Success of Postcard Drive Declared Soon

By SHELLY LORANGER  Nexus Staff Writer

A study that attempted to determine the population density in Isla Vista along with the implementation of a re zoning ordinance for this area was approved to begin in January, by the Board of Supervisors last week.

The entire study will cover over two-thirds of Isla Vista at a cost of nearly $8,000. Approximately boudaries for the study are Canon Drive to the UCSB Campus and Del Playa to El Cerrito Road. Discussions located within the area will not be studied as part of the project.

According to John Buttny, administrator for the Isla Vista Municipal Advisory Council, previous attempts to instigate a form of population reduction in Isla Vista were never developed. The I.V. Community Council of 1979/80 undertook the project of writing a draft concerning population density and sent it into the county. But plans to study the draft and to meet with the council were never carried out.

The IVMAC wrote a letter to the Department of Resource Management that showed increased concern. But there has been no response to date. Consequently, a meeting took place with IVMAC, Santa Barbara county has adopted a new Coastal Zoning Ordinance and is ready to begin the process of running the I.V. area. The ordinance has been approved by the State Coastal Commission and has also received approval at the local level.

The Coastal Zoning Ordinance "is the principal mechanism by which the county will implement the Land Use Plan and issue Coastal Development Permits," according to the Department of Resource Management.

The IVMAC, previous to the passing of the ordinance, made up by reductions in administration budgets, Cusack said. The reductions have already resulted in a $75 increase in tuition for the current U.C. budget and an expected $60 million cut for next year is unfair and that students are opposed to it.

"We don't know how many cards we have yet for sure, but we hope to have ten thousands of them," Cusack said.

County Supervisor Bill Wallace and a representative of UCSB. Discussions centered on the long term effect of decreasing population density in I.V., maintaining and maximizing existing open space and how to deal realistically with the parking situation.

The IVMAC, previous to the passing of the ordinance, county’s present Coastal Land Use Plan and issue Coastal Development Permits," according to the Department of Resource Management.

The ordnance, which would apply to all property in the coastal zone, was designed with the intentions of maintaining and maximizing existing open space and how to deal realistically with the parking situation.

In January, the lobby will begin a voter registration drive as the next part of its battle against the budget cuts, Cusack said.
Budget Affects Staff
Union Wants More Input On Layoffs

The expected 6.5 million dollar budget reduction for UCSB may necessitate layoffs of career staff employees, according to Robert J. Cameron, Assistant Vice Chancellor of Personnel.

In a letter dated Oct. 27, 1981, to Ron Smith, president of the American Federation of State, Municipal and County Employees, Local 873, Cameron said that through it will be the intention of this campus to meet this reduction thru a variety of means, layoffs may be required.

If this is the case, the administration will apply the provisions of Staff Personnel Policy 760, which provides guidelines for the layoff of career employees. Cameron also stated that if AFSCME wishes to meet and discuss the process, we are available upon request.

The administration will "listen to any discussion concerning alternative ways to meet the budget cuts, Cameron said, but to his knowledge, AFSCME has not yet asked for a meeting. Members of AFSCME, however, believe that Cameron's invitation is for participation in the "procedural and bureaucratic implementation" of layoffs, rather than "in the meetings to decide whether the layoffs can/should occur," according to a statement issued by Judith Parker, executive board member of the local.

She predicts that "the decisions on layoffs will probably be made at administrative levels, excluding any serious staff input whatsoever. Those decisions will then be presented as a fait accompli, sometime in January of 1982. At that time, AFSCME will be invited to discuss with Personnel the purely procedural concerns of Policy 760 implementation, Parker believes that this situation "demonstrates the urgent need for a Staff-Administration contract mandating collective bargaining."

The Staff Association has drawn up a survey for all staff personnel soliciting layoff alternatives, as a way to "better facilitate participation in the decision-making process," President Deborah Coghlin said. The survey will be distributed to all staff members next Monday and the association is asking that they be returned by the following Tuesday. Coghlin said that the results of the survey will be forwarded to Vice Chancellor Michaelson.

Peter Shapiro, a member of AFSCME, suggested several alternatives to staff layoffs. One method of generating saving salaries is cross-training of employees. Shapiro explained that instead of being laid off, an employee can transfer to another department that has an opening. "Any voluntary situation is appropriate," he said.

Shapiro also believes that an alternative is to "support any legislation that will help the state overcome its financial crisis." Each department on campus has its own budget cuts to achieve, Cameron said, and its own options. These departments with no other alternative have laid off employees. "There is already a layoff here and layoff there," he said.

Fellowships In State Assembly

Assemblyman Gary K. Hart (D-Santa Barbara) announced today that applications are now being taken for the Assembly Fellowship Program for 1982-83. The fellowship begins Aug. 1, 1982. The Fellowship Program, now in its 34th year, provides an 11 month working education in the assembly for recent college graduates with bachelor's or advanced degrees in all fields of study.

The 12 fellows chosen will be assigned to staff positions with members of the assembly for five months, followed by six month placements with assembly committees or other legislative offices, work in both the district and capitol offices on specific projects assigned by members or staff consultants.

Applications may be obtained from Assemblyman Hart's district office, 1216 State Street, Suite 507, or from the California Assembly Fellowship Program, 301 Kendall Hall, California State University, Chico, CA 95929. Completed applications must be submitted no later than Jan. 30, 1982.

Fellows will research legislation, assist in committee business, work in both the district and capital offices on specific projects assigned by members or staff consultants.

Awards and fellowships in the arts will also be awarded to 12 persons for the 1982-83 academic year. Applications for these fellowships should be submitted by Feb. 1, 1982 to the staff of the California Assembly Fellowship Program.

Supervisors Oppose Amendment That Prohibits Affirmative Action

By MICHAEL GONG

Opposition to a proposed state constitutional amendment prohibiting affirmative action in employment and college admissions decisions was unanimously backed by the Santa Barbara Board of Supervisors Monday.

In response to a recommendation by the Affirmative Action Commission, the board will be expressing their opposition to the amendment in a letter to the State Senate.

Minority preference policies create resentment and increase rather than decrease racial tensions.

Constitutional Amendments Committee and various other political offices throughout the county.

The amendment that would prohibit affirmative action in employment decisions was introduced by State Senator John G. Schmitt (R-Newport Beach). State Supreme Court Justice Stanley Mosk he also recently submitted a proposal to prohibit racial quotas and other minority preference employment and college admissions programs.

Federal and state law currently allow the use of affirmative action when there has been discrimination, or where the employer or educational institution has some other reasonable basis for using affirmative action principles. These laws encourage employers to voluntarily utilize this program in employment practices.

Federal and state courts have held that employers may use minority status in admissions or employment decisions.

An important case for college students that reached the high court decided that minority status could be treated as a separate and equally strong affirmative action program.

The proposals by Judge Mosk would bar state and local governments and publicly run institutions of higher learning, such as UCSB, from giving benefits on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

The county Affirmative Action Commission met Nov. 18, 1981 in Solvang to discuss the ramifications of Amendent 39.

The commission is made up of 15 members, three from each supervisory district. The members on the commission were alarmed regarding the proceedings of the State Constitutional Amendments Committee and advised the Board of Supervisors to take immediate action in opposition to this amendment. The commission also has the responsibility of assisting the affirmative action officer in the implementation of the county's Equal Employment Opportunity program, and advising the board on such issues.

Ochoa believes that the proposals would cloud the issue which has already had its refinement in court.

"The amendment, if passed, would cause constitutional chaos and be disruptive," he said.

Legislators fear that passage of amendment number 39 will cause the California State Constitution to be in direct conflict with the United States Constitution.

The board is also concerned over the constitutional implications of the amendment and whether it was in conflict with county policy or the United States Constitution.

"Opposition to the bill was not against county policy and constitutional implications would have to be studied," spokesperson for county council said.

Board member David Yager said, "the board has always utilized equal opportunity program, and advising the board on such issues.

"I hate to see it open up a can of worms and battles in court," Supervisor DeWayne Holmehald said.

The board decided to send the letter drafted by the Affirmative Action Commission to the state legislature and recommended that Senator Omer Rains and Assemblyman Gary Hart and Carol Hallett not support the amendment.

Rotten

Something appears to be rotten in UCSB’s Department of Financial Aid. Charges, denials, and allegations made in recent weeks by employees, students and management indicate that serious problems exist which may be hampering the department’s efficiency. The Monday resignation of Booker Williams, director of the department, prompts renewed concern over the operation and management of this vital student resource.

Following allegations of low employee morale, mismanagement, and fiscal irresponsibility, Chancellor Robert Huttenback appointed a Financial Aid Management Review Committee to investigate all facets of the department’s operation. The charges became widely publicized after several individuals, expressing dissatisfaction with the standard grievance procedures, presented complaints to Assemblyman Gary Hilburger, D-Santa Barbara. In fact, there is no normal grievance procedure. The chancellor, however, has indicated that he will have a thorough investigation completed by the end of the week.

Two questions are of primary concern. First, is a department, responsible for disbursing approximately $35 million in student aid over the last two years, being run competently and for the maximal benefit of students? Second, why have several current and former university employees felt they could not utilize the standard procedure for airing their complaints?

Williams’ resignation indicates that mismanagement may, in fact, be part of the problem. But the problem has not gone away, and the director with the new director is found, the department’s management organization he created are still intact. It is hoped that, by conducting extensive interviews with department personnel, the chancellor’s investigative committee will be able to determine the total extent of management incompetence.

However, simply conducting an investigation is not enough. More important is the extent to which the administration will consider the committee’s findings and recommendations, and act on them. If the chancellor chooses to disregard the situation, and university employees feel that ordinary UCSB grievance procedures are not adequate or “safe” for them to use, what recourse is available? And, more seriously, is the financial aid crisis indicative of similar situations in other departments?

Until a thorough investigation is completed and a new director is found, the department seems destined to continue in its current disorganization. We hope the committee is able to do a complete job in its housecleaning. With the majority of UCSB students receiving some sort of financial aid, there is no alternative.

Remembering the Magic of Christmas

The holiday season is upon us. My first hint came when I noticed that the number of people buying gifts had increased the number of beer commercials during television breaks. My initial response was pity for the parents whose kids already own too many devices. The latest generation of children's playthings may be educational, but when the ad shows a marvellously complicated creation, with at least a million moving parts, and then informs the viewer, "the whole family can assemble it," I shudder and close the ads of Tinkertoys and Lincoln Logs.

But I don't want this to degenerate into a tirade against Christmas, or Christianity, or the Complexity of the Mormon religion, rather I want to tell you the story of a staff member who, like me, prefers to talk about magic, and memories, for there is too little of the former, and insufficient appreciation of the latter.

How many remember that traumatic moment when they first learned that Santa Claus was merely a pleasant fiction, an illusion perpetuated by our parents to lend an air of innocence and wholehearted gift giving? For some people it was the result of gradual awareness, a kind of emergence of reasoning ability in a child's mind, a moment when the veil was finally, in a word, transfigured and revealed, the whole thing a vast joke. For others it was brutally sudden and unexplained.

Of course, some of you may have known all along, or been trained to seek out logical explanations for everything. This is not necessarily unfortunate. After all, a beauty of a rainbow is not diminished by the knowledge that it is produced by the refraction of sunlight through water droplets. Likewise, Mr. Claus, industrious elves, and eight tiny reindeer have a hell of a time standing up in the eye of an expensive storm.

Three days ago some of you, like me, who fall under all three categories. So, when the ordeal of finals is over, the last term paper is typed during a red-eye caffeine-induced all-night frenzy, and the D.P. parties have ground to a sodden halt, turn your thoughts to the holidays at hand. To truly enjoy them requires neither vast wealth, particularly religious preference, nor complicated vacation plans. Just a few cold eggnogs, the smell of pine, frosty nights, eggnog (spiked with brandy, of course), and quiet enjoyment. Forget about the fact that it is raining, the tree fell over, the bronco took precedence over the eggnog, and it was too warm to light a fire.

Some individuals will probably insist on disclaiming the holidays as a time for deliberately misremembering the past, or for a willful exploitation of sentimentality, or for, what I prefer to call, spin. I'm sure we can all recognize the kind of spin that would have us believe that an event that occurred decades before was a mere coincidence - a group of kids who have had nightmares in response to a horror film that was banned by city authorities.

But one cannot conceive of the awesomeness of God until he realizes his right thing. "There is only one thing certain about man," said Napoleon, "that he will die." And he said to himself, "That I was a man, not God, who mistakenly got himself out of this world."

What, then, says the Biblical record? Christ was the Word made flesh (John 1:14), and "the Word was God" (John 1:1). Napoleon understood this. "I know men," he said, "I know myself."

E.F. Benson once observed that "religion is far more than merely the strenuous exercise of the intellect. It is, nonetheless a very great part of religious failure is due to nothing other than intellectual sloth." Indeed this is the case. This kind of sloth is more prevalent than many would think. It is detected as a result mostly of a failure to critically analyze the conflicting claims of the all too prevalent ideologies.

We are told that there are "many ways to interpret the Bible." True enough. However, there is one way to honestly read it. This is, for the most part, overlooked by those who revel in the uncovering of seeming inconsistencies in the biblical text. "Thou shalt not steal" remains "Thou shalt not steal" no matter what in PEN. For the Christian it is hard to reconcile the unawaeness of his faith. To think that there are so many religious systems that now dangle, like a universal test, that all of humanity and all of the weapons used throughout history. The largest nuclear weapon ever tested, released energy approximately 4,000 times greater than the bomb that leveled Hiroshima, and there is theoretically no limit to the yield that may be obtained. We must find language that is as vivid as the idea of a world that can be destroyed, a world that can be saved. The intelligentsia have publicly urged this kind of measure since 1978. Let see if they mean what they say.

We who support the initiative and hope to qualify for the ballot next November, not assume that its passage would prevent nuclear annihilation. We do, however, see it as a first step in reducing that risk.

Several years ago, a California ballot initiative, Proposition 13, sparked the so-called taxpayers' revolt that spread rapidly across the nation. This new initiative could trigger a movement to press for preventive solutions to the one potential terminus of the nuclear age, the pre-nuclear means of warfare. Our No. 2 problem is that not assume that its passage would prevent nuclear annihilation. We do, however, see it as a first step in reducing that risk.

This campaign can convert minds that are akin to a universal test, that all of humanity and all of the weapons used throughout history. By DEBORAH MYERS

It was a Monday night, at 1900 hours. I was at the station gearing up before my escort shift. Flashlight-check. Radio-check. Keys-check. Log-check. Glance-check. Two pairs of socks-check. Schwinn 5-speed-check. I was all set.

I turned on my generator light and rode out of the station onto Mesa Road. I informed dispatch that I was in service. I was given my first escort for the night.

"CSO 54, meet Kathy at the library. She'll be going to San Rafael on foot."

"10-4." I turned behind Rob Gym, on my way to meet her.

While I was riding, I thought how lucky I was to have an escort shift this quarter. I've had the chance to meet new people, make new friends, engage in charming conversation, and feel good about being able to help people feel safe.

I approached the library. I parked my bike and walked up the steps. A young woman spotted me and picked up her backpack. "Are you Kathy?" I asked. She nodded. "My name's Debbie." We started walking.

"Is this the first time you've called an escort?"

"Yes. My friends made me call. I have found it to be very common for people to be introduced to our escort service by a concerned friend. It's really good to know that we're looking out for each other, but when a friend has to make us call, I can't help but think that maybe we aren't as serious about looking out for ourselves as we should be."

"Is this your regular shift?" she asked. I nodded.

"Really? I didn't know that women did escorts." I winced. She continued, "I mean, I can protect myself just as much as another woman can, so I might as well go alone." I attempted to clear up her misconception.

The main purpose of an escort is to provide a buddy system. I'm sure you have all heard the old saying, "There is safety in numbers." Whether you are with another friend or with a CSO escort, just by being with someone else you are less vulnerable to being a victim. If you are going somewhere and don't feel safe going by yourself, see if someone on your hall is going there too or call up a friend and see if they will keep you company. A friend will provide the same protection that an escort will. The only difference is that an escort may have a little more training, and we have a radio so we can contact the police in case there is trouble. If you can't find anybody and you don't feel safe being alone, call up a CSO escort, at 961-3446. We take your call from any point on campus to another point on campus, campus to I.V., I.V. to campus, and I.V. to I.V. from 10 a.m. to 6 a.m. (We're on shift 20 hours a day).

Many women who come to school here never think of Santa Barbara as a dangerous place to live. When they think of UCSB they think of watching sunsets, jogging along the beach. Now it seems like women can't even walk alone without having to realize the potential dangers here. They don't expect anything to happen on campus or in I.V., but it does happen. Women are attacked and raped, in broad daylight as well as at night. We've already heard about the first case of rape on campus this quarter. I've also heard that for the past two years in a row, a rape has occurred during finals week of Fall quarter. Rape is an ugly reality, and the fear we feel is just as real. It's not an easy thing to have to live with fear, but it's really important for us to realize that we have the choice to take control, to take precautions that decrease our chances of being a victim.

Approaching San Rafael dorm, Kathy thanked me. "It was nice meeting you and great talking with you."

"My pleasure," I insisted. "Remember, anytime you feel you need company and you can't find a friend to go along with you, just give us a call. Even I use the escort service," I added.

I had helped one young woman become aware of the potential danger of being attacked or raped and informed her of some precautions available to her. If only I could have reached more of them...

I informed dispatch that I was back in service. I was on my way.

By JANE MUSSEr

Okay all you Santa Claus fans, time for a pop quiz: How many newspaper columns have we read that tell us what a shame it is that Christmas has become so commercialized? It seems that idea for editorial columnists to expound upon run out between Thanksgiving and New Year's when Congress and the president are on vacation), and so writers constantly rely on that oldie but goodie “What Happened to the Good-Old-Days-When-Christmas-Meant-More-Than-Expensive-Gifts-and-Tinsel-String-on-Artificial-Trees”!

Sure some of their arguments make valid points: yes, it is too bad that so much of the true spirit of this important holiday—giving, kindness, love—has gotten soured under the commercial type that usually begins around the time the Halloween candy disappears from stores' shelves. And yes, it is rather disgusting that everything is so expensive, that Santa Clauses asking for money are on every corner.

And besides, just because Christmas is oversold and overpriced, doesn't mean anyone has to treat it that way. If you don't like the fact the Christmas specials begin on television before school starts in September, don't watch. If you think handmade gifts are much more representative of your feelings about Christmas, then don't shop with the rest of us. Nunne says you have to. But please don't ruin for all of us who dream of a tinily, gittry Christmas the pleasure we derive from holding lights put up during Easter and the excitement created by receiving that first Christmas card...the week before Thanksgiving...from the newspaper boy...while asking for a Christmas tip.

Council Discusses By-Law Changes

By KENDRA GURNEY

Associated Students Legislative Council unanimously agreed to strongly encourage the Registration Fee Advisory Committee to approve the request by the University Students Rochdale Housing Project for a one-time funding of $25,000," at last Wednesday's meeting.

An A.S. position paper written by representative Mitch Stockton indicates the grant is "to be used as a downpayment for a 31 unit apartment as part of the (USRHP) long-term strategy to provide student housing at UCSB."

Last spring, Leg Council agreed to assist in the USRHP funding and contributed $30,000 in part loan, part grant, and thus are "committed to the improving and increased availability of affordable student housing," Stockton said.

Of $2.8 million in registration fee reserves, $1.5 million is in a designated fund for student housing projects. The remaining $1.3 million is reserved for student services, according to Leslie Griffin-Lawson, director of Student Life.

Another action at Leg Council's meeting concerned the semester/quarter system issue because faculty are able to serve as a liaison between students and administration after they hear students' views. The proposal was unanimously passed by the council.

A third bill passed at the same meeting proposed changes in the election by-laws, apparently to add representatives to the Academic Affairs Board, able to serve as a liaison between students and administration.

In other action, the council discussed a bill that would make on-campus representatives to the Residence Hall Association exempt from paying RHA fees.
Speech Shows Increase of Violence

BY ANDI WOODWARD
Nexus Staff Writer

Increased occurrence of crime, homicide, rape and suicide, will not be halted by tougher anti-crime legislation but by "more fundamental prevention," West said.

Dr. Louis Jolyon West, Director of the neuropsychiatric unit at University of California, Los Angeles, West's speech, entitled "Violence in the United States," was sponsored by the Hutchins' Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

"All violent crime has been going up over a 15 year period" in the United States, according to West.

Despite the supposed deterrent effect of the death penalty," West said.

West claimed the death penalty may, in fact, increase the homicide rate. For example, in Oklahoma, where there are many executions under the death penalty, the murder rate is six times higher than in Wisconsin where there is no death penalty. West said high homicide rates are found in several other states with the death penalty.

"What most people don't realize is that many murders are self-destructive acts. Murderers have a high record of suicide attempts. Therefore, the reason for lower murder rates in the states without the death penalty is that there is not the incentive for people who want to be killed to kill someone else in order to be put to death," West said.

The whole process of punishing violence with violence creates more violence, West said. Instead of being "tough on crime," tough on "violence," West advocates a "more fundamental prevention," starting with the eradication of child abuse.

West pointed to the possible correlation between child abuse in the first five years of life and the 135 percent increase in reported child abuse cases in the past five years in Los Angeles, and the fact that 10 percent of the murders there last year were committed by juveniles under the age of 18, "a significant majority of whom were battered children." An additional 3 percent of deaths last year were at the hands of children's parents.

As further evidence of the correlation between child abuse and violent crime, West cited the case of the Tarahumara Indians in the Mexican Sierra Madre Occidental mountains who either have any kind of violent crime or punish their children.

"In the last 50 years, they've had one homicide -- an accidental death. A man was killed in a shoving match," West said.

The Tarahumara's poverty and the "acceptance of getting drunk regularly" on tescun, a drink made from corn meal mush, cast doubt on previous assumptions that more violent crime was alcohol or socio-economically related.

"In the last 50 years, they've had one homicide -- an accidental death. A man was killed in a shoving match," West said.

The whole process of punishing violence with violence creates more violence, West said. Instead of being "tough on crime," tough on "violence," West advocates a "more fundamental prevention," starting with the eradication of child abuse.

The fear of control led to the squelching of a proposed UCLA study on violence in 1969, because concerned members of the public thought the scientists would "perform all kinds of fiendish experiments... and learn how to control minds," West said.

The fear of control also explains why "gun control will never sell. If you call it something else like gun registration, it might sell," West said.

In addition to the American reliance of violence on guns and weapons and fear of control another "deep-seated belief" is at the root of violence in America, West said.

"It goes back to our idea that there is an angry God who must be obeyed. The notion of punishment is built into our whole orientation. Our values hold that it is necessary to inflict pain on our children to create a conscience," which is why "it's sneaky to 'couch' in terms of brainwashing."

West concluded that "if we don't do something active, vigorous, and forceful," to stop child abuse and the child pattern of violence that maintains, the epidemic of violence in the United States will continue to grow despite new laws made for punishing offenders.
System to Improve Drinking Water Quality Declared Success for Area

By STACEY BOYLE
Nexis Staff Writer

The implementation of a water reservation system designed to improve the quality of drinking water from Cachuma Lake to the Santa Ynez/Solvang area has been declared a success by the Santa Ynez Water Board.

Donald Boyd, head of Cachuma Operations at the bureau explained the nature of the new water circulation system.

"The aeration system is a system for pumping air into the bottom of the lake. The way it works is that oxygen is allowed to filter out through very small holes in pipes in the bottom of the lake. This oxygen eventually goes to the top of the water and dissolves, acting like a pump and pulling the top water down and allowing the bottom water to travel up to the surface. What this does is cause a current in the water from the surface to the bottom. Circulation is absolutely necessary for good quality water. The level of dissolved oxygen in the water is critical. Without the aeration system, we get a condition which is called a thermocline, in which the surface of the water, and for approximately 13 meters down from the top, water is neutrally aerated," Boyd explained. "Because of the wind, etc., air mixes into the water and D.O. is abundant. But at the same time, the bottom water is losing its D.O. The more the bottom water sits there, undisturbed, the more D.O. dissipates out of it. This causes iron, magnesium and sulfate to precipitate out." Boyd said that this precipitation of minerals is the harmful factor in lowering water quality. "The water becomes uninhabitable for fish and aquatic life. It also becomes thoroughly unpalatable for human purposes. It doesn't smell good, tastes unpleasant and takes on a brownish tint."

The aeration of the lower 25 percent of the water is sufficient to create a dramatic improvement in water quality.

George McGovern, democratic presidential nominee in 1972 and former U.S. Senator from South Dakota, will co-teach an undergraduate course at UCSB this winter quarter.

The course "Religion and Politics in America Today" is being co-sponsored by the departments of political science and religious studies. Co-instructor is Walter H. Capps, professor of religious studies and former director of the Hutchins Center.

The course will focus on contemporary religious and political interest groups, such as the Moral Majority, People for the American Way, the National Christian Action Coalition, and will also deal with the rise of the new environmental movement, in addition to the effects of the system on lake water, reported on the im­pact of fish habitation and the general aquatic environment, in addition to the slow down of mineral deposits on the bottom of the lake. This oxygen eventually goes to the top of the water and dissolves, acting like a pump and pulling the top water down and allowing the bottom water to travel up to the surface. Overcrowding and heavy case load problems in the Santa Barbara Goleta Municipal Court have spurred the Board of Supervisors to consider the court’s recommendation for the creation of a new jurisdiction for the area.

The Santa Barbara–Goleta Municipal Court is one of the three municipal courts in the county; the other two are Santa Maria and Lompoc Municipal Courts. The Santa Barbara–Goleta court currently consists of three judges and a commissioner, so an additional jurisdiction would increase the manpower in the county’s judicial system by 25 percent.

Municipal courts serve an area of 40,000 residents and justic courts are used for smaller districts such as those in Solvang and Carpinteria/Moorpark. The final segment of the court’s system is the superior court.

The municipal court’s jurisdiction is a broad one, covering civil cases up to $15,000, misdemeanors, and traffic violations. In addition, it serves as small claims court for cases up to $7,500 and handles miscellaneous other cases.

The justice courts handle cases involving lesser amounts of money and petty crimes such as civil cases up to $1,000, misdemeanors as traffic violations and petty theft.

The Superior Court functions as the major trial court handling civil cases over $15,000, criminal felonies and serious misdemeanors. Probate matters, adoptions, juvenile cases, domestic relations and narcotics cases are handled in Superior Court. In addition, naturalization proceedings and lower court appeals fall into the jurisdiction of the Superior Court.

Operational costs, including salaries, for both the municipal and justice courts are paid from the Santa Barbara County’s general funds. The Superior Court’s operational costs and part of the salaries are paid by the state of California.

The creation of the new jurisdiction in the Municipal Court is a move some think long overdue.

“The court thinks there has been the need for it for some time,” there was a study done by the Judicial Council. They used it called ‘weighted case load’ in which certain types of cases are weighted heavier than others. Their findings revealed that in comparison with other California courts, their case load was unreasonably heavy per judge,” public defender Glen Mower said.

Trial attorney Richard Frishman confirms the need for a new jurisdiction.

“The Superior Court is a great overcrowding in the courts. I definitely agree with the decision to open up a new jurisdiction. It seems like a good move. Certainly there is a great overcrowding in the courts,” Mower explained.

Mower feels that the need for a new judicial system by which a new judgeship would translate as a great overcrowding in the courts.

Mower explained the judgeship for the area of Goleta.

Trial attorney Richard Frishman confirms the need for a new jurisdiction.

“The Superior Court is a great overcrowding in the courts. I definitely agree with the decision to open up a new jurisdiction. It seems like a good move. Certainly there is a great overcrowding in the courts,” Mower explained.

Mower feels that the need for a new judicial system by which a new judgeship would translate as a great overcrowding in the courts.

Mower explained the judgeship for the area of Goleta.

The municipal court’s jurisdiction is a broad one, covering civil cases up to $15,000, misdemeanors, and traffic violations. In addition, it serves as small claims court for cases up to $7,500 and handles miscellaneous other cases.

The justice courts handle cases involving lesser amounts of money and petty crimes such as civil cases up to $1,000, misdemeanors as traffic violations and petty theft.

The Superior Court functions as the major trial court handling civil cases over $15,000, criminal felonies and serious misdemeanors. Probate matters, adoptions, juvenile cases, domestic relations and narcotics cases are handled in Superior Court. In addition, naturalization proceedings and lower court appeals fall into the jurisdiction of the Superior Court.

Operational costs, including salaries, for both the municipal and justice courts are paid from the Santa Barbara County’s general funds. The Superior Court’s operational costs and part of the salaries are paid by the state of California.

The creation of the new jurisdiction in the Municipal Court is a move some think long overdue.

“The court thinks there has been the need for it for some time,” there was a study done by the Judicial Council. They used it called ‘weighted case load’ in which certain types of cases are weighted heavier than others. Their findings revealed that in comparison with other California courts, their case load was unreasonably heavy per judge,” public defender Glen Mower said.

Nuclear Weapons Freeze

Petitions Begin Circulating in State

By TRISHA READY
Nexus Staff Writer

December 1 marked the official commencement of a 150-day petition drive, sponsored by the Californians for a Nuclear Freeze Committee, which will put the question of continued nuclear proliferation before California voters on the November, 1982 ballot.

The petition drive goal will be at least 200,000 signatures while establishing throughout the state a network of concerned individuals for the campaign.

The proposal states, "We the undersigned do hereby urge the government of the U.S. to propose to the government of the Soviet Union that both countries agree to immediately halt the testing, production, and further deployment of all nuclear weapons, missiles and delivery systems."

Committee Press Agent David Miller said the campaign was undertaken in California because it is one of the few states in which a voter can signify his choice through legal means, by use of the referendum process.

"Ballots are a likely and strong alternative to other means of demonstrating against the nuclear arms race," Minter said.

A Gallup poll conducted in June indicated that 72 percent of the American public, at that time, favored an agreement between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. not to build any more weapons.

"It's evident that the interest in the nuclear arms race issue is growing," he added.

According to Minter, the statewide committee was started several months ago on the idea of a political initiative was introduced. While the proposed initiative was being approved by the state, the committee adapted a two-phase petition drive to fulfill the 150 day deadline for qualifying the initiative.

The first phase will center around a party blast, in which a series of parties will be held at community centers, churches and individual homes over the next two weeks to inform the public about the initiative, gather signatures and petition carriers and initiate a network of people who support the bilateral freeze.

Another large event is planned for Saturday, Dec. 5, at De la Guerra Plaza in downtown Santa Barbara. This extended petition party will include a picnic, entertainment, and speakers on various aspects of the bilateral freeze initiative campaign.

People Against Nuclear Power member Wanda Michalenko feels that such parties and gatherings are important part of the petition campaign because it will demonstrate to people in Europe who are protesting against the nuclear arms race that they have American support.

The petition drive has already gained support throughout the state and endorsement by prominent moral, scientific, and medical leaders. Among the supporters, according to Minter, are Archbishop Quinn and Nobel prize laureate and renowned physicist Donald Glazer.

Minter did not know of any opposition which had been organized in reaction to the petition drive, but he expected that some type of opposition might develop within the next few months.

Michalenko also stated that she was unaware of any non-supportive group in the area. The only element of opposition which she could recall was a television debate between a representative of the Catholic church and a military official. The focus of the debate was on whether the church should be as involved in political affairs as it has been in the bilateral freeze campaign.

Holidays Bring Magic to S.B.

By GEOFFREY PLATT

The true holiday spirit does not arrive simply because it is December; it arrives because there are certain symbols to which we can all relate: the return of Santa Claus reminds us of how happy the world seemed in our youths, the return of the Salvation Army bell ringers reminds us that for some people the world is far too sad.

In an ideal environment like Santa Barbara, it is far too easy to forget that there are those who, according to Lieutenant Barry Lucas of the Salvation Army, "live on the other side of the tracks."

As always, Santa Barbara has a full calendar for the month of December. Parades, musicals and programs for the less fortunate are incorporated to enhance the true Christmas spirit.

A Santa Claus Parade including bands, floats and live animals will be held Dec. 5 at 10 a.m. on State Street. The parade will begin on Missionerena Street and proceed to Haley Street.

The Community Tree Lighting Ceremony will take place Sunday, Dec. 13, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. The annual event, which has been in existence since 1920, will take place on the corner of Carillo and Chapala, the sight of Santa Barbara's designated Christmas tree. The 80-foot tree, a state property, was undertaken in California because it is one of the few states in which a voter can signify his choice through legal means, by use of the referendum process.

A second letter was delivered yesterday but Birch did not have a chance to respond. However, Birch

Referring to interaction with senior administrators, Williams said, "While I will not try to tell you that they were begging me to stay under the circumstances, there was no pressure for me to go."

He admitted that "cumbersome and awkward problems," have been occurring within the department but they are "understandable in the light of changes in federal guidelines and procedures and new problems with B&H, which this year began directing the payout process.

But, "As far as the operation is concerned, it's still fine," he said.

"There was no grounds" for his department's credibility to be damaged, therefore, "we (he and senior administrators) were both in sort of an embarrassing situation."

Aside from the harm to his credibility, Williams cited other personal reasons for resigning, specifically a desire to experience writing as a career.

In dealing with the newly created vacancy, Birch said that he is in the process of forming a "transition team," consisting of key

The United Way has planned various functions designed to create the Christmas spirit for the elderly people without homes or families. "We're not organizing parades," said Paul Didier, a spokesman for the United Way. "That's not what people need. They need, especially at Christmas, basic things such as food and clothing.

Lunchboxes, a Christmas tree trimming party, food and clothing drives, and an open house on Christmas day are various events the organization has planned.

The Salvation Army is reaching out this Christmas to children, alcoholics, the socially disturbed and the elderly.

On Dec. 9, children ages of five to 12 will be taken on a shopping spree to obtain new clothes, and on Dec. 24, a dinner will be served to seniors and transients. Approximately 200 people will participate in the Christmas Eve feast, Lucas contends.

Because of the difficulties with the department, the students were forced to tell students that applying for Guaranteed Student Loan, which are available only to students who are better than being safer than waiting for federal NDSL loans. Students became frustrated because of the problem of paying these loans was higher (14 percent) than interest on NDSL loans (7 percent).
In addition, students became concerned when the department on July 21 received $1,123,980 in projected capital from the U.S. Department of Education. The office immediately began informing students of the new available matters and inefficiency.

precipitation.
The system was installed in the lake months ago as a kind of test run to see its efficiency. But we've been operating the system since last summer and are now in the month of October. We feel it will solve the problems with the water quality in the SLOVANG and Santa Ynez area. I'd only mention that areas are affected by the new aeration system.

the Bureau of Reclamation believes that the decision to try this system was a wise one, considering the only alternative for improving water quality would be the expenditure of several million dollars for the building of a new filtering plant.

The effect of the aeration system on future water quality in Goleta and Santa Barbara is still unclear," Boyd said.
The Goleta Water Board is not involved all in the Project). as of now. The Montecito, Carpinteria, Summerland and City of Santa Barbara would have to decide among themselves if the costs and benefits are advantageous to put in a system.

"Probably Goleta would benefit the most," Boyd explained that Goleta and the UCSB area received their water from the south coast area (the middle of the lake) where aeration is not a factor. There are currently no plans on the part of the Goleta Water Board to expand the aeration for the time being.

Good Shot Selection Gets UCSB First Win, 82-72

By RON DICKER
Nexus Sports Editor

After his club played a near flawless first half, UCSB head coach Ed DeLacy's fears of a second half breakdown were put to rest as the Gauchos matched Loyola Marymount basket for basket down the stretch before pulling away with an 82-72 victory Tuesday night at the Events Center.

"With the first half we had," DeLacy said, "it would have been a shame to lose this one." "We did a great job executing the offense and had good shot selection.

"The Gauchos' good shot selection, which was rather indiscriminate in their first two losses of the season in San Diego State and Cal State Northridge, accounted for a blistering 68 percent shooting half and a 43-44 lead.

Leading the first half shooting clinic was forward York Gross, who popped in 14 with his slightly altered shooting style. The 6'3" Gross, who finished the game with 18, has been improving as shooting guard, Michael Russell, has been improving depth in that position.

"About his new style, Gross said, "I feel very confident with it. I like using my left hand as an easy guide. It feels very comfortable." The way the Gauchos' patented knockkeball has been sailing through the nets, he may cut off his left arm eventually.

Richard Anderson hasn't changed anything and it's just as well. The 6'10" center played consistently well in the losses, averaging 19 points and 13 rebounds, and Thursday night, up against the Lions' Leonard Agee, a difficult player to deal with inside, he scored 23 points, many by drawing the foul and hitting the free throw.

Anderson also led the team in assists (6) and played all but two minutes of the game.

"Richard took over the game tonight," DeLacy said, "Drawing fouls and rebounding, just superb."

As DeLacy discussed Anderson's best performance of this young season, the post win euphoria was broken by the announcement that Clint Winterling would be lost for the season due to a knee injury. Winterling was the first off-guard to come off the bench. Now the Gauchos find themselves lacking depth in that position.

The team's starting shooting guard, Michael Russell, has been improved steadily (10 points, 3 assists). The 6'1" transfer from Pasadena City College hit two key baskets, one of them which gave the Gauchos the lead for good, and was particularly effective in the press.

The zone defense, incidentally, that was so effective in containing Agee in the second half was the brainstorm of assistant coach Tom Henderson, who didn't get to see the result of his play because he was serving on the recruiting front.

The zone was working just fine until the Gauchos suffered a defensive letdown midway through the second half, as the Lions came roaring back with 11 unanswered points to take a three point lead, 61-58. Eight of those points were scored by Raphael Dirden, the Lions' muscular guard who went 9 for 15 on mostly free throws.

With 6:30 remaining in the contest, the Gauchos mounted a scoring see-saw with full court pressure and a game tying basket by Anderson, followed by Russell's two scores to give the Gauchos a 9-7 lead (Dirden scored after Anderson's shot).

The quietest hero of the ballgame, Mario Geiges, scored the final two baskets to give the Gauchos their decisive 10-point win. Playing 36 minutes, the 5’11” Gamen tallied 13 and had a spectacular rebound from there it was all academic.

Richard Anderson eliminated fears of Leonard Agee’s inside strength by powering his way to 23 points and 13 rebounds.

Leonard Agee then scored to bring the Lions within one, but the Dirden cooled Great, who calmly sank the charities to bring the Gauchos lead back to three. An over-and-back call gave the ball back to the Gauchos and from there it was all academic.

These days a trip to the college bookstore can reduce your available funds to some small change. Luckily, that’s about all you need to make the one phone call that can replenish your depleted funds with some small change. Luckily, that’s about all you need to make the one phone call that can replenish your depleted funds in a couple of hours. Here’s what to do:

1. Call home. Report the situation, and tell the folks they can get emergency cash to you fast by phone.

2. Ask them to call Western Union’s toll-free number, 800-325-6000 (in Missouri, 800-742-6700), any time of day or night. They charge the money and service fee to their MasterCard or VISA card. A Western Union Charge Card Money Order, up to $1,000, will be flashed to the Western Union office or agent near you.

3. Pick up your money—usually within two hours—at the local Western Union office or agent. There are 8,500 nationwide, except in Alaska. Conveniently, about 900 locations are open 24 hours. It’s that easy.

Be sure to remind your parents about our toll-free number. It’s all they need to back you up at the bookstore.

Santa Gets a Request From Ray M.

By Bill Rothschild
Nexus Sports Writer

Dear Santa Claus,

My name is Ray. I live in Los Angeles. I tried real hard to be good this year, but it's been very tough. Things just haven't gone too well.

Remember that present you gave me a couple of years ago? The Los Angeles Rams Football Team? Well, it broke. It was an accident, though.

Some of my friends and I were playing with it this summer and we kind of lost some pieces; three to be exact.

Well, we tried to fix it with some replacement parts. One of the pieces we got was brand new, but, unfortunately, it didn't fix it. Another piece we got second-hand and it didn't seem to work too well. The third piece we found just laying around, but it acts really funny; sometimes it works and sometimes it doesn't.

Anyway, we started playing with our repaired team, hoping it would work okay. And it did — for a while. Then some big bullies came over and broke it.

I tried to fix it again and when I took it out a couple of weeks ago to play with, it seemed to be working again. But, when I took it out again on Sunday, it didn't work at all. Nothing. It just wouldn't work.

I've been looking for replacement parts, but there don't seem to be any available. That's what I wanted to ask you about. For Christmas this year, could you give me some new parts so I can try and fix my team?

Ray Malavasi

Academy 15-6 and Long Beach State beat the Air Force disposed of Brown University, 8-5 (in a upset win. However, and Irvine pulled off a shocking 9-8 attempts to score were all thwarted, overtime when Irvine's Jeff Campbell was able to put another goal in the net called for an ejection foul. The Gauchos' clock when Pickford scored his third goal of the third period to narrow the gap to 7-6. The UCSB's water polo team's hopes for a championships last week, was seeded fourth, the Gauchos rebounded from the loss to win their last two games and finish in the tournament which was played in Long Beach over this past weekend.

The Stanford squad won the tournament when they blew the Long Beach State team out of the water in a 17-6 final rout. The Gauchos' fifth place finish was due as much to the way the NCAA seeded the teams as anything else. UCSB, who had beaten Long Beach in the PCAA championships last week, was seeded fourth, meaning that they had to play a much tougher first round match than Long Beach, who was seeded second.

Another factor for the Gauchos was that they might have been caught looking beyond Irvine toward Stanford, and didn't have the level of concentration that they needed to beat Irvine. Even so, the Gauchos had their chance to beat the Anteaters. After one period, the Gauchos were sitting on a comfortable 4-2 lead on goals by Doug Pickford (2) and Peter Neushul. The second period of the game, however, was the beginning of the end for the Gauchos. In what may have been their worst defensive quarter of the year, UCSB gave up seven goals to the Irvine squad during the game. "I thought Phillips did an outstanding job, so we were a little earlier than usual in getting under the ball," Snyder said. "They had a golden opportunity to send the game into overtime when Irvine's Jeff Campbell was called for an ejection foul. The Gauchos' attempt to score were all thwarted, however, and Irvine pulled off a shocking 9-8 upset win.

In other first round action, Stanford disposed of Brown University, 8-5 (in a game that wasn't as close as the score would indicate), Cal Berkeley upset UCLA, 10-7, and Long Beach State beat the Air Force Academy 15-4.

The Gaucho's fifth place finish was due as much to the way the NCAA seeded the teams as anything else. UCSB, who had beaten Long Beach in the PCAA championships last week, was seeded fourth. UCSB scored three points each. Adding two were Bob Anderson, with one goal each were Tanner, Scott Porter, George, Neushul, Paul Goodridge, Phillips, Tom Gallagher, and Dan Hoffman.

In other consolation semifinal action, UCLA destroyed Air Force, 16-4. In the championship bracket, Stanford had an easy time with Irvine, beating them 13-4, and Long Beach State won a squeaker over Cal Berkeley, 11-9.

To get fifth place, the Gauchos had to beat their old rival UCLA. The game was close throughout, and was doubt up to the final few seconds. UCSB came out strong and took a 4-2 lead after one period. Scoring for the Gauchos were Porter (2), Pickford and Neushul.

UCSB came out strong and took a 4-2 lead after one period. Scoring for the Gauchos were Porter (2), Pickford and Neushul. UCLA held the Gauchos scoreless in the second quarter and put in two goals to tie the score at 4-4 at halftime.

In the third period, each team put three goals in the net to tie the score at 7-7 going into the final period. Goals for UCSB were scored by Neushul, George, and Pickford.

A goal by Porter gave UCSB an 8-7 lead at the 4:39 mark, and he soon added another one easy time with Irvine, beating them 13-4, and Long Beach State won a squeaker over Cal Berkeley, 11-9. The Gauchos then made the lead 9-7 at the 4:39 mark of the final period. At 1:57, Dave George scored a goal to make it 9-8. No. 1 and the Eastern Myth

By RON DICKER
Nexus Sports Editor

Ah, the cursed high throne of "number one." It's lonely at the top and in this 1981 college football season, nimble one-ranked teams haven't been able to handle the loneliness for too long, succumbing to the hype within a matter of days.

As I watched the latest casualty, Pittsburgh, over the Thanksgiving weekend, make it six number one-ranked teams who have slipped, I immediately had visions of our latest poll setter, Clemson (can you believe it?), being KO'd by Big 8 representative Nebraska in the Orange Bowl.

If this were to happen, it wouldn't be a surprise. The Atlantic Coast Conference, of which the "Paws" (the logo on their helmets) are a member, haven't exactly been accused of being a football factory in a part of the country where tobacco farming and basketball are the gospel.

Of course, the Pittsburgh-Penn State debacle took place further up the coast from the Carolinas and, like the Clemson fall forthonning on New Year's Day, it will rekindle the myth adhered to by all those living west of the Appalachians: the eastern myth. This is not a myth about the Orient, but of our very own east coast where tobacco farming and basketball are the gospel.

The other, more important front for the Panthers is the Atlantic Coast Conference. Case in point are the Pittsburgh Panthers. Jackie Sherrill supposedly developed a defensive powerhouse, first in the nation in rushing defense and highly ranked in pass defense. When you play the likes of Rutgers and Army every week in big stadiums that have large press boxes, you're bound to get some ink about your rout.

Joe Paterno, long time head coach for Penn State, has often been accused of playing a patzy schedule, which is reflected in the Nittany Lions' poor performances in bowl games against quality teams. They have won a national championship in the last decade, showing that there are exceptions. Joe Paterno is a great coach (no hyperbole here) and he does get great talent. They're rarely tested, that's all. This year, however, the Lions have played a tougher schedule and haven't lost a few because of it. When they clashed against a Panther defense that has looked dominant against impotent offenses, they showed Paterno to be mere mortals and undeserving of their top ranking, or even a Top 10 ranking.

Before last Saturday's contest, Pittsburgh quarterback Dan Marino was thought to be in a league by himself among quarterbacks east of the Big Ten. Marino started finding Penn State scores.

He completed four of them to set up three touchdowns that Marino has confronted. Against the Cornhuskers of Nebraska, the number ones this year, in the Fiesta Bowl, Don't bet the Pennsylvania farm on the number ones this year, in the Fiesta Bowl. Don't bet the Pennsylvania farm on the number ones this year, in the Fiesta Bowl — this year designated the Thorn Bowl for its quality of teams.

The other, more important front for the east to dispel the eastern myth when they meet USC, one of the number ones this year, in the Fiesta Bowl. Don't bet the Pennsylvania farm on the number ones this year, in the Fiesta Bowl — this year designated the Thorn Bowl for its quality of teams.
Franklin Leads Gauchos

The UCSB women's basketball team played their best defensive game of the season when they blasted the University of San Diego 75-52 last Tuesday. Not coincidentally, they also played their best game, period.

"Our kids just took them out of the contest with defense," coach Bobbie Bonace said. The Gauchos held the Toreros to 31 percent, which doesn't make comebacks easy.

Meanwhile, the Gauchos used their fastbreak to take a 27-18 halftime lead, and a 14-27 advantage midway through the second period. Many of those breaks were triggered by steals and turnovers caused by UCSB's defensive pressure.

"We haven't been playing good defense lately, but tonight we were able to shut the other out," Gauchos' head coach Bobbie Bonace said. "Defense brings our offense together because we fastbreak more." Franklin spearheaded the Gauchos' effort, scoring 23 points, grabbing 15 rebounds, blocking two shots, and making two steals. USD could be thankful that she was only in the game 18 minutes.

The other Gauchos did more than watch Franklin, though. Phoebe Nikkidiakos scored 12 points, grabbing six rebounds, and defender USD's 6-0 Martha Nelson; Lori Sanutscher passed for a game high 13 assists; Romona Eggendorfer scored 12 points, and Paula Bowen made 4 steals.

UCSB isn't likely to grow overconfident from the game, though. If they do, they can recall their 75-52 defeat to San Jose State on Sunday.

Playing their fourth game in four days, the Gauchos opened the contest sluggishly. They made eight of their first 18 shots, but they would never be down.

The two games gave the Gauchos a 5-2 record. Although the losses were to tough teams, Bonace noted improvement.

"We have 30 seconds to shoot, and we've been shooting at .50," he said. "We're making turnovers because we hurry too much. Our speed has worked against us as much as for us." The Gauchos will play in the U.C. Davis tournament this weekend. Their next home game is against the United States International University on Monday in Rob Gym. Tipoff is 7:30 p.m.
