Ruby's: Potatoes and More

By Brick Gump

Some say America has gone to pot. Gone is the excitement about baseball, the love for Mom's apple pie, and the little restaurant where you can get a home-cooked meal. Well, I thought they were all gone until I tripped across Ruby's State Street Café.

Like a rush, the memories of my childhood came flooding back as I walked through the front doors. As the hostess led me to my booth, the warmth I felt as a boy walking into the house on a cold night once again visited me, and I thought, never mind that I didn't have a date! Never mind that I didn't have a friend!

That evening, Ruby's Café became my friend. I knew before I even ate that I would be returning frequently. So, I sat in the soft comfort of the foam-filled bench and hummed quietly to myself in contentment as I perused the menu.

Lo and behold — Ruby's had my favorite meal! Rotisserie chicken, mashed potatoes and mixed vegetables. What a gem of a restaurant had I stumbled into.

As the waitress arrived at my table with a beaming smile, I said, "You have my favorite meal here! I'll have the rotisserie chicken."

Deidre the waitress replied, "Fine choice," as she plopped an icy glass of water at my table and asked if I'd like anything else to drink.

Noting how eager she was to please I answered,

"No." I took a moment to soak in the aura of the place, and noticed a wide variety of patrons, ranging from families to couples to friends. What a versatile kind of restaurant, I thought.

When I returned from my visit to the restroom (which was sparkling clean and smelled of flowers), I found my meal waiting for me. A succulent chicken resting beside heaping mashed potatoes and a pile of vegetables filled the air with such a rich smell that I could not dig in soon enough.

Deidre came by to ask if I needed anything else. "Do you need anything else?" she asked. But I was so engaged in my meal that I only grunted my response between mouthfuls.

What a great waitress, I thought as I carved into my chicken. She'll bend over backwards for my happiness.

As I left I thanked Deidre for the wonderful dining experience and assured her I would be back to eat there again soon. With a good home-cooked meal in my stomach, I ventured home a happy man with restored faith in what our country is all about.

For the quality of the food and the warmth of the place, I give Ruby's Café my highest rating of five bricks.

Ruby's Café is located at 734 State St. Hours: 7 a.m.-4 p.m. Mon.-Thurs., 7 a.m.-9 p.m. Fri.-Sat. Price range: $1.25-$6.

I.V.B.C.: Play Drink Beer Food Play Drink Beer Food Play

By Faustly Myerno

Until last week, I was frightened of billiards. Then I experienced America at Isla Vista Billiards Club.

My last encounter had left me wary of cues and balls. It was six years ago in Barstow. A variety of shock-induced sweat was already breaking on my calves when my vitamin-fortified incisors clattered to a stop in a dilapidated crink of green felt at McFustah's Pool Nook.

Omar was visibly infuriated by the steaming Schaeffer on the table, but was sportsman enough not to let it interfere with his game. Demonstrating his lack of any residual bad feelings over Mercer's insensitivity and clumsiness, Omar turned and said "Let us head over to my place." Though the occasion was prefaced with a BYOB clause.

With this memory, you reading this will be surprised that the very same calf-sweating began in earnest when Mercer and Verde invited me for dinner at the IVBC in celebration of the de-clefting of my new false palate. If they have had the distinct pleasure of visiting the IVBC, though, readers will be no more surprised by the resurgence of my love for billiards. New palate in place, I was to enjoy, sans-straw, the most exotic variety of professionally-prepared and reasonably-priced beers and cuisine in memory.

In the behemoth-yet-intimately furnished, paisley-bedecked interior

I was to find the kind of carefully-planned decor that buttresses one's belief in free will, despite the relative comfort of today's theories of predestination. Infamous and indignant, Lady Fortune was bested by the intricate human vision in evidence here. This sense was greated by that most American of routes to human empowerment: Superior Customer Service.

And I thought I had seen people smile before! Not like at IVBC.

Destiny was to have its way, however. Unbeknownst to me, Omar was in the house, lost in the crowds of enthusiastic and friendly customers. He, having heard of the renowned velveteen cloth and clean plumb of IVBC's tables, had driven from Barstow in the toothy Duster to "fleece some sheep," as he explained with a Guinness-smirched grin upon joining us and ordering some fries from the friendly waitress. "I love it! Perfect pool tables and prosthesis palates! Amazing!"

We laughed so hard that I had to tuck in my teeth when the waitress arrived saying "Plate's hot!" with our second course, which was a delicious tuna melt.

Omar this time offered to buy the next pitcher and I realized that in I.V., billiards is the multicultural nexus of the '90s.

But he had traded my teeth for, get this: A glass.

I.V.B.C. is located at 935 Emb. Del Norte in Isla Vista. Hours: 11am-2am.

Chuck's

By Reynard Van Nguyen

For several weeks now, I've had this empty feeling in the pit of my soul. For the longest time I attributed it to the nameless dread known to haunt my family, or instead I chalked it up to the malaise brought on by observing too much human stupidity.

Then the truth hit me like a thunderbolt from Zeus himself: it's been too long since I had been to Chuck's.

You see, a sojourn to Santa Barbara's Chuck's of Hawaii seafood and steakhouse is my version of the mythic exploits of Parsifal and Galahad. It is my own personal quest for a Holy Grail, the symbol of all that is good about life.

Unfortunately, the downward pull of worldly pressures drags me away from the things that are really important to human existence — like a steak that lives up to mouth-watering expectations, one that gives "beef flavor" true meaning beyond a ramen selection. Actually, "ramen" is a word I learned in college, I knew it as saimin. But I digress ...

You see how easy it is to lose track of the things that are of value and substance? Nothing can compare with the euphoria that a visit to Chuck's grants me, yet I occasionally forget this pleasure while I "cope with reality."

At Chuck's, however, they do not suffer this problem. Let me explain: many restaurants, particularly ones with lofty reputations, often obscure the real reason one goes out to eat (which is to eat good food without having to cook it) by tacking on frills like colorful vegetables that are not meant to be eaten, only looked at. (What good does this do anybody?)

The fine folks at Chuck's, on the other hand, will serve you what you order and none of the extraneous trimmings that seem like such a waste. I usually go for the filet mignon with an order of sautéed mushrooms, which is magnificent, although my fancy often also turns to the shrimp selections Chuck's dishes out as if sheer crustacean excellence is routine to them.

It would indeed be a grievous error on my part if I were to extol the virtues of Chuck's without mentioning the full bar and excellent wine list, salad bar and bread. The menus, which are painted on the side of an old wine bottle, are the perfect cap to the Polynesian theme — conjuring up an image of being stranded on an island far from here using bottles as my only communication.

If this intriguing occurrence ever happened, I could just see myself stripped of the cares of the daily routine and left to think only of Chuck's. I think that writing my recollections of Chuck's menu on floating bottles would be exactly the best thing I can think of to do. Until then, however, you'll just have to go and check out Chuck's for yourself.

Chuck's of Hawaii is located at 3888 State St. Call 687-4417 for details.

T.A.'s: A Taste of Mexico Here in I.V.

By Gringolet Rafalo

Here I am, wandering the lonely streets of Isla Vista. My friends went home to pass out, my money supply is close to depletion from buying one too many Magnum 40-ouncers. But I refuse to give in. I've got a mission to fulfill.

I will resist the temptation to fall asleep in one of the damp benches I pass by in Anisq' Oyo' Park. I can almost see it up ahead, the lights are fuzzy but my goal so clear. I can hear it now, the distinct sound of mariachi ... and yes! There it is, Tio Alberto's, truly a haven for any diner.

I know the pleasure is coming soon, the moist and meaty burritos, the crunchy, spicy tacos, the refreshing Orange Bang, I can see it in front of me, like a mirage. It fills my vision, it is all I can see.

I am finally here, standing in line for my Mexican delicacy. The menu board above the counter taxes my imagination; so many options, so little time in my college career. How will I ever decide?

The choices dance in my mind like a ballerina on acid, so graceful yet scary ... Pollo Asado? Carne Adobada? Chorizo? "What if I opt wrongly?" I ask myself, but then realize, hey, this is TA's, there is no "wrong" burrito.

I find myself at the register and decide on the Puerco en Chile Colorado burrito, a mystical blend of sautéed pork, beans, rice, cilantro, onions, salsa, oh God! I can't tease myself any longer! I must make my dream a reality!

The friendly cashier knows just what I'm after. I pay the man, and what a fair price ... where else this side of the border can you find such a meal for less than four dollars? And now the fun: I get to watch my burrito being made. Where does the manager find such talented chefs? The meat, cheese, chiles magically flying through the air to land perfectly on a tortilla? True entertainment!

And now, as I sit at the comfortable booths, I realize my quest is nearly done.

The first bite is always best. The spicy, warm contents of the silky soft tortilla tickle my tongue and tantalize my tonsils. A feeling of euphoric satisfaction comes over me as I realize I'm eating the best and most authentic burrito one can ever find outside of Guadalajara. What can I do but wolf the delicacy down?

And as I stumble out towards my humble abode, I contemplate the next time I will pass TA's again.

Tio Alberto's is located at 955 Embarcadero Del Mar.

If you don't recycle me, that spruce you used to swing from when you were 6, will come after you. She won't stop. She'll follow you everywhere until you go insane or die! Don't let that happen, please recycle the nexus.

MEL'S BAR
By Mortimer Trowers
There is one place that gives you exactly what you need when drinking is what you seek. So grab a cab, a bike or bus and find yourself on State Street. New to the area? Welcome to Mel's Bar, home of the best drinks in town. It is to be found. I said "grab a cab, a bike or bus" because driving wouldn't be such a good idea. You see, none of these are real, none of these are real, none of these are real. No sir, not a drop of rum stuff. No sir, Mel's is a four-finger type of service. That's right: extend your four fingers (leaving the thumb bent behind), set them down on the table and observe how far off they are from the table they tower. That's how much rum your rum-and-coke gets, or how much vodka your greyhound will hold. Yup, if you want to drink a fine and well, Mel's is the place to be.

One thing to watch out for is the cool people. Mickey Rourke would be caught dead here. This is very much the professional drinker, two shots at breakfast establishment. Smoke, shot glasses and miniature pool tables that lets even the far past inebriated run the table. No sharks though, just fans. And music? They got less of it. A radio's groove fills the joint, or you the counter, can make the jukebox play your favorites. UCSB's Daily Nexus 4-1-94

End Notes:

Midterms got you down? If so, you deserve a break so check this page out and hopefully you can find something fun to do. There's nothing going on that I think is too cool, but to each his own. One thing that caught my eye (and ear) is that The Offspring is playing June 2 at The Red Dog Saloon. Obviously, this establishment has shifted its gears from line dancing to slam dancing! All I can say is check this one out for sure and do unto others what's been done to you. Just kidding, be cool and think for yourself. Late.
