Paradise Cafe: Another World

By Tabitha McMurphy

Nestled in downtown Santa Barbara among the city's signature tile-roofed architectural structures, Paradise Café offers a scrumptious variety of beef, chicken, pasta and seafood dishes which all live up to the eatery's name.

As my out-of-town companion Aidan and I moseyed into the café we were immediately greeted with friendly smiles from the staff who seemed determined to make our visit pleasant, even if the long day spent looking for frog paraphernalia for Aidan's amphibious aquarium showed on our faces.

I could tell by the bite in Aidan's voice when the nice lady at the last store asked her which aquarium gravel she wanted that Aidan was ready for a real meal, and Paradise Café seemed to be just what we needed.

We were seated without delay at an attractive table with comfy, cushioned chairs near the window. Taking in the scenery, Aidan noted that the café's ambiance was sparse but quaint. To Aidan, a room was sparse if it lacked a collection of ceramic frogs, but I nodded anyway and reached for a menu.

A server quickly headed for our table from a corner nook, flashed us a toothy grin and took our drink orders. She also supplied a healthy portion of crisp sourdough garlic bread to wet our palates before the main course.

When it came time to order, Aidan excitedly requested a New York steak topped with sautéed mushrooms, french fries and black bean soup to start. Inspired by our aquarium shopping, I opted for the broiled halibut, wild rice and mixed green salad with vinaigrette.

Soup and salad came and went without incident, which is unusual for taking in a meal with Aidan, and dinner was served. I could tell by how much Aidan's eyes widened when the server approached momentarily with our food that she was impressed by her steak.

I watched with a bit of disgust, and more than a little embarrassment, as the corners of Aidan's mouth swelled with saliva to the point where the liquid spilled over onto the tablecloth.

I tried to act natural and pretend like I'm used to people dropping a small lake of spittle on my dinner table. Facial expressions are so hard to hide, though. I'm sure the server wanted to balk at the gruesome display, but instead she just smiled and placed the savory steak piled high with mushrooms in front of my companion.

My halibut was succulent, broiled in its own juices with a boldly seasoned tartar sauce as its sidekick. This was the perfect match.

No more than five bites into her juicy steak, Aidan spotted linguine topped with a medley of seafood in a delicate sauce that had just been placed in front of an unsuspecting patron at an adjacent table. She strained her whole body hard to the left to catch a better glimpse, I thought, until she actually dipped her fork into the mound of seafood resting innocently on top of the linguine.

"Don't," I yelled, raising more than a few eyebrows in the café. It was too late, though, as Aidan had already stabbed a jumbo shrimp through its meaty middle and was reeling it in. I smiled apologetically at the patron who lost the shrimp, and tore into my halibut for escape.

Lost in the perfect symphony of ingredients on my plate, I soon forgot the drool puddle, the stolen shrimp and the little aquarium gravel "incident" earlier in the afternoon. I was content.

ELEPHANT BAR

By Bertha Babylon

One day I was walking along and I heard some music floating down the sidewalk towards me. I followed it, attempting to find the culprit. As I moved closer, I discovered the song was Barry Manilow's "Copacabana." Quite a fine tune, I must say.

I could feel my body grooving with Barry when I ran into a large gray elephant. He was wearing red tennis shoes that were untied and a pair of Ray-Ban sunglasses. When he saw me, he asked if I was hungry.

That is the time I noticed that he was wearing a Walkman over his big floppy ears. Music poured out of them so loudly that music notes floated up into the sunny sky. No wonder he was wearing a pair of sunglasses.

"Yes, I am very hungry," I told the elephant as I squinted my eyes looking up at him.

He smiled. "Well then follow me. I'll show you a place that serves good drinks and wonderful food." I thought it sounded pretty good, so we went to the Elephant Bar.

The peculiar thing was that I was the only human in the entire place. Elephants sat at the bar watching the day's baseball game while a family of elephants sat in the dining room eating what looked like a really great meal. I

"Can we eat now?" I asked my newfound friend.

"By all means," he said.

I ordered the barbecue ribs and he requested the vegetarian sandwich. It occurred to me that usually elephants don't eat in restaurants, but then this elephant was everything but normal.

We had a lovely conversation until the food came. I was so hungry I dug into my ribs with ferocity. They were delicious. When dinner was done we ordered dessert.

The check came and I was so surprised by the amount — it was so inexpensive. I began to take out my money when the elephant said that it was on him. He was a nice chap.

Alex's Cantina: Authentic!

By Thaddeus Cummings

Alex's Cantina has this reputation, you know. It's the place to go when you're out of cash and have that gnawing, gnawing feeling in your stomach.

What do you expect when they have a happy hour that offers $1 draft beers, free nachos, bean (as well as beef) soft tacos for a quarter and chicken soft tacos for 50 cents? For three bucks, not only do you get a buzz, but you fill your belly at the same time. It's the best of both worlds.

I spent countless summer evenings sitting there with my roommates or co-workers debating the latest ontological dialectic on Dr. Seuss and whether his books can serve as a model for our times.

But this isn't all there is to Alex's Cantina. Go in sometime and sit down for a meal served to you by an actual waiter or waitress.

Of course you probably won't be able to finish your meal because of all the free fresh tortilla chips and salsa you'll fill up on while your food is cooking. But that's a treat in and of itself, because Alex's makes their own tortillas fresh on the premises.

There's a medium called kinetic sculpture. No, when I say "medium" I don't mean like some gypsy who looks into a crystal ball, and I don't mean that size between "small" and "large." I mean an art form like television and pop music and uh ... I mean an art form.

Anyway, kinetic sculpture is often like the game "Mousetrap" when you put it all together — conveyor belts and slides and springs and swings and it's all working like the clock outside "It's a Small World" at Disneyland. And the tortilla-making gizmo at Alex's is a genuine piece of kinetic sculpture. It offers the raw beauty of mechanical motion, along with the cooked succulence of fresh tortillas!

Which is to say, be sure to get a table near the tortilla-making gizmo.

When you do go, make sure to bring a few friends. That way you can go for Alex's famous "Tub o' Rita," a huge glass margarita that could easily serve two to four people. Best of all, you get to keep the glass.

The food represents a wide variety of Calixican faves. Particularly attractive are the appetizers, which include Armadillo Eggs. They're not really the ova of armored rats, however, but chiles stuffed with cheese and then fried in batter. Unsurpassed excellence! Also try the chimichangas, which have never, ever disappointed me. Never!

You might think at this point that with the great food and free-flowing sophisticated adult beverages, Alex's couldn't possibly offer any more. I hate to tell you this, but you're wrong. Actually, that didn't bother me at all! I'll say it again: you're wrong!

Ahem! Sorry, got a little carried away there. Anyway, both Alex's locations offer their own unique entertainment in the bar area.

Alex's are located at 5918 Hollister and 633 State Street. Call 966-0032 for entertainment listings downtown.

End Notes:

Hey boys and girls! Hope all is well out there in La-La-Land. The weekend is here so go out and have some fun, you deserve it. First off, TEAM ABREGO is throwin' a wing-ding in honor of EVIL FARMER'S epic new C.D. release! Haul yourself over to 6653 Abrego #A this Saturday around 10 p.m. This will be a good time for all (no kidding). Secondly, The Muffs are playing at Extravaganza and they are cool. On a final note, check out The Red Dog Saloon's listing. There's lots of cool bands that are playing there now-a-days so put on your boots and come on down. Late.

"TEAM ABREGO" MEETS EVIL FARMER
