Q's Sushi A Go Go

Tired of the I.U. food joints? Looking for a change of scene? Have we got a place for you. We're talking style, we're talking good times, we're talking sushi, we're talking Q's. Walk down that same-old, same-old State Street, enter Q's Sushi A Go Go, and feast your eyes on a whole new world. You don't even know what class is until you step into Q's. You pass through the entrance, and the bartender greets you. What better way to say welcome? The rich, decorative walls and dim lighting set the mood for a night yet to begin. The place is massive with separate cocktail and sushi bars downstairs, private booths on the second story, and a third level designated for billiard tables. During the day, Q's is casual and open to all, but at night, the environment turns sophisticated, guests are dressed to impress, and only those 21 and over can get in. Arrive early on the weekends, because we're not the only ones who fell in love with this place.

Mmm ... menu. Begin with drinks. Something hard and strong to get the evening off to the right start – like a Diet Coke. There are free refills, but don't overdo it. They can catch up on you. Next, appetizers. Feeling a little craaaazy? How about an oyster shooter? Q's serves you a shot glass filled to the brim with an oyster and a raw egg. Sure, it may sound a little strange, but it's an experience sure to impress your friends and future kids. If you're not feeling quite so daring, there are other less intimidating appetizers, like Miso soup or popcorn shrimp.

Now, on to the main courses. Q's offers approximately 20 different kinds of sushi. Indulge in the California Roll (prawn, avocado and cucumber) or the Philly Roll (salmon, cream cheese and avocado). Q's decks out its menu with a number of fun selections, like Rock Lobster (broiled lobster tail wrapped in soy paper), Let the Good Times Roll (shrimp and halibut dipped in tempura batter) and Burning Up for Some of Your Love (spicy tuna wrapped in rice, covered in avocado and topped with a tingly sauce). For all those veggie lovers out there – try a Grilled Veggie or Vegan Roll. Those of you a little wary of raw fish, the menu is filled with everything from salads to burgers to pasta. Basically, your options are endless, and your taste buds are guaranteed to be left satisfied.

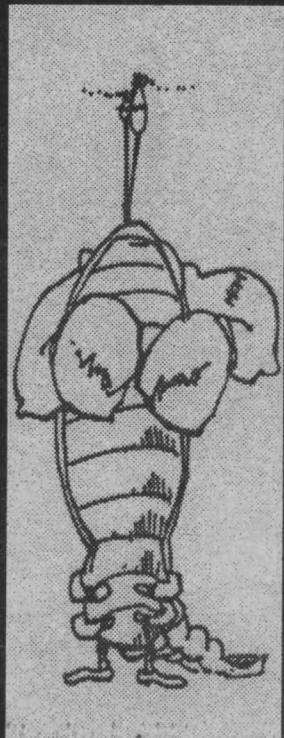

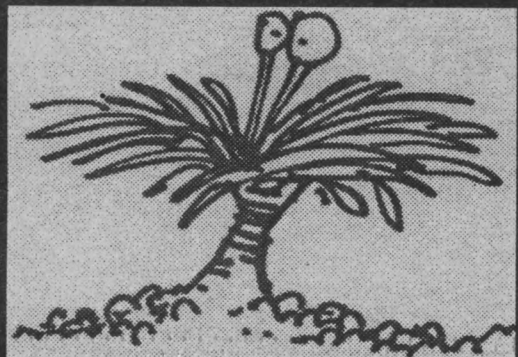

Though you wouldn't guess from the lavish environment, the prices are reasonable. Sushi usually goes for $4-$4.50, and the variety of rolls range from $3-$11. Most of the other main dishes remain under $10. So, don't worry about burning a hole in your wallet.

The best part about Q's Sushi A Go Go is that your night is not simply over with a good meal. After eating, it's time to get your body moving on the dance floor downstairs, or chill on the third floor and shoot some pool. For all those couch potatoes or sports fans, several TVs surround the restaurant, playing nonstop sports, and can be seen from almost any area on the first and second floors.

Q's caters to all, and is quite a remarkable surprise: The food is outstanding, the service is friendly, and the atmosphere is social and entertaining. But don't take our word for it ...

This restaurant is opened every night from 4 p.m. Happy hours are Monday through Friday from 4-7 p.m., at which time you can get half-off drinks and appetizers. Dancing begins after 10:30 p.m. It is located on 409 State St., and if you have any questions, call 966-9177.

Don Q Billiards

The Youth

The Drunk

& The Furious

We had just over two hours to escape from work and uncover entertainment before the ever-present choke chain known as the Daily Nexus pulled our asses back in. It was just the three of us — the Youth, the Drunk and the Furious — looking for some sort of recreation to salvage a wet and mundane week seven of Winter Quarter.

Since Isla Vista has limited Wednesday night entertainment, we headed downtown in search of a readily available pool table and a pitcher of good beer (well, at least the Drunk pushed for the beer). Since the three of us were limited in options because of the Youth's age (that's right, bars downtown do card), we avoided State altogether and instead took one of its friendly parallels. Heading up Chapala Street the Furious did something out of character and slowed down.

There it was in all of its majestic glory ... DON Q's BILLIARDS!

There was no stopping us. The Furious took the first right and parallel-parked in between two cars whose owners had distinctively higher income brackets than our own.

The three of us meandered into the seemingly low-key pool hall, heading straight for the front desk. We were appalled to find that such a commodity as beer on tap doesn't exist at Don Q's, but were relieved (except for the Youth) to find Sierra Nevada Pale Ale available behind the front counter. The Drunk and the Furious indulged.

A transaction of driver license for balls was made, leading us to our next logical step ... playing pool. We took the balls, found a table under a golden chandelier, and began a game of "cutthroat." The Youth seemed new to the game, and the Drunk's aim seemed just a bit off center, and as for the Furious ... well, let's just say Don Q's balls took quite a beating that evening.

Nevertheless (but always more) we did what we could to deter our thoughts from the follies of our play and turned our lowly eyes to a peculiar menu fixture on the wall. "Hallelujah," cried our rumbling innards as we gazed at what appeared to be a menu for the nearby restaurant China Castle. With little hesitation, the three of us took to the choices and picked out two reasonably priced dishes we felt would satisfy both stomach and pocketbook. Confused as to how the system worked, the Drunk took the menu to the nice woman at the front counter and said, "I would like the Moo Goo Guy Beef and this Kung-Pow thingy right here," pointing insistently to the agreed-upon menu options. The woman nodded and shortly thereafter and put a call in for us.

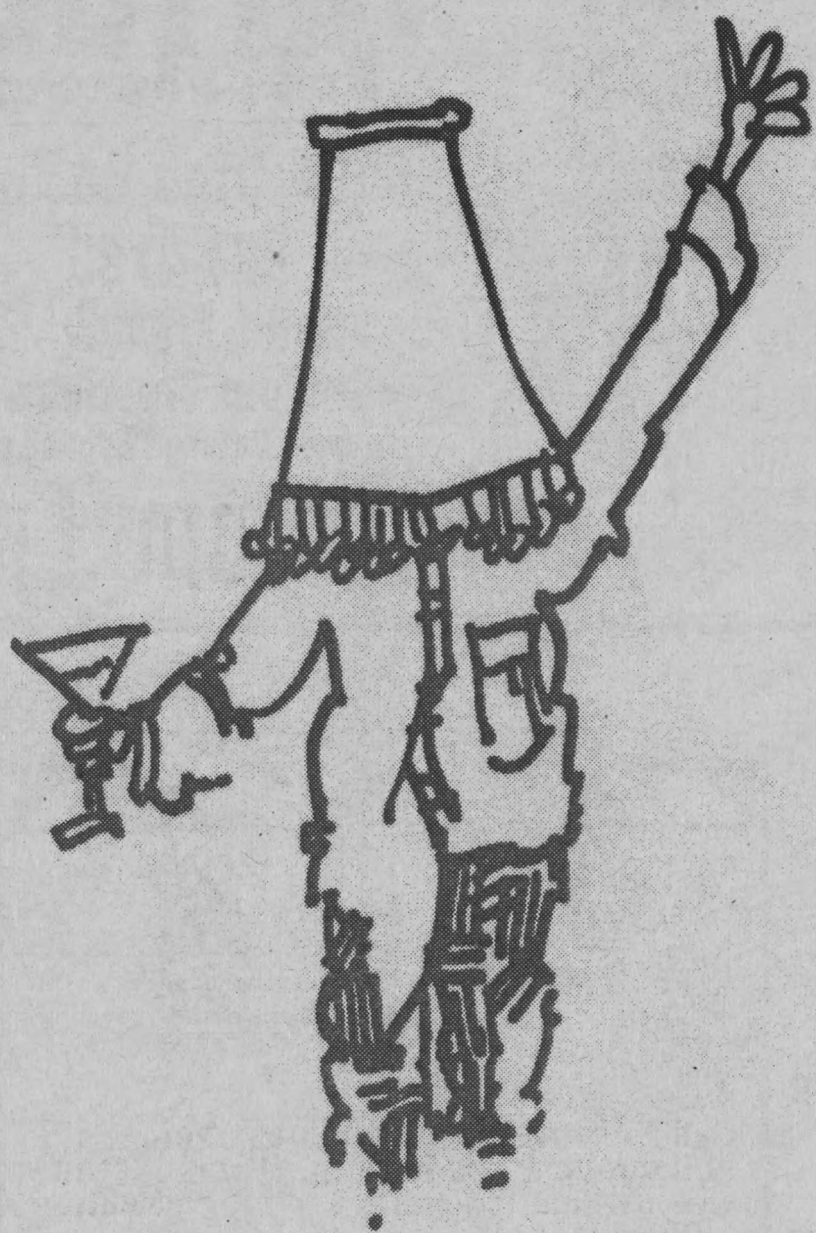

In the meantime, the three of us raged (especially the Furious) on the green-felted battlefield. After the Drunk won the first game through sheer luck or intoxication (maybe both), the Youth seemed flustered. Shortly into the second game he pulled out the "sissy stick" from underneath the table (obviously compensating for ... age) and proceeded to line a shot up. This, of course, was followed by uncontrollable laughter from both the Furious and the Drunk. The Furious mocked him, saying, "Oh, he's gonna use the sissy stick!" The Youth then hit the Furious' ball in.

Before us stooges knew it, the food had arrived. Handling the bill (wink, wink) was easier than first expected since Don Q's has a delivery system worked out with China Castle in which the food bill is simply tacked onto the billiards tab. No tipping involved. We munched our grub and ignored the pool cues for a moment, taking the time to watch a hockey referee get nailed in the back with a puck on one of Don Q's many elevated television sets.

Once full, we continued our assault on Don Q's balls and table until our one hour and $11 had expired. When the smoke cleared, the three of us had collectively broken both of Don Q's posted table rules: 1) No ball jumping allowed, and 2) No Massé allowed. With little or no remorse we returned the balls to the woman at the front desk in exchange for the Drunk's identification. Being the only adolescent of the group (who used the "sissy stick" twice before the night was over), the Youth was kind enough to pick up the tab. We left Don Q's with a sense of merriment ... that is, fat, happy and with a box of Moo Goo Guy Kung-Pow somethin' or other.

Don Q Billiards is located at 1128 Chapala St. in downtown Santa Barbara.
