarship programs, fund raising, continuing education, and social activities are some of the reasons alumni organize formally on behalf of their alma mater."

In Los Angeles, the UCSB alumni club publishes an annual networking directory. Washington, D.C., alumni play host to UCSB Capitol Hill interns. In the Bay Area and Sacramento, new students are welcomed to the UCSB family each summer by local UCSB alumni clubs. In San Diego, the UCSB rowing team is cheered on by local alumni gathered under the San Diego club's tent. Ventura County alumni are raising scholarship money by holding casino nights and other functions.

In addition to regional clubs, the Alumni Association has granted charters to clubs serving the special needs of interests of Black and Chicano alumni.

There are currently 13 UCSB alumni clubs and efforts are being made to start more. Here is a list of them, with a president or chair and a contact number:

the exhibition closes at the end of June, it will tour the USSR as part of a cultural exchange. Dealing with children on a more local and intimate level is the Baby Pictures exhibition, a terrific look into the world of infants from many angles. Also worthwhile are SBMA's programs of Conservation in Progress, a view of the museum's efforts to preserve pieces of glasswork and sculpture, and Three Hundred Years of German Painting and Drawing, a collection showing the development of styles from the 17th to the 19th centuries. In addition to these temporary exhibitions are the fine selections housed permanently in the SBMA, including a wonderful store of photography. Hours are Tues.-Sat., 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

Santa Barbara Contemporary Arts Forum

A non-profit organization committed to sponsoring contemporary art produced by young, unknown as well as recognized, mid-career artists producing work in new directions. Currently on exhibition is Outsiders, a representation of art by self-taught artists practicing without knowledge of the pervading trends of the Art World. The Forum is located at 7 W. De La Guerra (just off State) and is open Wed.-Sun., noon to 5 p.m.

The Arlington Gallery

Located at 819 Anacapa St. this gallery offers a fine collection of 14th to 19th century Russian and Greek icons as well as contemporary and historical landscapes.

The Elizabeth Fortner Gallery

Exhibits here contain contemporary fine crafts from crafts to wearable art and is located at 1114 State St. Studio 9, La Arcada Ct.

Views, Foods and Shops Abound on S.B.'s Historic Stearn's Wharf

By Sheila Gormican

The view of Santa Barbara from the Stearn's Wharf pier says it all. On one side, the ocean expands with the Channel Islands looming on the horizon, 20 miles off the coast. On the other side, the city and homes reach up into the backdrop of the Santa Ynez Mountains. The Harbor Department calls it the "only place in the State where one can see both a sunrise and a sunset by simply turning sideways."

Stearn's Wharf, once owned by Jimmy Cagney, was built in 1872.

At the time it was the longest deep-water pier on the coast between Los Angeles and San Francisco. It is still the oldest working pier in California. The half-mile-long pier is now owned by the City of Santa Barbara and maintained as a historic and scenic sight.

A fire in 1973 forced the closing of the wharf, which then stood untouched due to lack of oil revenue coming into the pier. The city bought the pier in 1975, and restoration began in 1979. The new Stearn's Wharf opened in the fall of 1981.

Flanked by Ledbetter Beach and East Beach, Stearn's Wharf attracts 11 million visitors per year. The Santa Barbara Harbor, with over 1,000 boat slips, is just south of the pier.

A Bicentennial Friendship Fountain of three leaping dolphins greets visitors at the base of the pier. The sculpture was designed by Bud Bottoms and finally dedicated in 1985, three years late for Santa Barbara's 100th birthday celebration which it was intended to commemorate. Choosing an appropriate design proved to be a difficult and controversial task for the city.

Everything from bait and tackle to local arts and crafts is available on the pier. The Santa Barbara Shellfish Company features fresh fish caught by local fishermen either uncooked or in a variety of plate specials. Moby Dick Restaurant, The Harbor Restaurant, and Char West

Restaurant also feature local seafood on their menus.

Stearn's Wharf Vintners offers wines from vineyards in Santa Ynez, Santa Barbara, Sonoma, Napa, Amador, Mosel, and Loire Valleys. Visitors can buy wine by the glass to taste, or arrange for a picnic to take on to the balcony overlooking the water.

The Nature Conservancy also has an office on the pier. The Conservancy is dedicated to preserving natural diversity by protecting the best examples of national lands and waters. The project featured on the pier with literature and exhibits is the management of Santa Cruz Island.

Other shops on the pier feature candy, seashells, fossils, ice cream, clothing, and home decorations. Visitors can stop in at Madam Rosinka's for a palm reading telling the past, present, and future. The family of palm readers is in its third generation on the pier.

Trolleys run daily on regularly scheduled routes from the wharf up State Street to La Cumbre Plaza and back to the pier via Anacapa Street. The routes are designed to connect visitors and residents with major hotels, shopping areas and local tourist and cultural attractions.

Stearn's Wharf is at the base of State Street at the intersection of State and Cabrillo Boulevard. Most shops are open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. Parking on the pier is free with a $3 purchase validation.

DO THE ZOO

By Laurence Iliff

If you ask someone who has been to the Santa Barbara zoo what the place is like, chances are they will start off by telling you what it isn't like. It isn't like the San Diego zoo (nothing is); it isn't like Marine World, or the Serengeti for that matter. It is, however, a quaint little place that has a lot to offer in the form of a few hours of entertainment.

When considering a visit to the zoological gardens, as the plant and animal park is called, one must think in terms of context. Santa Barbara is a small, quiet, and quite beautiful town. The charm of this place is not fancy museums, amusement parks or intense night life. It is the sublime environment, the relaxed attitude, and the focus on the natural. And in this context, the Santa Barbara zoo shares in many of the advantages of Santa Barbara.

Located near Montecito, the zoo is an adventure in the organic. Its very placement on the edge of a lake/bird refuge and near the ocean contributes to the visitor's sense of being in a natural environment. There are a lot of plants (many marked for the eager Botany graduate) and the concrete is kept at a minimum. In terms of its big brothers in San Diego or San Francisco, the Santa Barbara zoo is not big. But in terms of things to see, the zoo does have enough to keep one's interest for an hour or two.

Upon entering the zoo, one is immediately faced with a small decision — where to go? It's best to start off with the less exciting exhibits and work up to the most exciting, especially if accompanied by young children. The farmyard/petting zoo is right near the entrance and is a good place to start out. The otherwise docile goats will instantly come to life once you offer them a cracker, which may be bought for a small price.

Some of the other more placid sites include a bird aviary, reptile exhibit (with a truly BIG snake), and several displays of small animals and birds, such as flamingos and toucans.

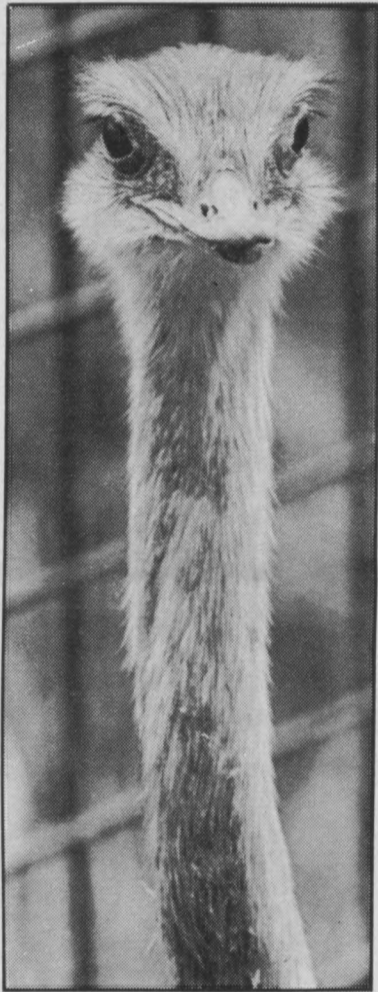

The big cats constitute, perhaps, an intermediate stage between the less interesting displays and the more interesting ones, with the qualification that everyone has their favorites. While visiting the cat area on a hazy Sunday afternoon with a few hundred other animal fans, the mountain lion was pacing around in his rather small cage like a nervous student before an exam, and the tiger was soundly sleeping, much like the same student after said exam.

On approaching gibbon island there was a lot of talk and excitement. It quickly became apparent that this was one of the main attractions. Kids of all ages were wide-eyed, and camera shutters were clicking away. And for good reason. Watching these primates was truly an exercise in smile therapy. One in particular, a young white gibbon with dark fur around his face, was very funny. His attempts to keep up with his larger companions revealed an innocence and playfulness people find so refreshing in the young of their own species.

Another highlight of the zoo is the elephant display. The two were monstrous (as one might expect) and put on a pretty good show for the crowd by feeding each other grass. To watch the agility and sensitivity of their long

CACHUMA:

A Lake for All Seasons

GREG WONG/Nexus

By Doug Arellanes

It was cold and foggy on campus. I began to wonder if this really was Santa Barbara, the same place with weather I bragged about to friends from Northern California.

As a photographer and I made the turn up State Highway 154, also known as San Marcos Pass, I asked myself how I was going to complete the assignment my editor gave me. I was supposed to tell parents what a beautiful drive it was.

The drive on the San Marcos Pass is one of those that keeps you on the edge of your seat — and depending on your speed, on the edge of the seat next to you. On clear days, the view from higher elevations on the pass is spectacular, the kind of view that makes people forget they are driving. Oncoming traffic reinforces that fact.

Instead of craning your neck for the spectacular view, turn right on Painted Cave Road, about three quarters of the way up the hill. Not only is the view better, but there is less traffic on the road, probably because of its twists and turns — at least seven hairpin turns await you. Farther up the road there really is a painted cave, and even though it is fenced off, the extra time it takes to get there is worth the effort to get there.

We sped down Painted Cave road and rejoined Hwy 154. We reached the summit and it was a bonafide miracle. The clouds cleared and the sun came out. We got very hot very quickly.

We stopped at the first vista point to appreciate the view. Across the Santa Ynez Valley were a series of rock formations interspersed with dried-yellow, grassy hills dotted by oak trees. The air was so clear we could distinguish hay bales on the far side of the valley.

This is what I do like about this area. However, like the guy in Repo Man said, "the more you drive, the less intelligent you are."

We had also stopped in search of a much-needed bathroom. There isn't one at this vista point. Only tourists with pale bodies and blank expressions, sending a cloud of cigarette smoke into the air while remarking on the clear view.

About five miles down the hill, inside Cachuma County Park, at least 100 motorhomes were lined up side by side, in neat rows. A large plastic fish sat on a sign, presumably guarding the boat ramp, its mouth open in a perfect circle. I was curious to find out what kind of fish it was, but nobody I asked knew.

The marina on Lake Cachuma is small and crowded with aluminum rental boats. Old fishermen in sunglasses and baseball caps stroll around the docks with tackle boxes in their hands. A park ranger walked by, headed for lunch.

"People from L.A. love to go camping here," she said. "This is more of a family area than other lakes. Weekends are really full in the summer. Look, I'd love to stay and talk, but this is my lunch hour, and I'm really hungry."

She walked away, and we went down toward the docks, passing the snack bar and a sign with a picture of that fish again. 'Don't go home empty handed,' it read. 'Try our fish burger. The one that didn't get away.' I pictured the ranger stuffing herself with fish burgers.

The Cachuma Lake Tackle Shop, a one-room building full of colorful lures and baits, sits next to the snack bar. Huge fish are preserved on the walls, probably to make the people that traveled all the way from Los Angeles feel like the trip was not in vain. One brand of bait, called Zeke's Floatin' Bait, comes in four flavors; garlic, corn, cheese, and marshmallow. "It's a big seller," the man behind the counter said.

Fishing has gone high-tech, I find. The man behind the counter empties out a styrofoam cup full of six-inch-long worms. "You see these? These worms are a multi-million dollar business. We get ours from a guy in Santa Maria who ships 'em in from all over the country. These ones in particular came from South Carolina. They fly 'em in to keep 'em fresh." And I always wondered how Federal Express stayed in business.

The man behind the counter saw all of the cameras the photographer carried, and he let us borrow one of the aluminum boats in the hope of some free press. I told him I was a supporter of a free press, and we rode around the lake, passing more old men in sunglasses and baseball caps. Even though it was close to 90 degrees, every one of them wore polyester pants.

There is an exhilaration that comes with being on the water. It also came from getting away from the people who drove three hours to get away from it all, but had to fight for parking.

Steering the four-seat boat, feeling the spray of swells as they slapped against the vessel made me feel like Bud (or Sandy) from Flipper, and part of me hoped to hear that friendly clicking noise over the drone of the motor.

Cachuma has a number of inlets and canyons that are great for exploring. We slowed the motor down to an almost inaudible level, and ventured into one. A hawk soared overhead, hovering and pouncing upon something it saw. Oak trees looked like mangroves, growing horizontally at water level, and I waited for something to spring out of the bushes.

After our journey into the heart of darkness, Park Naturalist Neil Taylor spoke to us while giving fly-

Getting Around Town: The City's Most Notable Tourist Attractions

A leisurely drive through the Santa Barbara area can take you through quiet mountain roads and refreshing ocean cliffs to the unique sights and events of the city. Of course you can't see all the city has to offer in a single day, but with a little free time and some selective planning, you can visit a few of Santa Barbara's scenic spots, exhibits and recreational activities. This is a sampling of the city's attractions.

to 5 p.m., Tuesday-Friday; 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday; closed Monday. Free admission. Guided tours 1:30 p.m. Wednesday and Sunday. 966-1601.

Santa Barbara County Courthouse
(1100 block of Anacapa St.)
Magnificent Spanish-Moorish "palace" surrounded by lawns and tropical gardens. Elegant interior, hand-painted ceilings, wrought-iron chandeliers. Giant murals, carved doors, imported tiles. Historical exhibits. View from clock tower. Free guided tour, Friday, 10:30 a.m. Open weekdays 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, Sunday, holidays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Free admission.

El Paseo — "The Street in Spain"
(15 E. De La Guerra St.)
Picturesque shopping arcade reminiscent of old Spain, built in and around the adobe home (1827) of the historic family. Richard Henry Dana described the spirited life at De La Guerra house in his classic book Two Years Before the Mast. Charming import and specialty shops, art galleries, sidewalk cafes and dining courtyard, world famous El Paseo restaurant and cocktail lounge. Cafe open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Saturday; most shops open from 10 a.m. 965-0093.

TURTLE DIARY:

Pinter at the Onset of the Free the Turtles Movement

By Karl Irving

How often have you visited your local zoo and suddenly were possessed with a feeling of guilt for contributing to the poor animals' captivity? Some of us never concern ourselves with petty sentiments such as sympathy, or simply never consider the reality of what lies before our eyes. Others, however, will shudder as they watch a lion pace restlessly in its enclosure, wondering if perhaps it should be back in Africa, roaming the windswept plains. That you've wondered the same thing about sea turtles is unlikely. Yet someone must have.

Thus the premise of Turtle Diary, a film with a plot line so simple as to border upon the banal, were it not for the charisma of scriptwriter Harold Pinter and the instant charm conveyed by the acting team of Ben Kingsley (Ghandi) and Glenda Jackson. They play two middle-aged Londoners who separately come upon the idea of kidnapping three giant sea turtles from the aquarium of the London Zoo to set them free in the Atlantic.

The film is submerged in deliberate quaintness, but Pinter has nevertheless avoided the cliché and succeeded in translating the witty, engaging tale from the marvelous Russell Hoban novel. The characterizations are astounding. Pinter holds our reticent protagonists back, forever hesitant in their mannerisms and eager to slip their heads back into their shells at the slightest hint of danger. They are two loners, both avid booklovers who seem to find their own freedom as they are trying to save the turtles.

Pinter proves himself adept at portraying the reality of ordinary people making semi-heroic gestures, while still keeping the atmosphere light and comical. He is even unable to avoid throwing in certain impromptu sidelights such as a jab at American tourists, in a cameo in which Pinter himself appears as the obnoxious traveler.

Yet the greatest beauty of this film rests upon the actors' shoulders. It takes great finesse to deal with Pinter's typical dryness as marvelously as this pair do. The often terse dialogue becomes a tool well-utilized by Kingsley and Jackson. Watching Kingsley's William Snow light up with a smug smile of pride after forcing himself to make the big decision to go for it creates the same feeling in the filmgoer. The pair's interaction jumps between purely business-like to mutual attraction (but don't get any ideas) at a rapid pace. Certain supporting characters such as the helpful zoo keeper contribute to the fine cast as well. The finished product comes out as sharp as a finely executed play, with some splendid scenery to boot.

John Irvin, who has already brought us such amazing productions as the BBC-TV series of Le Carre's Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy, has assembled a most welcome, artful rendition of a seemingly bare tale. (Whether he was as successful with Schwarzenegger in Raw Deal is highly doubtful.) Although the ending went a bit overboard on sentimentality and splendour in light of Pinter's script, for the most part it avoided long tangents and what would seem like inevitable slowness. The result is a straight-faced parody of a fantasy made real by the determination of two slightly odd people who found it hard to be committed to anything else. This is entertainment at its purest level, with its own little subtleties but never pretentious. If you're looking for a quiet night and a few smiles, this should tickle your noggin quite well — it may even spark a few ideas. See you at the Zoo...

"Turtle Diary" begins at the Victoria Street Theater on Friday, June 13.

SWEET LIBERTY: Alan Alda's Film Reaffirms Americana

By Susanne Van Cleave

Alan Alda is a likable guy who makes likable movies about likable characters. His films are invariably about relationships and have unusually human foundations. You'll find no spectacular special effects, no fancy editing, no extraordinary sets. What you do find are people — adults, to be exact — who are questioning themselves, their lives, their loves. Sweet Liberty, Alda's latest endeavor, is no exception.

Michael Burgess (Alan Alda) is a writer, a teacher, a historian. In his spare time he fences, rides a motorcycle, and perfects the art of salad making. Sweet Liberty is the title of his Nobel Prize winning account of the American revolution that is being made into a film. Problems arise when Michael and Mo, the director, can't see eye to eye about the books transfer to celluloid. Michael wants accuracy. Mo wants to make money. "Defy authority, destroy property, and take peoples clothes off," that's what kids want to see and they're 80 percent of the audience so that's what we're going to give them, Mo says. Michael does not take this lightly and much of the film revolves around his attempts to add some truth to the lacking screenplay.

What gives Sweet Liberty depth is the multitude of complicated and funny relationships that abound between the townspeople and the movie crew. Michael Caine plays Elliot James, the leading man in the film within the film. He has, in the words of the leading lady Faith Healy (Michelle Pfeiffer), "the emotional depth of an eggplant."

Sweet Liberty is an amusing, and rather surprising, reaffirmation of Americana. Alda's direction is appropriate and the film is fairly funny. The acting is superb and Lillian Gish offers a charming portrayal of Michael's ailing and "crazy" mother.

Michelle Pfeiffer and Alan Alda in Sweet Liberty.

STATE STREET: A Walking Tour

By Jane Musser

Graduating from college poses one of life's most important questions: how do you keep mom and dad and other visiting relatives busy while you're spending time celebrating the end of your UCSB career with your friends? Fortunately, Santa Barbara provides an easy answer: send them to State Street.

Since State is S.B.'s main drag, it's easy for any out-of-towner to find. And the shops, restaurants, theaters, bars (and more) that line the street can keep anyone busy for hours. So give your parents a copy of this article, directions to the Mission Street exit off 101, and rest assured that they'll be busy for hours while you get down to the serious celebrating that graduation entails.

If a tour of downtown State begins at the Mission Street intersection, the first potential stop is McConnell's for S.B.-wide famous ice cream. With that little boost of sugar-inspired energy, a stroll down Santa Barbara's most happening avenue can begin.

Frimple's is the next major attraction on this tour. If you just finished an ice cream binge, you may not want to eat again right away, but keep Frimple's mind. It is one of the few places in Santa Barbara open 24 hours a day. Hit Frimple's if you want to get a feel for what your graduating student does after a party-filled Friday night or during a break from an all-night study session. The huge fig tree that the restaurant was built around is part of what makes the place a local landmark.

Moving along, you'll pass a fresh flower stand in front of Cantrell's market. Think about how much that graduating senior of yours would appreciate a bouquet of roses before you pass this. But make your purchase later, as you have a lot more touring before you have done State Street.

Trinity Episcopal Church is located across State and down a little from Cantrell's. It is a beautiful church with huge stained-glass windows and unusual architecture, considering much of Santa Barbara's uniform adobe-and-red-tile roof look. Back on the right side of the street is (See STATE STREET, p.16A)

Solvang: Have Empty Stomach and Desire to Window Shop

By Penny Rosenberg

Upon acceptance to UCSB, I envisioned studying by the pool and trekking off to Solvang for breakfast. Unfortunately, studying by the pool never materialized (wouldn't want books to shadow me, now would I?), and now that my days in Santa Barbara are numbered, I realized I had never breakfasted in Solvang, either.

I remedied this "problem" one Saturday morning and now can recommend the 45-minute drive to anyone, students and parents alike, who is tired of coastal fog and suburbia's track homes.

Solvang. The word alone incites dreams of windmills, Danish apple strudel and Belgian waffles. With bakeries and restaurants located on every block, choosing a place to eat may prove difficult.

The solution: arrive with an empty stomach and be prepared to try a little bit of everything. Because after all, who can resist signs touting "The world famous Belgian waffle fresh baked and prepared from an old family recipe" or "Danish hot dog on a stick?"

Aebleskivers, crispy Danish pancakes sprinkled with sugar and topped with jam, are unique to Solvang, and therefore, must be sampled. One advantage is that sitting down in a restaurant to enjoy these treats is not necessary — they are available at streetside windows, leaving you free to snack and stroll at the same time (strolling is a mandatory activity in Solvang).

The Danish community and window shopping are synonymous. Sidestreets as well as the center of town are teeming with cloggeries, music box stores, clothes shops ranging from western wear to Danish outfits, and year-round Christmas boutiques (not to mention toy stores, knicknack centers, and art galleries).

Owners of the many establishments proudly display their surnames, names like Mortensen's, Olsen's, Hansen's, and Andersen's. Of course the 20th century is not forgotten; the green and yellow California Lottery poster hangs from one store and HBO signs signify the movie service is available in several hotels.

One tourist described Solvang similar to Disneyland's "Fantasyland." Windmills are not unusual, but commonplace. All architecture is authentic, designed by Danish settlers in the early part of this century. Even the more recent bank and bus station keep with the theme. Gas streetlights and cobblestone sidewalks are also familiar sights.

Solvang, Danish for "Sunny Valley", began as the location for a Danish folk school, Atterdag College, in 1911. Ferdinand Sorensen is known as the "father" of Solvang's architecture because he built the first of four provincial windmills.

The Danish-type structures are replete with bindingsvaerk walls — heavy beams implanted in the brick or masonry construction — tile or copper roofs and stained glass windows. Artificial storks can be seen on many rooftops as the people of Solvang, like the Danes, believe a stork on the roof will bring good luck.

Three Solvang/Santa Ynez Valley tours are available at very modest prices. An hour-long historic tour includes the history of Solvang, a visit to the area surrounding President Ronald Reagan's ranch and other neighboring ranches. A wine tour takes interested persons to a nearby winery for exploration and wine-tasting. A 20-minute Danish tour highlights shops, parks and two "fairy tale" looking homes in Solvang. Group rates are available.

STATE STREET

another architectural oddity — I Magnin Co. If you can afford it, browse through one of Santa Barbara's classiest department stores and think about graduation gifts. If you can't afford it, browse anyway, just for the fun of it.

On the corner of the next block is Gervasoni's My Florist, a floral, plant and gift shop with always interesting and intricate window displays. The shop is worth more than a look through the window, so take a look inside. The Santa Barbara Chamber of Commerce is located directly across the street from Gervasoni's, if you are interested in more information about what this town has to offer.

Down the block, Carlitos and Co. offers Mexican fare and outdoor right-on-the-street dining. Across the street, Maison Robert serves French food in an elegant atmosphere.

No tour of Santa Barbara would be complete without a stop at the next historical landmark — the Arlington Theater. The Arlington plays host to everything from movies to plays and musicals, rock concerts to performances by the Santa Barbara Symphony. If it is possible, take a peek inside — the Spanish village design and star-speckled ceiling are worth seeing.

Back outside and moving right along, Downey's, another fine restaurant with an atmosphere as classy as its cuisine, is in the Arlington block of State. Thinking about where to take that graduate for a special dinner? There'll be plenty of places to choose from before this tour is done.

Cross the Victoria Street intersection and hit the left side of the street for a browsing session in the Earthling Bookstore. With chairs set up for your reading comfort, the Earthling is one of those bookstores that is very easy to spend hours in. New and used books as well as a wide selection of magazines provide all the browsing fodder you could ask for.

Interested in a little physical activity after all that mental stimulation? Copeland's Sports — for down-to-earth pursuits — and Come Fly a Kite — a great idea on any of Santa Barbara's beaches — are on the same block. And across from Copeland's, don't pass by Kemohan's Toys and Gifts. You can't miss the huge stuffed bear outside the store. It's on the same block as the Rocky Mountain Chocolate Factory, MacDonald's, the Super Sub Sandwich Shop, and Haagen Daaz Ice Cream.

The Granada, another historical Santa Barbara theater, is situated across the street from Haagen Daaz. The Granada is almost exclusively a movie theater these days, but the lush interior provides evidence that it once played host to live theater productions.

Hobson's, a unique ice cream store that provides the opportunity to create your own mix-and-mush ice cream treat, is right next door. And in case your sweet tooth still isn't satisfied, or you're making plans for a later-in-the-day stop, there's the Chocolate Gallery, featuring chocolate in nearly every imaginable form. Cliffe's Downtown is a new breakfast and lunch spot on the block. And across the street, the State & A offers patio dining with a view of — what else — State Street.

STATE

The next block is the home of two very different — but each in their own way important — mirrors of modern culture. On your left, you have the Santa Barbara Museum of Art. A look inside always proves worthwhile. And on your right, Woolworth's. What Main Street would be complete without one?

Swept Away is a must-stop-in if you want a real taste of Santa Barbara trendy — the clothes, the cards, the toys. Osbourne's Bookstore, and Walden Books offer more browsing through the racks for your pleasure. Heritage Cars & Aircraft, an Oldsmobile-

Cadillac showcase and Gregg's Motors at the corner of State and 101 are possibilities if you still haven't decided on the perfect gift for the graduate. They are also fun for window-shopping/wishing-you-could-afford-that-one day-dreaming.

State Street abounds in other, more realistic, stores for graduation gift shopping: Operation Petticoat, See's Candies, Pier 1 Imports, P.S. Limited, Chameleon, Hendrickson's Bicycles, depending on along what lines your soon-to-be graduate's tastes run.

If you are brave enough to cross 101, you can choose from several excellent seafood restaurants — Andria's, the Famous Enterprise Fish Co., and the Harbor Restaurant on Steam's Wharf. Rocky Gallenti's serves up Italian food and a festive atmosphere.

State Street is one of Santa Barbara's main attractions. It provides more than a day's worth of window shopping, eating out, browsing, people-watching. Start anywhere you like, stop whenever you want, and along the way, be sure to enjoy.

snouts is, in itself, enough to entertain. It is important to mention, as well, that this is one exhibit where it is possible to get pretty close, and overall this was the case throughout the many exhibits at the zoological gardens.

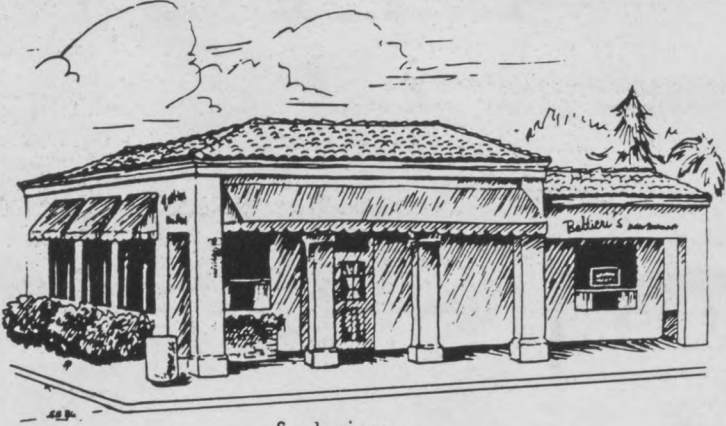

It would be impossible to mention all the forms of animal life one can see at the zoo. A brochure states that there are over 500 animals in 60 displays, but a few others deserve recognition. The lemurs, particularly the striped variety, are something like an underdeveloped monkey. They jump around a lot, and are very playful and interesting to watch. The otters are energetic and wrestle often with each other. And the sea lions, too, have a playful personality and are very graceful swimmers.

The zoological gardens also offers a train ride, picnic area with barbeque facilities, snack bar, and a playground. It is run by a non-profit organization, and supports itself through gifts, donations, and entrance fees ($3 for adults). The zoo is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.
