Opinions on College Night ranging from a "fine production" to a "dramatic washout" have been turned in to The Eagle office by members of the journalism class. Rather than take any one person’s opinion on it, here is a list of the opinions.

DORIS HOEDEHAVER
Was the College Night performance a success? This is the question asked by all those concerned with the production. The opinions of those in front of the curtains differed materially from those on the back of it.

While the songs and yells were being given, there was a steady hum of feminine voices backstage. Spirit of the flute: "Now I'll come off this side, and you be sure to have here with you the yellow blouses and red, and the top of the firefly, because I have to wear her top in the flower dance." Russian: "Here it is, but I can't find the string that goes to my costume?"

Butterfly: "Oh, not exactly, but there was no finish to it. The whole thing was kind of elementary. I think the whole school could have done as well.

College Night, an annual production, has become the benefit of the Student Loan Fund, was held last Friday night at 8:15 o'clock. In attendance: Albert Terry, Dorothy Mansfield lead the audience in singing songs of eastern and western colleges.

The play, King Nutcracker, was compact and appeared to cover only a short period of time, but the actors took their parts in an expert way and what there was of the program was presented in an excellent manner.

KATHLEEN DONAHUE
The program of College Night was a complete "washout." If people are willing enough to pay fifty cents for a thirty-five minute program, they should be given something in that brief time as there was of the program was presented in an excellent manner.

ALBERT Z. TERRY
The Santa Barbara State College annual "College Night" is the most extensively advertised activity of the school year, yet it is poorly supported by the student body. Many food parents and interested townspeople turn out for the occasion, expecting to see some activities characteristic of collegiate life. Instead, however, they see classical dancing by amateurs, and hear some songs which have little to do with college by the girls' glee club.

"College Night" should consist of a program with some comedy and no classical dancing. Then those who are interested could only sing some college songs, instead of having the entire school out to do it, maybe that would make a hit. In fact, what we need for "College Night" is a program that will fit the name of the function. We have managed to get the impression that the program is held in the gym, position, now let us give them a chance to participate in the college activities of the "College Night" from now on.

JUNIORS BEAT SOPHOMORES IN HOCKEY GAME

One of the hardest fought hockey games witnessed here was played Tuesday afternoon between the juniors and the sophomores on the women's athletic field; the juniors won, 4 to 2.

The juniors entered the field with one less player than their opponents. One of the weak spots and centering their attack on the left side of the junior team, they started to ball down the field for a score in the first few minutes of play.

The center half for the juniors received the ball after the bully and sent it to the right into the sophomores' territory. The plays were short and fast for the next few minutes. The ball went out of bounds and the junior left half rolled it in. It was taken by a soph, but recovered by the junior left inside who sent the ball to the center in the soph's' striking circle. The juniors made one final effort and pushed the ball through.

The ball was brought back to center and the sophes carried the ball into their opponents' territory. A corner hit gave the sophes the ball into their opponents' territory. The plays were left inside who sent the ball to the center half. The sophes made one final effort and pushed the ball through.

The corner hit resulted in an unobstructed goal. The final score was 2-1.

PLANS FOR GYM ARE INDEFINITE

Owing to the lateness with which the plans and specifications were received back from Sacramento, the proposed temporary gymnasium may not be built this year, according to President Clar­ence L. Phelps.

Under the original plans, the gymnasium was to have been con­structed by the men in the Indus­trial Education department, with the work commencing at the beginning of the fall semester. The gymnasium should have been completed in time in order to be used for men's basketball prac­tice. All match games were to go on.

Starting construction of the gym at so late a period of the col­lege year, caused by the specific­ally stated reason of continuing swearing from Sacramento has too many disad­vantages to be deemed advisable, according to President Phelps.

The situation has been made double uncertain by the fact that all applications for the building have been cancelled on the college budget, leaving no avail­able funds for construction.

SAN MATEO BULLDOGS TRAMPLE ROADRUNNERS AND WIN GAME, 25 TO 0

The following story was written by Alfred Tomlinson, editor of The Eagle two years ago and now a student at Stanford University.

Early play, executed behind powerful interference and with the ball carried by Henry Schaldach, star San Mateo fullback, proved too much for the Roadrunner defense last Saturday at San Mateo. Santa Barbara was overwhelmed by the northern university. Santa Barbara was overwhelmed by the northern University.

Tennant, star San Mateo fullback, proved too much for the Roadrunner defense last Saturday at San Mateo. Santa Barbara was overwhelmed by the northern University.

The Roadrunners couldn't execute any sustained drives, and never seriously threatened to score. At times a series of first downs showed promise, but San Mateo -eventually held, Curtis, until hurt late in the first half, starred for the southerners by his offensive and defensive work, his tackling being outstanding. The play of Martin and Thurmond was also noticeable.

The Roadrunners were unable to stop either, the end run consistently being good for long gains, and the aerial offense was effective as the Roadrunners seemed unable to cover the eligible men. It was Schaldach who ran the end around and the end who made the passing attack effective by his accurate handling of the ball. The two threats were enough to defeat Santa Barbara.

The Roadrunners could not execute any sustained drives, and never seriously threatened to score. At times a series of first downs showed promise, but San Mateo -eventually held, Curtis, until hurt late in the first half, starred for the southerners by his offensive and defensive work, his tackling being outstanding. The play of Martin and Thurmond was also noticeable.

Until Schaldach was taken from the game toward the end of the third quarter, the San Mateo end run play gained consistently. Often starting from a single or double reverse, this play directed its heavy interference at the defensive end, who was completely taken out of the play, which swept by him into the secondary defense. The formation appeared to be extremely versatile, for when the end attempted to turn it in by playing wide, the entire power shifted to off-tackle, apparently without advance signals. Two men from the line, together with the backfield, ran the interference.

San Mateo Scores Easily

San Mateo scored on the third play of the day when Schaldach ran 55 yards to a touchdown, introducing rather suddenly to Santa Barbara the possibilities of this end run. The southerners converted. Toward the end of the quarter the Roadrunners marched from their own 30-yard line to the San Mateo 33 yard stripes, but were held at this point.

Some 40 odd yards in two plays, accomplished by Schaldach and his end run, started San Mateo on its way again at the opening of the second quarter, these two plays putting the ball on the 12-yard line. After one double reverse was covered, a pass found the ball on the 12-yard line. But the Roadrunners braced and San Mateo lost the ball by inches, two yards from a touchdown.

Santa Barbara punished out of danger to the 40-yard point, but Schaldach was still functioning, taking the ball to the 22-yard line, from where San Mateo scored again by a long pass over the goal line. No one was near Eubanks, who caught the throw.

The remainder of the quarter saw San Mateo attempt two drives to the goal, but both were halted, the first at the ten yard line when Schaldach fumbled, and the second within a few yards of the final line. In the third quarter San Mateo completed a long pass over the goal, but it was not allowed because the receiver was over the end zone. Again Santa Barbara held when another drive netted the Junior College team a first down on the two-yard line, but the Roadrunners were not to be scored upon, and they held for four downs.

The court is of a championship calibre, according to tennis enthusiasts, who have been inspecting it during the past week. A high netting surrounds the court.
WHAT’s wrong with our colleges? Since the influx of thousands of students to American universities which occurred just after the war, this has been one of the most pertinent questions in educational circles. Famous men of letter treat the subject as one of great mystery and depth, searching to consider the very simple and probably correct answer offered by the students themselves.

To be successful, a college education must create the habits of learning and self-reliance, for it is by means of these that the spirit of learning will be carried to greater heights after the student’s graduation. Examinations and grade systems, the very roots of the American college, both discourage the formation of such habits.

Gymnastics is not in any sense immoral, but it does prevent the student from remembering the subject matter for any longer than is necessary for him in order to pass the examination. In English and continental institutions examinations come only at the end of one or four years, depending on the length of the entire course. This prevents the student from cramming unimportant facts into his brain and gives him an opportunity to gain an impression that will stay with him all his life rather than until after the examination.

It is true, of course, that the average European student is about two years older than the American college man or woman, and it is possible that they may be a little more mature in purpose. But is it not true that this seriousness could be developed in our college students also if they were really thrown on their own shoulders, they would undoubtedly study harder and get more lasting knowledge than they do under the present system of cramming and almost paternally supervising the professor.

S NAPPY gymnastic costumes have become the thing at Stanford university. Negligees and closely cut knickers have taken the place of the ancient, out of date, cumbersome frocks.

A decided improvement would be made in the appearance of the campus if Santa Barbara state should give the gymnasium wearing apparel for women to be changed. Women students must par on the women in gym clothing so often due to the fact that the gym is so close to recreation rooms it would probably be a great relief to see some trim suits for a change.

As a more suggestion we quote from an exchange concerning the style.

"The new outfits are an improvement on the ones formerly used in that they are of lighter weight, permit greater freedom of movement, and present a trim appearance. The outfit consists of a net-like skirt and closely cut knickers of light taffeta. Tan elastics above, tan stocking of ankle length, and tan stockings complete the costume.

This change of costume worn by the Stanford women is the fourth change in the last ten years. The changing styles of women’s dresses have made it necessary to keep up with times."

YESTERDAY afternoon the football team was given a good sendoff. Several students left early to work to give the team a few yells before the Rudderham squad departed on the longest trip ever taken by a local team.

Only one thing marred the sendoff. Several freshmen wore their high school uniforms, left the rally to rush to geting to a journalism teacher of the local high school. This sort of thing should be frowned upon at our rallies. Let the freshmen try to remember that they are college students now and away from the school. If these girls think more of a high school teacher than of the football team a week ago, the coaches they belong back in high school and not on this college campus.
