A night of testimony, music and candlelight brought this year's Take Back the Night to a close.

Last night, approximately 500 men and women gathered in Anisq' Oyo' Park from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. to celebrate the culmination of Take Back the Night — a week dedicated to promoting awareness and prevention of sexual assault and rape. The rally featured musical performances by Joules Graves, Wazani, Ragg, Whiskey Sandwich and Gravity Willing, as well as student poetry

Police Rule Attack in Parking Lot 38 Hoax

A UCSB student who claimed she had been attacked in a parking lot admitted to University of California Police Dept. on Wednesday that she made up the report for personal reasons.

The student said a man assaulted her with a knife in Lot 38 at 1:30 a.m., according to a police report on Wednesday. However, on Thursday, UCPD released a second press release, which said, after follow-up investigations, that the student had fabricated the report.

The police referred the false report to the District Attorney's Office and UCSB administration for review.

3-Year Forum To Focus on Science-Religion Dialogue

BY JOSH BRAUN
Reporter

Walter Kohn is a physicist and 1998 Nobel Prize laureate in chemistry who has conversed with the Pope and the Dalai Lama.

Alan Wallace is a religious studies professor who spent 14 years as a Buddhist monk, eventually studying physics, philosophy, Sanskrit and comparative religion at Amherst College and Stanford University.

Jim Proctor is a geography professor who does research in environmental studies and refers to religious studies as, "my first undergraduate degree." As unlikely as it may seem, Kohn, Wallace and Proctor all have something in common.

They share an interest in science, religion and the human experience. This three-year forum on the relationship between scientific and religious worldviews begins today at 3 p.m. with a public lecture by Kohn. The lecture will be held in 1003 Kohn Hall and is titled "Reflections of a Physicist after an Encounter with the Vatican and Pope John Paul II."

The forum — which includes seminars, lectures and undergraduate courses — is a three-year project funded by a special $100,000 grant from the John Templeton Foundation, an organization that promotes science-religion dialogue. Proctor was in charge of writing the Templeton grant proposal.

Earth Day Celebration To Feature Entertainment, Demonstrations

The sunlight is all Santa Barbara will need this weekend to power Earth Day.

On Sunday, the Santa Barbara County Community Environmental Council (CEC) will host an Earth Day celebration at the Courthouse Sunken Gardens located at 1100 Anacapa Street, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The celebration will include musical entertainment, earth-friendly product demonstrations and is expected to reach attendance levels of 6,000 to 8,000. Attendance has grown steadily since the CEC's first Earth Day celebration in 1990, CEC member Sigrid Wright said.

Performances by Area 51, Dr. Loco and the Rockin' Jalapeño Band, Glen Phillips from Toad the Wet Sprocket and others will be featured on a solar-panel stage. Wright said the celebration's musical entertainment helps to draw a large portion of the crowd.

Locals To Come Together at Hemp Awareness Festival

BY MARISA LAGOS
Staff Writer

Today is April 20. Have a nice day.

Isla Vistans can celebrate "4/20" today at a Hemp Awareness Day Festival in Anisq' Oyo' Park from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. The festival is sponsored by UCSB's chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws and will include performances by local bands, a speech from a Hemp Industries Association member, a raffle and booths set up by UCSB groups. Al Espino, Hempwise owner and festival organizer, said the festival is a way to inform locals of the industrial uses of cannabis and for cannabis supporters to rally together.

"The festival is being held to raise awareness for all of the uses of cannabis. Especially around here, where people know the recreational uses but not about other marijuana uses — industrial, for food, fiber, textiles and paper," he said. "It's also to let people know that medicinal [marijuana] is available, and to legitimize it in that sense."

Sponsors, including Mystics, Bagel Café, Underground Beauty Supply, John Edwards Hair Design and Hempwise, donated items to be raffled off to benefit NORML, Espino said.

"Also, The Cannons, a local Santa Barbara reggae band, will be playing, and a funk band called New Vibe, also local. We'll have Steve Levine, from the Hemp Industries Association, speaking and maybe a medicinal marijuana speaker, and then I'll be the emcee," he said. "The [Isla Vista Recreation and Parks District] issued a park permit, and the [I.V. Foot Patrol] issued an alcohol permit, for 5 to 10 p.m."

IVRPD Meeting Discusses Possible Memorial, I.V.'s Future With Goleta

BY REBECCA TUREK
Reporter

The Isla Vista Recreation and Parks District focused on a possible memorial on Sabado Tarde Road and Goleta's proposed cityhood plan Thursday night.

During the four-hour meeting, the board discussed the idea of a memorial in Little Acorn Park for the victims of the February accident on Sabado Tarde. The memorial would consist of a bulb garden that would bloom sometime next year, IVRPD Chairperson Pegeen Soutar said.

"We wanted to do a memorial bulb garden in Little Acorn Park. It'd be neat to have it blooming next year," she said.

The board voiced their reactions to Goleta NOW!'s proposed city, which excludes I.V. The Local Agency Formation Commission will begin consideration on April 26.

"On the 26th of April there will be a LAFCO meeting at 5 at the County Board of Supervisors Hearing Room in Goleta. What this means to us is that [I.V.] may be excluded from Goleta," Soutar said. "If we are excluded it decreases our chance of, in the future, ever having a better government. If we were included, we'd have better local representation and more money for improvements in Isla Vista."

IVRPD General Manager Derek Johnson said the negative side of the assimilation of I.V. into Goleta would be the dissolution of the IVRPD board. If I.V. were incorporated, the affairs usually handled by the IVRPD would then be under the control of the city of Goleta.

"The board is unequivocally opposed to the dissolution of the Park District. There's no compelling reason to change the status of the Park District. There are no savings indicated or improvements of services," Johnson said. "Basically, last year LAFCO ordered the development of a Comprehensive Fiscal Analysis and the available options for a government in I.V. The most attractive option is the annexation of I.V. by the city of Santa Barbara or the city of Goleta. This option is most attractive because if we became part of these cities we would have a better capacity to raise revenues and get a bigger proportion of the property tax that is collected."

Ariana Katovich, IVRPD vice chairperson, said she is skeptical of the ability of the city of Goleta to handle IVRPD affairs.

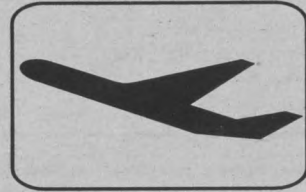

"IVRPD started out of a major protest in the 1970s so that the community of Goleta would not have control. We have been handling affairs in I.V. since 1972. Goleta has no right to take that away from us," Katovich said. "Goleta does not have the experience in I.V. park services. It is impossible that Goleta would be able to provide I.V. with a service that is better than what we currently have. We provide everything we do for free."

Bush Deserves to Bathe in His Own Toxic Rain

BRENDAN BUHLER

George W. Bush is far too committed to Global Warming to just sit back and let it happen. He's willing to produce as much hot air as it takes. His latest emission of noxious gas was his claim that he's an environmentalist.

Bush has taken bold, almost ecoterrorist-like, stand: He has decided not to repeal regulations requiring thousands of metal smelters and electronics manufacturers to report the amount of lead they release.

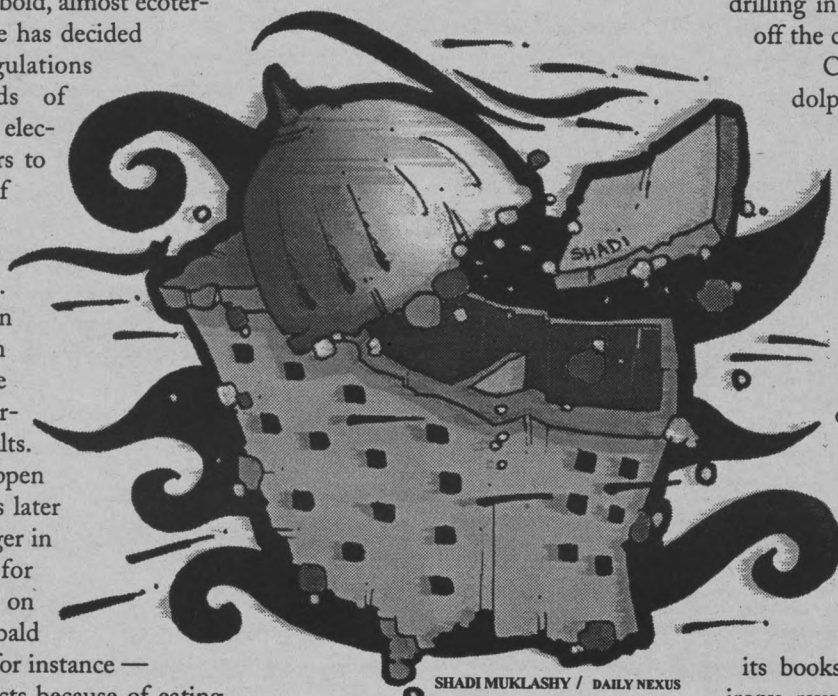

Lead is a toxic heavy metal. Exposure to even small quantities can cause brain damage in children and nervous disorders in adults. The effects can happen immediately or years later because lead can linger in bones and tissue for years. Animals high on the food chain — bald eagles and humans, for instance — suffer the worst effects because of eating contaminated plants and animals.

During its last days, the Clinton administration issued regulations requiring around 9,800 facilities to report how much lead they release into the air, water and land. Mind you, the regulations do not reduce or ban such emissions. They just admit to them.

And Bush, that patchouli-oil-stinking firebrand of environmentalism, decided not to repeal the regulations. There was a press conference and everything. Because people care, people do.

"What we want to make very clear to the American people is that this administration, this president, cares about these issues," Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Christie Whitman said April 18. "This administration has an extraordinarily good environmental record."

SHADI MUKLASHY / DAILY NEXUS

Genghis Khan had an extraordinarily good small village record. He burned them to the ground.

Bush cares about the ground and the groundwater. He's worried that there's not enough arsenic in it. So, being a man of action, he raised the acceptable amount of arsenic in drinking water to 1950s levels.

Arsenic is another heavy metal rocker. It causes cancer, organ failure and death. However, it is useful to the mining and timber industries. Astounding revelation guaranteed to astound no one: The mining and timber industries gave a lot of money to key Republicans and Bush.

And, while he was up, Bush decided to scrap an international treaty limiting CO₂ emissions. And cripple the Endangered Species Act. And call for oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. Before that happens, though, there will be drilling in the Gulf of Mexico, 15 miles off the coast of Florida.

Currently, the Gulf is full of fish, dolphins and other species not known for contributing to political campaigns. This is not a problem for the oil industry.

Last week, the Bush administration told the president's younger brother, Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, it would not postpone auctioning off oil and gas leases in the Gulf. Oil, even in water, is thicker than blood.

Bush "cares about these issues."

Nature doesn't seem to care about issues, but it does. Nature always balances its books. Maybe it's time for a little irony, revenge and punctuated equilibrium. In a few months, hurricane season starts. Every year, Floridians board up their windows and brace for it. This year, maybe Florida ought to give a little back to the president who is giving them so much. With global warming sending climates out of wack, a massive, swirling, spitting hurricane with 300 mph winds is increasingly likely. This year, the beast could descend on Washington, D.C.

The snarling, twisting pile of clouds would head north for once. As it did, thousands of lobbyists and other rats would pile onto the beltway, desperately trying to flee. No one would get anywhere. The city would choke on its own greasy spawn, roads would clog, supplies would be hoarded and the weasels would start to look at each other like meat. Literally, for once.

Bush would miss it all. Displaying his usual work ethic, on the chosen day he would have a "do not disturb" sign on the door to the Oval Office. Beating the high score on Minesweeper is not something to be taken lightly.

And then, the beast hits.

Washington D.C. was built on fetid swampland; the earth remembers. One good hell-drencher is all it would take to bring the swamp back, brimming with toxic waste. When the 300 mph winds hit, every basement will be flooded, every road will be jammed and there will be no place to hide when the cars and telephone polls become missiles. What buildings don't splinter will be run through with debris.

And, after the wind dies down, the real carnage will begin. Flabby lobbyists in torn rags will tear each other apart for the last of the fresh water. Congressmen, too stupid to live on their own, will starve to death. Shotgun blasts by day and strange howling by night.

On the White House lawn, Bush will huddle in a hole scratched in the earth, covered in a tarp. All that will keep him going is an aide's laptop. When the battery goes out and Minesweeper disappears, the sobbing will begin. When the sobbing stops, the swamp can return and the books will be balanced.

MYTH SHROUDS THE TRUTH BEHIND SEXUAL ASSAULTS

A woman reported to the UCSB police that she was assaulted in a remote parking lot at UCSB at 1:30 a.m. on Wednesday, April 18. Upon further investigation, she retracted her story. The retraction feeds the myth that women lie about being assaulted. Although this incident was not a sexual assault, the truth is that false reports of sexual assaults occur no more than false reports of any other crime — approximately 2 percent of the time according to the FBI. This story provides an opportunity to think about other myths regarding sexual assaults and why the most common sexual assaults — acquaintance assaults — are not often reported and are rarely covered in the media.

What actually happened in this case is unknown. However, we do know that in the majority of acquaintance assaults, the survivor is reluctant to report for fear she will not be believed, or that she will be blamed or because she blames herself or finds it too painful to say that someone she trusted violated that trust.

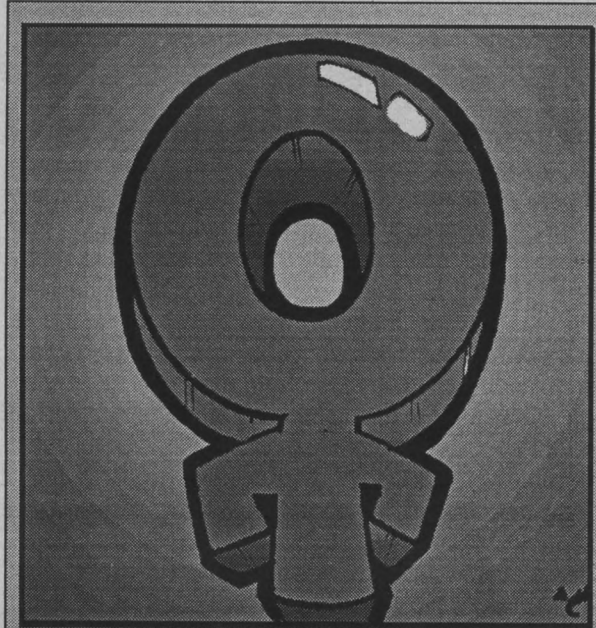

CONOR BUCKLEY / DAILY NEXUS

Letters to the editor MUST include the author's FULL name, phone number, year and major.

If something happens that a woman is unable to talk about, she may choose instead to tell a story that she knows will be taken seriously and believed. We live in a world where the myth is strong that women are in danger from strangers, in the dark, alone — that the strangers use weapons and usually the strangers have dark skin. If a woman wants to be believed and not blamed, and to get a sympathetic reaction, then she must tell a story that matches what the world around her wants to believe is true.

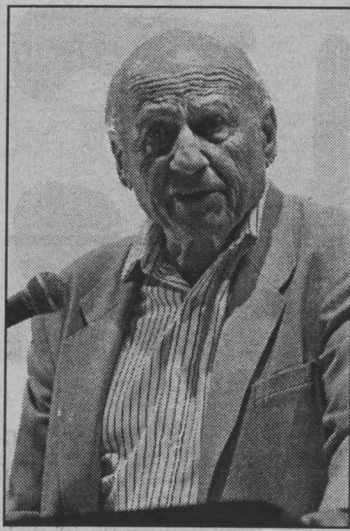

The actual truth is that 85 percent of the assaults on women in the United States are committed by a male acquaintance. In the UCSB community, that number is even higher. Stranger assaults are rare in our community, but acquaintance assaults happen far too often. Yet stranger assaults are put on the front page of the newspaper and acquaintance assaults are almost never addressed in the media. Women are told they must take precautions such as staying in well-lighted areas and traveling in groups — not bad suggestions, except that they obscure the real problem. A typical assault in our community is committed by the man she asks to walk her home.

Carol Mosely is the coordinator of the Rape Prevention Education Program.

The Opinion office would like to send a proud salute to participants of this year's Take Back the Night.

There are many scientists who, to my mind, are lacking in any form of spirituality and I think that is a great loss to them and also a great loss to the entire society.

*— Walter Kohn
physicist and Nobel laureate*

which brought the forum to UCSB.

"[The Templeton Foundation] conducted an international competition of major research institutions for a three-year research lecture series on the 'constructive engagement of science and religion,'" he said. "Once it was all settled, Columbia University and UC Santa Barbara were selected as the two first-year research institutions [to win funding]."

To organize the grant, Proctor worked with a group of UCSB faculty members engaged in far-reaching interdisciplinary discussions. Proctor said the forum will attempt to acknowledge important contributions of science and religion.

"We also want to throw in a third factor," Proctor said, "and ask how we can make sense of science and religion as being embedded in cultural, political and psychological contexts defining the human experience, while attempting to reach beyond those contexts and say something of scientific or religious validity. We think that's a real contribution to science-religion dialogue and maybe that's why we got the grant."

A phrase like "science-religion dialogue" may seem foreign to the average human's experience, but Wallace pointed out that roughly 90 percent of Americans are devoted to a religion, and a large number of these same people believe in the validity of science.

"It's a myth to think science has ever been value-free. It never has been. Is not. Will not be. It's also a myth to think that religion doesn't make truth claims. It makes truth claims all over the place," Wallace said. "So it serves us well to have these in intelligent dialogue with each other so we can develop some sense of holism in our way of engaging with reality and not be radically fragmented as individuals or as a society."

This dialogue will begin today with Walter Kohn's lecture. "Walter has taken a very intense personal interest in science and religion," Proctor said, "and given his acute mind and very compassionate personality we figured he would be a very important person to be the inaugural lecturer for the project."

Kohn will speak on his experiences last year at a physics conference in the Vatican, at which he met the Pope and witnessed a demonstration by Catholics in protest to the beatification of controversial Pope Pious IX. While returning home, Kohn became aware of a document, which was published by a committee, headed by a cardinal named Ratzinger. The document proclaimed the Catholic Church the one true church, non-Catholic Christian religions as churches that are not in the proper sense and all non-Christian religions as gravely deficient.

"I am a fierce believer in inter-religious tolerance and this was an extreme case of what I judge to be intolerance," Kohn said.

In reaction to these issues, Kohn began a series of letters to the Pope, which he will discuss in his lecture today. "I feel very strongly," said Kohn, "that particularly in an age where science has produced terrible weapons of mass destruction, religious intolerance is no longer tolerable and one really needs to exert oneself to eliminate it."

Kohn hopes to reach some of his colleagues with his talk and specifically mentioned an area of physics known as string theory. He said the way in which scientists discuss the theory tends to make light of other branches of science, as well as other important aspects of the human experience.

"The enthusiasts of string theory refer to it as the theory of everything," Kohn said. "I'm terribly embarrassed by the fact that there are scientists who can even use such an expression."

Kohn said he believes scientists should not discount spirituality or the human experience.

"There are many scientists who, to my mind, are lacking in any form of spirituality and I think that is a great loss to them and also a great loss to the entire society," Kohn said. "I would be nervous at the idea of someone who plays an important role in society being such a person: someone who thinks that he or she can grasp the entire human experience by scientific principles."

William Shockley, the physicist who used statistical data from IQ tests to campaign against the integration of public schools, is an example of this type of person, Kohn said. Kohn himself is Jewish. "Judaism has contributed a lot of breadth and depth to my human experience and so I value it very much," Kohn said. "I love science. I'm still doing it 10 years after officially retiring and I think it's absolutely wonderful. It gives me a feeling of awe and respect for the world."

Although Kohn's lecture is only the beginning of a three-year project, Proctor and the other members of the Science Humanities Forum hope the end of three years will not bring an end to their dialogue.

"We hope to present a convincing argument to sustain a longer-term effort in science and religion studies at UC Santa Barbara," Proctor said. "Our ultimate goal would be to fund a center for science and religion that would provide opportunities for continued research, course development, lecture series' and related efforts."

"The first to reap the benefits of this type of really interdisciplinary collaboration would be the students," Wallace said. "I would encourage students to be very critical about that which they think they know and to ask a very savory question, and that is: What are the limits of human knowledge? And not to be so confident about some of the things we think we cannot know. Maybe we can after all."

A large crowd of women and men take the streets of Isla Vista to participate in the Take Back the Night march with chants and yells of empowerment and solidarity.

readings and testimonials from rape survivors. The night concluded with a candlelight march and chant through Isla Vista.

I.V. adopted the nationwide Take Back the Night celebration in 1977 after three female students were abducted, sexually abused and found dead three months later. The event has since been celebrated annually in order to "protest the current climate of fear and violence that women must confront in today's society," according to Take Back the Night's mission statement.

Tara Goddard, co-chair of UCSB's Take Back the Night, said she was pleased the community was responsive to efforts invested in the rally.

"This is the best turnout I've seen. It's awesome; we've put in blood, sweat and tears. This is so rewarding to see people coming with open minds to listen to the realities that surround us," she said. "Our hope is to reach all women college students, not just UCSB. We want to reach as many women and people as possible."

Nick de Sieyes, the lead singer of the all-male band Gravity Willing, said the group felt their performance made a statement about the responsibility of men in preventing sexual assault.

"Our group knows that we have a responsibility as men and as people with microphones to send out the right message. We want to use the spotlight in the right way," he said.

"You have to realize the position you are in and to make sure you are using your position for the proper causes," Gravity Willing band member Ross Simonini said. "This is the proper cause."

UCSB Alumna Amaya Weiss added a personal element when she shared her experiences as a rape survivor to the crowd.

"On December 23, 1998, I was sodomized by my roommate. I screamed and not one of the 17 people downstairs helped me. I was battered and bruised and a part of me died that night," she said. "The rape was the beginning of a journey. Though a part of me died that night, another part was born."

Weiss said she hopes describing her experiences will bring people to accept the realities of rape.

"I feel totally liberated telling this story. Its surreal; I was broken and now I'm put back together. I feel mentally stronger than I have in my entire life," she said. "When I was raped, I didn't know anyone else. That's the reason I'm here to tell my story. So when someone hears the word 'rape', it's not just a word, it's a story — it's my story."

Junior English and black studies major Dora Morse said she hopes people will remember the lessons learned at the rally.

"A lot of my friends and women I know here are survivors of rape," she said. "I hope people here don't forget that rape happens and tonight will serve as a reminder."

Gillian Harwin, lead singer of Whiskey Sandwich, said the rally was a unified and empowered demonstration of womanhood.

"I'm wonder-fucking-woman, and I'm here to take back the night," she said. "It is important to respect all fellow human beings, but we are here tonight to solidify our confidence in our womanhood. I think it's wonderful we women have come together to be wonder women."

Junior College of Creative Studies literature

major Brett Dewey said the night served to bring Isla Vista together.

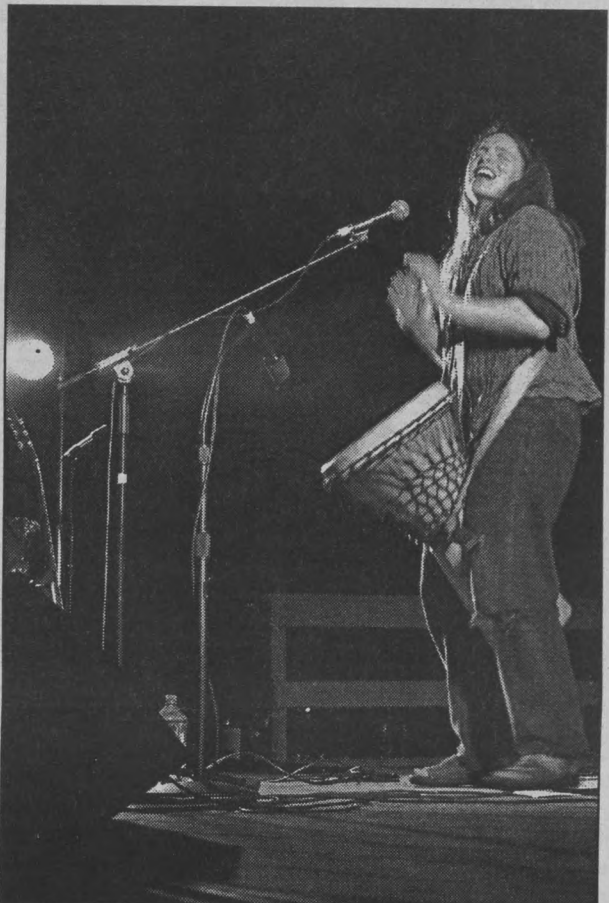

"It's just good to see stuff going here. The point, I think, is to get people out and get a good vibe going on," he said.

"It's not just a women's thing, it is for all of us."

Today at the Women's Center from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. food and beverages will be provided as participants partake in a "Day of Reflection."

I'm wonder-fucking-woman, and I'm here to take back the night. ... It is important to respect all fellow human beings, but we are here tonight to solidify our confidence in our womanhood. I think it's wonderful we women have come together to be wonder women.

Olmstead said the money raised will be used to fund future hemp awareness festivals.

"We're doing this for so many reasons. Cannabis should be legalized and we want to let people know about all the different uses. Most people you talk to in I.V. don't know about the industrial uses of hemp, they just know you can get stoned," he said. "I truly think hemp can help save the world — solve environmental problems like pesticides. Two thirds of the pesticides we use in the U.S. are used on cotton. ... Hemp plants have no real need for pesticides."

Espino said the organizers have worked closely with the IVFP and IVRPD to ensure problems — like the 12 arrests at last year's festival — don't occur.

"We've met with the Foot Patrol a lot ahead of time. One of the things we offered and they agreed with is that we'd call all the businesses, especially those close to the park, to inform them of the festival," he said. "If there are any problems in the park, they can call and let us know first. Last year the Foot Patrol said there were a few complaints, so this year we can say we let them know ahead of time."

The IVFP will have "low key" law enforcement, with four officers patrolling the park, Lt. Russ Birchim said.

"Last year at the 4:20, the magic hour, a lot of the participants lit up, which caused a problem. What we've done this year is start at 5 [p.m.] to hopefully avoid the same problems," he said. "The organizers have agreed to make frequent announcements about not smoking dope, as it does attract law enforcement."

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By Linda C. Black

Today's Birthday (April 20). You're getting stronger this year, and you're more willing to take action. The real secret of your success, however, is your great compassion. Ponder long and hard before launching a new endeavor in April. You'll benefit from the concern you show others in May. In June, abundance is your reward for having done the homework. Learn from a wise older woman in July. August is for fun, and September is about service. By December you'll be ready to let off some steam, and the farther from home the better. In February, join folks who share your beliefs, and change things for the better.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) - Today is an 8 - You're becoming impatient, but don't rush forward. You need to head in the right direction. Once you're sure, proceed at full speed. Your enthusiasm spurs your whole team to victory.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) - Today is a 6 - If you're due to receive extra money, make sure you get it. Early in the day, make time for a dear friend. Later on, you may get a new assignment that demands your full attention. Make sure you're compensated well for those efforts, too.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) - Today is a 6 - This isn't a good time to delegate. You can do the job better yourself - and faster. You have the experience the others lack, so don't waste time (theirs) or money (yours). Don't procrastinate, deviate, speculate or even contemplate. Just do it.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) - Today is a 7 - A person who's been impossible is about to mellow out - but just a little, and just enough to have a sense of humor again. Don't hold a grudge. It's not worth the effort. Accept the apology even if it isn't made with words.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - Today is a 7 - An early date with your sweetheart may have to be postponed. Why not set it up for after work instead? By then the hassles will be history. Take off on a weekend trip tonight, if you can. That would be perfect.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) - Today is a 6 - There's plenty of mess to clean up. You didn't make this problem, so why should you care? Well, because you're good at cleaning up messes. It's a gift. And they can't figure out how to clean it up, so it's your show.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct 22) - Today is a 6 - Continued collaboration is an excellent plan. You be the brains, and someone else can stand up and make the presentation - or the argument. This other person might start to look pretty darned good to you, and vice versa. Consider it a fringe benefit.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) - Today is a 6 - With support from the one you love, things are starting to look possible again. Maybe not easy, but possible. Remember this lesson. No more trying to do it all by yourself. Family: That's where you get your power.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - Today is a 7 - A recent setback could have you hustling to patch up leaks. Life is going to be a lot more fun soon, and not just because it's Friday. However, you're going to have to continue working over the weekend. It's more fun, but it's not all fun yet.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) - Today is a 7 - Somebody else's impatience could almost get you to lose your temper. You're actually quite an outspoken character, as this fool is about to find out. But be cool. It's more effective.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) - Today is a 7 - Don't let a silly rejection knock you off your stride. You're a long-distance runner, remember? You're in this for the long haul. Committed. Determined. Besides, here's a hint: You will succeed.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) - Today is a 7 - Continue to stand up for yourself, even if you're scared. It's not heroism if you're not scared. Today is unlikely to be boring, but it's likely to be good for you.

"The music is definitely the mainstay attraction. People hear it and come out and spend the whole day there. The music is more high-gear towards the end of the day," she said. "We have some great bands coming."

The festival will feature a "Walk Through Time," a half-mile text and illustration exhibit explaining the earth's evolution over the past five billion years. The Earth Day celebration will also feature over 100 booths of major environmental organizations, earth-friendly products and organic foods.

Festival highlights will include free bicycle check-ups, a hemp pavilion and sustainable home and garden advice. Wright said the celebration will offer visitors an opportunity to learn about the environment while enjoying it throughout the day.

"It's the kind of event where you go all day and picnic on the grass. You just hang out outside," she said. "Also if you have any questions about the environment this is the place to go. There will be a lot of environmental organizations and companies there. Everyone from the Wildlife Protection Agency to electric car demonstrations to organic food vendors."

The event is locally sponsored by MarBorg Waste Management, All Goode Organics, Bank of America, BFI Waste Management, Techstyles and The Gas Company.

UCSB Heads North to Sac Town

BY MATT HEITNER
Staff Writer

In Big West baseball every series counts, and that's just the point the UCSB baseball team will take to heart this weekend.

The Gauchos head to Sacramento on Friday to open a three-game series against Sacramento State, a team that doesn't carry the prestige of some other teams in the Big West. However, Santa Barbara knows the perils of looking past SSU, which took two out of three games from UCSB last season.

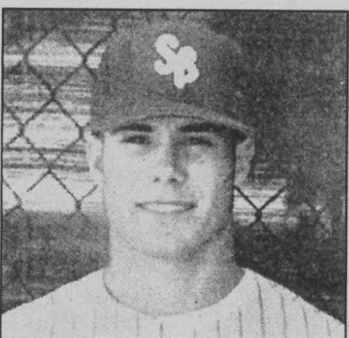

"We went up there last year, took them lightly and played terrible," senior third baseman Dave Molidor said. "We can't take anybody lightly this year, and I don't think we will with Sacramento State."

The importance of this series cannot be underestimated, with the Gauchos already trailing conference favorites Cal State Fullerton and Long Beach State in the Big West standings. The Titans lead the conference with a 5-1 record thanks to a sweep of Sacramento State, a result Santa Barbara is hoping for this weekend.

"This is a huge series for us to pick up some games on Fullerton and Long Beach," sophomore center fielder Skip Schumaker said. "A sweep is definitely needed there. Winning two out of three would be nice, but a sweep is needed if we want to catch Fullerton and Long Beach."

Pitching in game one for UCSB will be junior James Garcia. The righty is coming off his best start as a Gaucho after throwing a complete game against Northridge last weekend.

Skip Schumaker

Garcia knows that by winning game one on Friday he can give Santa Barbara extra confidence heading into the final two games of a series.

"I feel that on our team the pitching sets the tone," Garcia said. "I try to take that to heart and do all that I can on the mound."

Garcia and the rest of the Gaucho pitching staff should feel comfortable on the hill, knowing that the UCSB offense is going to provide more than ample run support. Santa Barbara is hitting a robust .350 as a team, with all 10 of UCSB's regulars batting above .300. With such talent at the plate, it seems that each week someone else steps up his performance in the box.

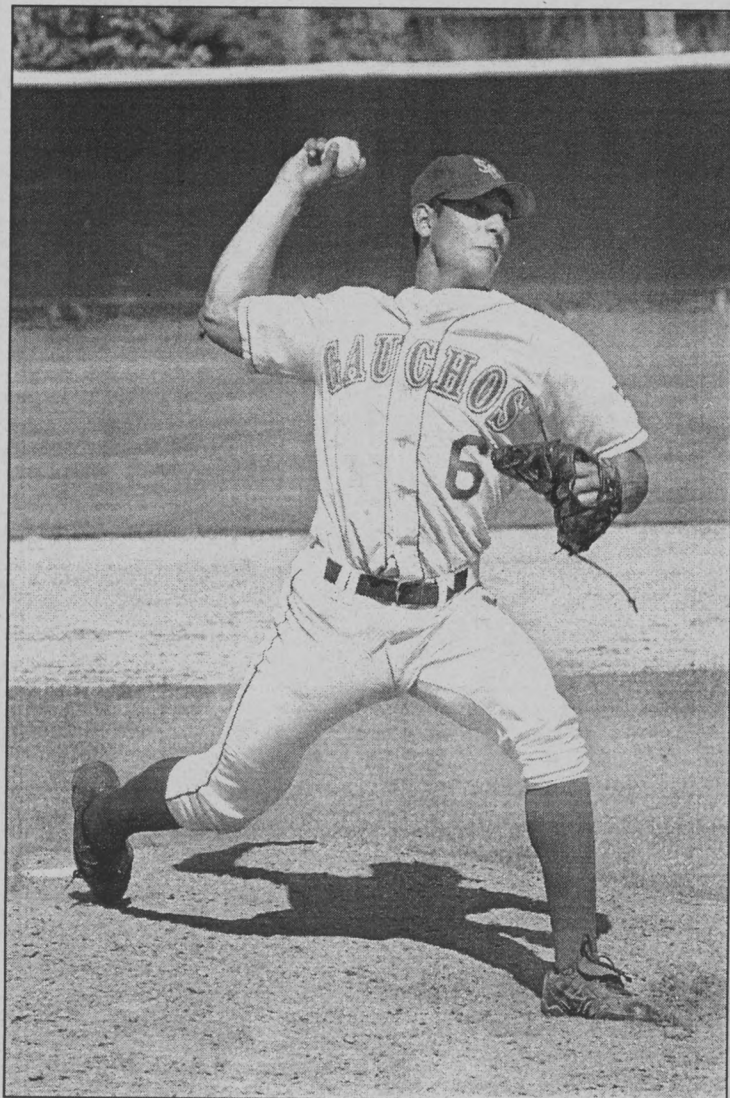

Last weekend it was sophomore right fielder Ryan Spilborghs, who went 3-4 with three RBIs and three runs scored on Sunday against Northridge. Spilborghs, who also hit his first home run of the season against the Matadors, now owns a 16-game hitting streak and a .364 average. But if no new star comes out of the woodwork this weekend, UCSB can always count on its leading hitter, Molidor, who bombed two solo homers against the Matadors.

While the sluggers in the middle of the order — such as Molidor and junior third baseman Tyler Von Schell — receive most of the attention, it is the man at the top of the lineup that sets the stage and gets UCSB rolling.

As the Gauchos' leadoff man, Skip Schumaker carries a .457 on base percentage and has stolen a team leading 14 bases in 19 attempts this season. But while the sophomore is proud of his thievery, Schumaker knows that occupying the top spot in the order is all about getting on base.

"I try to get on base any way I can," Schumaker said. "I don't care if it's through an error, a walk or a hit. Our lineup is so potent with guys like Molidor and Von Schell, I know that I'll get driven in if I can get on base."

It is that type of team-first attitude that has propelled

The UCSB baseball team will travel north to battle Sacramento State in a three-game series, and the Gauchos hope to not underestimate SSU.

UCSB to its best start since 1984. The Gauchos will need to continue playing selfless baseball to come away with a sweep this weekend and pick up ground on CSUF and LBSU in the process.

"We know that to win in conference we have to play well, and we'll need to play well to win [at Sacramento State]," UCSB Head Coach Bob Brontsema said. "It's a tough place to play, and we know that we have a big challenge ahead of us."

Gauchos To Renew Rivalry With Cal Poly

BY CLANCY ROBERTS

More intense than the Heat-Knicks rivalry of the NBA, and more heated than the Giants-Dodgers match up in MLB, is Santa Barbara vs. Big West enemy, Cal Poly.

The UCSB women's tennis team will be pitted against the Mustangs — the Gauchos' chief central coast nemesis — at home this Saturday at 11:00 a.m.

This Saturday marks the final home match for Gaucho seniors Gaby Andrade and Shannon Wilkins, who would love to go out with dominant performances against the Mustangs.

"It will be a really competitive match because our schools just really don't like each other," Andrade said.

Two seasons ago in a match between these two schools at Santa Barbara, a Mustang player was involved in a yelling duel against some Gaucho fans. The following year, the match was in San Luis Obispo, where a rowdy Cal Poly crowd gathered to shout profanities at the UCSB tennis players.

"The fans there were out of control," junior Cindy Ammann said. "Some of the players are rude, too. They play mind games with you and they get in your face if a ball gets past you. They also aim for your head in doubles matches."

Despite the hostilities, UCSB walked away with a close road victory last year and aim to keep the streak alive in this match — which has little to do with standings and much to do with pride.

"There is always a lot of confrontation in our matches against [Cal Poly]," Wilkins said. "Sometimes the extracurricular incidents can get annoying when you are just trying to play your game, but I think that everyone's hearts will be in it a little more because it is our last home match and it is against Cal Poly."

The Mustangs (11-5 overall) are coming off a weekend where they pulled off a 7-0 sweep against San Jose State. The team is led by senior Danielle Brandlin, who is 17-13 in singles play this season, playing in the #1 singles and doubles positions.

"They are a pretty good team," Ammann said. "They are all comparable in skill level. There is not much of a difference between their #1 player and #6 player."

After beginning the season with an eight-game losing streak, Santa Barbara has hit cruise control on their recent high-octane drive, where they have won seven of their last eight matches. The Gauchos are peaking at the right time, playing their best tennis just before the Big West Tournament, which will be held in Ojai from April 25 to 28.

"This match will come down to whoever wants it more," Ammann said. "We can't come in and play scared. We just got to go for it."

As Andrade and Wilkins' collegiate tennis careers come to a close, they will look to go out with a bang in their last game on their home court.

"My teammates are my friends," Andrade said. "Me and Shannon came in as freshmen together and we have gone through so much as a team. Tennis has been such a big part of my life for so long, it will be really sad to see it end. It's the girls that I will really miss the most."

Wilkins shares similar reflections, but also looks forward to the extra time she will have without the commitment of playing a Division 1 sport.

"It definitely went by really fast," Wilkins said. "I love the competition and the team atmosphere, and I'm really glad I stayed with it for four years. At the same time though, it will be nice to do other things."
