

Governor Tells Local Gathering 'No New Taxes'

Speaks on Malpractice Crisis While Medical Workers March

By Tom Flagg

Over 1,500 people crammed the Earl Warren Showgrounds Friday night to see Governor Brown in his first Santa Barbara appearance since he took office.

Brown's speech stuck to the theme he has been preaching all year: small government is good government.

The occasion for Brown's speech was a $15-a-plate fundraising dinner for freshman Assemblyman Gary Hart's (D-Santa Barbara) re-election campaign. Hart got seven dollars of each fifteen, swelling his campaign chest by at least $10,500.

After a barbequed beef dinner, spiced with camera flashes and interrupted by autograph-seekers, Brown addressed the crowd of Democratic supporters, state assemblymen, doctors, union leaders, and party workers.

Brown said he has signed over 1,400 bills in his first year in office. "With all these new laws, we won't have to ask for any new taxes this year," he said. This is not only fiscally beneficial, the Governor added, but "it gets those of us in government used to living within a budget."

"As we add new programs," the Governor said, "it is very healthy to see which ones we can eliminate. If you want to do something, you have to pay for it. If you don't want to pay, you have to do without," Brown said.

The Governor noted that everyone has a different idea on how the state should run. "If there is one problem I see, it is articulating the one problem we share," he said. "The difficulty we all face is that we are not as rich as the demands made on the system."

After about fifteen minutes of gubernatorial monologue, members of the audience questioned Brown on various policy issues.

Of the medical malpractice insurance situation the Governor said, "Either we stop the amount of money that comes out of (malpractice) law suits, or we stop the money that goes in." He said that we need a balanced program for sharing the burden of malpractice costs, adding that he expects a solution soon.

JESUIT ECONOMICS

One questioner referred to Brown's "Buddhist" economic theory. The Governor said he prefers to think of it as "Jesuit, not Buddhist economics," explaining that high technology controls our economy, and a few "experts" control the technology. This breeds impersonality, he said, and separation from the impact of the expert's actions.

"We are trying to find as many places as possible to return decision-making to the local level, and make it personal," Brown said. "This is the power of TLC—tender loving care."

Administration Spy Tactics Bared By Shands at Recent Mackie Trial

By David Hodges

In the past two years at least eight students were periodically snooped on because of their open criticism of the administration. At the recent Ed Mackie trial, Campus Coordinator Eugene "Skip" Shands testified that he repeatedly sent weekly reports on Mackie, as well as other students, to Vice Chancellor Stephen Goodspeed.

Speaking against the administration appears to be justification for being placed under surveillance by University officials.

Mackie was arrested for the alleged embezzlement of $139 by skimming off the top of ticket revenues at a Water Polo Club fundraiser. The trial was thrown out of court by Santa Barbara Municipal Court Judge Joseph Lodge citing discriminatory law enforcement by police and the University.

ASSASSINATION

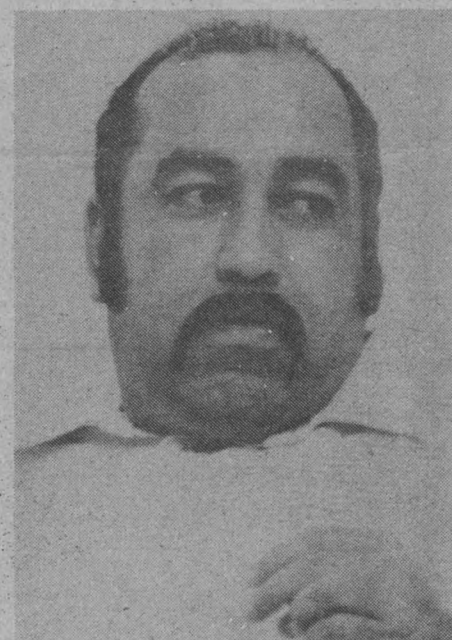

In 1974 Mackie incurred the wrath of Goodspeed when he wrote several articles about Goodspeed's role in the construction of tennis courts, against the wishes of the student body, on the intramural playing field. According to Shands, Goodspeed called the articles "character assassination", and proceeded to ask him to "find out who the hell is this guy."

In a recent interview Goodspeed denied that he received any reports on Mackie and stated that "from time to time I look into the activities of students who have allegedly broken the law or have academic problems. Of course there is always concern with student unrest," he continued.

In contradiction to Goodspeed's statements, Shands revealed five documents, in which Mackie is mentioned, that were sent directly to Goodspeed. Shands also listed the names of eight students, all politically active, on whom he reported to the administration. The names cannot be disclosed at this time due to pending legal suits.

Shand's statements on the stand and in the press have not gone unnoticed in administrative circles. According to Shands, last Wednesday, Dean Robert Evans threatened Shands with dismissal for not doing a "good job." Evans expressed displeasure at Shands' "one-sided testimony and rebuffed him for having "a lousy relationship with the police department." Evans later denied that he threatened to fire Shands but refused to comment further.

SUIT PLANNED

Last year Shands received what he termed a "demotion". He was moved out of the Administration Building into a small office in the UCen and many of his duties as coordinator were suspended. Shands is now planning to sue the University on multiple charges and expressed fears of being the watched rather than the watcher. "I look for this office to be bugged or broken into; nothing would surprise me at this point," he said.

Others on campus have been implicated by Shands as informants. Associated Student Body Presidents Neil Moran and Howard Robinson, according to Shands, "feed a lot of information to the Administration. I think they feel that they want to stay quiet so they can finish their term in office."

Chancellor's Ad in Nexus Spawns DA's Plan for Action Against UCSB

By Anne Burke

The District Attorney's office announced last Tuesday that it intends to commence a civil action against UCSB and the UC Regents charging violation of the 1974 Political Reform Act in connection with an ad published in the Nexus during last spring's Goleta annexation campaign.

The complaint, filed by the Isla Vista Community Council, requested that the DA investigate the allegation that a March 3 ad in the Nexus, expressing Chancellor Vernon Cheadle's support of the Goleta Valley annexation, qualifies the University as a committee under the conditions established in Proposition O.

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

An IVCC letter to the DA's office contended that the expenditure of $142.50 for the full-page ad, along with two other sums of $220.00 and $178.71, totaled more than $500.00, and "therefore the UCSB Administration and the Regents should have been listed as a 'campaign committee' under Prop. O legislation."

As no charges have yet been made, one of the options now open to the DA's office is to file a civil action alleging that the University did not register as a committee. According to Assistant District Attorney George Eskin, the DA's office has 40 days in which to respond to a request.

Eskin has sent a letter to Walt Wilson of the IVCC announcing intentions to commence a civil action.

"It is our belief," Eskin said, "that the action of the Regents in placing the advertisement in connection with the March 4 election, qualifies them as a committee under the Political Reform Act." Eskin explained that his understanding was that the Administration contended the ad was not "used to influence voters in an election. They claim it was informational and educational," rather than political, Eskin said.

NOT POLITICAL

Cheadle defended the placing of the ad, stating that it was not of a political nature. "We do not ever support any candidates for any office," he said. According to Cheadle, the Regents approval of the ad was based on prior consultation with the Regents' General Counsel. "Any expenditure of money is O.K.'d by General Counsel first," Cheadle stated. Cheadle said that requests for investigations such as that made by IVCC, "frequently are baseless."

PRESIDENT FORD'S STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS will be delivered tonight and is expected to include a 4.2 billion dollar increase in Social Security taxes. The annual address will be tonight at 6 p.m. on all three major networks. White House spokesmen say the address will focus on domestic issues, primarily the nation's economy. The President's budget is expected to be a lean 394 billion dollars.

RONALD REAGAN, CAMPAIGNING IN IOWA, indicated that if elected he would drop Secretary Kissinger from the Cabinet. Reagan confirmed that he no longer held Kissinger in "high regard," mentioning what the former California governor called his "soft" attitude towards the Communists in detente.

YET ANOTHER FRAGILE CEASEFIRE has gone into effect in Lebanon. Moslem and Palestinian forces captured an entire Christian town for the first time in the nine-month civil war. The village of Jiye, on the coast south of Beirut, was taken after a five-day siege. The present ceasefire is not expected to last, given the political and religious nature of the conflict. The Palestinians want to maintain a base of operations against what they see as the occupation of their homeland by Israel, while the Christians fear the domination of the Arab majority.

THE MIDEAST DEBATE RESUMED at the United Nations today with the Israeli government still boycotting the sessions. The general call from the Arab governments for the reopening of the Geneva Conference has met with the disapproval of Tel Aviv because the proposal includes the participation of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO). Prime Minister Rabin hinted that the PLO might be accepted by the Jewish state if the conference convened and then invited them with Israeli approval.

SENATOR FRED HARRIS, Presidential candidate, called for the extension of the graduated income tax to corporations. Harris told a Tulsa audience that 10 major corporations had paid no federal income taxes in 1974.

PRESIDENT NYERERE OF TANZANIA has attacked President Ford's proposal to African heads of state that suggests the U.S. would press for South Africa's withdrawal from Angola if troops from Cuba and advisers from the Soviet Union were also removed. Speaking in New Delhi, India, Nyerere said that Ford's all or nothing approach helped produce the stalemate at the recent meeting of the Organization of African Unity.

President's Council Takes Stands On Brown's Proposed Budget

By Claude Ruibal

DAVIS The Student Body Presidents' Council (SBPC) on Friday took a number of stands with regard to Governor Brown's proposed budget for 1976-77.

The Regents requested from the state $702 million for the 1976-77 academic year. This was an increase of $74.5 million over last year. However, the governor proposed an increase of only $31.9 million.

According to Jeff Hammerling, co-director of UC Student Lobby in Sacramento, "Overall the budget was fairly positive, both in terms of SBPC's priorities and for the University."

ENROLLMENT

One issue confronting the Presidents' Council deals with enrollment. This year there are about 3,000 more students in the University than previously expected. The budget for the coming year is based in part on how many students are to be enrolled in the University. Due to the unprecedented increase this year, the University has had to revise their budget for 1976-77. The Governor has refused to allocate funds for the enrollment increase.

To resolve this problem the University may be forced to toughen requirements for incoming freshman or reduce the number of new transfer students. Hammerling pointed out that "if they do not cut back, it means they would have to absorb this increase without additional faculty, TA's and instructional support funds."

Along with this Hammerling noted that if the University were to severely limit the flow of incoming students "it could have serious implications on the University's admission policy and student Affirmative Action goals."

SBPC has taken a strong stand in favor of equal educational opportunities (EOP). With this in mind, it has decided to oppose Brown's decision not to allocate funds for additional students during the 1976-77 academic year.

EOP INCREASE

The Governor's budget proposes a $275,000 increase in EOP Student Affirmative Action money which must be matched by equivalent funds by the University. While this allocation will aid EOP, the exact cost of the program has not yet been determined.

SBPC has voted to support this action and the $3.9 million dollar fund for enrichment of instructional programs. Hammerling remarked that, "These are the first enrichment funds the University has received since Governor Reagan. The greatest benefit from these funds" he stated, "will be the instructional use of computers, allowing more computer time for students."

INADEQUATE

The SBPC plans to show its opposition to the proposed funding for only 18 additional faculty and four new teaching assistants for the upcoming year. Brown has only recognized an increase of 315 students for

Primaries to Stay in June

SACRAMENTO— A "reform" measure that would shift the June primary to the first week in September, while students are not on campus, died for lack of a motion in the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee recently. The measure, Assembly Bill 1378, was introduced by Assemblymember Walter M. Ingalls (D-68th district) who represents the Riverside campus.

Although several issues were raised in the committee's review of the bill, the "student problem" was the major focus of discussion. The intent of the bill according to Mr. Ingalls was to cut back the lengthy campaign period which stretches over ten months between the filing date in February and the general election the first part of November.

The committee however supported the objections of UC student lobbyist Judith Samuelson, who spoke at the hearing. "The majority of students register at their campus address. Since the University of California campuses do not convene until the end of September or the beginning of October, in order to participate in a September primary election a student would have to make a special trip to campus or apply for an absentee ballot," she stated in a memo presented at the committee hearing.

A One-Party Contract

Con-Pro

By Neil Klotz

Hundreds of dollars. Thousands of dollars. A dark hand floats into sight and signs a tuition check or loan statement with too many zeros. It's a recurrent dream this time of year, perhaps just before you doze off over your first survey course in Principles of Economics.

Ever ask yourself why there's only one hand in your dream doing the signing? Or wonder what guarantee you have that after you rip out the check, your school won't (1) eliminate your major program halfway through your college career, (2) cancel courses you need for graduation, (3) allow professors to completely change a course from the catalog description without notice or (4) allow faculty untrained in your field to teach courses you need for a future job or graduate school?

Right now your school could do all of these things and more. When you sign over your summer savings or next ten years of indebtedness, you've entered into a contract where one side calls the tune: major requirements, courses offered, student services, often food and housing — the works. Welcome to the hall of educational consumerism. Please stop at the door to have caveat emptor branded on your arm.

As an educational consumer you can shop for your school carefully or "vote with your feet," many faculty and administrators argue. But what if you're one of millions of students who can only afford the local public college? You can vote, but your ballot has only one choice of footprint. Then too, who's to say that even if you do shop carefully, you won't find the institution changing the ground rules out from under your feet?

In the last few months a number of students across the country have been upended by educational fault lines like changing degree requirements and course descriptions, but instead of remaining in a prone position, they have tried to gain standing in court.

Claiming that their college catalog or bulletin constitutes a valid contract between student and university, they've sued their schools for breach of contract action that has many colleges nervously watching the federal courts. Among the cases still pending:

— A University of Bridgeport (CT) student has sued her school for $470 because she says the school didn't provide the education course described in the college catalog and that what it did provide was "worthless." "Classroom time was substantially devoted to the instructor reading aloud pamphlets and other materials he had already distributed to the class," she charged.

— A George Washington University (Washington DC) student found the "landscape architect's assistant" program she enrolled in "pure junk" and the teachers incompetent in the field. "All we did was learn how to trace somebody else's blueprints," she said and has sued for the $900 tuition she paid.

— An American University (DC) graduate student has asked the courts to award him $150,000 in lost income and $500,000 in punitive damages after the university terminated him from its doctoral program. He charges that the school broke an educational contract by discharging him two years before the time limit the college catalog gave him to complete his PhD.

— Another graduate student at Syracuse University (NY) has sued for breach of the college catalog contract arguing that, among other things, the post-graduate philosophy program reoffers courses that duplicate those in other departments and that "non-philosophy specialists" are teaching philosophy courses that differ drastically from the catalog description sent to prospective grad students. He has asked for damages of nearly $4000 for back tuition.

— A group of medical students at George Washington University recently found that their $3200 tuition of last year would be boosted to $5000 this year and possibly $12,000 next year. They claim that this raise violated the college catalog estimate of a $200 annual tuition increase. The catalog carries a disclaimer giving the university the right to raise tuition to any "reasonable" level, but the students charge that a 400% increase in two years is not reasonable.

'Claiming that their college catalog or bulletin constitutes a valid contract between student and university, they (students) have sued their schools for breach of contract'

If one of these suits succeeds, college consumers will have won at least a temporary victory against the now-you-see-them-now-you-don't nature of college courses, degree requirements and vocational programs.

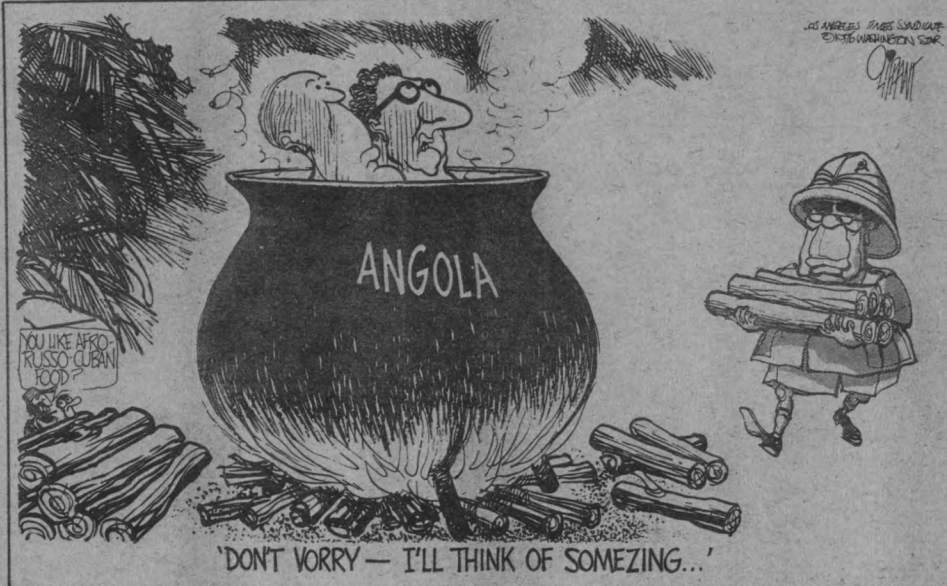

"It would be a mess," grumbled Peter Wolff, executive director of the National Association of College and University Attorneys. "It would be like the court becoming an accredited agency, and the court has been reluctant to do that."

Wolff may be right about one thing. If courts act like courts, the student breach

'But fairness seldom enters into the university-student relationship. Schools guilty of arbitrary and dictatorial tactics know that most students can't afford the legal help necessary to bring the case to trial.'

of contract cases may never be settled. "Judges don't want to be bothered with academic issues," said Robert Powell, a Washington, D.C. attorney for students in two breach of contract cases. "They don't feel qualified to judge the worth of a course. They can only look at whether a student has had a fair chance."

But fairness seldom enters into the university-student relationship, argued Powell. Schools guilty of arbitrary and dictatorial tactics know that most students can't afford the legal help necessary to bring the case to trial, he said. "So what you have is a very powerful university that can take any stand against a student and then literally expense him to death in legal fees."

If legal action is expensive, however, other channels are almost non-existent. When a school unfairly changes courses, majors, programs or professors from those listed in the catalog, students have nowhere to go outside of the school's own grievance procedure.

"At the moment there is no place that has clear authority to deal with this type of problem," said Mrs. Gaye Lee, acting director for consumer education in HEW's Office of Consumer Affairs. Since education is primarily the domain of the states, Mrs. Lee said, most of the regulation done by the federal government has been through the student financial aid program it administers.

But even as the consumer protection football is punted back and forth between Washington and the states, few have talked about students helping formulate their own education contracts. Even the breach of contract suits presume that the university has the divine right to determine 99 percent of what and how students learn.

How, as more college grads than ever wander about in search of jobs, clutching degrees in fields they were told would be in demand, why assume that the "professional educators" know best?

The concept of students as consumers has arisen only because students found that in yesteryear's "community of scholars" picture, they were academic sharecroppers producing what industry and government told them was socially useful.

There may again be a time for a community of scholars in higher education, but not before students win an equal voice in how their skills are developed and used in this country. Breach of contract suits are a start. But there will be less chance that students' educational contracts will be breached when they enter the room where it is being written.

Managing Blunders

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Marty Chorich's assertion that the U.S. Postal System is ineffective and too costly because postal workers are "dumb" (Jan. 15) is wholly and outrageously false. Since the design, fiscal set-up, and day-to-day running of the system is not the responsibility of unionized postal workers, ineptitude and blundering can be properly ascribed only to management and to Congress.

Chorich's cavalier attitude seems to me a striking instance of a sneering sophomoric, middle-class student's facile contempt for the blue-collar worker. I count several postal workers among my closest friends and have put in a good amount of time in blue-collar work myself. Blue-collar workers I have known compare favorably in intelligence and intellectual maturity to many students I've met at UCSB.

As to Chorich's remarks about automating the postal system, it is not at all clear to me that the sacrifice of thousands of jobs to an unproven system can be justified in a period of unprecedented post-war unemployment. Jobs are pretty damn scarce out there, Marty, as you'll discover once you graduate.

Traffic Crisis

Editor, Daily Nexus:

I'd like to renew interest in a problem that is too easily swept under the rug of apathy. I am referring to the increasingly chaotic tangle of bicyclists and pedestrians on campus. All too often only a crisis can jar us to reality, and such an incident occurred last Wednesday.

Most students on campus were unaware of the accident, but to Patti Tilton, a junior, the day ended rather suddenly. While walking to the library, she was struck down by a bicycle that left her lying on the cement dazed and bleeding with a fractured skull. The bicyclist didn't see her, and placing the blame is unimportant. It could have happened to anyone. What is important is that the full seriousness of the problem is recognized and that something is done about it. Perhaps the idea of closing off the center of campus to bicycles, from North and South halls to Physics is a good one. It certainly would cut down the chaotic mass of bikes. But let's not let another, perhaps more serious accident happen before we act. I, for one, don't want to wait to find out who the next victim will be.

Student Turnout Nil At Local AA Meeting

By Adrienne John

As a result of interest expressed by Isla Vista residents, Alcoholics Anonymous held its first Isla Vista meeting last Monday night at St. Michael's Church.

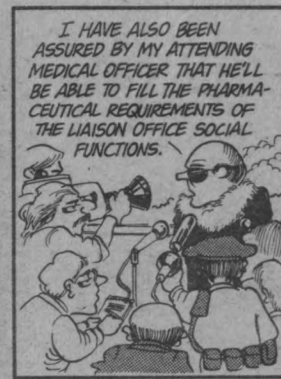

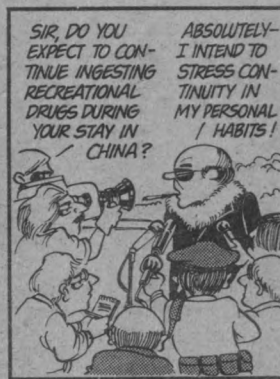

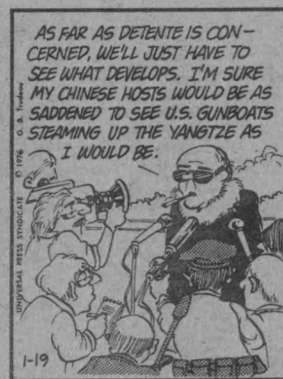

Due to student inquiries about the program, AA had expected students at the meeting, but no interest was shown. The 15 present at the meeting ranged in age from 40-55. Barbara, one of the members, felt the lack of student attendance was a result of the AA's inability to advertise.

To its adherents, AA it has been a life saving organization. Prior to their membership, alcohol was a crutch. Through the fellowship that AA offered, these people learned to cope with their problem.

Members of AA come from every walk of life. Although their public lives are all quite different they share one common illness: alcoholism. This disease is what binds them together to help themselves and others.

Mary, another member, said "It is a miracle to walk into a meeting and hear people laughing, see sparkling eyes and know they are beginning a new life, after all they have gone through." She went on to say "when most of these people started with us they were as far down as you can get, but now they have hope. The only thing I wish," Mary added "is that people would not wait until they hit rock bottom to join AA. People do not realize that alcoholism is a disease as is

by Garry Trudeau

cancer."

In an AA meeting the members discuss everything pertaining to life without drinking. These people must learn to handle everyday life without alcohol. Comfort is given to anyone entering their group.

The Community Alcohol Research Project (CARP), an organization which is working closely with A.A., is headed by Dr. William Madsen. CARP has just begun research in Santa Barbara. Madsen plans to conduct a study on the total resources available to alcoholism in any community and the extent to which these are fully utilized. Due to prohibitive costs a group has joined him in his efforts.

To obtain field workers Madsen is offering an accredited UCSB extension class entitled "Anthropology and Field Research." Madsen offered to teach the class without financial compensation in return for a waive in tuition for the course.

At the end of the year a two volume report will be written cooperatively on their findings.

Book Collectors Shoot for $700

If you're a UCSB student that book collection you've been building and savoring the past few years could be worth more than you think. The 1976 Edwin Corle Memorial Book Collection Contest is now accepting entries, and many students may have sizable collections that are award winners.

In past years, students have been awarded cash prizes for their collections on such diverse subjects as Jacksonian America to military insignia. This year's contest offers $700 in prizes to graduate and undergraduate students.

Since 1963, the Edwin Corle Memorial Book Collection Contest is sponsored by Mrs. Jean Corle in memory of her late husband Edwin Corle, who was an avid book collector and Santa Barbara author. Books were his first love, and he often helped and encouraged students to follow his footsteps.

Deadline for the entries is April 2 and they should be sent to Christian Brun, head of UCSB Library's special collections department. Judging will take place in the second week of April.

SBPC Meet

1976-77. SBPC feels the planned faculty, T.A. increases are entirely inadequate.

On the Positive side, the Governor has again appropriated $1 million for undergraduate teaching improvement. This fund has come under considerable criticism during the past year. However, under the direction of Hammerling, the Lobby staff will attempt to make this fund more favorable to the legislative analyst and others who have criticized it. SBPC has voted to support this funding.

In other action Ben Tupper, Graduate Student Association President of Riverside, expressed his dissatisfaction with the selection process of the Presidential Advisory Committee members. Noting that the SBPC has a credibility problem, Tupper felt it was time to "start doing something right."

SAY Starts Campaign For Volunteers

By Kevin McCauley

Faced with a dearth of male volunteers, the Social Advocates for Youth (SAY) is gearing up for a campus campaign to increase male participation in their programs. According to Shelley Barclay, the Volunteer Coordinator, "Representatives will make presentations in certain Political Science, Sociology, and Psychology classes this week."

PREVENT CRISIS

The SAY is a non-profit organization involved with crisis prevention for youths aged 10-16. It is staffed by professional, academic, and para-professional workers. Unlike the CAB's "Big Brother" program, the SAY is more family oriented, in that both parent and child must volunteer to participate in the program.

According to Barclay, "Most of these children are not delinquent. Rather, they are moving towards non-constructive behavior." She added that "it is our purpose to correct and reverse this behavioral direction."

In order to make the organization available to more of the community's troubled youth, Barclay noted the program's recent attempt to accept Juvenile Justice Probation referrals as well as school, community and private referrals.

"Volunteers go through a five week peer-counseling training orientation, which is adapted to the organization's needs," stated Barclay. "If found acceptable, the volunteer is then 'matched' with a referred youth." Volunteers are expected to make a solid commitment of three to four hours weekly, for a six to nine month period.

As funding comes from city and county revenue-sharing plans, Drug Abuse grants, and private foundations, the organization is financially solvent until the end of the year. However, volunteers, especially male volunteers, are needed for the program's continued success. If you are interested, talk to a SAY representative on campus this week or contact the SAY office in Goleta at 967-2343.

The Placement Manual for Winter and Spring Quarters is now available at the Placement Center, Building 427 on campus, for the benefit of graduates and graduating seniors interested in career job placement. In addition to describing the services and resources available at the Placement Center, the Manual lists by date the employers recruiting on campus, as well as indicating the type of skills each employer will be looking for.

Unbelievable Gauchos Chalk Up Two More Wins

Emotion, Team Play and Luck Ingredients That Lengthened Winning Streak to Six

By David Schlosser
and Brian Kelley

Revenge and luck, UCSB used these abstract qualities to capture two of their most important victories of the season this past weekend. San Diego State and Fresno State, both rivals from the PCAA, fell to the red hot Gauchos, who now stand at 10-4 and are on a six-game winning streak.

Action started Thursday night when UCSB thumped the Aztecs 83-78 in one of the best games ever played in Rob Gym. Both teams were filled with intensity and absolutely gave their best. If the Gauchos can match their performance in the first half in this game, anything is possible.

AZTECS DON'T MISS

SDSU shot an amazing 65 percent from the floor for 20 minutes but were outscored 48-42. Early in the period the Aztecs grabbed a five-point lead before the Gauchos, led by their forwards, scored 12 unanswered points.

Tex Walker's all-around play was the key and he was assisted by Jeff Lipscomb's six consecutive points. Lipscomb is a former Aztec and he excelled in relief of Dave Brown who saw very limited action because of foul trouble.

UCSB shot well enough to blow most teams out of the gym. Andy Oliveira worked the outside, hitting four jumpers, and center John Service outplayed his counterparts in the middle.

Service was invincible in the second half. He scored 15 of his game high 25 points and was a vacuum on the boards. After UCSB lost a nine-point lead, he led the surge to secure victory in the end. It was the big man's best game and one he can savor a long time, since many of the Aztecs are close friends.

"This was the most important game of the season for us if we are going anywhere this season," said Coach Ralph Barkey, referring to the increased chances of a bid in the NCAA post season tournament. He pointed out that two teams which UCSB has defeated this month are likely to qualify for the tournament, San Diego State and Creighton.

More than anything, the Gauchos wanted this win. "I can't describe the feeling this game represents to me personally. This is primarily because of the psychological necessity of winning this game to maintain our confidence," said Barkey.

He continued, "This probably is as important a win for me as any that a team of mine has had because of its significance to the season. This is the most emotional I have seen a team of mine become in the dressing room after a game. They went absolutely berserk."

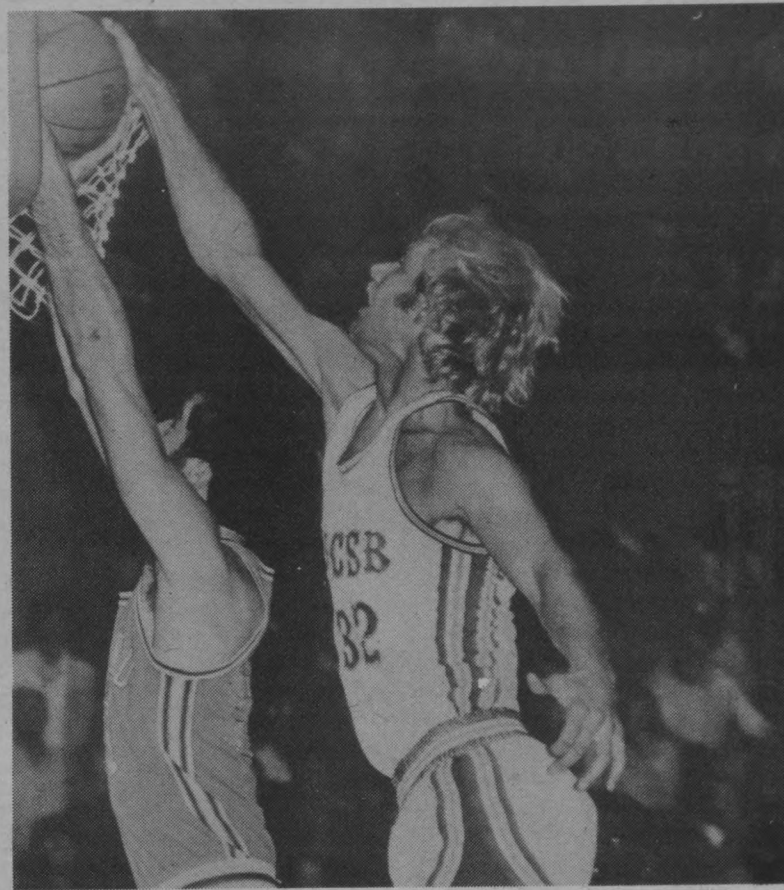

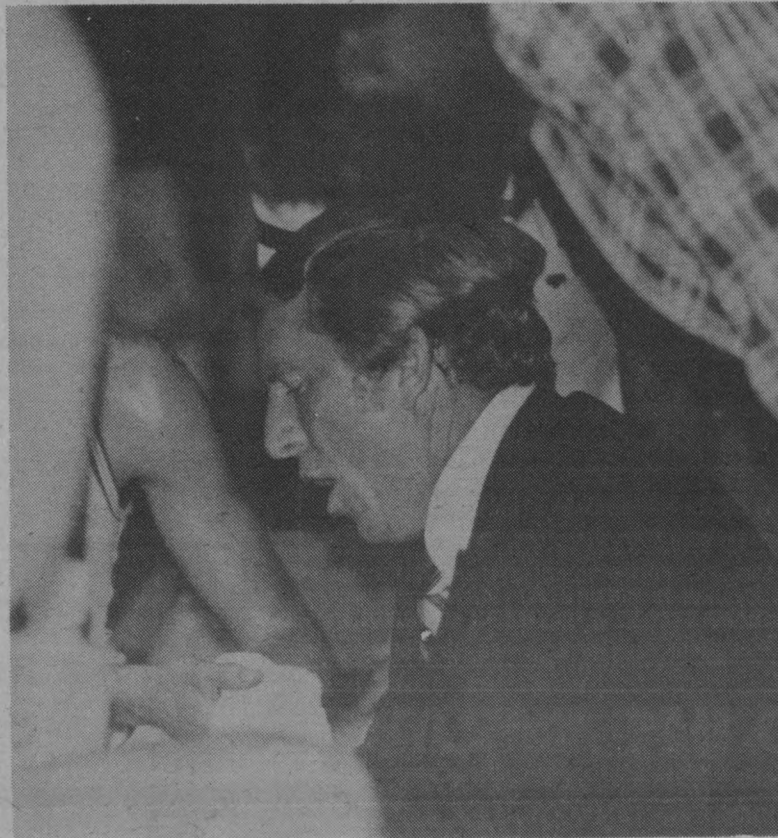

Unfortunately for Barkey, his team was not able to carry this high emotion into the game against Fresno, and it almost proved fatal.

Fresno made a game out of it from the very beginning, never letting the Gauchos open up a lead of more than four in the first half, which ended 32-30.

UCSB appeared to be on its way to an easy win when the Gauchos opened up an early Coach Barkey plots strategy in the hectic final minutes of the SCSU game. The Gauchos now go on the road for their next four games.

Governor Speaks at Hart Fundraiser

Continuing on the topic of economy, the Governor said, "We ought to reassess, slow down a little bit, and see where we are going."

"What do we need more, a child care center, or six more miles of freeway? This is the question."

In obvious reference to the long-debated issue of eliminating the lights on that part of the freeway running through Santa Barbara, Brown said, "Sometimes when you have to stop at a red light, it makes you stop and think about where you are going."

ALCOHOLISM

Brown said he is proposing to combine the Alcoholic Beverage Commission (ABC) with the office of alcoholism, so as to have one agency controlling the problem. He intends to promote counter-advertising.

"We are now spending $27 million on alcoholism...but we haven't reduced it. Why increase the amount spent until we figure out what we are doing with what we've got?" the state's chief executive asked.

Brown said he hasn't raised the liquor tax, as has been proposed. "I think even beer drinkers have rights."

In the area of public education, the Governor said he supports an increase in early childhood education programs. He reiterated his position taken in last week's State of the State address, in which he called for a 50 percent increase in Educational Opportunity Program (EOP) funds.

He said that improving elementary and secondary schools must be done at the local level.

PROTESTORS

As the Governor spoke inside, protesting health workers from the Simi, Westlake, and Thousand Oaks area picketed on the sidewalk in front of the Showgrounds.

Dan Kriete, a staffer at Los Robles Hospital in Thousand Oaks, said "We support anything that will get us back to work." He said that all personnel at Los Robles except administrators have been cut back hours as much as 50 percent.

"We aren't happy with what we see the Governor doing," Kriete stated, "though he may be doing more than we see." The purpose of the demonstration was to urge Brown to find a quick solution to the problem, "before we are all unemployed."

Asked if he thought the state Coastal Commission should refuse to let Exxon build their oil processing facility in the Los Flores Canyon if Exxon refuses to build a pipeline to transport the oil, Brown said that he would not comment on a local problem without first looking into the situation.

The Commission is currently making the pipeline a condition for approval of the Exxon plant.

Admin Surveillance

Moran denied Shands' allegations, saying, "I am amused, as I'm sure are campus administrators, to hear myself and Howard (Robinson) described as conduits of information. I am publicly challenging Shands to offer one shred of evidence to substantiate his claims. The statement is, of course, utterly false."

Exxon wants to ship oil down the channel to Los Angeles by super-tanker which, they say, is cheaper than building a pipeline. Exxon and the Coastal Commission will face off over this issue at the next commission meeting Feb. 4, in Los Angeles.

Robinson was unavailable for comment at press time.

The Mackie trial is currently under appeal by the District Attorney. Shands will, if the appeal is accepted, become a key witness in this case.

Applications Open For Student Regent

The Student Body Presidents' Council announced that it will begin taking applications today for the position of Student Regent.

All currently enrolled students, who will attend a UC campus next year, are encouraged to apply. Time, commitment and expertise in statewide University issues affecting students will be a major criteria. These issues include, but are not limited to financial aid, instructional improvement, student services, affirmative action and legislation and/or campus regulations concerning student rights.

Application deadline is February 6th. Applicants will be screened by two regional nominating commissions, composed of an undergraduate and graduate student chosen by each senate and legislative council. Students interested in serving on these commissions should also pick up applications at the Associated Students office. The deadline for commission applicants is February 6th.

Gauchos Win

10-point lead in the second. But the Bulldogs fought back and the lead seesawed back and forth most of this stanza.

The Gauchos were on the ropes when Fresno's James Robinson knotted the score at 68 with 40 seconds left. UCSB elected to go for the last shot, but Service's attempt missed with five seconds left. Here Tex Walker became the hero with a brilliant tip-in.

A technical foul gave UCSB its final point and the Gauchos continued their amazing play at home, winning their eighth game against one loss.

$6.6 Million Given to Campus Research

More than six and a half million dollars in contracts and grants for 183 research and training projects were awarded to UCSB during the past fiscal year by government agencies, private foundations and other non-University sources, according to the just-published annual report of the campus Contracts and Grants Office.

The number of projects funded increased five percent and the dollar amount 23 percent over the totals of the previous fiscal year, making 1974-75 a record year for UCSB researchers.

The report notes that UCSB, as a campus of the University of California, shares the University's designation by California law as "the primary state-supported academic agency for research."

PROJECTS

Some of the basic and applied research projects described by the report deal with the nature and cause of cancer; prevention of pollution of ground water; the cultivation of commercially valuable seaweed off our coast; the use of lasers to produce fusion for energy uses; the utilization of hydrogen and gasified coal as fuel, and the effects of smog on the human body.

As in past years, the largest funder of UCSB research is the National Science Foundation, which contributed 37 percent of $6,641,372 received from non-University sources, followed by the Public Health Service with 21 percent. Largest two non-government funders were the Ford Foundation and the American Cancer Foundation.

By areas, the sciences were awarded 65 percent of the funding; the professions, which include the Graduate School of Education and the School of Engineering, received 13 percent; the social sciences, 20 percent, and the humanities, two percent.
