The Victorian Bridge.

This bridge is to be built for the Great Trunk Railway in Canada. It will cross the St. Lawrence at the point where the river is 242 by 90, is raised above the water level, and is 1,000 feet above the summer level of the St. Lawrence and the Grand Trunk Railway. The bridge is to be 600 feet long, the footings are 800 feet long, and the foundations are 200 feet long. The whole of the work is to be carried out by the Canadian Government, and is to be completed by the year 1857. The bridge is to consist of a central tower, with two side towers, and is to be supported by a system of guy wires. The bridge is to be completed by the year 1857.

The Pacific Railroad.

The New York Railroad Journal, in its latest number, reports on the progress of the Pacific Railroad. The journal states that the work is progressing rapidly, and that the track is to be completed by the year 1857. The journal also states that the railroad will be a great benefit to the people of the West, and will open up new opportunities for trade and commerce. The journal further states that the railroad will be a great benefit to the people of the East, and will open up new opportunities for trade and commerce.

The New Mexican Treaty.

The following synopsis of the new Treaty concluded with Mexico by Mr. Forsyth, in December last, is published in the New York Journal:

The treaty was concluded with Mexico by Mr. Forsyth, in December last, and is of great importance to the United States. It provides for the cession of a large territory to the United States, and is expected to bring about important changes in the political and commercial relations between the two countries.
