687-9873 • 120 S. Hope Ave.
In the Heart of La Cumbre Shopping Center

OK, so you've ordered from CAFE AU LAIT'S exceptional menu. You've lingered at lunch with a double cappuccino on our outdoor patio, next to the fountain in the heart of La Cumbre Mall. But have you tried one of our dinner specials? Here's what we had last week: Tri-tip with Italian vegetable salad ($7.95); Angel hair with grilled salmon in basil cream ($6.95); Grilled duck with fettuccini ($7.95); Roasted chicken half with spring potatoes, parsley and roma tomatoes ($8.95); Homemade duck sausage pizza ($5.95); Roasted eggplant with goat cheese ($6.95). Not bad, huh? And every night is different, so call us at 687-9873. Ask what tonight's specials are.

CAFE AU LAIT has a decent selection of wine, Beck's on tap, excellent food at good prices, plenty of parking & lots of window shopping nearby. Not to mention an upbeat atmosphere and terrific desserts (that's how we got started). If you're in a rush, there's no better place to catch a quick meal before or after a movie at close-by Plaza D'Oro. So c'mon. Don't just pack CAFE AU LAIT in the afternoon. Drop in for dinner.

Run! Don't Walk! To the Chase Uptown

By Johnny L. Cash

As I began my sortie into the wonderful realm of Italian eats, I had certain preconceived ideas. I thought I had tasted the proverbial peak of perfection on one of my many extensive tours of Italy. I had ideas about the upper ceiling of dining excellence. Little did I know that I was about to have my beliefs radically altered and my standards discredited at the Chase Uptown.

My date, the lovely and talented "Donna," and I were greeted at the door by a hostess of such charm and candor that I could scarce help wondering if she had not mistaken me for someone else. My heart sunk when I looked up to find that everyone was being treated this way, but I have now realized that it's probably for the better.

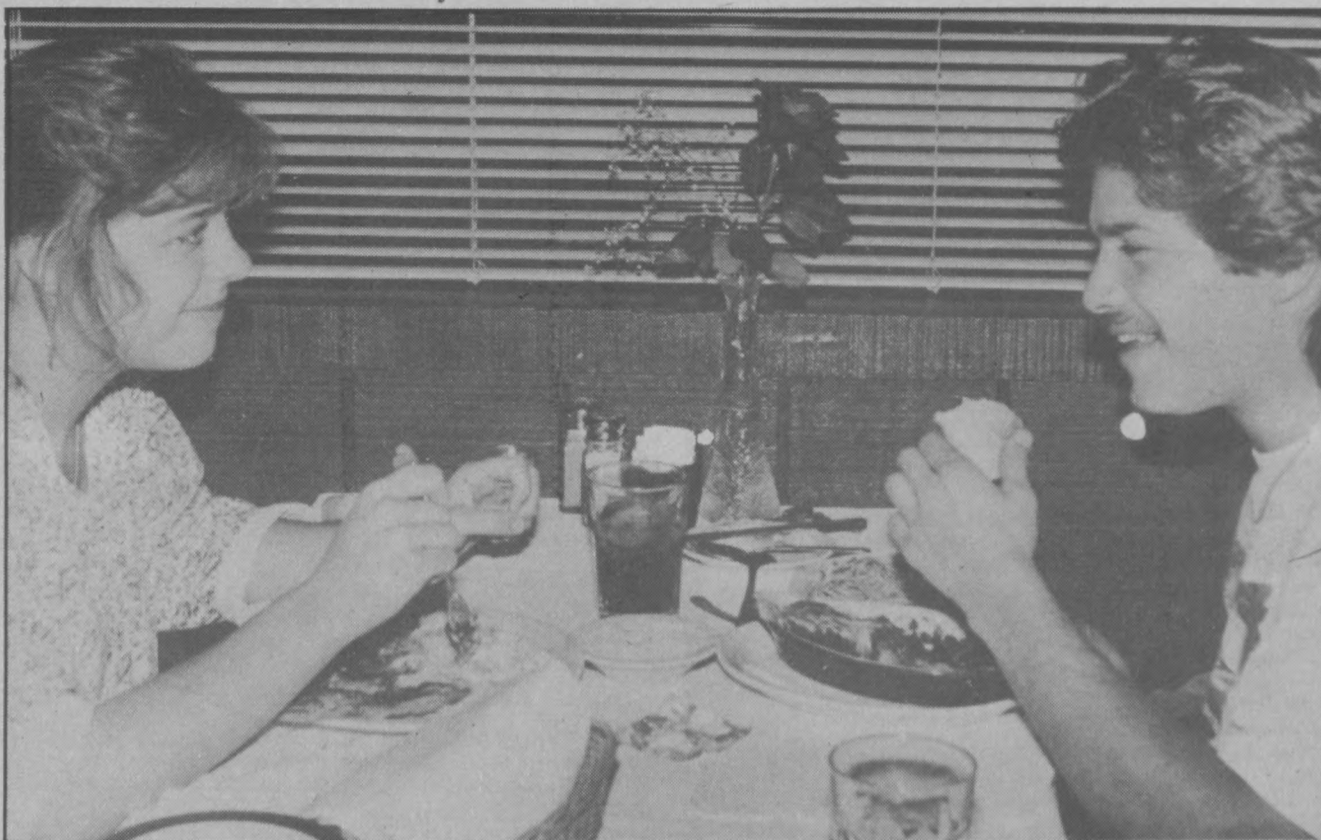

And then the feast began. I started with a hearty Minestrone topped with grated Parmesan cheese and accompanied by copious loaves of bread. The Minestrone warmed me to my frosted Lithuanian toes, and teased my palette as to what lay ahead. My stunning counterpart, in her usual cucinulous fashion, was nibbling the chef's Caesar (thankfully, the Chase made a special effort and went out of their way to satisfy Donna's special vegetarian needs) and I found that the greens were complemented excellently by the Chase house dressing, a veritable cornucopia of oral pleasures.

We had a broad range of wines on the list and although we only downed two bottles (both exceptional), I am sure that if we had delved further we would have been as overjoyed and satisfied with the wines as we were with the rest of the meal. Speaking of the rest of the meal, let me keep you in suspense no longer.

Donna's entree was the Chase's world-reknowned Fettuccine Alfredo and it was as smooth and creamy as a Gondola ride under the Bridge of Sighs. Slightly tangy from the Parmesan, the Fettuccine made it as plain as cheese pizza why it is the most highly regarded dish at the fine Chase establishment. In order to do my entree justice, I feel I must digress a bit.

As a child, just as many other children, I hated eggplant. I really did. I felt the same about eggplant as our dear president feels about broccoli. Well, I'm a grown man now, and nobody forces me to eat anything I don't want to eat. On this particular evening however, maybe because of the wine, I said to myself: "Johnny, if this is a truly classy establishment, they will be able to make eggplant so you like it." So out I went, on a limb. That is, I ordered the Eggplant Parmigiana.

Jennifer & Tom agree that there's little more romantic than a great Italian dinner.

Wow, when those folks at the Chase do it up, they really do it up right. Not only was the eggplant edible, it was good! I'd have it again! It was so covered in melted mozzarella and robust tomato sauce that I almost forgot it was the food-nemesis of my childhood and I indulged without care or concern for other worldly troubles.

After our plates were scoured and our breadbaskets sated, we turned our attention toward what we in this country modestly refer to as "afters." I would guess that the ancestral founders of the Chase referred to these particular niblets as "meals" because they were huge. So huge, in fact, that Donna was forced to put aside her Chocolate Suicide before it was vanquished from her plate. Fortunately, the Chase has an extremely efficient Doggy Bag program which she used to her advantage.

I guess I am a true romantic at heart. I ordered Grandma Rosa's Rice Pudding for dessert. I was overcome with memories of the old country, when rice pudding was in its golden age. The Chase caters to sentimentalists like myself, people who live with a fire and passion, people who have a love of life and good food, and people who aren't afraid to try eggplant.

The Chase Uptown is located at 3614 State Street in Santa Barbara. Open lunch 11:30 a.m.-2 p.m. Monday-Friday, dinner 5-10 p.m. seven nights a week. Phone 682-8218.

By Stephen Lynne-Bachelor

Max and I were hungry. It was nine o'clock, and I could wait no longer. I had wanted to eat earlier, but delays had plagued us constantly. At about six, we went to play some one-on-one basketball, but it took about a half-hour to pick teams so we didn't get done until nearly eight. Then, of course, Max needed to shower and we both had to put on some of that great French cologne that Max has. And there we were: nine o'clock, smelling fine and needing a place to eat. Max had grown tired of the local I.V. eateries and suggested that we head on downtown. My reply, of course: "Only if it's the Paradise Cafe!" We exchanged high-fives and climbed into Max's darling little European automobile.

As we made the quick jaunt downtown, Prince sang on the radio. "Touch if you will my stomach," he sang, "feel how it trembles inside." I knew the feeling. I asked Max to touch, if he would, my stomach, and he promised to do it later.

We parked with no trouble on Anacapa, and then we made our plan of attack. We thought it was going to be a big problem trying to get a table at such a popular restaurant at such short notice. We moved quickly, stealthily and tried not to draw any attention. Suddenly, we were met by a smiling woman, who offered us a table and two menus. "This is going to be easier than I thought," I remember commenting to Max.

Indeed, the restaurant's size is quite ample, with both inside and patio dining available, and is capable of handling a number of patrons. But anyway, we sat down and before we even had time to say "what great service," a woman came up to us to take our drink orders. I took my usual, water with lemon, and Max had a Heineken (that Max!).

The drinks were as quickly served as they were refreshing. Then it came time to make the painful decision of what we would be eating. Everything sounded so good. Max threatened to order the Red Snapper, but was soon taken aback when he saw that the Paradise offers Linguini with Tomatoes, Basil and Mussels, his favorite dish. Little did he know that he still had to make a tough decision: even though he had already selected his entree, he would later have to decide between the delicious Black Bean Soup and that tasty temptress, Gazpacho.

I, on the other hand, was in a world of trouble, trying to make up my mind. Just as soon as I decided on the oak-grilled Thresher Shark, the Cobb Salad popped right off the menu and screamed "delicious!" at me. I was in deep trouble. "Ahi Tuna! Ahi Tuna!" I heard a voice yell, and I realized it was me. Everything looked so good. Lamb Chops, Pork Chops, pan-broiled Halibut, Mussel Pasta Salad!! There was only one way out and I took it: the Bacon Burger. The waiter came over and with a kind and understanding tone, guided me through the rest of the selection process (salad dressing, how I wanted my burger cooked, fries or pasta salad, etc.).

When the food came, I was in some kind of bizarre heaven. The incredible meal was something that I am only now beginning to understand. I hadn't seen that many fries since that last Dead show! Max was having a field day over there with his meal. It looked great from where I was sitting: a generous pile of tender pasta topped and bottomed with a Beatle-esque medley of sauces, mussels and spices. If Max weren't Hungarian by birth, he would certainly have been speechless. But never mind,

I thought; I have a burger to contend with. A half-pound(!) of pure beef, topped with cheese and all the garden goodies and Thousand Island and still that big pile of French fries! The waiter came by again with a bottle of ketchup. He smiled and nodded, seeming to understand.

Let's just say that if the Paradise Cafe weren't so tranquil and easy a place as it is, both Max and I would have scarfed down that food, chewing only out of respect to the other diners. But as it was, we took our time, which was better by far in the long run. Each bite was a specific enjoyment, reminding me for no apparent reason of that perfect weekend Max and I spent in Catalina.

When we finally finished and got our surprisingly minimal bill, we tipped the waiter handily for a job well done and left feeling better in our minds and bodies than we had in weeks. I guess it was Max who summed up the affair the best: "Now that's good Santa Barbara cuisine!"

The Paradise Cafe is located at 702 Anacapa St. in Santa Barbara. Open Mon.-Sat. 11 a.m.-11 p.m. and Sun. 8:30 a.m.-11 p.m. Phone 962-4416.

Charlotte is French Connection

Amy & Carolyn enjoy the European fun of The Charlotte.

By Haden Guest

By now you must know that I'm a bon vivant, a man-about-town, a gentleman and a scholar. OK, maybe neither of the last two, but I'm definitely a bon vivant and a man-about-town.

The thing that grants me bon vivant status is that from time to time, I'll eat French. A little Camembert, a croissant or two, and I'm done right.

One of my favorite day-long trips, as a man-about-town, is to actually get about town and sit at a sidewalk table at the Charlotte Cafe on lower State Street. I love lower State. I like to go out there and meet the "working man," the "average Joe," the "Santa Barbara Everyman," and stand around making air quotes for hours on end. One of the best places to do this, aside from the County Jail or the Goleta Valley Community Center, is on lower State Street. It's America in action, the great mixture, the grand salad bowl.

Wait, did somebody say ... "salad"?

Just let somebody say "salad" and then you gotta let a man come in and do the Charlotte. The Charlotte's one of those cool places you see in early Truffaut films (not movies), where an actor sits at a cafe table, looking perfect in thick sunglasses and a striped short sleeve turtleneck. The actor snaps his or her fingers and music starts. They dance around for a couple of minutes, then rejoin the conversation seamlessly.

Figuring this would happen, I started snapping my fingers, trying to get the music going. Instead, one of the attentive Charlotte waitresses came to ask if everything was all right. From that moment on, I was caught in Charlotte's web.

Desperately hungry, I fought off the urge to order everything on the menu. I was tempted by the famous Zucchini Blossoms, and even more so by the exotic sounding Pizza with Duck Sausage. I've also heard very good things about the Salad Nicoise, which includes vine-ripened tomatoes, tuna, French green beans and fine greens, but today was no salad day. Since the Charlotte has conveniently marked the vegetarian dishes on the menu, I was able to avoid them easily, and chose the delicious Croissant Burger.

As I sat drinking my Cafe Au Lait, waiting for the food to come, I watched the cars-that-go-boom drive by slowly. With each ffffffooooommmmm coming off the street, my stomach matched it with an even louder rumble.

As has happened several times in the past, my life was saved by the pre-entree bread basket. The Charlotte does all of its baking on the premises, and one of the great things it does is set out these baskets of the most marvelous little French rolls.

The crumbs were piling up, and I voraciously yet politely scooped them up with my left hand. I looked up to find my waitress, carrying the most exquisite Croissant Burger I've seen since, well, since the time I was in Bordeaux.

I don't know about you, but for me one of the most elemental ingredients in life is horseradish, especially in Dijon mustard. So I piled the Poupon higher than I did at my last essay exam, and I looked out on State Street with watery eyes. It was bliss, and a couple sitting across from me thought I was going through a breakup. "It's just ... just the ... (sniff) Dijon mustard. I love it." The couple looked at each other, clearly disappointed.

So I sat alone, sinuses burning on State Street, happy in the knowledge that the Charlotte had Frenched me well beyond expectation.

"Charlotte" is located at 742 State St. in Santa Barbara. Open M-W-Th 8:30am-9:30pm, Friday and Saturday 9am-9pm, closed Tuesday. Phone 966-1221.

Baron's Mobile Disco Delivers Fun & Dancing

By Sir Leon Bablock

Last Saturday night, I found myself surrounded by more than fifty dancing sheriff's deputies.

This event took place at a political kickoff dinner for Jim Thomas (Running for Sheriff) at the La Cumbre Country Club. But to tell you the truth, I wasn't there for the food. I came for the music.

It's been said that there are very few men who can get a posse of sheriff's deputies to boogie down and slay all perpetrators on the dance floor, but I'll tell you what, Ron Herron, a.k.a. "The Baron", had no trouble Saturday night.

The Baron started Baron's Mobile Discotheque

over fifteen years ago and has been spinning music at parties ever since. A veteran of the radio airwaves (he has a morning radio show on KIST 1340 AM called "Baron's Breakfast Club"), Baron specializes in playing the best music of the fifties and sixties, or what we might refer to as "oldies but goldies." But by no means does the Baron restrict the music he plays at parties to the old stuff. I came to this happy realization while attending the party Saturday.

I couldn't help but smile when I walked in the club and was greeted by Old Blue Eyes singing "Mack the Knife." But by the time I got over to the dance floor to do my thing, Tone Loc had already begun to do the "Wild Thing." I need not tell you that the floor was subsequently swarmed.

"Variety," Baron said, "is the key to keeping everyone happy," and he claims that this variety is accomplished by way of requests. "I only have one rule about requests and that is that you can dance to it," Baron told several partygoers, including myself.

Some of the requests that were made included, The Rolling Stones, Chicago, INXS, Creedence Clearwater Revival, and of course "Can't Help Falling In Love," by none other than the King himself. Judging from the size of the record collection that the Baron brought with him to the party, it's unlikely that even the bizarrist request could not be accommodated — as long as you can dance to it. Natch.

For the shy ones, the Baron had more than one trick up his sleeve to get people together. One such trick was the "snowball dance," in which a couple splits and grabs two more partners from the crowd and then those four couple split and so on. For the younger crowds there was the "Mystery Money Lady," in which one of the young ladies in the audience was given $10 to split with the guy who asks her to dance. My personal favorite was the "balloon dance," in which a couple dances with a balloon between them and then when the cue is given, the couple squeezes together to pop the balloon. But still, a dance just wouldn't be a dance without the "Limbo" (and I'm not talking about that place you go if you're Catholic but didn't go to church enough). Suffice it to say that the Baron wields a mean limbo stick.

The Baron told me that when he first started out, fifteen years ago, he had to have his sound equipment custom built. Today he has equipment that is guaranteed to rock your world. Of course, Baron's setup comes equipped with groovy lighting (strobes, the whole bit), but what really caught my eye was the leopard skin felt covering on the record players. In this modern world, any DJ can be high tech, but there are few who have style like the Baron.

Baron's Mobile Discotheque has ten units so they are able to play up to ten parties in a single night. Baron told me that his assistant DJ's are "joker, principal's office" types of guys, so you know that no matter which way you slice up your party pie, there's going to be a healthy portion of party in every slice.

Baron's Mobile Discotheque can be reached for booking at 684-4010 and 966-8381.

LOCAL COLOR!

B.B. O'Briens

This restaurant/bar has had many different types of social entertainment. When they first opened a couple of years ago they had turtle races. Yes, actual turtles speeding to the finish line in order to take top honors. More recently, B.B. O'Briens had a hypnotist amaze the patrons with an out-of-mind performance. On Wednesday, April 18, the comedian Max Alexander will strut his stuff. Alexander's "on the edge" style fits in with B.B. O'Brien's willingness to try new and more interesting forms of social entertainment. This promises to be an entertaining event for all who attend.
