Mystic Marquee — Installation of last year's senior class gift, the $25,000 Time-O-Matic electronic bulletin board, was completed last quarter and now alerts passers-by to up-coming games and other Events Center happenings. In addition, the board displays the time and temperature and can be used for graphic animation. Although no official regulations have been set, campus officials maintain that the board will not be used for advertising or political messages.

Uehling Names UCSB Stadium for Graduation

Chancellor Barbara Uehling confirmed Tuesday that commencement ceremonies, which have been held with the UCSB Lagoon as a backdrop for the past nine years, will be held in Harder Stadium in 1988.

Uehling arrived at her decision to move the ceremonies to Harder Stadium after consulting with other administrators on the matter, she explained. "Everybody believes that it will serve the purpose better," she said.

Today at 2 p.m., planning for the ceremonies in the new location will be discussed by a student committee in Cheadle Hall Conference Room 5203. Although Uehling has made a "fairly firm" commitment to changing the ceremonies' setting, "everything else (concerning planning) is open for discussion and input," UCSB Dean of Students Leslie Lawson said.

The committee will be asking how graduation can be made a "good experience" that satisfies the senior class, Lawson explained. "It's going to be a busy six months trying to put it together," she said.

Held in June 1987, last year's graduation ceremonies cost $90,000 in registration fees, according to Lawson. The 1987 commencement consisted of six separate ceremonies held over a period of two days, Lawson explained. A plan to limit this year's ceremonies to a single day will probably decrease personnel costs, she said.

In addition, graduating seniors may be better behaved at a one-day event, Lawson added. "(Last year) some of the student behavior was pretty tacky," she said.

State Health Officials Combat Aids Among Addicts

By Ilana DeBare
McClatchy News Service

Risk Includes Users' Sex Partners, Children

SACRAMENTO — California health officials are gearing up to fight what they call "the second wave" of AIDS in the state — among intravenous drug users.

So far, the wave is relatively small: Only 267 of the more than 10,000 AIDS cases in California have occurred among heterosexual IV drug users.

But in San Francisco, the estimated number of infected drug users has doubled since 1984. In Los Angeles, officials predict the number of infected users will double this year, from less than five percent to 10 percent.

If unhindered, officials say, the epidemic could follow the course it's taken in New York — where nearly two-thirds of the city's drug users are infected.

Such a spread would have devastating effects on local health departments.

If prevention efforts fail, half of Sacramento's estimated 8,000 IV drug users could be infected within four years, said Dr. Neil Flynn, county AIDS prevention task force chairman.

"By 1991, up to one-fourth of the county health budget might have to be devoted to the treatment of indigent people" with AIDS, Flynn said.

Not only drug users themselves are at risk, officials say. Their sexual partners, and any children they conceive, run the risk of contracting Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. Female drug users who are also prostitutes can infect their clients if they do not adopt safe-sex measures, such as condoms.

"The worst-case scenario is not only having a large number of IV drug users infected, but also having an entry for the virus into the heterosexual population," state AIDS office Director Thelma Frazier said.

Until recently, AIDS prevention in California has been targeted primarily at the general population, or at gay and bisexual men, who have made up the majority of AIDS cases in the state.

In 1987, for the first time, the state AIDS office earmarked $1 million of its $11.1 million education budget specifically for IV drug user outreach. For the first time, $5 million of California's federal anti-drug funds have been set aside for AIDS prevention among IV drug users.

But AIDS prevention among IV drug users presents problems far more complex than those posed by previous prevention efforts.

"This population we're trying to reach is not organized as the gay community is," said Chauncy L. Veatch III, director of state alcohol and drug programs. "The addict does not read a newspaper, often does not even watch TV. It's a word-of-mouth street society. Why would they organize? It's based on illegality and anonymity."

Soviet Olympic Committee Says Team to Join in Summer Games

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Monday it will send a full squad of 500 athletes to the Summer Olympics in Seoul, ensuring Soviet and U.S. athletes will face each other at the world Games for the first time in 12 years.

The Soviet Olympic Committee urged that some Olympic events be held in communist North Korea instead of pro-West South Korea, but made it clear that Soviet athletes would participate regardless.

"Soviet athletes will take part in the Summer Olympic Games of 1988," said Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet Olympic Committee.

"As for the People's Democratic Republic of Korea, it should make its own decision in this respect," he told a news conference.

All Soviet bloc nations except Romania boycotted the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, claiming the security of their athletes was not guaranteed.

But that boycott was widely seen as retaliation for the decision by the United States and 65 other countries to stay away from the 1980 Olympics in Moscow to protest the Kremlin's military drive into Afghanistan in December 1979.

In Colorado Springs, Colo., Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said he was "gratified and enthusiastic" about the Soviet announcement.

Helmick said the decision "means that the wounds from the boycotts of 1980 and 1984 have healed and that our athletes will not be the victims again of missed opportunities of Olympic competition."

The last Summer Games in which both superpowers participated were the Montreal Games of 1976.

The ensuing 12 years raised doubts about whether the games would fall victim to superpower politics. The unanimous decision Monday by 140 members of the Soviet Olympic Committee also opened the way for Soviet world champions to travel to Seoul among the 500 to 520 athletes the Soviet Union expects to send.

Martin Luther King Jr. impacted American Blacks by giving them a "sense of humanity, (of) dignity and of righteousness," Black studies Asst. Professor Gary Rolison told a Storke Plaza audience Tuesday.

King week events will continue today at noon in Storke Plaza with a lecture on "King in South Africa" by Dr. Keletso Atkins, followed by "A Visual Tribute to the Legacy of King" by Delta Sigma Theta at 12:30 p.m. and a two-hour video on King's life at 1 p.m. in UCen Room 1.

Another Palestinian Killed, UN Aide Thwarted by Protesters

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip — Israeli troops shot and killed a Moslem fundamentalist in a violent demonstration Tuesday, and a U.N. envoy's attempts to inspect refugee camps were frustrated by soldiers and protesters.

Military spokesmen said the army imposed curfews on five of the eight Gaza Palestinian refugee camps.

In the Israeli parliament, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres appealed for an effort to end the violence by political means. Hawkish members accused him of caving in to Arab demands.

At least 32 Arabs have been killed since violent protest began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War. About 1.5 million Palestinians live in the territories.

The military command said soldiers opened fire when their lives were threatened by a crowd of knife-wielding Arabs in Rafah, at the southern end of the Gaza Strip. One Arab died and three were wounded, while a soldier was treated for a minor stab wound, a communique said.

The army identified the dead man as Mohammed Yusuf El Yazouri, a member of the Moslem fundamentalist Islamic Jihad group, who was freed from prison last year after serving three years on unspecified charges.

American Faces Trial, Charges of Violating Sandinista Security

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The Sandinista government Tuesday charged a jailed Illinois farmer with violating public order and security and accused him of having ties to "the war of aggression" waged by the Contra rebels.

Government prosecutor Julio Cabrera delivered the papers to a revolutionary court in Managua.

Cabrera declined to read the charges but told reporters that James Denby, 58, was linked to the "war of aggression" by the U.S.-supported rebels and he was charged with violating public order and security and criminal association.

Conviction on the charges carries a jail term of up to 30 years.

Denby, of Carlinville, Ill., was taken into custody Dec. 6 after his small Cessna plane was forced down by Sandinista rifle fire in the Nicaraguan territory on the Caribbean coast near the border with Costa Rica where he has a farm.

The leftist government has claimed Denby is linked to the Contras, backed and supplied by the United States, in their war against the ruling Sandinistas.

Congressmen Discuss Iran-Iraq War with Iraqi Foreign Minister

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Two U.S. congressmen met with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz on Tuesday and discussed the Iran-Iraq war, the state-run radio reported.

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., and Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., were briefed by Aziz on the developments in the war and efforts to end it under a U.N. Security Council resolution, the radio said.

Iraq has said it is willing to go along with the resolution if Iran accepts the measure. Tehran has been demanding that Baghdad be branded as aggressor in the seven-year-old war.

Levine arrived in Baghdad on Monday and Torricelli arrived Tuesday. They are members of the House Subcommittee on Middle East and European Affairs.

Besides Aziz, the congressmen met with Bahaaddin Ahmed, deputy speaker of Iraq's parliament.

Torricelli visited Iraq a year ago and toured the southern port city of Basra during fierce fighting east of the city between Iraqi and Iranian forces.

Bush, Dole Call Off Bickering; Simon Defends Spending Vote

IOWA — Republican presidential rivals George Bush and Bob Dole declared a truce of sorts on Tuesday in their bickering over the Iran-contra affair, while Democratic Sen. Paul Simon defended his vote in Congress for across-the-board spending cuts.

A mid-winter blizzard disrupted Iowa campaign plans, but Bush and Dole both told New Hampshire voters they wanted to change the focus of their rivalry for the GOP nomination.

"I don't think Iran-Contra is a real issue anymore," Dole said in Somersworth.

Bush, who answered questions under oath from Iran-contra prosecutors on Monday, refused to divulge what he told them. But he said he believed he had made a mistake in responding last week to a series of attacks from Dole.

"I want to stay with the high road and not respond to some other candidate, keep it on the issues as much as I can, keep my cool as much as I can and absorb whatever shots come my way," he said.

Major Airlines Had 31 Accidents and 231 Fatalities During 1987

WASHINGTON — Major U.S. airlines in 1987 had the highest number of accidents in 13 years and the most deaths in five years while commuter carriers had their worst safety record of this decade, the National Transportation Safety Board reported Tuesday.

The board said the large airlines had 31 accidents last year, including four crashes involving fatalities, accounting for 231 deaths. The commuter airlines, which fly smaller planes, had 35 accidents and 58 deaths in 1987, the largest number for that segment of the industry since 1979, when 66 people died.

The 31 accidents among the U.S. airlines flying large jet aircraft was the highest figure since 1974, when the airlines had 42 accidents. The 231 fatalities were topped during the past decade only by 1979, when 351 people died, and 1982 when 233 people were killed, according to the board.

Feisty Woman with Keen Mind Ends Long-lived Record at 114

PHILADELPHIA — Florence Knapp, a schoolteacher who marched for women's suffrage in 1919, retired in 1935 and lived in the same house for 110 years, has died at the age of 114, two weeks after she officially became the world's oldest person.

"I think she could never understand why she was allowed to live so long," her niece, Ruth Oberholtzer, said Tuesday. "One time she said that she feels like she might have been bad and this was God's way of punishing her."

She graduated from college more than 90 years ago and was a staunch Democrat who exercised the right to vote until she was over 100, said Oberholtzer.

First Test-tube Quintuplets Born in U.S., Reported in Good State

ROYAL OAK, Mich. — A woman gave birth to quintuplets conceived through in-vitro fertilization, apparently the nation's first set of test-tube quintuplets, and all were doing well, a hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday.

The babies, four girls and a boy, were born Monday by Caesarean section between 10:34 p.m. and 10:38 p.m., said Deb Mero, a spokeswoman for William Beaumont Hospital.

The babies, born two months premature, have a 90 percent to 95 percent chance of survival, said Valerie Mahaczek, another hospital spokeswoman.

School Teacher Arrested and Charged with Fondling 2 Girls

LOS ANGELES — An elementary school teacher has been arrested for allegedly fondling two fifth grade girls during special tutorial sessions.

Chester William, 38, of Palms, a teacher with the Los Angeles Unified School District since 1982, was accused of fondling the breasts and buttocks of two clothed girls in separate incidents at the 75th Street School in February and March of 1987, Deputy City Attorney Vanessa E. Place said Monday.

One of the girls, age 9, was allegedly molested after Williams offered to give her special coaching for the pep squad. The other, age 10, was allegedly fondled in the classroom during a tutorial reading session, Place said.

During a seven-month investigation, police learned that Williams got some of his students to pose for pictures after telling them he ran a modeling agency for young girls, the city attorney said.

He was placed on mandatory unpaid leave after being charged with two counts of misdemeanor child molestation and two counts of battery, said school district spokeswoman Eva Hain.

Nurse Refusing Dangerous Drug Awarded Eligibility for Benefits

SAN FRANCISCO — A nurse who apparently got non-genital herpes from a patient cannot be denied disability benefits because of her refusal to take a drug that she reasonably feared would harm her future children, says a state appeals court.

In a ruling issued Monday, the 1st District Court of Appeal criticized the state Worker's Compensation Appeals Board for offering Catherine Daly the "grisly choice" of following her doctor's advice, and sacrificing benefits, or "exposing herself and her unborn child to unknown risks."

The court ruled 3-0 that Daly, a former registered nurse in the intensive care unit of Vallejo General Hospital, was wrongly denied disability benefits by the board.

The board's lawyer, William Donahoe, declined comment Tuesday. The board could appeal the ruling to the state Supreme Court.

Daly, then 27, noticed a pimple-like lesion on the palm of her left hand in July 1982, had pain and enlarged lymph nodes the next day, and was diagnosed as suffering from a form of the disease called herpes simplex Whitlow. The court said the virus was "a recognized hazard of medical practice" and that it appeared Daly had become infected while treating a patient.

Officials Investigate Firefighters' Refusal to Assist AIDS Infant

ANNAPOLIS — The head of the monastery that cares for several infants with AIDS said Tuesday he pitied the fearful volunteer firefighters who refused to help a baby during December.

"I feel sorry for them because what they did that night they're going to have to live with for the rest of their lives and that's a heavy burden to live with," Tolbert McCarroll said.

The baby died a few days later, but not because of the inaction by the firefighters.

McCarroll, known as Brother Toby, said fear and ignorance of the deadly virus will not stop Starcross Monastery from taking care of the sick children.

It was at Starcross, an independent Catholic lay community near the rural Sonoma County coast, that a one-year-old boy with AIDS developed breathing problems on the night of Dec. 21.

The brothers and sisters called 911 for help, a call that went first to the volunteer fire brigade in Annapolis, a small town two minutes away.

Anti-nuclear Protester Sentenced Prison, Fine Given for Vandalism

An anti-nuclear protester who extensively damaged a million-dollar computer at Vandenberg Air Force Base was sentenced to five years in federal prison Monday afternoon.

The protester, Susan Komisaruk, was also ordered by United States District Judge William Rea to reimburse the government $500,000 of the estimated $700,000 of damages inflicted upon the computer.

"We're glad to see that the court has reviewed the matter and reviewed it expeditiously," VAFB Master Sgt. Bruce Zieldorf said. "As the judge indicated, the sentence is apt to send a message that protesting the government is within the legal rights of citizens, but to demolish government property is against the law and will be treated accordingly," Zieldorf said.

Komisaruk was arrested June 3, 1987, after she told reporters at a San Francisco news conference that she had damaged a VAFB computer and radar dish. Rea believed Komisaruk ruined the computer with bolt cutters and a drill.

Lecturer Looks at Feminist Humor in Skit, Lecture

What do feminists find funny? That will be the topic at a lecture this afternoon entitled, "The Politics of Humor: A Feminist View," sponsored by the UCSB Women's Center.

Communications studies Lecturer Judy Jones will perform a comedy number at the presentation, following her routine with an examination of feminist humor aided by the use of a video tape featuring feminist comedians and activists Whoopie Goldberg, Flo Kennedy and Kate Clinton.

Jones will spend half the lecture in the guise of her comical character, Dr. Shiela Mann, a social scientist discussing "Signs of the Times: Ped Culture in the Post-Nuclear United States," according to UCSB Rape Prevention Education Program Coordinator Cheri Gurse. Jones will then continue as herself and examine the humor involved in her routine. The event will begin at 4:30 p.m. in UCen Room 1 and is intended to be full of laughter and insight.

AIDS

Many drug users are black or Latino, members of communities that until recently felt AIDS was not their problem, officials say. Black IV drug users face nine times the risk of AIDS infection that white users do, according to a recent state health department study.

"Heterosexual AIDS is going to be a black and a Latino disease, as well as a poor people's disease, and I don't think anybody's prepared for that," said University of California at San Francisco epidemiologist Dr. Andrew Moss.

And among drug addicts, health considerations often pale beside the urgent need for a "fix."

"I've seen people share outfits with people yellow with jaundice," former state health Director Dr. Jerome Lackner said. "When all their water is turned off for lack of payment, I've seen people take water out of the toilet or gutter to cook (dilute) their heroin."

But AIDS education among drug users, while difficult, is not impossible, officials say.

"Drug addicts engage in incredible self-delusion: they think they can handle the drug," Veatch said. "But we have learned that they do fear the slow, lingering death you die from AIDS."

In San Francisco, where the state's most extensive AIDS education has been carried out, "IV users are essentially all aware of AIDS, and would like to reduce their risk," said epidemiologist John Newmeyer. "That battle is won. What is not won is a shift over in behavior."

Among IV drug users, AIDS is spread through sex, or through hypodermic needles with other infected drug users.

Health officials agree that the surest way to prevent the disease's spread is to get as many people off needle use as they can.

"The more IV drug users you have in treatment, the fewer AIDS candidates you will have engaged in the practices of needle sharing and prostitution," Los Angeles County drug program Director Irma Strantz said in legislative hearings on AIDS and drug users in October.

Los Angeles is funneling nearly all of its AIDS-targeted federal drug money into creating more drug treatment slots, Strantz said. Yet demand for treatment remains greater than available funding, both in Los Angeles and elsewhere.

At San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic, heroin addicts face a two or three week wait to get into a methadone detoxification program, Newmeyer said. In those weeks of waiting, addicts may end up sharing needles dozens of times — each time running the risk of contracting the virus or, if already infected, spreading it further.

"When somebody is ready to go into a treatment program, he or she cannot be told, 'You've got to wait two months,'" said Dr. Neil Schram, former director of Los Angeles County's AIDS task force. "We must have the capability, when somebody comes and wants help, to get that help immediately."

Beyond the need to stop needle use, however, health officials are divided on AIDS prevention strategies.

In San Francisco, health educators give a three-part message to addicts:

— Don't shoot up.
— If you must shoot up, don't share needles.

— If you must share needles, disinfect them before use with household bleach, hydrogen peroxide, or alcohol.

In 1986, San Francisco health educators developed a program in which former addicts are trained in AIDS prevention. They then visit the street corners and hotel rooms where drug users congregate — explaining the disease and how to avoid it, distributing condoms, even distributing small bottles of bleach and showing users how to clean their

IV Drug Users Will Continue Despite AIDS, Addict Warns

By Ilana DeBare
McClatchy News Service

SACRAMENTO — Philip is 43 but looks 60.

His hair and mustache are snowy white. His cheeks are flushed red. Tall, with clear gray eyes, he is handsome but gaunt. For a week and a half, he has spent his days in bed, sweaty and feverish. He has spent his nights in more sweat and nightmares.

A heroin addict for 18 years who was diagnosed with AIDS last month, Philip, a Sacramentan, is not optimistic about stopping the virus's spread among intravenous drug users.

"You've got to understand," said Philip, not his real name. "When you're sick (from heroin withdrawal), your thoughts aren't going to sanitation or health. They're going to getting that heroin through your system."

He recalls an incident after he was diagnosed, but before he stopped shooting up and entered the methadone treatment program at Sacramento's Bi-Valley Medical Clinic:

"I had a guy two weeks ago who said, 'Philip, I hear you have AIDS.' I said, 'Yeah.' He said, 'I don't care,' and fixed (with my needle and syringe) right behind me."

Philip didn't try to talk him out of it. "There was no need to argue," he said. "He was putting the needle in his arm while we talked."

Before his diagnosis, Philip said, the risk of AIDS "had been brought up in conversations and stuff." But he never believed it applied to him.

"You think, 'So what? I'm not even supposed to be alive right now anyway,'" he said. "The denial's real heavy. Most people on the street think other people will have it. San Francisco or New York, sure. Not here in Sacramento."

Philip grew up in neaby Carmichael, only a few back yards away from the American River. He began what would be half a lifetime of drug use by shooting up speed in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district in the late 1960s. Then he went on to inject heroin, as often as several times a day.

"It really depended on how much nerve I had that day, to run in and out of stores and steal" to buy more heroin, he said.

An articulate man whose favorite writers are E.L. Doctorow and Robert Heinlein, Philip was in and out of jail — and in and out of drug treatment programs — over the years.

"This heroin addiction runs a lot deeper than physical addiction," he said. "It hits part of your brain, and if you don't feed that monster, it's going to gnaw at you until you start doing it. I gave it my best shot, and ended right back in the cooker. ... You clean up for a while, but you go back to it."

He was hospitalized several times for tuberculosis. One time, the doctors told him he had AIDS-related complex, or ARC, but he didn't take them seriously. He went on using drugs.

"It was real vague, and hard to get any information out of them," he said. "They were real busy, you know how it is in the hospital."

In November, the doctors at University Medical Center spelled it out for him in four letters: AIDS.

Since the diagnosis, Philip sometimes despairs about his future and contemplates suicide.

"But," he said, "there's another little spot that says, 'No, Philip, hang on.'"

He worries that he may have infected an old girlfriend — who did not use drugs. He broke the bad news to her himself, and they are waiting for the results of her AIDS antibody test.

He worries about finding housing, because he doesn't want to stay in the junkie-filled "flop hotels" he was living in when he got sick.

"I can't very well run an ad: 'Heroin addict with AIDS seeking roommate,'" he said.

Some days, he still doesn't really believe he has AIDS. Other days, the truth hits him. Just the daily drive to the clinic for his methadone wears him out and forces him back into bed sweating and feeling "like I've been beat with a rubber hose."

He wants to stay clean, but he admits that when the despair hits him he could easily return to shooting up.

"AIDS research and all that is fine," Philip said. "But I would give anything to see them come up with something where they could say, 'Do this and you won't do heroin any more.'" needles.

"Contrary to common wisdom, IV drug users were concerned about the epidemic but they didn't know what to do," said Harvey Feldman, project director for the Mid-City Consortium to Combat AIDS, which runs the outreach program.

Since its start, Feldman said, the outreach program has distributed 30,000 bleach bottles and has helped establish needle-cleaning as a ritual among many addicts.

"We've heard there are IV drug users who come over from Oakland to get the bleach bottles and then sell them in Oakland for $1.25," Feldman said. "We've heard there are drug dealers who routinely pass out bottles with sales."

Across the country, many health officials are looking to San Francisco's outreach program as a model prevention effort. But in California, so far only Sacramento County has adopted a similar program of bleach distribution.

To many drug treatment officials and political leaders, distributing bleach is tantamount to legitimizing drug abuse.

"We must realize that any message we send should not be mixed and should not condone drug use," said Veatch. "If San Francisco says it works for them, great, but I'm not sure I've taken it to the next level where I would recommend it for everybody."

No funds from the state Office of AIDS may be spent on bleach distribution, said Frazier, although written materials may explain how to disinfect needles.

Bleach distribution is "controversial," she said. "Anything that gets fairly controversial, especially when we're using the taxpayers' money, we are not likely to advocate it."

Some AIDS educators go a step further than bleach, urging decriminalization of needles. Because possession of drug equipment is illegal in California, needles are scarce and sharing is common, they say. They urge the state to examine needle exchange programs currently in place in Europe, where health departments issue sterile needles to addicts who refuse to enter treatment.

Opponents say that decriminalization or needle exchange programs would only make drug abuse easier, without decreasing needle-sharing.

"At this point I see no evidence that would lead me to support free needles," Veatch said. "It is my view that this would only increase drug use."

But other AIDS experts say that the severity of the epidemic justifies consideration of measures they would otherwise reject.

"People in the drug treatment field need to make some compromises," said Les Pappas, chemical dependency specialist with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation. "A hard-line approach is not going to facilitate making people safe from AIDS. If we can keep them safe from AIDS, then maybe someday we'll get them into treatment programs."

While health officials are struggling to develop AIDS prevention strategies for IV drug users, California's drug treatment programs are beginning to feel the impact of the epidemic.

Often, that means increased staff time spent on AIDS education, with less time for drug counseling. It means learning to handle the despair that can accompany an AIDS diagnosis among drug users.

"Their reaction at the beginning is, 'Why should I clean up?'" said Jokey Lindsay of Sacramento's Bi-Valley Medical Clinic, which runs methadone treatment programs for heroin addicts. "They think, 'Here I come in to get straightened up, and I get a death sentence. I might as well go out and get loaded up.'"

And although health officials call drug treatment the best way to keep infected addicts from spreading the virus, some anti-drug programs are less than enthusiastic about accepting infected clients.

"Many (drug) treatment programs are AIDS-phobic," said Dr. German Maisonet, medical director of the Los Angeles Minority AIDS Project. "They can't force a person out, but neither can they force residents to talk to each other. AIDS patients can be very isolated."

SOVIETS

Gramov was asked repeatedly to explain how the security guarantees provided by South Korea differed from those made by the Los Angeles Olympic Committee in 1984.

Soviet media have given prominent coverage to South Korea's violent political protests and opposition charges of vote fraud against ruling party candidate Roh Tae-woo in the Dec. 16 election.

"We were not surprised by any security measures of the South Koreans," he said. "They just assured us they would provide all necessary arrangements in accord with the Olympic Charter. It was enough to assure our participation in the Olympic Games."

Gramov said Soviet athletes will live in Seoul's Olympic Village along with competitors from other countries, but that the Soviets also will bring a ship to Seoul where athletes might stay before important events.

The Soviets have taken a similar ship to Olympiads in Australia, Canada and elsewhere, Gramov said.

There had been concerns about a possible Kremlin boycott because of disputes between North Korea and South Korea, which has no diplomatic ties to Moscow.

In 1985 North Korea demanded it be made a co-host of the games. The International Olympic Committee offered to let North Korea stage five events — archery, table tennis, women's volleyball and portions of cycling and soccer. But North Korea has insisted on playing host to not less than half of the games.

Negotiations are continuing, and Gramov said they are a matter for the International Olympic Committee to settle.

POLICE REPORT

Campus Police Charge Man With Sexual Assault

UCSB Police arrested a 25-year-old man Jan. 6 on charges of rape, in response to a complaint filed three weeks after the alleged incident, according to UCSB Police Department Lt. Bob Hart.

Reported as an "acquaintance rape," the incident supposedly took place Dec. 14, but the victim did not report the incident until Jan. 6, Hart explained. Both the victim and the suspect reside at the Storke Campus Apartments, a new student housing complex in Isla Vista, Hart said.

The suspect was booked into the Santa Barbara County Jail on two felony charges, Hart said.

Rapes are rarely reported in the Isla Vista area, according to Hart. The Jan. 6 arrest was the second sexual assault arrest made by the UCSB Police Department in the past year, he said.

Police Arrest Murder Parolee

A resident of a halfway house located at 6575 Trigo Rd. in Isla Vista was arrested Jan. 6 on charges of prowling and possession of heroin, UCSB Police Department Lt. Robert Hart reported.

Arthur Rowe, who was on parole for murder at the time, was caught prowling near a woman's room at the halfway house, according to Hart.

Rowe was booked into the Santa Barbara County Jail.

Los Angeles Man Charged With Stealing Surfboard; Lying to Officer

An Isla Vista Foot Patrol officer arrested a man from the Los Angeles area for allegedly stealing a surfboard and a bicycle wheel Jan. 10 at 1 a.m., according to I.V. Foot Patrol Sgt. Jim Drinkwater.

Ian Buscher, 20, was walking in I.V. carrying a surfboard and a bicycle wheel when an Isla Vista Foot Patrol officer noticed "that it was particularly odd that he (the suspect) would want to test the surf at 1 a.m.," Drinkwater said.

After the officer approached the suspect and asked what he was doing, Buscher gave the officer a false name and replied that he was playing a joke on a friend, Drinkwater continued. But, when asked what the friend's name was, the suspect said that he did not know, according to Drinkwater.

Buscher was charged with possession of stolen property and with providing false information to a police officer, and was booked into the Santa Barbara County Jail, Drinkwater said.

UCSB Police Enforce Bicycle Safety

An increase in the number of campus police officers enforcing bicycle safety laws on campus resulted in the recovery of a stolen bicycle coupled with the arrest of an Isla Vista resident Jan. 11, according to UCSB Police Department Lt. Robert Hart.

Cruz Guzman, a 21-year-old nonstudent, was stopped by a campus police officer for heading the wrong direction on a bicycle path near Snidecor Hall, Hart said.

While the officer was issuing a citation, he noticed that the bicycle's serial number was scratched off, Hart continued. After further investigation, the bicycle was discovered to be stolen, and the suspect was arrested and booked into the Santa Barbara County Jail, Hart said.

Erotic Phone Line Businesses Sizzle With Hot Callers

Answerers Report Different Reality of Fantasy Love

By Kathy Bunnell Johnson
McClatchy News Service

SEATTLE — "Hello, is anybody there? Hi, baby, this is Sweet Candy talkin'. Come on baby, come on and talk to me," the young woman purred into the telephone.

"I can heat your body up real good. Oohh," she moaned into the phone. "You can make me feel real good.... I would love to wash your body off. Happy holiday, baby."

"Hello, is anybody there?" she cooed.

This is Sweet Talkers, a Seattle company that charges $1 a minute to fulfill a caller's erotic dreams. Any time of the day or night, callers can engage in sizzling sex talk with women who will moan, pant or say anything else the customer wants while describing an imaginary sexual encounter with the caller.

The talk is graphic. Bondage, group sex, callers in diapers or black leather, are all described in minute detail.

"Tell me what you are wearing," a caller might ask and an operator might answer "nothing" in her best sex-kittenish purr. Or she may describe herself lying on satin sheets wearing black lace lingerie.

The reality is quite different.

Last week, Sweet Candy (all operators used assumed names) sat at her kitchen table, cooing into the telephone in a T-shirt and sweat pants. As she moaned for a caller, she rolled her eyes and wrapped Christmas packages.

In the living room, her two preschoolers watched television and drew pictures. A well-worn Bible sat in the corner of the living room next to a Christmas tree. Silver garlands hung from all the windows and toys littered the floor.

Sometimes she fixes dinner or folds laundry while she's on the phone. In a week, she may get 200 to 300 customers during her two-to-six-hour shifts. Candy, like the other operators, works from home, with phone calls forwarded to her own number.

Operators are often young mothers like Candy who are attracted to the work because there are no child-care, wardrobe or commuting costs, said Jamie, manager-operator of the business. Others are office workers or professionals who like earning a little extra cash.

"They pack in 15 hours a week early in the morning or right after work eavesdropping on the fantasies of men they will never meet," said Jamie. "How many jobs can you have at home that average $6 to $7 an hour that are as easy as this is?"

Not many, said Candy. A 31-year-old single mother of five children, she spent six months training in a data entry program, then found there were no jobs.

"I looked for work for almost a year," she said. "There was no income. I had to do something. I had five kids," she said.

Her monthly $531 public assistance check was running out when a friend told her about Sweet Talkers. She signed on.

"I just said, 'To each his own.' It's something that I have to do to support my kids. Their fathers sure weren't doing it."

"I know that I have to make a living. By my sweet-talking these guys, I know that I'm bringing something home to feed my children. I wouldn't do this for the rest of my life. If I had the opportunity to do something better than this, I would do it," she said.

Another operator is Sugar, a manager of a large social service agency who puts in 12 hours a week with Sweet Talkers because she needs the extra money.

She takes the early 5 to 8 a.m. shift because the line is pretty quiet and she doesn't have to get out of bed for her work, she said. During slack times, she gets ready for her button-down corporate job. She stumbled across the service through a classified advertisement.

"It said something about phone work and no selling," she said. She called and talked with Jamie.

"She told me what it was. I was pretty taken aback, to tell you the truth," she said. But Jamie suggested that she listen in on some calls, then decide.

"I listened to this line and happened to come in on a woman who was giving this monologue. It was pretty steamy, telling this guy what she wanted him to do to her. I was pretty embarrassed. But then I thought I was pretty silly. 'Why are you getting embarrassed? Does anybody know you're calling?'"

"Then, I thought, no way, I'm completely anonymous. Safe. They don't know who you are or where you live. Then it became kind of exciting because I don't normally speak that way. I thought I'd give it a try."

Amber, another Sweet Talker, is a secretary at a state (See PHONESEX, p.11)

We at the Graduate are and would like to invite anyone on the team over 21 to be our guest tonight on us!

Editor's Note: In honor of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday this week, the Daily Nexus is printing a selection of literature written by Dr. King. The following is part two in a four-part series.

Martin Luther King Jr.

The purpose of our direct-action program is to create a situation so crisis-packed that it will inevitably open the door to negotiation. I therefore concur with you in your call for negotiation. Too long has our beloved Southland been bogged down in a tragic effort to live in monologue rather than dialogue.

One of the basic points in your statement is that the action that I and my associates have taken in Birmingham is untimely. Some have asked: "Why didn't you give the new city administration time to act?" The only answer that I can give to this query is that the new Birmingham administration must be prodded about as much as the outgoing one, before it will act. We are sadly mistaken if we feel that the election of Albert Boutwell as mayor will bring the millennium to Birmingham. While Mr. Boutwell is a much more gentle person than Mr. Connor, they are both segregationists, dedicated to maintenance of the status quo. I have hoped that Mr. Boutwell will be reasonable enough to see the futility of massive resistance to desegregation. But he will not see this without pressure from devotees of civil rights. My friends, I must say to you that we have not made a single gain in civil rights without determined legal and nonviolent pressure. Lamentably, it is an historical fact that privileged groups seldom give up their privileges voluntarily. Individuals may see the moral light and voluntarily give up their unjust posture; but, as Reinhold Niebuhr has reminded us, groups tend to be more immoral than individuals.

We know through painful experience that freedom is never voluntarily given by the oppressor; it must be demanded by the oppressed. Frankly, I have yet to engage in a direct-action campaign that was "well timed" in view of those who have not suffered unduly from the disease of segregation. For years now I have heard the word "Wait!" It rings in the ear of every Negro with piercing familiarity. This "Wait!" has almost always meant "Never." We must come to see, with one of our distinguished jurists, that "justice too long delayed is justice denied."

We have waited for more than 340 years for our constitutional and God-given rights. The nations of Asia and Africa are moving with jetlike speed toward gaining political independence, but we still creep at horse-and-buggy pace toward gaining a cup of coffee at a lunch counter. Perhaps it is easy for those who have never felt the stinging darts of segregation to say, "Wait." But when you have seen vicious mobs lynch your mothers and fathers at will and drown your sisters and brothers at whim; when you have seen hate-filled policemen curse, kick, and even kill your black brothers and sisters; when you see the vast majority of your 20 million Negro brothers smothering in an airtight cage of poverty in the midst of an affluent society; when you suddenly find your tongue twisted and your speech stammering as you seek to explain to your six-year-old daughter why she can't go to the public amusement park that has just been advertised on television, and see tears welling up in her eyes when she is told that Funtown is closed to colored children, and see ominous clouds of inferiority beginning to form in her little mental sky, and see her beginning to distort her personality by developing an unconscious bitterness toward white people; when you have to concoct an answer for a five-year-old son who is asking, "Daddy, why do white people treat colored people so mean?"; when you take a cross-country drive and find it necessary to sleep night after night in the uncomfortable corners of your automobile because no motel will accept you; when you are humiliated day in and day out by nagging signs reading "white" and "colored;" when your first name becomes "nigger," your middle name becomes "boy" (however old you are) and your last name becomes "John," and your wife and mother are never given the respected title "Mrs.;" when you are harried by day and haunted by night by the fact that you are a Negro living constantly at tiptoe stance, never quite knowing what to expect next, and are plagued with inner fears and outer resentments; when you are forever fighting a degenerating sense of "nobodiness" — then you will understand why we find it difficult to wait. There comes a time when the cup of endurance runs over, and men are no longer willing to be plunged into the abyss of despair. I hope, sirs, you can understand our legitimate and unavoidable impatience.

You express a great deal of anxiety over our willingness to break laws. This is certainly a legitimate concern. Since we so diligently urge people to obey the Supreme Court's decision of 1954 outlawing segregation in the public schools, at first glance it may seem rather paradoxical for us consciously to break laws. One may well ask: "How can you advocate breaking some laws and obeying others?" The answer lies in the fact that there are two types of laws: just and unjust. I would be the first to advocate obeying just laws. One has not only a legal but a moral responsibility to obey just laws. Conversely, one has a moral responsibility to disobey unjust laws. I would agree with St. Augustine that "an unjust law is no law at all."

"...when you have to concoct an answer for a five-year-old son who is asking, 'Daddy, why do white people treat colored people so mean?' ... then you will understand why we find it difficult to wait."

Now, what is the difference between the two? How does one determine whether a law is just or unjust? A just law is a man-made code that squares with the moral law or the law of God. An unjust law is a code that is out of harmony with the moral law. To put it in the terms of St. Thomas Aquinas: An unjust law is a human law that is not rooted in eternal law and natural law. Any law that uplifts human personality is just. Any law that degrades human personality is unjust. All segregation statutes are unjust because segregation distorts the soul and damages the personality. It gives the segregator a false sense of superiority and the segregated a false sense of inferiority. Segregation, to use the terminology of the Jewish philosopher Martin Buber, substitutes an "I-it" relationship for an "I-thou" relationship and ends up relegating persons to the status of things. Hence segregation is not only politically, economically, and sociologically unsound, it is morally wrong and sinful. Paul Tillich has said that sin is separation. Is not segregation an existential expression of man's tragic separation, his awful estrangement, his terrible sinfulness? Thus it is that I can urge men to obey the 1954 decision of the Supreme Court, for it is morally right; and I can urge them to disobey segregation ordinances, for they are morally wrong.

Let us consider a more concrete example of just and unjust laws. An unjust law is a code that a numerical or power majority group compels a minority group to obey but does not make binding on itself. This is difference made legal. By the same token, a just law is a code that a majority compels a minority to follow and is just because it is based on the sameness made legal.

Let me give another explanation. A law is unjust if it is based on a minority that, as a result of being denied the right to participate in enacting or devising the law, who can no part in enacting or devising the law. Who can legislate for Alabama which set up that state's segregation? Was it democratically elected? Throughout Alabama, the same devious methods are used to prevent Negroes from registering voters, and there are some counties in Alabama where though Negroes constitute a majority of the population, no single Negro is registered. Can any law enacted under such circumstances be considered democratically structured?

Sometimes a law is just on its face and unjust in its application. For instance, I have been arrested on a charge of parading without a permit. Now, there is nothing wrong in having a parade which requires a permit for a parade. But such a law becomes unjust when it is used to maintain segregation and deny citizens the First-Amendment privilege of peaceful assembly and protest.

I hope you are able to see the distinction I am trying to make. In no sense do I advocate evading or defying the law, as the law is the law, no matter how unjustly it may have been enacted or how unjustly it may seem to certain individuals. It is just that I would urge you to disobey laws that are unjust. That would lead to anarchy. On the other hand, an unjust law must do so openly, lovingly, and with a willingness to accept the penalty. I submit that an individual who obeys a law that conscience tells him is unjust, and who willingly accepts the penalty of imprisonment in order to arouse the conscience of the community over its injustice, is in reality expressing his respect for the law.

Of course, there is nothing new about this concept of civil disobedience. It was evidenced sublimely in the lives of the Hebrew prophets, in the lives of Jesus, in the lives of the early Christians, in the lives of the American colonists, and in the lives of the abolitionists. It was practiced superbly by the early Christians who were willing to face hungry lions and the excruciating pain of stocks rather than submit to certain unjust laws of the Roman Empire. To a degree, academic freedom is a reality that has been practiced since the time of the ancient Greeks. Socrates practiced civil disobedience. In our own nation, the Boston Tea Party represented a massive act of civil disobedience.

We should never forget that everything Adolf Hitler did in Germany was "legal" and everything the Hungarian freedom fighters did in Hungary was "illegal." It was "illegal" to aid and comfort a Jew in Hitler's Germany. Even so, I am sure that, had I lived in Germany at the time, I would have aided and comforted my Jewish brothers. If today I lived in a Communist country where principles dear to the Christian faith are suppressed, I would openly advocate disobeying that country's anti-religious laws.

I must make two honest confessions to you, my Jewish and Christian brothers. First, I must confess that over the past few years I have been gravely disappointed with the white moderate. I almost reached the regrettable conclusion that the Negro's most serious problem at the present moment is not the white man's racism, but the Negro's own stumbling block in his stride toward freedom is not the Citizen's Council or the Ku Klux Klanner, but the moderate, who is more devoted to "order" than to justice; who prefers a negative peace which is the absence of war to a positive peace which is the presence of justice; who says, "I agree with you in the goal you seek, but I cannot agree with your methods of direct action"; who paternalistically believes it is more up to you to educate the whites as to the meaning of their misdeeds than it is to endow the whites with a little more understanding; who can set the timetable for another man's freedom; who lives by the mythical concept of time and who constantly advises the Negro to wait for a "more convenient season." Shallow understanding of people of good will is more frustrating than absolute misunderstanding of people of ill will. Lukewarm acceptance

Save the Ceremony!

Editor, Daily Nexus
Attention Seniors: Do you know where your Graduation will be?
It's been four (or more!) years of hard work, all-nighters and parties. Graduation is finally here. Friends and family will come to commencement ceremonies and watch with pride as you walk up and receive your degrees. In the past there have been four to six ceremonies on graduation weekend, which took place on the lawn overlooking the lagoon. Each department was designated a time and you could be with your friends and classmates. This year, Chancellor Uehling is hoping to have one mass ceremony Saturday morning in Harder Stadium. The disadvantages of this include: 1) Unlike in past years, this year you wouldn't be able to more bewildering than outright rejection.

I had hoped that the white moderate would understand that law and order exist for the purpose of establishing justice and that when they fail in this purpose they become the dangerously structured dams that block the flow of social progress. I had hoped that the white moderate would understand that the present tension in the South is a necessary phase of the transition from an obnoxious negative peace, in which all men will respect the dignity and worth of human personality. Actually, we who engage in nonviolent direct action are not the creators of tension. We merely bring to the surface the hidden tension that is already alive. We bring it out in the open, where it can be seen and dealt with. Like a boil that can never be cured so long as it is covered up but must be opened with all its ugliness to the natural medicines of air and light, injustice must be exposed, with all the tension its exposure creates, to the light of human conscience and the air of national opinion, before it can be cured.

In your statement you assert that our actions, even though peaceful, must be condemned because they precipitate violence. But is this a logical assertion? Isn't this like condemning a robbed man because his possession of money precipitated the evil act of robbery? Isn't this like condemning Socrates because his unswerving commitment to truth and his philosophical inquiries precipitates the act by the misguided populace in which they made him drink hemlock? Isn't this like condemning Jesus because his unique God-consciousness and never-ceasing devotion to God's will precipitated the evil act of crucifixion? We must come to see that, as the federal courts have constantly affirmed, it is wrong to urge an individual to cease his efforts to gain his basic constitutional rights because the quest may precipitate violence. Society must protect the robbed and punish the robber.

We are now entering the last year of the Reagan presidency and it is time for reflection. The Reagan era will undoubtedly be the subject of debate and controversy for years to come, but I am interested in looking at the era as a symbol of our generation and what it says about us. Like the preceding generation, which produced the Yuppie phenomena, we are also very fascinating.

Our generation (those born between 1965 and 1970) have spent almost our entire high school and college lives during the Reagan era. Vietnam and Watergate are dim memories; they are historical events not unlike the Depression and WWII. Our formative years were the '70s, not the '60s. Formative years are primarily impressionistic. And my impressions of the '70s are not favorable. I remember wondering if I would have to fight in Vietnam. I remember gas lines. I remember being warned about cults. I remember a two-week period where Dan White killed the mayor of San Francisco and a gay supervisor, a San Francisco congressman was killed while investigating reports about Jim Jones' religious colony in Guyana, and then 900 people committed mass suicide. I remember Patty Hearst being kidnapped and then robbing banks. The link between these impressions was a sense of impending doom. We are running out of resources! Organized religion has failed and everybody is becoming a Moonie! Inflation is your fault, the only way to stop it is if you accept a lower standard of living! Your children's lives will not be as good as yours — the American Dream is over!

The impression was that the impending doom was inevitable. And Jimmy Carter sealed that belief. Jimmy Carter was the ultimate establishment candidate. Carter was supported by the American people because he promised he would never lie and not get us in a war. But Carter showed an inability to solve the important problems that were producing the impressions of impending doom. Most important, Carter could not stop inflation. Gold was moving toward $1,000 an ounce. He believed that inflation was an essentially uncontrollable force whose explanations were mystical. And he accepted the belief that we were running out of resources, implying to the American people that a reduced standard of living was a probability. Carter was correct when he lectured the American people about a "general malaise." Carter had tried to save America by telling us that life was going to get worse. My impression of the late '70s was one of incompetence. Carter had in effect tried to say our problems were not solvable; they could only be accommodated. In desperation, Ronald Reagan was elected.

I say in desperation for very specific reasons. Ronald Reagan was elected in 1980 because he was the alternative to Carter. Ronald Reagan was elected because he said problems could be solved, we are not running out of resources, the American Dream is not finished and inflation is solvable. He was not elected because of a conservative agenda, which explains why he has high approval ratings, although a majority oppose many of his policies. But, in any event, our generation, which has such dismal memories of the '70s, was willing to give Reagan a chance. Reagan's first three years were difficult because of a deep recession. But he was able to survive that setback because there was no where else to turn. If Ronald Reagan failed, that meant the doomsayers of the '70s were right.

Our generation does not like Reagan because of his personality or charisma. We like him because we are optimistic about our individual futures. We are confident of our ability to leave school and make money. That was not my impression of the '70s. If you have any accounting, computer, or engineering skills, you are in demand. The eroding and subversive features of inflation have been forgotten. A CD player, VCR, and new car are a steady job and credit card away. Oil prices are about $20 a barrel lower today than seven years ago. There is a recession in Texas and other oil-producing states because oil is too cheap to drill for. Ten years ago, we were warned about the depletion of resources; the reality is depressed commodity prices because supply far outstrips demand. In other words, the world is not going to end. Optimism about our future and the American Dream have been restored. And we give thanks to Ronald Reagan.

What's In a Name?

Editor, Daily Nexus:

Regarding your Thursday January 7 column on the events center at UCSB:

Since the Gaucha is a cowboy of the South American pampas, I think the appropriate nickname for the ECen might be The Corral, as in OK 'shoot-out' fame. Or, what is Spanish for corral? We could call it the corral in English for the benefit of unbilingual victims, and by its Spanish nickname as home-ground insiders.

It sounds intimidating enough to me — what do you think? A future senior class gift might well fit an additional sign on the outside of the warehouse. Maybe even my own Class of '88.

New power does appear evident in the Old West.

JEFFREY S. CLARK

Editor Daily Nexus:

Re: Phillip Campbell's letter, Jan. 12, "Not the Thunderdome." While it is an excellent idea to give coach Pimm the praise he so richly deserves, the idea of calling the THUNDERDOME the "palace" is really, ah, well, uh....WEAK! If you were from another college would you be more intimidated knowing you were playing in "the palace" or the THUNDERDOME? People go to the palace to see Liberace (no disrespect intended), they come to the THUNDERDOME to see hot Gaucha basketball.

As anyone who has ever attended a Gaucha basketball game knows why the name "THUNDERDOME" is appropriate. When you get over 6,000 pumped up Gauchos and Gaucha fans cheering on their team, there can only be one result: THUNDER!

And by the way Phil, do you have a problem with the ECen? It doesn't matter what the ECen is built of, alphabet blocks, toothpicks, or the bones of our crushed opponents, it's what we have inside that counts. And THAT, my friend, is a bunch of roaring Gauchos, not a pack of "woofing" dogs. (Yes, we think the woofing idea is pretty weak too.) So get some school spirit and quit insulting your sport center. What "America" will feel is awe when we take the NCAA championships, and what will help get the lightning Gauchos there is THUNDER.

Do What I Do Not What I Say

Editor, Daily Nexus:

This morning I read your article on the chancellor's goals that define her plans for UCSB's academic future. It is particularly interesting to note that Chancellor Uehling's goal to place a stronger emphasis on research has already been severely impacted by her appointment of an acting CIA agent to the political science department of this campus. As was recently pointed out by concerned members of the anthropology department, this appointment has seriously compromised the ability of many campus researchers to conduct research in countries other than the United States, research that is essential to realizing this particular goal of Chancellor Uehling.

Correction

Two errors were made on yesterday's OPINION page concerning Rev. King's "A Letter from Birmingham Jail." The headline erroneously said "Letters" when the document is actually only one letter. Also, in the editor's note we stated that the letter would be printed up through Thursday's Daily Nexus; the final portion of the letter will actually be printed on Friday. The Daily Nexus regrets these errors.

agency and a part-time college student. She also likes the work because of the money and convenient hours.

"I sit there and balance my checkbook while I do it. Or I do latchwork or clip coupons in my sweats and jeans," she said.

"It's something that's not all that difficult. I enjoy talking to the men. They are very sexy and very flattering. I get strokes. They think you're really nifty, and I think we all need that."

friends and relatives. Many operators are selective, telling only those they trust completely. Sugar has told no one.

"It doesn't really fit with the rest of my personality. If the men at work found out, I would die. My mother would kill me if she knew," she said.

"My greatest nightmare is someone calling whose voice I recognize. Like my boss. I would recognize his voice anywhere. I would never be able to look him in the face again."

— Sugar

For several operators, the work required a heavy dose of self-education. Admittedly naive, they checked out adult book stores, rented videos, read magazines and compared notes with other operators. The company helps educate its operators by publishing weekly bulletins that describe various sexual options and the kind of terminology to use.

"I had to go get some books. I'm not kidding. I don't know anything about this kind of stuff," said Amber.

It's definitely not your run-of-the-mill job. The unusual nature of the work poses the dilemma of what to tell Amber told her 77-year old father, who had no objections. But Candy shrieked "Are you kidding?" when asked if she told her children.

"My oldest son knows I'm working but I don't tell him what," she said. "I do have the fear that they might accidentally hear me talking nasty."

When a shift begins, she will often prop the kids up for a meal at a kitchen table laden with fruit slices, hot dogs, bread and popcorn, then close herself in her bedroom. The children are not permitted to interrupt her.

Amber said she is not ashamed of what she does.

"I don't really think there's anything wrong with it. It's honest work as far as I'm concerned. None of it seems dirty to me," she said. "I don't think the guys that call are perverts."

Other operators do, although they don't tell their callers so.

"When I hear another caller come on the line, I say to myself, 'There's another pervert,'" said Candy.

Some operators say they consider it good clean fun — it's 100 percent safe sex and harms no one.

"I think it's a really good way for men to have this fantasy or affair. They can have it but it doesn't hurt anybody. His wife doesn't get hurt. They don't get diseases. It's perfectly harmless," said Sugar.

"It's an '80s kind of thing. It's intimacy without the intimacy. It's a fantasy person on the phone that you can talk to that isn't real and isn't going to hold you to anything."

"For a man who doesn't want to commit to the relationship, it's a perfect relationship."

Sugar keeps her two work lives completely separate. She goes to work every day, runs meetings, makes decisions in her dress-for-success suit after completing her three-hour sweet-talking shift. But the phone work has spilled over into her "normal" life in at least one area.

"It's made me look at men around me much more differently," she said. "They're so normal. I assumed that these would be strange men calling this line and they don't appear to be from the conversations. It could be anybody."

Ex-B-baller Making the Grades After Europe

By Patrick Whalen
Sports Editor

You may have seen him walking around campus, in the stands at a Gaucho basketball game or even in a class, wraparound sunglasses tightly wrapped, stout gold chains a'danglin', a many-hued sweatsuit adorning his thickly muscled, six-foot eight-inch frame.

And you might have thought: "No, it ain't him, couldn't be. Is it? Naaah. Man, just think what could happen if we had him this year."

What's gone is gone and gone from Gaucho basketball is this man. But make no mistake: Brian Vaughns, former All-PCAA basketball selection, fifth-round NBA draft choice of the Milwaukee Bucks and all-around hoopmeister supreme is back from Europe and lookin' to graduate. You could have predicted it.

UNLV Ticket Raffle Cards at Utah St. Game Only

The men's basketball game with San Jose State tomorrow night at 7:30 is an official sellout. Spaces have been reserved for the first 2,500 students with reg cards in line.

The raffle regarding tickets for the UNLV home game on Feb. 6 was correctly described in Monday's editorial, but was incorrectly described in the accompanying story. UNLV tickets will be given away to the first 2,400 students in line at the Utah State matchup.

One hundred tickets will remain and will be raffled off during home halftimes of games leading up to Feb. 6. To enter the raffle, drawing cards must be filled out at the Utah State game. Cards will not be made available at any other game. About 15 tickets will be raffled off at each half-time.

Also, the new game entrance is not to the left of the present entrance, as stated in Monday's story, but rather on the right side of the ECen, adjacent to Snidecor loop near the eucalyptus trees where the alternate ticket booth is located.

PCAA Tournament ticket forms may be picked up at Gaucho home games or in the Athletic Department Ticket Office. Completed forms must be submitted by Jan. 25.

The Big East Shrinking as Lacrossers Climb to Top

By Steve Czaban
Sports Reporter

If you were gunning to be the best in the world of beach volleyball, logic dictates that you wouldn't go to the East coast to develop your talent. Logic also says that if you wanted to make it big time in collegiate lacrosse, the last thing on your mind would be to go west.

But when it comes to lacrosse, that is the old school of logic speaking. It is from the school of thought that saw the West as lacrosse oblivion. After all, this was an East coast sport. Colleges like John Hopkins, Syracuse, North Carolina and Virginia comprised the "hotbed" of lacrosse. West coast lacrosse was about as prestigious as, well, the Greater Massachusetts Beach Volleyball Championships.

During the last decade or so, however, the East coast mentality of college lacrosse has been seriously challenged. Western lacrosse has been getting bigger and better, and schools in the East are starting to take notice.

"It's the hottest thing going right now," boasted UCSB lacrosse coach John Knapp. And he should know. His Gaucho squad has grown into a legitimate western powerhouse since he took over five years ago. The Gauchos are three time Western Collegiate Lacrosse League (WCLL) champions in the '80s, winning back-to-back titles in 1983, '84, and most recently in 1987. Not bad for a team that has to buy its own jerseys. Say what?

As only a club sport, the lacrosse program at UCSB is forced to cut a few corners. Players must pay dues and provide their own equipment to supplement the rather meager $2500 allotted to each club sport. One question naturally springs to mind: How can UCSB lacrosse be so successful as only a club sport? Well the answer is fairly simple.

A competitive program and the allure of nearby beaches bring players to Santa Barbara. But a grossly underfunded athletic department prevents lacrosse from becoming an intercollegiate sport.

Coach Knapp does a remarkable job of recruiting players in light of the fact that he has very little to offer. Without scholarships, Knapp admits he does not have a lot of pull. "When you say you are a club sport, people think you're some rinky-dink outfit that practices twice a week," he said. A club sport they are. Rinky-dink they are not.

The entire lacrosse program includes 60-plus players who are divided into A and B teams. The A team is comprised of the best players and their primary concern is winning. The B team is made up of all the rest, and it serves as a developmental team that feeds players into the A team.

"With the increasingly difficult standards of admissions here, we have to depend almost entirely on the B team to feed our A team," Knapp pointed out. "It's not the best situation, but it's worked for us so far."

Lacrosse coach John Knapp goes over the agenda of a recent practice with a team member. This year's lacrosse team lost 14 seniors.

Not only has the two-team situation worked, it has worked exceptionally well, producing three championships in the last five years. Last year's team, which won the WCLL, had widespread talent, including a

VAUGHNS

"It's no secret I'm a Gaucho at heart," said Vaughns in an interview at the end of Fall Quarter. "If they'd let me, I'd be in the blue and gold uniform playing for UCSB right now."

It's no secret either that UCSB basketball Head Coach Jerry Pimm would like to have him back in blue and gold this season, although Pimm doesn't have a whole lot of complaints with the Gauchos' already highlight-studded 11-1 season.

Pimm lamented the loss of Vaughns — UCSB's team leader in points per game (13.9), rebounds per game (8.4) and blocked shots (31) in last season's 16-13 campaign — when the liberal studies major lost his appeal to the NCAA in July in search of another year of eligibility.

If Pimm had it his way, Vaughns would be having his fifth year of athletic eligibility this season. But the NCAA didn't see it that way, ruling Vaughns ineligible on the grounds that his five-year clock began when he enrolled at Kansas junior college and briefly practiced for the basketball team in 1982. A personal illness and a death in his family precluded Vaughns' participation in any games for the college.

But, the fact that he had worked out with the team was enough for the NCAA.

"I felt he should have been granted an extension of his eligibility because of the extenuating circumstances," Pimm said at the time. "Brian's case should be an exclusion (to the five-year rule)."

Before all the business with NCAA appeals and the subsequent rejection, however, Vaughns was drafted by the NBA's Milwaukee Bucks in the fifth round in June. But, instead of hitching on with the NBA, Vaughns hitched across the Atlantic to Bamberg, West Germany, and spent his summer playing for the Wolverines of the European pro league, where he averaged 19 points, 12 rebounds and five assists in less than a season.

Vaughns described the level of play in Europe as "a step above Div. I NCAA, but a little less than the pros.... But, the amazing thing is that over there, I'm not considered a big man. I played a guard. We played one team that had three seven-footers.

"The level of play is pretty intense. The mentality of the coaches over there is that they want you to press man-to-man for the full 40 minutes.... The fans are really into it. After every game there would be press conferences in which the fans would ask the players 'Why did you do this?' or 'Why did you do that?' It was pretty fun."

Vaughns also did some traveling in Europe, with East Germany leaving the biggest impression on him. "The Berlin Wall is incredible," Vaughns said. "There's no place like it in the world. Just looking at people who live in communism was amazing and so sad.... You stand at the wall and look at the barbed wire and 50 yards of mine fields and the machine gun towers, and it really has an effect on you."

When he returned from overseas, Vaughns played in several Pro-Am leagues in Los Angeles and Orange County before coming back to Santa Barbara and enrolling for Winter Quarter. He needs 20 units to graduate in liberal studies in the areas of sociology, history and communication.

And then what?

"Then it's back to give the NBA another shot," Vaughns said. "I should be drafted higher this time around, considering my experience in Europe and the extra year to mature."

"But while I'm here, you can expect to see me at all the Gaucho home games. I still feel a part of the team. And we're lookin' real good."

So, when you see that guy who you think might be "him," you'll probably be right. At least 'til the end of Winter Quarter.

Brian Vaughns

CROSS

bona fide all-American goal-scorer in Pete Reich. Reich is one of only a handful of WCLL players in the last 10 years to be named all-American. This year, however, the Gauchos will be without Reich and 13 other graduated seniors — all but two of them starters.

On many teams, losing 12 starters would be cause for mild panic, but the Gauchos are taking it in stride. "I really don't see a problem," goalie Mike Lateef coolly said, "because players that didn't start for us last year still got a lot of playing time in many games where we blew out our opponent."

About the only thing that does concern the team is injuries. Several key players went down with injuries in the fall, and Knapp worries that it may take half the season to get back to full strength. One positive note, however, is that freshman defenseman Bob Brainerd should be fully recovered from shoulder surgery and ready to play in the season opener on Jan. 23 at Cal Poly SLO.

This is good, because the Gauchos will be needing all the healthy bodies they can get if they want to win the WCLL again. Their toughest competition will undoubtedly come from the Whittier Poets, who ac-said, "because players that didn't start for us last year still got a lot of playing time in many games where we blew out our opponent."

They are pulling in guys from all over the country, including Canada," he said. Canada? Yup, outside of hockey, lacrosse just happens to be the national sport of the great white north.

The Gauchos primary concern, however, will be to win their division, which includes Stanford, Berkeley, Davis and Sonoma State. After that, a tournament showdown with Whittier or San Diego State would not be unlikely.

But what about the future of UCSB lacrosse? Well, as far as Knapp sees it, the best is yet to come. In the fall of 1988, UCSB expects to get NCAA accreditation. That means that while they will remain a club sport, they will be eligible for the NCAA's nationwide tournament, and have a chance to mix it up with the big boys back East. The big prize though, would be to become an intercollegiate sport, which Knapp eagerly awaits.

Such a move would catapult the UCSB lacrosse program forward, providing enough funds for jerseys and equipment, scholarship opportunities, and a powerful shot in the arm for credibility.

For now though, UCSB lacrosse will have to make do with what it has, and that means players paying dues, and limited recruitment possibilities. But Knapp sees the light at the end of the tunnel. "We've got a super person in Stan Morrison, and great people involved," he noted, "and it may be two years, five years, 10 years down the road before we get it (intercollegiate status), but it's just a matter of time."
